Japanese Women.

It is gratifying to find that even during the long years of her isolation Japan showed herself superior to other Oriental countries in the opportunities she allowed to her women; and there can be no doubt that she has had her reward in the preservation of that spirit of refinement which has attracted the outer world. Japanese women of any but the very lowest classes have a simplicity, grace, and inborn tastefulness which are most attractive. Indeed, such qualities as these are so predominant that we desiderate more evidence of force of character. Their simplicity often seems childishness, and their modesty timidity, and that in spite of the self-possession which a thorough training in etiquette has imparted. We wish we could see more show of spirit, less slavish conventionality. At least this is so with the better classes; among the commonalty, as we shall find, there is often what we should consider undue freedom. Perhaps we ask ourselves whether these elegant ladies are not deficient in nous; their refinement is most pleasing, but unrelieved by evidence of intellectual vigour, it is apt to become insipid.

The past history of the country is the best answer to our doubts. Even under the restrictions and enforced humility of feudalism, the spirit of Japanese women has made itself permanently felt. For, notwithstanding the comparative freedom in the old days, they were unduly kept down. Even yet there are ladies in Tokiyo who have never set eyes on a foreigner, although scores of the intruders may have passed their very gates. But the barrier here was only prejudice and a false notion of propriety which kept them from mingling with the crowd of their own countrymen; there was no law to interfere with their freedom of movement. Any despotic laws which feudalism imposed on them are now fast disappearing. As wives and householders the last few years have brought them more liberty; and wider spheres of usefulness have been opened by the increased facilities for education. In nursing the sick, teaching the young, cultivating those artistic accomplishments in which she has so well shown her ability to excel, and in a thousand other ways which increasing light shall reveal to her, we may anticipate a bright and useful future for the Japanese women. And all honour to the enlightened Empress Haruku, who is proving herself so worthy to be a leader in the advancement of her sex.—Land of the Morning.

HOUSE BUILDING IN HONOLULU.

One, among the many desirable benefits that would come of a city government for Honolulu, would be the passage of an ordinance requiring all persons intending to build within certain prescribed limits, to first obtain the consent of the municipal authorities thereto, the application for permission to build containing specifications as to locality, dimensions, and material to be used, and all other necessary particulars. This is the system adopted not only in large cities, but in every considerable town of the civilized world. The reasons why such a rule is necessary are obvious. We will mention only one or two at present. Our property owners, who are putting up substantial structures, as a rule build solidly and safely enough; but the time may come ere long, when somebody will, either through ignorance or meanness, go to putting up buildings with thin walls, or insufficiently braced or fastened frames, whereby at some unguarded moment may come a crash and a sacrifice of human life. It is not long since we had a very practical illustration of this idea. Ventillation is also an important consideration in putting up a building for human habitation, in a tropical climate especially. Now because A or B are ignorant of sanitary laws, it ought not to follow that they shall be allowed for many-making purposes to erect a lot of human hives to become breeding places for fever and hot beds of malaria.

A City Government.

MR. EDITOR:—In your issue of Tuesday you suggest the importance of laying before the Assembly "a carefully considered plan for a city government." It appears to me that every intelligent and thoughtful man must agree with you in this matter, particularly if he has witnessed the results of city governments in other countries. Not that I think Honolulu rich enough to afford, or large enough to need, a paid municipality. A Board comprised of five gentlemen would be sufficient. One of the five should act as mayor or chairman. The chairman should not have a deliberative vote, but a casting vote only. It ought not to be a difficult matter to find among the citizens of Honolulu five gentlemen of intelligence, patriotism, and common sense who would be willing to serve without pay. The regular meetings of the Board or City Council might be held in the evening, so as not to interfere with the business engagements of the day time. The Board would require one active and efficient officer. This officer should not be a member, but the paid servant, of the Council. He would act as Secretary, Inspector, and General Executive Officer.

This, in brief, is my idea of a city government adapted to the present requirements of Honolulu. Something similar exists in other cities that could be named, and works very satisfactorily. A CITIZEN.

JAMES HANLON will attend to lame or sick horses. Leave orders at J. W. Robertson & Co's. 74 1w

Peddling.

MR. EDITOR:—A few years ago, when it was proposed to license peddlers, the writer of this opposed the new measure, for the very reasons that experience of its working have proved to justly lie against it.

A peddler's license covers illicit trading in liquor and opium, to a most alarming extent, as all testimony proves. And it is most earnestly hoped that the coming Legislative Assembly will repeal the law, as injurious and unnecessary in this Kingdom, where stores are so numerous as to supply all the wants of the population.

Let the law licensing peddlers be utterly repealed, for the public good.

1,290 bags of sugar came to hand by the Nettie Merrill yesterday, and 4,000 by the Iwalani this morning.

Hawaiian Tribe No. 1, Imp. O R M., meets at the Wigwam, Fort st., this sleep, at the 7th run, 30th breath.

The books to be offered for sale at our store to-morrow evening, will be on exhibition this afternoon. Catalogues ready to-morrow morning.

Yesterday was an off day for the "snapper up of unconsidered trifles." The streets were dull, hot and dusty, and nothing happened worth making a note of.

But one square-rigged vessel in the stream, and four at the wharves yesterday—a condition of leanness in Honolulu harbor not often seen nowadays. However, there are about a dozen brigs and barks, now or soon to be due.

A whole box-full of "Church signs" (supposed to be scripture texts) and Prayer Books in Chinese, were sold at auction yesterday, for a mere trifle. The "child-like and bland" is not going to ruin himself in buying literature, especially of that kind.

By the Iwalani, this morning, we learn the outlines of a savage cutting affair which occurred in South Kona on Wednesday last. "A woman at the bottom of it," and a Chinese peddlar the assailant. The woman was badly cut on one arm and gashed about the head, and it is reported is likely to die from her wounds. The Chinaman was secured and will be brought here on the steamer Likelike.

Captain G. E. Jackson, of the Surveyor-General's office, has completed a thorough survey of the Bay of Hilo, with accurate soundings, description of bottom, &c. The map shows the town, harbor and coast line from Keaukaha to Papaikou, with positions of sugar plantations, and the lava flow of 1881. It is on a scale of 1 inch to 1000 feet. Two copies were drawn, one for the Collector's office at Hilo, and the other for that of the Collector General of Customs at Honolulu.

The work on the Marine Railway—that is, the preparatory work—goes briskly on. Trains of six cars, with two loaded dumps each, make ten or twelve trips a day between the quarry, mauka of Beretania street, and the foot of South street, occupying four minutes in the passage from point to point. At the seaside the ground gradually grows, and will soon afford space for a carpenter' and a blacksmith's shop. At present the former and an office are in the water. At the same time, the excavations on the slope of Punchbowl hill are laying out further town lots in that healthy locality.

A Hint To Gardeners.

I have had more than twenty years' experience in amateur gardening—mainly utilitarian—have moved about a good deal, and thus have cultivated many different gardens. All have been remarkable for their abundant crops, though I have never purchased a single load of manure, while my neighbours have carted in ton after ton, and have obtained smaller edible crops than mine. I do not even waste the ammonia and agricultural fuel of my weeds by burning them, but bury them whole, and with them the pea-stalks, bean-stalks, cabbage-stalks, &c., &c. Thus buried, they undergo during the winter slow combustion, warm the soil, and supply it with humus, at the same time giving up their animoniacal salt to this humus and to the absorbent alumina of the clay, which supply it in the summer to the succeeding crops. These weeds, &c., with the addition of the vegetable refuse of a small household, and well-burned coal ashes (i.e., the mineral matter of fossil vegetation), I have found sufficient to maintain and increase the fertility of a kitchen garden, an orchard covering more than an acre. At the same time, I see the gardeners employed by my neighbours wheeling away barrow-loads of weeds to pitch them on waste gorund, if any is at hand, and the dustmen carry away cartloads of vegetable treasures. Then, on the day following, or thereabouts, cartloads of expensive and offensive manure are brought to the same doors from which far better material was thrown away the day before. Stable manure and cattle stall manure are especially valuable for farm land, simply because they carry back to the hay-field and the oat-field precisely that which has been taken away. But the salts removed by garden weeds differ materially from those contained in hay and straw litter, or oats and horse beans, and thus the unsientific gardener who uses these requires at least half a ton to be as effective as one hundredweight of the decayed produce of the garden itself.—Sco. Am. Journal.

Wanted—A Quiet Life.

A nervous-looking man went into a store the other day and sat down for half an hour or so, when the clerk asked if there were anything she could do for him. He said no, he didn't want anything. She went away, and he sat there half an hour longer, when the proprietor went to him and asked if he wanted to be shown anything. "No," said the nervous man, "I just wanted to sit around. My physician has recommended perfect quiet for me, and says above all things I must avoid being in crowds. Noticing that you did not advertise in the newspapers, I thought this would be as quiet a place as I could find, so I just dropped in for a few hours of complete isolation." The merchant picked up a bolt of paper cambric to brain him, but the man went out. He said all he wanted was a quiet life.—Scot. Am. Journal.
