VOLUME II., NO. 20. HONOLULU, H. I., SATURDAY JANUARY, 14, 1882. WHOLE NUMBER 72.

Reminiscences of Honolulu.—No 19.

On the 14th of December, a series of Resolutions was passed in Privy Council and ordered to be published in the Polynesian, and, together with all the official correspondence connected with the "special audience" of Messrs. Miller, Ten Eyck and Dillon, printed in a pamphlet; which last may probably be found in the archives of the Foreign Office—if not destroyed during the incumbency of Varigny. The gist of the resolutions was contained in these words:

"The Minister of Foreign Relations is commanded by the King to inform Anthony Ten Eyck, Esquire, Commissioner of the United States, that His Majesty, in the exercise of a prerogative clearly belonging to him as Sovereign, has seen fit, on grounds and for reasons to be made known to the Government of the United States, to order all departments of his Government to cease, from the date of Mr. Wyllie's dispatch transmitting these resolutions, all official correspondence with Mr. Ten Eyck, as such Commissioner, but still as long as he remains on the Islands to treat him with all personal respect."

So ended the episode of the manuscripts, with the termination of Mr. Ten Eyck's official career in the Islands. In the estimation of our community at that time, the grievances and complications which I have related were deemed very grave and consequential; but when considered after the lapse of years, they will appear to have been in reality to a large extent a comedy of errors. Mr. Ten Eyck was the first to begin the series of mistakes that led to his own official retirement, by allowing himself to be drawn into partizanship against the King's Government when he should have observed strict neutrality; in this, however, he had the example and co-operation of the British and French officials. And a serious error was committed by the Government in lending itself to the illicit procuring of the MSS., in order to prove that Foreign Representatives had interfered improperly in Hawaiian affairs; for the end does not justify the means any more in public than in private business. But, having possession of the facts, the Hawaiian Government owed it to itself as an independent state, to act as it did, and the interdiction of Mr. Ten Eyck was just.

Mr. Ten Eyck left for the U. S. via California, in May, 1849, leaving Dr. R. W. Wood as Acting Commissioner during his intended temporary absence. But he did not return, and the Treaty which he had been specially appointed to negotiate, was finally accomplished at Washington in December, 1849, between James J. Jarves, as Hawaiian Plenipotentiary and John M. Clayton, Secretary of State of the U. S. Dr. Wood did no official business as Commissioner, and any correspondence of the Government on matters connected with American interests was carried on with Joel Turrill, a New York politician, who had been sent out by President Polk to succeed Mr. Abell, as U. S. Consul at the then important and lucrative post of Honolulu. Mr. Turrill was of a phlegmatic disposition, took no part in Island politics, or parties, and wisely devoted his attention to the duties and emoluments of his Consulate. Honolulu at that time stood second only in importance on the list of U. S. Consulates throughout the world. After the retirement of Mr. Ten Eyck, the post of Commissioner to Hawaii remained unoccupied until 1850, when Luther Severance was appointed. Mr. Severance began life on the Kennebec Journal, an old established and leading Whig newspaper of Augusta, Me., of which he became and was for many years the able editor, and by a natural process of evolution was made a Representative of his State in Congress.

What may be termed Mr. Ten Eyck's last public appearance in Honolulu, was at a grand ball given in his honor on the 15th of January, 1849, by the residents, at which were present the "wealth, rank, beauty and fashion," of the Island metropolis. The U. S. sloop of war Dale, Commander Rudd, was in port, and her officers were present in force.

On Dec. 30, 1848, the funeral ceremonies were jointly observed of the young high chiefs, Moses Kekuaiwa, William Pitt Leleiohoku and Kaiminaauao. As usual in those days, great ceremony and form was observed, a mixture of the modern civilized state and recent barbaric custom. Large sums were expended on the coffins, which were made of the beautiful island woods, the Koa and Kou, inlaid with satin and profusely ornamented with silver trappings. The bodies were preserved with alcohol in metal coffins, enclosed in the costly outside caskets. It is a well known fact, however, that the Hawaiians of the olden times did not bury the bodies of their high chiefs. The common people were buried, either in the enclosure of the house (and sometimes within the house itself) or, wrapped in tapa and mats, placed in an old canoe and deposited in one of the caves of the hill sides that abound throughout the Islands. But on the death of a high chief, the duty devolved upon his most intimate friends to at once remove all the flesh from the bones, which were scraped and dried and carefully wrapped in fine white tapa for concealment and preservation. The flesh, made up into a bundle and heavily weighted with stones, was at night conveyed in a canoe a long distance beyond the outlying reef, and, when a position was reached from whence certain stars bore in a specified direction, the bundle was committed to the deep. The custody of the bones was an honor and was kept as a profound secret, handed down from father to son. As to the period when these ancient customs with regard to the remains of the chiefs were finally abandoned altogether, it cannot be precisely fixed. An old native, a retainer of the chief families, once said to me while standing among the rows of coffins in the former Royal Mausoleum, that many of them contained only stones wrapped in tapa—the bones were not there. Whether the bodies of the high chiefs Moses and Billy Pitt,—as Leleiohoku was familiarly named by foreigners—were disposed of in this manner, it is impossible to say; but the funeral was a grand affair. The people had gathered from all the Islands for the occasion, and a great deal of money was expended for mourning garments. Besides the military, there was probably three to four thousand persons in the procession, and the air was full of uwe helu—reciting the virtues and the prowess of the ancestors of the deceased. The Royal Mausoleum at that time was a coral stone-building, situated in Kekauluohi's premises, (since incorporated in the Palace grounds) and there the coffins were deposited, the military firing three vollies.

It was in the same month of December, that a day of national humiliation, fasting and prayer was observed, by Royal proclamation throughout the Islands, on account of the prevalence of the epidemics before alluded to. Religious services were held in the native churches, which were filled to overflowing, and also in the Bethel Chapel, by the Rev. Mr. Damon.

In looking over the statistics of the year 1848, I find that the imports from abroad amounted in value to $605,618, while the exports only footed up the sum of $66,000, $22,828 of which represented sugar—mostly from Koloa, Kauai, and some from Makawao, Maui.

On the 16th of December, C. E. Hitchcock, who had been Director of the Government Press and Editor of the Polynesian since the date of Mr. Jarves' departure, in the previous month of January, succumbed to the gold fever, and resigned his very comfortable position to go to California. Hitchcock was a printer by trade, and foreman of the Government Printing Office under Jarves for three out of the five years during which J. had occupied the editorial chair. The reputation of the latter as a literary man was then already assured by his History of the Islands and several minor works, and since has been fully established by the publication of "Kaiana," "Confessions of an Inquirer," and several books on art matters, in which last he is quite a connoisseur. I believe he is now residing in Italy. His successor in the editorial chair, Hitchcock, was by no means one of the literati. He had enjoyed a New England common school education; was a good printer, and a shrewd business man; but he was not "a ready writer." Leaving here in 1849, he was for several years quite successful in the general merchandise business in San Francisco, being one of the firm of Goodwin & Co. on California street. I have heard that, like many another of the pioneers of '49, after making a "big pile" he lost it all, or nearly all, in unfortunate speculations.

On the 23d December, 1848, Mr. C. G. Hopkins was appointed Director of the Government Press, in place of Mr. Hitchcock, resigned, and held the office until May, 1849, when he was succeeded by Mr. E. O. Hall. Mr. Hopkins was a young Englishman who had been brought up in an attorney's office in London, and who, besides the acquirements which such a training implies, was a good short-hand writer and possessed of a certain facility in the literary line. When Mr. Richards and Haalilio were in London as the King's Commissioners, Mr. Hopkins had been recommended to them as a man who might be useful to the government in the transaction of law business, and so they brought him out. Kauikeaouli was interested in the young stranger, who had good testimonials from influential people in England, and he got to be considered somewhat in the light of a ward of the chiefs. He lived among them, soon acquired a fair knowledge of the language, and always had some sort of a quasi government position. Like his two predecessors in the editorial chair, he was rather diminutive in person, and he had an effeminacy of manner that gave rise to the nickname of "Polly" Hopkins, by which he was vulgarly known. I have said he was facile in the use of the pen. He was an excellent English scholar, could turn a sentence very smoothly, and in the art of verbosity—of spreading over a large amount of space with words that could have been "boiled down" to a very little—he had few equals. Perhaps this was a valuable talent in those days, when nothing scarcely ever happened in Hawaii nei worth making a newspaper paragraph about—at least so the editors seemed to think—when mails were few and far between, and telegraph dispatches were not yet dreamed of.

During Mr. Hitchcock's incumbency of the office of Director of the Government Press, the Polynesian, which had for five years been printed in the stone building still standing near the corner of Alakea and Hotel streets, was removed to a new coral two-story building, that had been erected on the site now occupied by the Postoffice, and to make room for which it was pulled down in 1870. COMMERCIAL.

HONOLULU, JANUARY 14th, 1882.

Business prospects remain fair and a continual improvement may be expected during the coming season. The moderate weather of last week was a great assistance to inter island trade which has suffered from the recent storms.

Vessels for the Coast find less difficulty in procuring cargoes than was experienced a few weeks ago. The Ella sailed with a full cargo of sugar and rice valued at $60,346.68 for the San Francisco market, and the British bark Sir Lancelot got off yesterday for Port Townsend with 348,389lbs sugar valued at $28,432.87.

The Lady Lampson is the only arrival from San Francisco this week. She brings an assorted cargo, and relieves somewhat the scarcity in building material—notably brick and lime. The quantity of hay and feed in in the market is small, and the price of these articles is more likely to be greater than less before the market is stocked. The British ship Nineveh brings a large cargo of coal from New Castle, N. S. W., and the Buena Vista and Klikitat have arrived with lumber from the Sound.

The bark Adonis, from Bremen, consigned to Hackfeld & Co., with full line or staple goods is now over due, and her arrival is anxiously looked for.

On Monday last, by order of the Trustees of the Lunalilo Estate, Mr. E. P. Adams held a sale of lands situated in various parts of the Kingdom. The attendance was good, the bidding spirited, and the prices realized were considered highly satisfactory. The following is the list of lands sold, the purchasers, names and the amounts: Diamond Head was not sold.

The Ahupuaa of Keaau, in Puna, Hawaii, containing 64,275 acres, to S. M. Damon, for $20,200.

The Ahupuaa of Kahaualea, in Puna, Hawaii, containing 26,420 acres, to His Majesty Kalakaua, for $8,500.

The Ahupuaa of Keahialaka, in Puna, Hawaii, containing 1,276 acres, more or less, to R. Rycroft, for $1,325.

The Ahupuaa of Honolua, in Kaanapali, Maui, containing 3,800 acres, more or less; to Ruth Keelikolani, for $7,200.

The Ahupuaa of Kaapahu, in Kipahulu, Maui, contg. 1,480 acres, to S. Parker, for $875.

The Ilaina of Puuko, in Waimea, Hawaii, contg 7½ acres, to S. Parker.

MR. GIBSON REVIEWED.

We have lately published some interesting correspondence of Walter M. Gibson, regarding his connection with the Mormons, as well as some documents which throw light upon his transactions in Netherlands' India. It is now proper that we disclose our reasons for doing so. Mr. Gibson is a public man. He is now a member of the Legislature. He is also the editor of a newspaper which has been active in criticising men and measures. As a Legislator he has not hesitated to fiercely attack the motives of men, and those who have the administration of public affairs in their hands know too well the vindictive energy with which he has pursued them. He has been especially forcible in investigating financial accounts, and the session of the last Legislature was protracted in order that he might have time to detect irregularities in the public accounts. He has assumed a lofty position. Casting stones as he has, he was and is bound to see that he does not live in a glass house. Moreover, he has assumed the championship of the Hawaiian race, and in doing so he has not hesitated to belittle the work of those who have done much if not all that has been done for the Hawaiian people. We have therefore the right, and it it is a duty as well, to put before our readers such facts regarding his public life as shall enable them to justly estimate his character. In addition to what we have already published, we will refer to several recent acts of his public life, which will bring down to the latest date the material for his public biography. In the Legislature of 1878 he obtained an appropriation of $1,500 for the publication of "Sanitary Instruction for the Hawaiian People." He thereupon wrote a small treatise on the subject, and drew in one sum the amount of $1,500 in payment for it. We are willing to leave it to any competent judge whether one-fourth of that amount would not have secured a treatise equally valuable from any good medical practitioner in this city. No details of expenses were ever, we are informed, rendered to the government. In 1880, while still a Legislator, he secured a contract to supply the lepers on Molokai with sheep. It is well known that the Hawaiians do not like sheep meat. He not only forced this meat upon them, but got his pay in advance, before a sheep was delivered. If he can point to another instance of this kind, we should like to know it. Of the newspaper contract wherein he obtained $3,000 in return for pledging his loyalty, our readers are well acquainted and we will not enlarge on the matter further. A Legislator who covers himself with the paint of public devotion, and tricks himself out in the fine feathers of consecration to national interests, must expect to be dealt with severely, if he is caught descending from his high estate. He must expect to put the same cup to his own lips which he forces to the lips of others. Few men, indeed, can boast of spotless lives, and every man should hold in his hands the mantle of charity. But if one cast away the tender mercies, and takes the sword, he must expect to perish by it also. For months the Elele, Mr. Gibson's newspaper, has been stirring up the natives to discontent with the whites. Some of the Elele articles we have published, and they exhibit a rancour, a distrust of the foreigner which has never before appeared in native literature. The general idea conveyed has been, and is, that the foreigners are not well disposed towards the natives, and that the natives ought to keep the political control in their hands. These statements are often supplemented by suggestions that Mr. Gibson is the true friend of the Hawaiian. In this we see an attempt to place the natives in antagonism with the foreigners. From the beginning till now the natives have been content to live side by side with the foreigner, trusting in all important matters to his superior skill, education and energy. The Kamehamehas and the high chiefs made constant acknowledgment of this. They made no attempt to run a dividing line between the two races. The opinions of Mr. Gibson, as expressed in the Advertiser and the Elele, go far to prove that he is attempting to put the races in antagonism; to create a suspicion against the foreigner; to stir them up to do that which without intending it, may be vastly injurious to foreign interests. No one for a moment doubts that if the Hawaiians had been left to themselves, "Consular Jurisdiction" would have existed here, and the independence of the kingdom would have been sadly impaired. That some of the natives should feel restless at the natural domination of the whites in energy, skill, and education, is not surprising. That a white should aggravate this feeling and seek to disturb the harmony which has hitherto existed between the races, is a matter to be regretted. Mr. Gibson has placed himself out of sympathy with those who have some right to call themselves the real friends of the natives. He is doing no idle work, but that which leads, though he may not see it, to serious consequences. He may not be striving for disturbance or revolution, but we believe the result of his work will be that.

The foreigners are few as compared with the natives, but they have felt in the years gone by a perfect security for life and property. Though in a minority in political strength, they have felt no uneasiness, and have not cast about for protection. But events that have happened within the last two years admonish them that their security may be in jeopardy; that the natives may vote away the money of the foreigner, and may, indeed, ruin him; that an antagonism of races may put his life in danger. We believe that Mr. Gibson's efforts are towards changing the old order and substituting a new and dangerous order of things. Men are beginning to ask, what comes next? If the natives are about to assume under the leadership of Mr. Gibson, or any one else, the political control of this kingdom, the foreigners here, under the pressure of necessity, must look about for protection, wherever it may be obtained. There are more ways than one by which it may be got. But they prefer the old order of things, and will cry out and secure this protection only when forced to it. In this foreigners of all races are in unison. We know that many men here are apprehensive of the future. The sky is not bright, and the clouds hang low. The Reciprocity treaty is in extreme danger. The government is weak, simply because in a medley of races, with our political institutions, it cannot be strong. Mr. Gibson's teachings, we believe, are tending to a crisis in our affairs, and we are compelled to put him before the community as he is and has been. We know that those who are in favor of annexation are opposed to us in this matter. They believe that our calling a halt in Mr. Gibson's career, will postpone a crisis which they desire. They believe that an antagonism of races, a claim to political control by the natives, will force annexation. They believe that the sooner disturbances arise the more quickly will the foreigners cry for that or any other outside interference, which will guarantee safety to life and property. But this we do not desire. We believe in the independence of these islands. At the same time we clearly see that if those who pay only a small amount of the taxes are to control and dispose of the money of those who pay the largest taxes, there will be a cry for foreign protection. We know of more than one conservative American, who has hitherto rejected the idea of American interference, but who now, under the constant strain of agitation by the native press, and the possible conflict it may bring on, turns towards the United States as a solution of the problem here. When men are disposed to favor the alienation of this kingdom, through fear of bad government, it is time for us to look at the situation seriously. The independence of this kingdom is dear to those whites who know no other fatherland, but that loyalty will give way to a more vigorous sentiment for political and financial safety, if the situation requires it. The man who urges the natives to a course which alarms the foreigners, is not the friend of the natives. Since the creation of this nation there has been no such scene in the Legislative council, as in that of 1876, when Mr. Gibson in angry debate, pointed to a crowd of excited Hawaiians behind the bar, and then shaking his fist at the whitemen in the Legislature yelled: "If you want disorder you can have it!" Then and there, men loyal to the crown and the land, believed that the law of the mob was coming at the hands of Mr. Gibson, and these, knowing the man they had to deal with, were prepared for any emergency. These are unpleasant scenes. The record of the man who has done these things, who has chosen this career, ought to be before all men, and we have put it before them. There ought to be and should be harmony here. That Mr. Gibson's teachings do not tend towards it, we fully believe, and so have written.

REGENERATION.

The fact is well-established that the more one sleeps the more one wants to sleep, it is an appetite that grows with what it feeds on. In like manner, the less one does the less one cares to do, and perhaps the most natural thing in the world is for a man who has begun to succumb to the climatic influence, who is surrounded by indolent or luxurious companions, who has few opportunities for the exercise of his physical and mental faculties, who is in short retrograding to hasten the inevitable end and lie dormant the rest of his days.

There are few who will deny that the climate of Hawaii, attractive as it is, hides in its apparently guileless beauty, an element which is demoralizing. It is as dangerous as seductive. It can—and does in some cases—poison while it smiles. If the youth fresh from the bracing breezes of less favored climes chafes at first under the placid monotony of island life, he anon finds that it is not so difficult to do as the Hawaiians do and that is, take things easily and "let the gentleman in the next room walk the floor."

That sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof is amply exemplified in the uneventful routine into which we have, everyone of us, naturally and easily fallen. There is, there must be, a preventive and an antidote for this unfortunate tendency and its very serious consequences; there must be a life which, if faithfully and conscientiously lived, will keep the brain fresh and active, the body vigorous and young. It was so in the old days before the Hawaiians had thrown aside their national customs and only partially adopted those which were alien, and few of which seem well suited to their temperament or their physique. The heroic games which were their glory; the athletic sports which bred in them a love of strength and grace and brought them nigh to physical perfection, have unhappily been discountenanced and the national decadence has been so rapid as to threaten the extinction of the race.

Very little lasting good can be accomplished for the Hawaiians until there is better material to work upon; they must be roused from their lethargy and this can only be achieved through the old channels. Let them revive their ancient sports; let them be encouraged in those feats of strength and agility which once would have done credit to the arenas of Greece and Rome.

When the spear-throwers and the surf-riders have come to the front again, there will be hope for the race. The recent revival of the interest in gymnastics among our citizens is a very hopeful sign. The surest way of ministering to a mind diseased is to build up the body. When riding and boating parties have become regular institutions, when cricket and base-ball and lawn-tennis are the order of the day, when men and women, old and young, go as regularly to the gymnasium and the calisthenic hall as they go to their dinner tables—when literary gatherings, reading clubs, debating societies and private theatricals have become the rage instead of being the exception, there will be nothing to fear from a climate which invites repose and discourages exertion; for the mind and the body will have awakened to a new life and this awakening, distasteful as it may be to those who have ceased to struggle in the toils of the enchantress,—from the beach-comber to the silken Sybarite,—is assuredly the hope of the rising generation.

NATURAL HISTORY SOCIETY.

We took a look through the museum in the Government building a few days ago and must say that it is a disgrace to the Kingdom and the people of Honolulu. The collection of Hawaiian relics and curiosities is far from perfect, few of them are labelled, and many of them are mixed up with curiosities from other countries so that it is impossible for strangers to tell what is Hawaiian and what is not. One can see larger collections of Hawaiian antiquities in London, Paris, Boston, or even San Francisco, than here.

Everything in the museum should be labelled, or numbered and catalogued, and this should be done while there are those left who can do it. This suggests the thought that there should be a Scientific Society or Natural History Society or some organization of the kind here. It would be difficult to find a community of the same population in any part of the civilized world where there is not such an organization. There are many people here who take an interest in such matters, but as each one pursues his own course and receives no encouragement from anyone else, there is little accomplished that can be of any benefit to science or to this country. Such a society here is a necessity. The field for research is comparatively unwork'd and local scientists and naturalists could pursue their studies much more effectively if they could receive the encouragement of such a body, and much valuable information could thus be gathered and saved which now is lost.

If such a society were organized the museum should be put under its charge, and would serve as a nucleus for the accumulation of further contributions. As soon as it will have become known that any interest is taken in securing specimens, and that they will be properly labelled and exhibited, they will come in as rapidly as they can be taken care of. Such is the case elsewhere, and we know of no reason why it should be different here. We would like to hear from any interested in this matter.

THE COMING ELECTION.

Election day is drawing near. Two weeks from next Wednesday the people will have to choose their representatives in the next session of the Legislature. From the apathy which prevails it would seem that they do not fully realize the importance which attaches to this election. A number of candidates have announced their platform, and a few speeches have been made, but the elective body remains inactive. The people have a right to know what they may expect of the various candidates, and if they do not demand it, and continue to pursue this course of masterly inactivity, serious results may follow for which they will be largely to blame. Many important questions must be decided during the next session of the Legislature which will have a bearing on Hawaiian politics in the future, and care should be exercised in the selection of law-makers that the people may be faithfully represented. No time should be wasted in further delay.

System of Taxation.

KOHALA, December, 1881.

EDITOR PRESS:—Can' nothing be done through the use of type or otherwise, with a view to effecting a change in the workings of the tax assessment?

The assessor's compensation is a certain percentage on the amount assessed, and this in itself, while it may be the best incentive to keenness in scenting out taxable property, and strictness in applying the rules, is capable in bad hands, or false and exagerated notions of value, of becoming a serious engine of oppression. Every assessor seems at liberty to exercise his own ideas as to value; as a rule he rises on the figures of his predecessor, and there is apparently no check and no limit to the value at which he may assess. The privilege of appeal is a farce, unless the board is composed of intelligent and honest men of good judgment, which is often not the case; and the property holder is practically at the mercy of a single individual. Without necessity in all cases imputing this individual with a reckless and avaricious—or over patriotic spirit of disregard for the rights of his neighbor, it is sufficient to say that some people here, have had a taste of what may be done in the line of exhorbitant taxation,—taxation above any reasonably supposable market value; and according to all accounts, other districts and other islands have had the same experience, you of Honolulu not excepted.

To a man's estimate of his property, the assessor adds 25 to 100 per cent., or $1,000 to $50,000 as the case may be, and no heed is paid to the protest that, not only would he gladly sell for less at any time, but that if offered for sale, the property in all probability, not being more than the lower estimate.

Property is always assumed to rise in value, with a most abounding generosity; and to cap the climax, the most clearly depreciated and disappointing property, which would by no possibility bring its original price, is assessed at an advance on the same.

No property is admitted to have depreciated in value, but if for sufficient reasons a man will not sell—his home for instance, or a business with which he is contented—that fact is made a proof that it is of untold value to him, and the figure at which it may be assessed—is limited only by the large-hearted liberality of that factotum of the law. A native board may as well be no board in probably the majority of cases, for if I mistake not, his predominant idea and his guiding rule of action is not, "What is fair, or what is just?" but "what, by twistings and turnings in the law or out of it, may be accomplished?" or shortly, "might makes right.".

It is not many years ago that a native was assessed for more land than he possessed, and although he brought his deed in proof, he lost his case. There was another similar land case at the same time which received like treatment, but having forgotten the parties concerned, and the particulars, I can only refer to it. Another man was assessed twice and his appeal was deliberately thrown out. This looks to me like robbery by the Government. A sable member of the board at that time,—an ex Judge—made this consoling remarks; "You foreigners get all the money and you may as well pay the taxes," and it is my opinion that if put to the test, that would be found to be the ruling spirit of; to say the least, a very goodly proportion of native Hawaiians. Is there no help for the property holder? The attention of the next Legislature is respectfully called to the matter.

Supplement to the Saturday Press, January 14, 1882.

The Native Press.

The Poe Aina says: "A little more than three weeks remains before the election of Representatives take place, and up to this time no Inspectors of Election are provided for the District of Kaanapali on Maui. Is that District to be altogether deprived of its representative? This will be something new. We are of the opinion that the proper course will be for the Assembly, immediately after organizing, to authorize the Minister of the Interior to appoint a Board of Inspectors for Kaanapali, and to order an election for a Representative, without delay. For it seems that in consequence of the inattention and ignorance of legislators, the voters residing in Kaanapali and Kahakuloa are now to be deprived of any voice in the making of laws, in that Assembly to which they have, for the past twenty-five years, continuously sent a member. It is very important that their rights, of which they are now deprived by the bad management of our law-makers, should be fully respected. The vigilance displayed by our new Attorney-General in this matter, illustrates the negligence of his predecessors in office." [Since the incumbency of Mr. Phillips, who left office in 1873, the irregularity here referred to has not been unknown to successive Attorney-Generals, but their tenures of office were so brief that they had no fair opportunity to procure an amendment of the law.]

The native papers publish a number of addresses of candidates, who want to be sent to the Legislature. Mr. D. P. Piilani on behalf of his friend Mr. Palohau thus addresses the voters of Kauai: "To my friends the people of Kawaihau of Hanalei Kanaloko—love to you. I am your very humble fellow subject, dust of the dust as God has made me; how is it with you; are you lazy or asleep? Here at hand is the session of 1882. Awake, awake! Behold the spots of the leopard; there is a lion roaring who desires to spoil the beauty of those spots. Prepare—get the materials ready to make the mixture, show ourselves men, and don't place your minds on any other person. You will ask upon whom, then? I say, upon D. B. Palohau, the spear of Auchola, the brave, the lion of the northwest of Kauai. Therefore I hasten to call on you, settle your minds, and with your hands grasp the ballots of Palohau, for he loves the people, he is wise, knows all about the laws, and is a very able man."

Our Portuguese fellow citizens are apparently coming to the front as aspirants for Legislative honors. One John R. Syiva, a resident of this district, offers his name as a candidate, being impelled thereto, as he says, by the request of numerous voters. He is an old resident, has acquired property and a family here, and pledges himself, if elected, to work for the interests of the poor man as well as the rich, and the repeal of burdensome laws; and he is particularly desirous of doing something to foster and preserve the native Hawaiian people.

Mr. D. B. Mahoe solicits the votes of the electors of Koolaulon, inasmuch as he thinks the coming session will be an important one, and "the work should not be left to new hands."

The Pastor of Kaumakapili, on behalf of his church members, gives thanks and asks the blessing of Heaven upon those who contributed so liberally to their building fund on Sunday, Jan. 1st, the sum received amounting to $1,211.25.

The Pae Aina commences the year with a translation of the first chapter, to be continued through the year, of a novel entitled "King Arthur of England, and his twelve brave knights."

Among the "campaign documents" in circulation is one signed by Messrs. Albert Kunuiakea, J. Sheldon, Poepoe and Kalaukoa as follows: "The small papers that are being handed about to catch you, our friends, purporting to be signed by the Hon. W. M. Gibson along with Pahia, Keau and Moanauli Jr., we declare to be false. Mr. Gibson's name is placed there without his knowledge. How indeed could he consent to abandon John Sheldon, who is employed by him and knows his every wish, the one who fearlessly writes his sentiments in the Elele? We hereby declare that Mr. Gibson never wrote his name to that circular. When the time arrives in which he shall decide to become a candidate, you may depend that the undersigned will know it, because we and he are of one mind in this business. His name belongs to all the people; and whenever the time comes we shall know his decision, and we may depend that his labors will be for the good of the country."

In an editorial of Wednesday's Elele, it is definitively stated that the Hon. W. M. Gibson is a candidate for the Assembly to represent Honolulu. A list of fifteen different tickets is given, on each of which Mr. Gibson's name appears. We translate: "Among all the Hawaiian names there is one foreign name, that of Hon. W. M. Gibson; which is in all mouths. This gentleman has expressed his desire and intention not to take up legislative work, but to rest from public business; and he has not put his own name forward as a candidate. But his heart is as much as ever with the people, and he desires to forward everything that will be for their interest. He is a true servant of the nation, as was evidenced by his course in the Legislature in former sessions; therefore he cannot, and does not wish to decline the labor that the people may put upon him. And consequently, if they desire to vote for him to go to the coming session, he will take upon himself their burden, and will work industriously and heartily, as he did before, while in the discharge of the duties of a representative of the people. But let it be understood that Mr. Gibson does not place his name upon any one ticket, but it may be combined by the voters with any of the names above mentioned. * * * Let the electors remember, that Mr. Gibson has given his name to the public, and not for any one ticket, leaving to the voter the option of choosing who he likes; it is not with Gibson to prescribe who shall or shall not be voted for. Thus his name is given to the public, and he hopes that if elected he shall find co-workers with himself in whatever shall be for the honor of the King, the good of the government and the preservation of the nation."

Here are some of the new planks in the platform of the ticket headed by Kunuiakea: "Kill the ten millions loan project—it is a red dragon, to swallow Hawaiian independence. Cast out and sweep away the feeble old doctors of the Queen's Hospital—there is the life, in Maunakea street. Dash to atoms the present Ministerial system. Put a tax on the numerous California mules that are imported for our plantations. Down with the importation of laborers, carried on under the pretence of increasing the nation. Oppose the proposed amendments of Articles 61 and 56 of the Constitution, respecting the property qualifications of Representatives and their compensation. Here is thy death, oh Hawaii, it is near to the threshold of the door. Plenty more to come."

Supreme Court.

Saturday, January 7th.

The January Term of the Supreme Court was opened with the case of the King vs. Gibson, indicted for libel. This was an argument before the presiding Judge McCully on a demurrer introduced by the defendant's counsel upon the insufficiency of the indictment. The defendant's counsel argued that there should be a specific averment of malicious publication and a like declaration as to the falsity of the matter published.

Counsel for the prosecution held that a specific declaration was not necessary; and that it was sufficient that malice should be inferred from the fact of an untruthful published statement. Counsel asked time to file a brief of authorities, and the 11th was set as the limit of the time to be allowed. A. S. Hartwell appeared for the Crown and E. Preston assisted by J. Russell for the defense. No judgement has yet been given in the matter.

On the same day sentence of 9 months imprisonment was passed upon the man Davis, second mate of the steamer Anjer Head convicted of manslaughter in the third degree. A very feeling address was made by Justice McCully to the man preliminary to uttering sentence. He said that he had before him the written recommendation of the jury to mercy; but that had in no wise influenced him in his disposition to be merciful, as all the facts connected with the unfortunate occurrence had conspired to arouse his intense sympathy. His being a husband and a father, and his being a stranger in the land, were considerations to arouse sympathy; to these were added credible testimonials as to his previous correct life and good character, by those who had known him on ship-board, and in his own home. But that as the custom had been here to deal severely with cases of this kind, he could allow himself to be influenced by his natural feelings no further than he had been in imposing so light a sentence. A fine for manslaughter as far as he could call to mind had in no case been imposed in lieu of imprisonment.

Sentence was also passed upon Frank Davis, a half caste, convicted of assault with a deadly weapon upon A. Fernandez in Honolulu—6 months' hard labor and $50 fine and costs.

Monday the 9th was occupied in hearing a native appeal case from the decision of Justice McCully in the Intermediary Court, the case of Mahoe vs. Puka et al in regard to some affairs of the Waikane Hui.

Tuesday 10th, was begun by an ejectment suit: Kamoku, w., vs. Kaupe, w. Case was withdrawn by the plaintiff's counsel. W. R. Castle for complainant, A. S. Hartwell for defendant.

On the same day was heard another case of ejectment. Kalaeokekoi vs. D. Kahanu. Holokahiki assisted by four other counsel, were for the plaintiff, and J. M. Davidson for plaintiff. This suit was brought to eject Kahanu from his possession of a piece of land in Kamakela deeded to him by the heir (and her husband) of Kalakini. The Judge instructed the jury that it was necessary first, for the plaintiff to prove that he was the rightful heir of the mother of the awardee, and also to prove that adverse possession of the land had not been held for a full twenty years by the defendant. Failing in proof of either particular, judgment should be for the defendant. The defense brought evidence of possession through Kalakini down, for 32 years. Verdict for the defendant, three dissentient. Counsel for plaintiff noted exceptions to the verdict.

Friday 6th. The case of Liena, k., vs. Mary Pahau et al, ejectment was heard before a native jury, A. S. Hartwell appearing for the plaintiff and J. M. Davidson for the defendants, Justice McCully presiding. Liena claimed by right of inheritance, a half of some property on Printer's Lane in possession of Mary Pahau and children. When the evidence for the prosecution had been closed and the plaintiff's counsel had rested, Mr. Davidson for the defense asked for a non-suit on the ground that the opposing counsel had failed to prove possession by defendant. Mr. Hartwell, for the plaintiff, said he had proved service of a written demand, and a refusal thereof; and that a demand and refusal was equivalent to an admission of possession in the case. The motion for a non-suit was overruled and the case was continued. A verdict for the plaintiff was rendered. Exceptions were taken to the ruling of Justice McCully by the defendant's counsel Mr. J. M. Davidson.

Divorces have been decreed in the following cases: Kahu, w., vs. Aman, c. Holokahiki for libellant. Hoopii, w., vs. Keawekolohe. Nepoa, k., vs. Makuahine. Holokahiki for libellant. Robt. Oehlhoffen vs. Caroline Oehlhoffen. J. M. Davidson for libellant.

In the case of the King vs. Ah Young and Asam, house-breaking a nol. pros. was entered. A. S. Hartwell for defendant.

Yesterday, in the case of the King vs. Fook Chee on a charge of opium in possession, the jury, after an absence of a few minutes, returned with a unanimous verdict of not guilty.

J. D. Githens on Friday afternoon appeared before Justice McCully and through his counsel J. Russell and E. Preston, in anticipation of his sentence for "assault with a weapon dangerous to life" on Mr. McChesney, asked that the Court consider the expressed forgiveness of Mr. McChesney in behalf of the prisoner. The sentence has been deferred.

Regarding the Reciprocity Treaty.

The S. F. News Letter of Dec. 10th, in an article under the above heading, says: "Has the Pacific Coast any interest in annulling the treaty? To this query the answer must be an emphatic No. Has the Pacific Coast an interest in hearing its ship-yards ringing with the sound of busy hammers? or in watching the fiery sparks fly from the molten iron? Has it an interest in knowing that 10,000, at least, of its population derive their daily bread from our relations with the Islands? Has it an interest in knowing that through the portals of our Golden Gate will come three-fourths of the sugar demanded by the United States for consumption? Has it an interest in knowing that this sugar will be brought here by vessels of domestic build, which will return laden with the products of our workshops, our fields and our mines? We think it has; and we think that common sense and a due regard for their own interests should cause the people and press of this coast to labor for the renewal of the Reciprocity Treaty. We know that Eastern refiners are opposed to this Treaty; it is natural that they should be. The operation of the Treaty will result in San Francisco and not New York becoming, in the near future, the great sugar distributing point. The fact that, at the present time, the people of this coast pay more for refined sugars than Eastern consumers do is but the natural result of circumstances. Add the cost of freight, difference in the price of labor, coal and material necessary in refining together, and to that sum add the interest, insurance and storage on the immense stock of raw sugars which have to be carried by local refiners (who have also to pay the same price for raw sugars from the Hawaiian Islands that Eastern refiners do for Manila or other foreign sugars, duty paid,) and take into consideration that we get a pure article here, while Eastern consumers get an adulterated one, and it will be seen that we are not so badly dealt with as the Chronicle would have us believe. In fact, when the whole matter is calmly considered, it becomes clearly apparent that the Chronicle is not for or with the people of this coast."

Gibson and the Mormons.

EDITOR SATURDAY PRESS,—Permit me to offer a few items of correction to the voluminous article which is now being published in the supplements to the SATURDAY PRESS, bearing the caption "The Shepherd Saint of Lanai," that the truth may be vindicated and that all wild projects and aerial ambition may collapse where they belong.

We do not deny the fact, that Mr. Gibson was a member of the Church commonly called "Mormons" at the time he came as a missionary to these Islands in 1862, but we wish the public to understand that, although he was connected with the Church of Latter Day Saints, he possessed no right or authority from said Church to commence such a scheme as he sought to carry out on Lanai; hence the Church should not be subject to any disrepute in the minds of the public through his acts, in his departure from all rule and discipline in the Church. No sooner was his acts known by the authorities of the Church in Utah, than a deputation was sent from there to investigate the matter, and their prompt action in excommunicating him from the Church, is conclusive evidence that the transfer to and settlement in these Islands of the people known as "Mormons" or "Latter Day Saints" was never projected by the leaders of said Church; hence there could not have been any danger "in handing over the entire group to these peculiar, industrious and well-organized people."

You say, "the documents which we publish give the first really authentic account of the interior life, the true 'inwardness' of Mormonism in these Islands." Such is not the case, but they show, no doubt, "the true inwardness" of Gibsonism. The deception and dishonesty, developed and brought to light on Lanai can bear no more relationship, prejudicially, to Mormonism, than the same acts, if committed by a member of any other denomination, would have upon that denomination of which he was a member.

There is an unpleasant remembrance of the whole Lanai matter that still remains in the minds of those who were the sufferers, so I am frequently told, and that is this: before this case was barred by the statutes of limitation, the Attorney General was applied to for redress of grievances, but he staved the matter off in consequence of high prejudices which he entertained towards the Mormons and his favor towards the man who had been severed from said Church. A more recent effort was made to bring the case up when his successor came into office, but quite a number of the most important witnesses had died, hence discouragement brought on another failure.

There is a day of reckoning when the crookedness of Lanai matters will be more completely brought to light, than you have been able to do, although all must confess you have made a remarkable effort to accomplish it.

I remain, most respectfully, H. H. CLUFF.

January 10th, 1882.

[We cheerfully give place to the above, and trust that it will quiet the misapprehensions of any one in regard to the matter we have published. Gibsonism and not Mormonism is what we have been dealing with.—ED.]

Minister of Finance Interviewed.

True to our journalistic duty to inform the public of all matters of public interest, and considering that Cabinet Ministers, as personally responsible to the public, are required to make response to all legitimate enquiries—the other day we dispatched our No. 1 reporter, duly equipped with pencils and paper, to formally interview our Minister of Finance, in order to obtain an answer to the important question as to how that gentleman became a Hawaiian General? Our reporter found His Excellency in his comfortable office in Aliiolani House, and was received with the affability of manner for which that official is noted, and the following colloquy ensued, after the customary greetings.

General. Please be seated. What have you new?

Reporter. Something new is what I am in search of. What do you think, General, about the coming elections—who among the candidates do you favor, and who do you suppose will be elected?

General. Well! Hum-m-ah—I suppose they are all good men—that is—I guess that somebody will get in—say four for Honolulu—eh?

Reporter. Verbum sat sapientia. [Our No. 1 confidential interviewer is pardonably fond of airing his classics.] But would you, General, be so obliging as to inform an inquiring public as to how you attained the rank of General in Hawaii nei,—and thus end conflicting discussion?

General. Certainly, and with pleasure. You see that about the time I arrived here, the famous General Walker, of filibuster renown, was preparing his grand revolutionary expedition to Sonora—and afterwards to Nicaragua—and as the good people of Honolulu in those days, and especially those connected with Government, were dreadfully nervous about the supposed designs of annexationists and filibusters, the story got around that the renowned and dreaded General Walker himself had actually arrived here for the purpose of spying out the land. Consequently my humble self attracted for a time a good deal of attention, and secret surveillance from certain quarters, and I was looked at askance as being the veritable fire-eater. And so, you see, I came to be known as "The General." The title has stuck to me ever since. That's all.

Reporter. Veritas prevalebit. A vexed question is settled. Thanks, and good morning, General.

SATURDAY PRESS.

JANUARY 14, 1882.

Manager's Notice.

All advertisements for the SATURDAY PRESS must be sent in by Friday noon. No insertions for the current issue can be guaranteed when sent in later.

Advertisers will mark the number of insertions desired, from which date they charge. Any not so marked will be charged 3 months.

THOS. G. THRUM, Manager.

The list of voters of the town of Honolulu for the ensuing election has been published.

We notice that an unusually large number of frame houses are being built in all parts of the town.

J. Harrigan, who was examined on a charge of attempting to break open Mr. J. A. Hopper's safe, has been discharged.

On the fourth page of to-day's Press we publish a translation of an article on sugar boiling on the island of St. Cruze, which is furnished us by Mr. W. L. Green.

An artesian well is being bored for the Government in the extension to the lot on which Aliiolani Hale is situated. The apparatus is the same that was in use at Makiki.

It is to be hoped that the next steamer from the Coast will bring the noted Prima Donna, Alice Oates, and that the Honolulu public will have an opportunity of hearing her.

It seems that we are to have another spell of disagreeable rainy weather with the wind from the south. There is a heavy surf on the reef and the harbor is quite muddy from the rains.

The flag-staff at the hall of China Fire company was blown down on Thursday morning during a severe squall. It snapped off about a foot above the ground and was found to be quite rotten. What is the condition of other flag-staffs in town?

The schooner Julia will be chartered by the Government to take the Gilbert Islanders home—some sixty or seventy—whose labor contracts have expired. She will probably leave about the first of February.

The literary and musical entertainment for the benefit of the Oahu college building fund, which was postponed a short time since, will be given at the Music Hall this evening. We hope to see a full house, for the object is a worthy one.

At Fort Street Church, Sunday, J. A. Cruzan, pastor, will preach at the usual hours. In the evening there will be a union revival service: theme of sermon, "The Possible and Impossible." A meeting for inquirers will be held in the vestry after the regular service.

Passenger movements have been quite light recently. The Lady Lampson brought only one from San Francisco, the Revere one from Royal Roads and the Buena Vista one from Port Townsend.

The Ella took five passengers from here to San Francisco—three of them Chinese.

The Union evening meetings at the vestry of Fort Street church have been continued through the week and have been generally well attended.

A letter received from Hawaii yesterday, says that there has been some rough weather at Honuapo. On the Iwalani's last visit one of her boats was turned bottom up in the surf, and the load lost. No rain has fallen in Kona this year.

William Davis, second officer of the steamer Anjer Head, was sentenced to nine months' imprisonment and not as we were erroneously informed last Saturday, one years' imprisonment and $100 fine. We are glad to know that the sentence is lighter.

The brigantine Ninito moored alongside the old Custom House wharf, was carried against the Fish Market wharf by the wind and tide on Thursday morning, but did not damage. She was hauled off after bumping against the wharf a little.

There has been an unusually large number of burglaries in Honolulu during the last two months, and the manner in which the burglars go at it shows them to be old hands at the business. Mr. Waterhouse's Queen street store is the last place where they have tried operations.

We were shown at Lane's Marble Works the other day a piece of rock from Campbell's quarry at Ewa. It is of a brownish gray color, is very hard, admits of a fine polish, and is perhaps the only rock on the island that will. The quantity is said to be practically unlimited. If so, we have an abundance of excellent building material near at hand.

There will be an entertainment of a musical and literary character at the rooms of the Library and Reading Room Association on Thursday evening next, which will be free to members and their families. Mrs. E. P. Adams, Miss Winter, Miss Carrie Castle, Mr. Myron Jones, Mrs. J. M. Lawlor and Mrs. Bowler will take part in what promises to be a very enjoyable affair.

A public meeting for arranging permanently for an athletic society will be called soon. The committee having the matter in charge have drawn up the proposed constitution and by-laws. The intention is to have the subscription fee so low that all can join, and to make it open to ladies as well as to gentlemen. It will be kept entirely clear of all political and national influences, and will, we hope, receive the support that such an institution merits.

We are informed that last Sunday forenoon a colored man by the name of William Jackson, formerly of Pahala Plantation, but lately in the employ of Honuapo mill, while going on board the Iwalani with the stewards of the steamer to procure a watch of his that was expected, fell overboard and disappeared. The body has not been recovered.

The price of fresh meat has risen considerably in price lately and the indications are that it will rise still higher. Why this is so we do not understand as there is any quantity of cattle on the islands. In the San Francisco markets prime beef is quoted at 6 to 7½ cents, and medium at 5¼ to 5½. This is less than one-half the price in the Honolulu markets, and at the present price it would pay to send fresh meat from San Francisco packed in ice. Beef should be cheap in a country where cattle can be raised at such little expense as here.

The Masons and Odd Fellows of Honolulu are having made at Lane's Marble Works a fine headstone for the grave of the late C. S. Bartow. It is a large slab of marble six feet long by three wide and six inches thick. The inscription reads:

Hawaii Notes.

Beautiful weather along the Windward Coast of Hawaii, with steady trades. White-winged schooners again begin to fleck the horizon, a thing that has not been seen for some time....The popular, genial and versatile Manager of the Pacific Sugar Mill, Kukuihaele, Hamakua, has resigned and is to be followed by J. S. Kay, late overseer at Ookala....W. Lidgate & Co's new mill at Laupahoehoe is to be constructed in a novel manner. It is to be built on the face of an almost perpendicular bluff 170 feet high and is to be six stories high, receiving the cane half way down the bluff and turning out the sugar at the bottom near the sea level. The object is to get it as low as possible for facility in fluming, and there being little room at the bottom a portion of the bluff will be blown off. Operations have begun....Honolulu is not the only place that has to complain of irregularities in taxation. Some very careless work, to say the least, has been done in Hilo. The Assessor made appointments and failed to keep them, and then evidently supplied the deficiency of information by a heavy draught on a fertile imagination. We hear of one case in which a planter was called upon to pay the taxes on a gang of ten Chinamen, who did not have a single man of that nationality in his employ, and who moreover had never heard of any such men as those enumerated in the list. The names, however, sounded very Chinese, and we congratulate the Assessor on the inventive ability which has made the counterfeit so like the real....Many of the mills along the Windward Coast have large quantities of sugar on hand. Some have so much that they are compelled to stop until it is removed....There is no special change in the crater of Kilauea. It has been raining there with little interruption for more than a month past....The rainfall at Hilo, as registered by C. H. Witmore for the year 1881; was 174.4 inches. The rainfall for last month, December, was 34 23-100 inches. The most rain for one day in December was 10.16 inches. The coldest day of the year 1881 was 62°; the hottest 94°; the most rain for one day in 1881 was in March, 11.75 inches; the most rain in 36 hours was 16.25 inches in March.

Answer to Query.

[The following is received in reply to the query asking the name of the oldest resident of the Islands.]

Editor Press: Jack Woods, born in Debtford, England, in 1808, left England on the 21st August, 1824, in the whaleship Elisabeth, arrived in Honolulu in the fall 1826. He says the ship ran away from him, and he has lived in Hamakua, Hawaii, ever since, 55 years. He is hale and hearty, and in full possession of all his faculties, but never believed in hard work. HAMAKUA.

January 1, 1882.

Things Wise and Otherwise.

The members of the serenading (?) party referred to by our Wednesday contemporary as being along Nuuanu avenue last Saturday night, say the editor of that paper has not an appreciative ear for fine music.

"Give me an elegant Latin, and a homely Saxon word," said Fox, the great English statesman, "and I will always choose the latter." In this respect, our neighbor, the Gazette, is not at all Foxy.

A letter lately received from Celso Cæsar Moreno by a friend of his in town, intimates his intention to visit us again at an early date. This time he will visit us (so his letter says) in an Italian war-vessel; but in what particular capacity or for what special purpose, we have not been given to understand.

At a speech-making bout in Manoa valley the other day, one of the speakers who is a candidate, was condemned by some of the audience because he would not subscribe to the sentiment that all the haoles are the enemies of the natives. This feeling is the legitimate bitter fruit of the teachings of some of the native newspapers.

The V. S. L. in his last issue of the P. C. A. writhing in the agony of despair, endeavors to console himself by considering the Press a temporary sheet. We regret, however, to feel obliged to harass those wounded feelings still further by assuring him that the chances of the longevity of the Press exceed that of the P. C. A.

The V. S. L.'s name appears in the Elele, his own paper, on fifteen different tickets. Oh, no! he wouldn't announce himself as a representative, as a man should, but he would put his name on fifteen ball its in order to get a fair show by riding on the popularity of others. Fifteen tickets! Perhaps he has faith in the adage, "There's luck in odd numbers!"

Our Saturday contemporary would feel deeply grateful to an enlightened public if they would only look upon the facts which we have given the past three weeks as the made up story of "a convicted thief, dead these many years," but no allusion is made to his own letters. They tell their own story so plainly, and are so damaging that they cannot be refuted apparently.

We understand that an order has recently been issued to the Police to keep their feet, and not their seat when on duty. Let them be instructed next that it is clearly within their province to take cognizance of such as offend decency by indulging in the use of obscene and profane language upon the public highways. Do this much and the ladies, at least, will bless you, O ye public servants who have long since learned to recognize nothing less than a "haul in" as a call to action!

LYRICS OF LANAI.

"When this snow melteth, there shall come a flood: Avaunt, my name is GIBSON!"

WALTER IN THE SNOW.

(Andante con molto expressione.)

["Daniel Webster, when urged to reply to certain repeated slanders, said he did not care to clean off his sidewalk till after it had quit snowing—so we, await the conclusion of a neighbor's story, before we notice."—P. C. Advertiser, Dec. 31]

"When the snow has ceased its falling"—
Thus said Walter boy one day—
"I will take my little shovel
And will clear it all away:
I will take my little shovel,
Oh! so bright and light and small,
And as Dan'l did will I do,
When the snow has ceased to fall.

"When the snow has ceased its falling—
Nay, dear reader do not scoff—
I will lightly seize my shovel,
Gaily clear the sidewalk off;
Only wait till it stops snowing,
Only wait, and you shall see
What a singular resemblance
There exists 'twixt Dan and me."

But the snow keeps falling, falling,
While the drift grows ever higher;
And if Walter isn't careful
It will put out Walter's fire;
And the people all are waiting,
While the sidewalk is quite hid,
Still are waiting to see Walter
Do as Dan'l Webster did.

Having more deliberately and in cooler moments considered the labor involved in clearing away dirty sidewalks, the Editor of the Advertiser has concluded to allow them to remain as they are, notwithstanding his intimation that the execution of the intention to purge them of their nastiness was only delayed in consideration of the fact that it had not then quit snowing. This is bland indeed, and we shall not in any wise attempt to interfere with the comfort he may find in his repose superincumbent upon the heap of muck that has been raked before his door. He has a right at least to the privilege of lying thereon and of enjoying its odor too, seeing that it was got there for his own especial benefit, and more particularly as it is in part the legacy of "a convicted thief, dead these many years," who, in making a disposition of his property, cannot at least be charged with ingratitude to a former coadjutor and companion in a cause once declared holy. And though the enjoyable couch may have been provided for the peaceful sleeper through the medium of what he would like to believe a "temporary local sheet," we trust its own evanescence will in no wise detract from the stability and permanence of the article it has supplied and the fragrant odor with which it is pervaded. Refreshed by his slumbers upon so agreeable a couch and a contemplation of his unique surroundings, he will doubtless be better fitted to prosecute to the end the noble task he has set before himself, of rescuing the remnant of a dying people from the ravages made upon their existence by a simple-minded confidence in the friendliness and rectitude of "white-skinned" ghouls, who, through their mistaken confidence have allowed their very vitals to be preyed upon.

New Years at Hilo.

New Year's Day in Hilo passed off very delightfully. The Foreign Sabbath School assembled at 9 A.M. and marched with flags and banners to the native (Haili) church, where was assembled the Sabbath School of that Church with a large number of the church people and others. There were a great variety of hymns and choice songs sung by the school in native and some of the pieces were beautifully sung. There were also some fine sextettes as well as duets. Mrs. Brown, the wife of the Superintendent of Haili Sabbath School, and another lady, sang several duets very nicely. Some of the selections were quite amusing and gave great pleasure to the young people. The schools marched through the principal streets with music.

In the afternoon at one o'clock there was a festival at Court House Hall gotten up by the ladies of the Foreign Church for the purpose of raising money to refit the parsonage of that church. The ladies provided a grand bill of fare, "fit to set before a King," at a fair price. Delmonico, the noted caterer of New York, could not have excelled it. The ladies who got up this feast of good things were the following: Mrs. C. H. Wetmore, Mrs. H. Deacon, Mrs. Shipman, Mrs. D. H. Hitchcock, Mrs. Dr. Kittridge, Mrs. J. P. Sisson, Mrs. F. S. Lyman, Mrs. S. L. Austin, Mrs. Kennedy, Mrs. Loebenstein, Miss Cora Hitchcock, Miss Almeda Hitchcock, Miss Mary Hitchcock, Miss Hattie Hitchcock, Miss Clara Shipman, Miss Emma Clark, Miss Jane Deacon, Miss Lucy Wetmore, Miss Millie Austin, Miss Anna Austin. The always-active worker, Mrs. L. Severance, was much missed on this occasion. Tables were provided for those who desired to sit down and partake of the refreshments. Everything was of home make. The ice-cream made under supervision of Mrs. S. L. Austin was delicious. Mrs. D. H. Hitchcock ginger-pop was in the mouth of every one, and was considered a rare treat. Charley Hitchcock's pop-corn, popped off lively; as much so as his mother's ginger-pop. The flower stand was in charge of the Misses Austin, and the candies (home made) in charge of Miss Almeda Hitchcock.

The day was unusually pleasant. The receipts were more than expected, and very satisfactory to all. The next thing in order will be a fair to be gotten up by the young people. J. A. M.

Quartely Report of Government Dispensary.

To the Board of Health, Gentlemen:

I herewith submit my report for the quarter or portion of the quarter ending December 31st, 1881, in which I had charge of the Government Dispensary on Mauna Kea street. My service commenced on the 23d day of October; during the sixty-nine days which completed the quarter, the total number of patients applying at the Dispensary or whom I visited at their homes—in either case free of charge—was 1,537. Total number of prescriptions 2,385. Diseases treated: syphilis 1134, leprosy 55, coughs and colds 49, gonorrhoea 23, gastric catarrh 23, diarrhœa 18, constipation 15, balance miscellaneous. Of the leprosy cases treated six were in charge of the police: the balance called at the Dispensary voluntarily for treatment. In addition many called to ask my opinion and if I thought best for them to be treated with the design of warding off the disease.

Deaths 5. Cause of death: 3 cases syphilis, 1 diarrhœa, 1 obstruction of bowels.

Expenses: for drugs $327, of which at least $75 worth remained on hand at the end of the term; for furniture $41; shelves and carpenter work $8.14; salaries $361; printing and stationary $32.35; newspaper advertisement of office hours, in three papers, $11.50; painting sign $2.50; total $980.49. During the first week of my service total calls at dispensary 24; during last week of quarter 322. Respectfully submitted. Geo. L. Fitch, M.D.

Reports of the Common Sugar Boilery at St. Cruze.

[Translation.]

The island of St. Cruze is the result of two distinct main swellings of land, namely a westerly and an easterly. The appearance of the westerly is very abrupt towards the north whereas it is sloping gently towards the south. The mouldering products from the mountains, which principally consist of clay-slate, have thus on the southern slope been able to find a good place for deposition and have there conjointly with coral formations on the coast generated a deep and fertile soil.

The easterly mainland swelling consists of a more or less strongly marked mountain ridge through the middle of the island and with slopings, which often lead out to deep water without any coral reefs; this part of the island does therefore not offer so favorable conditions for fertility as the westerly, for which reason it also first has been abandoned by the cultivators of the soil.

The sugar-cane is an herb whose middle stalk is able during several consecutive years to shoot new canes, which after having grown for about one year, are ripe for being harvested. After the lapse of a few years there are only found some single scattered plants, the greater part of them having died and left room for weeds. Every fourth year the field is ploughed by making furrows for every 4 or 5 feet at the bottom of which are placed top-pieces as slips. Round about the new sprouting plants, the soil is weeded until the herb has shot forth so far, that it has got the better of the weed. Next, the plant is manured by being surrounded with a circular furrow in which is placed dung from the cattle. This dung is partly the result of a bad feeding of cattle and it loses considerably in value by being exposed during the day time to the rays of the sun; it can consequently not yeild any powerful nourishment for the plants.

As is mentioned, the ploughing is taking place every 4th or 5th year and during this period 4 or 5 crops are gathered, but as no other ingredients, nutritive to the plants are immersed in the soil, it is no wonder that the ground by and by becomes exhausted, that a part of the island by degrees has been left uncultivated, and that the devastation first has reached the least favored part, to wit, the eastern part of the island.

Every plantation has its own factory, which however is very primitive. The pressing of the sugar cane is based upon the belief that no more than, at highest, 50 per cent. juice must be obtained, so that what remains on the rolling-work, after being dried, is sufficient to vaporize the juice. Besides being manufacturer the planter is also a merchant, and as it is in the quality of the latter that he apparently gains his money, he has not his attention sufficiently directed to his fields. In order to give him more leisure to do this and at the same time render it possible to obtain more sugar of the cane crops, the central boilery was established.

The idea about a central factory is taken from the French colonies. These factories are all based upon a tramway system, as from the chief station, tramways go out to those plantations whose sugar-canes are to be worked up. Such a system could however not be realized at St. Cruze on account of the particular formation of that part of the island where the factory was to be established, namely, the eastern part. Another system for central sugar boileries is used by the beet-root sugar manufactories in France, where they on cultivated spots erect small stations, which press out the sugar-juice and add the lime, after which the juice thus prepared is through pipe-conductors brought to the central station for further preparation.

In order to examine which of these systems might be best suitable for St. Cruze and at the same time to try how long the juice could keep sound, the Danish engineer, Mr. Hagenson, in 1875, went out to the island.

He examined the juice from the different plantations and brought also something of it with him to Europe, and of the different analyses it became apparent that there was no danger in choosing the pipe system. On account of the natural formation of the island and the amount of capital which was at disposal, this system was on the whole the only one available. In 1877 a shareholding company was formed, which concluded a contract with the planters about the delivery of the sugar-canes, so that for every 100 lbs. they received in payment the value of 5½ lbs. Muscovado sugar, by which means they get about the same payment that they might have obtained by their own works. The planters agreed for a great part only unwillingly to this, but the Company were not disheartened by this circumstance and chose the site of the stations, being convinced that the planters in the end would join them, which also has proved to be the case. What has contributed materially to help the matter on are the easy modes of conveyance, the roads being in a capital condition and the state of the commerce on the island so excellent.

THE STATIONS.

In five places are erected stations, where the sugar-canes are delivered and paid and where the juice is pressed out of them; they are all five arranged in the same manner. On arrival at the station the carts are weighed in a scale at the porter's lodge and are then driven along to be unloaded on both sides of the long cane-carrier, by means of which the sugar-canes, that the workmen have properly arranged upon it, are brought to the rolling-works, where the juice is pressed out. The length of the cane-carrier is 80 feet and one end of it therefore protrudes far beyond the station-building. The rolling-works consist of three cylinders of 2½ feet diameter, and a length of 5 feet of which the first and the third have the axis in the same horizontal plan, while the second is lying over the two others, so as to make it work against both of them. The canes are now first inserted between the first and second cylinder whose reciprocal distance is about ½ inch, then push against a bent sheet, a so-called dumb-turner, which changes their direction, so as to lead them in between the second and the third cylinder, whose reciprocal distance is about 1-16 inch. The cylinders, the circumference velocity of which is about 15 feet in the minute, are put in motion through a double changing of exceedingly heavy cogwheels by a steam engine of about 40-horsepower, whose boilers are placed in a half-shed outside the proper station-building. The pressed canes which come from the rolling-work are brought outside the station-building by means of an elevator, which unloads them on carts; they are used partly for fuel, and partly for manure. The sugar juice on the contrary is falling from the rolling-work into a groove which conducts it to a filter, where the mechanical mixtures are removed; next it is taken by a pump up to one of three chests, each containing 125 cubic feet, and in which it is measured off in portion of 100 cubic feet. In these chests the juice is prepared in such a manner as to prevent fermentation, namely, by adding 1 per cent. lime (hydrolime) which is slaked into the juice and forms with this a dissolvable lime-sugared substance. The sugar-cane contains about 90 per cent. juice, but it is impossible to work out the whole of this quantity of juice. By the best presses one may, when the canes are laid very carefully on the cane-carrier, which feeds the rolling-work, attain 70 to 75 per cent. juice, but by the daily work is only reached about 65 per cent. The juice again contains about 18 per cent. sugar. Everywhere means are being tried by which to get more out of the juice, for not until then it may be possible for the sugar-cane to compete with the sugar beet-root from which nearly the entire juice may be extracted. The contrivance which is to be employed must necessarily be a rinsing apparatus, and in the construction of a common sugar-boilery had also been taken due regard to such a possibility.

THE PIPE CONDUCTING.

The juice being now prepared in such a manner as not to ferment is led out into a pipe-conductor which leads it from the stations to the chief factory. The pipe-conductors from the stations are of 4 inches diameter; the diameter of the chief-conductor increases with 1 inch for every new branch conductor which is added, and is consequently at the last station 8 inches in diameter; the juice has never in the conductors a greater velocity than 1½ feet in a second. What had appeared at the trials in 1875 was confirmed when the conductors were laid down; for no doubt, in the beginning, the whole conductor often got into a state of fermentation, but this was to be ascribed to malevolence or negligence on the part of the negroes, and it was not repeated, when the engineers learnt how to make a little analysis of the juice. The conductors are everywhere laid down in ditches by the wayside and have therefore besides the advantage of being much cheaper to lay down and work than a tramway for the conveyance of the canes; also this advantage, that no charges by expropriation are needed. On all spots where the conductors are placed high up there are air cocks, on all spots that are situated low there are taps; and besides, numerous stop valves are applied in such reciprocal distances that in case of a rupture on the conductors, there can at no time be lost juice to a greater amount than about 1,000 Kroner. On account of the surface of the ground the conductor is getting more raised over the level of the sea as its diameter is getting wider, and as the whole system of conductors has been tried with pressure of 20 atmospheres, the security against rupture is greater for the wider part of it than for the narrower part. The juice is pressed by means of force-pumps with large wind-kettles, into the conductor from the chests on the stations mentioned above. At two stations where the pressure on the conductor was very great (120 to 150 lbs. per square inch,) the wind-kettles prove to be too small and had therefore to be replaced by larger ones.

THE CHIEF FACTORY.

From the pipe-conductor the juice runs out in two sheltered beton-cisterns above the chief factory. In order that one here shall not be in want of juice, if there should happen any interruption in the supply, these cisterns are so large that each of them can contain one day's produce, say about 1,000,000 lbs. of juice. From the cisterns the juice is brought down to the chief factory. By the last heat of the steam coming from the evaporation apparatus it is heated up to 60° and is then led to four saturation vessels where it is saturated with carbonic acid in order to sever the lime; the dissolution clears it at the same time as the foreign ingredients which it contains—whites of eggs, cerasin, (a kind of wax,) phosphoric salts and oxalic acid salts—become sediment together with the carbonic acid lime. The carbonic acid is led through a perforated copper plug, which is placed at the bottom of the saturation vessels, and is further improved in a lime-kiln which has the shape of a shaft and is heated by generated gas from a generator of common construction and placed a little apart from the kiln. The limekiln works unceasingly and is able to burn about 10,000 lbs. of lime daily with a consumption of fifteen barrels of Wales coals. The gas is going through a horizontal canal made of brick-work to the kiln in whose vertical gas canal is placed a turning-valve. The vertical gas canal ends in acircular one from which again apertures lead into the kiln. The latter is filled from above with limestone, and the burned lime is drawn out from below having first imparted its heat to the air which is getting in through the apertures for the drawing out, which air is necessary to the combustion. The kiln is consequently a real generator kiln. The escaping gas sorts contain 20-29 per cent. carbonic acid.

Now the juice is getting a slight boiling with steam and is then brought down to a reservoir. From the latter it is led by means of a force pump through filter presses of common construction with twenty-four rooms and from these to a second reservoir, where it is brought to boil by means of a steam plug. Next it is led by a pump to the bone coal filters, a row of cylinders of wrought iron filled with bone coal by which the juice is discolored, and from these to the evaporation apparatus consisting of three joints, in which it is condensed by evaporation by means of the waste steam from all the engines of the factory. The apparatus consists of three vertical cylindrical bodies in each of which is found a system of a great number of erect reeds, and in which the juice by degrees is condensed more and more during the boiling. The steam is going outside the pipes, the juice inside. In the first cylinder the steam has a temperature of 100°; therefore the juice cannot be made to boil until a vacuum is made above it of about 8 inches quicksilver height; the steam is then condensed in the first cylinder, the juice is being cooked and the steam produced thereby is passing over to the second, but the steam is now not 100°, but only 90° and can therefore not make the juice in the second apartment boil until a still greater vacuum is made above this 16 inches quicksilver height, and in the same manner must be produced in the third cylinder about 24 inches in vacuum. By the vacuum the juice from the one cylinder is also sucked into the other. When the juice comes from the last cylinder its strength is about 22° Baume and it contains 40 to 45 per cent. sugar. Then it is a second time brought on the bone coal filters by means of a pump which sucks it from the evaporation apparatus and from the filters to the vacuum pan where it is cooked by means of direct steam to a turbid mass of sugar crystals and molasses under a vacuum of about 22 inches quicksilver height. This mass is led into four large chests where it stands some time for further crystallization. The severing of the crystals from the molasses is taking place on 12 suspending centrifugals of Western patent with apertures in the bottom; from these the sugar is led by an elevator up to the ceiling where it is weighed in sacks of 204 (2 cwt.) and is now ready for being sent off. The molasses passes from the centrifugals back to the vacuum pan where they are further undergoing the process of being cooked and are then led to reservoirs in which they remain about a fortnight for crystallization, after which the sugar of second produce is discentrifugalized. In order to produce a part of the fresh water that is necessary to the working of the factory the steam coming from the evaporation apparatus is condensed in a pipe-condensor after—as above mentioned—it has rendered the last use as heat-giver by heating up the juice, when it comes from the cisterns. The cooling water to this condensation is fetched from the stand by a centrifugal pump about 200 feet from the factory and it is especially these two apparatuses, the condensor and the centrifugal pump, which latter is delivered by an English factory that have given rise to those difficulties which prevented the working of the factory. The pipe-condensors which were here employed for the first time in the manufacture of sugar became leaky in a manner which is not yet quite explained, the salt water became mingled with the fresh, it penetrated into the bone coals, destroyed the activity of the filters and by that means also the juice.

In August, 1876, the engines were ordered with Messrs. Burmeister Wain, at Copenhagen, and already in February, 1878, the factory could begin working. As generally happens with such great enterprises difficulties arose which first had to be overcome. After having worked until the end of April with a relatively good result, there occurred frequent mishaps, so much so as to stop the works in the end of July. As above pointed out it was exclusively the matters connected with the water supply, which was the cause of it. Since 1880, the factory has completely overcome the difficulties which had taken place and is now working capitally and profitably as well for itself as for the planters. The employment of the cane refuse (bagas) to manure has proved to be excellent and has contributed essentially to the progress which St. Cruze is making. The plantations have risen considerably in value. Contemporary with the improvement of the fields the raw material of the factory, the sugar-canes, has also improved materially, and the result of the last year is a sufficient indication of this; 100 lbs. sugar-cane have given 7.7 per cent. first produce sugar 0.80 per cent. second produce; 0.39 per cent third produce sugar; consequently in all 8.89 per cent. sugar and 2.7 per cent. molasses.
