Viavi Testimonial.

Having received so much benefit from the use of Viavi I am anxious the public should know what a blessing has come to us with the Viavi Remedies.

I have suffered with a complication of diseases for six years, have been in the hospital in San Francisco but have found nothing that has benefited me so much as Viavi.

I would recommend it to the suffering people of Honolulu.

Any one wishing to ask me in regard to it may call at my home on Beretania near Nuuanu street.

A MERCIFUL SOLDIER.

An Incident on the March of a Body of Troops Seeking an Outlaw.

Geronimo, the once powerful and cruel Indian chieftain of the west, is now a quiet and peaceable prisoner at Mount Vernon Barracks, an army post upon the Alabama river, a short distance above Mobile. During what was known as the Geronimo campaign settlers residing upon isolated ranches in Arizona and New Mexico lived in constant terror of his raids. When one was reported or feared, those on the line of the expected raid fled precipitately to the nearest point of safety—usually an army post, if it could be reached—there to remain until the danger was over and then probably to return and find buildings burned, all live things killed or carried away and property of every description wantonly destroyed.

In the year 1885 an officer was sent out with a body of troops in pursuit of Geronimo, who had just passed, leaving desolation in his track. One day he came to a beautiful ranch, showing everywhere the ownership and care of people of means. It was entirely deserted. Its occupants had fled, not even taking time to close the doors of the low, roomy dwelling. With one solitary exception, there was no appearance of life. Chained to a post were a couple of magnificent greyhound puppies of purest breed. The little creatures lay side by side upon the ground, nearly famished from hunger and thirst, almost too weak to give greeting to what they knew to be the coming of friends and help. The captain hastily dismounted and went to them, his men crowding around, eager as himself to help. Water was given them and food from his own rations, but when they had eaten the question was what should be done with them? It was impossible to take them along in so hasty a march.

They were too young to hunt for food, and if turned loose would become the prey of wolves and coyotes. In the inclosure where they were they were protected. About 12 feet in front of the puppies ran a ditch through which water was flowing, a sight which had only served to tantalize them, fastened just out of reach of its cooling draft. Across the ditch plainly in view lay the heads of several slaughtered cattle. In the dry atmosphere of that latitude meat does not decay, so the heads were in good preservation and must have added greatly to the fierce pangs of hunger of the two dogs.

The captain had several of the heads brought and laid near the dogs—enough to furnish food for many days. Then from a toolhouse near by he and his men took spades and shovels and turned the course of the ditch for a few yards, so that it ran immediately by the puppies.

After a friendly pat to each grateful dog and a cheery word of encouragement, the captain mounted his horse and rode away. The man who was in hot pursuit of an enemy, whom he would capture and kill if necessary, had paused to do a deed of mercy to two suffering brutes.—M. E. Saffold in Kate Field's Washington.

Plain Duty.

The man wanted a pension for a wound received in the service, and one day he applied for it—that is to say, he was discovered by a claim agent, and the claim agent took him before an examiner.

"What's this pension for?" asked the examiner. "For wounds received in the service?"

"Of course," said the agent, with a flourish.

"In the line of duty?"

"Certainly."

The examiner looked over the records a few moments.

"Why," he exclaimed, "the record shows this man was shot while running away in the face of the enemy. Do you call that in the line of duty?"

The agent was stumped, but the applicant was ready.

"You bet it was," he said. "They was shootin plum at me with intent to kill, and wasn't it my duty to git away if I could?"

The case was held for advisement.—Detroit Free Press.

Ishmail Pasha.

Ishmail Pasha, whose bad luck is traced by many Egyptians to his act, while khedive, in letting Cleopatra's needle come to this country, is not permitted to leave Constantinople without the surveillance of a medical man, who is also a diplomatic spy. His condition is not so precarious as that of the creditors who advanced him $20,000,000.—San Francisco Argonaut

Points About Boiling Meat.

Meat boiled quickly is always hard and tasteless, and it should be remembered that a very large quantity of water takes the goodness out of the meat. A saucepan only sufficiently large to hold the joint easily should be used, and just cover the meat with water. The time for boiling should be from a quarter of an hour to 20 minutes to each pound of meat, counting from the time the water boils.

Long redingotes, with immense rolled back collars of fur, are a marked feature. They are for the most part close fitting at the back, with loose front and revers of fur. The skirt should match the silk blouse to be worn with this garment.

WORTH WHILE.

I pray thee, Lord, that when it comes to me
To say if I will follow truth and thee,
Or choose instead to win, as better worth
My pains, some cloying recompense of earth—

Grant me, Great Father, from a hard fought field,
Forespent and limbed, upon a battered shield,
Home to obscure endurance to be borne
Rather than live my own mean gains to scorn.

Far better fall with face turned toward the goal,
At one with wisdom and my own worn soul,
Than ever come to see myself prevail,
When to succeed at last is but to fail.

Mean ends to win and therewith be content—
Save me from that! Direct thou the event
As suits thy will. Where e'er the prizes go,
Grant me the struggle, that my soul may grow.
—Edward S. Martin in Scribner's.

PLAYING A STRANGE PART.

An Actor's Experience as the Hind Legs of a Property Elephant.

"One of my strangest and most uncomfortable experiences, sir, was being the hind legs of an elephant!" says an actor in Cassell's Journal. "I'd gone out to Australia, like many other young fellows do, or rather did a few years ago, with the fixed idea of making my fortune. Needless to remark, I failed dismally, and soon lost the little money I did possess. I had been well educated and tried one thing after another, with the invariable result that every market seemed overstocked. As a last resource I went around to the theaters to try to get a job. At one I was successful, being told that 'one of the chaps was ill, and the boss in a roaring temper.' I made my way round and arrived in time to hear the aforesaid 'boss' remark somewhat loudly and in scarcely polite language:

"'What does the "hind legs" mean by being ill? His business is to be "hind legs," and if he doesn't turn up tonight he won't have another job in my theater!' I rather timidly approached and asked if I could perhaps supply the missing man's place. 'Well, young man, if you'll come and be "hind legs" of an elephant, you can; if not, clear out; the pay's 10 bob a week.' The outlook was not cheering, but I was too hungry to be proud, so I answered that I had no knowledge of the duties of 'hind legs,' but I would do my best and hoped that a few rehearsals would perfect me. I followed the 'front legs,' who had been a witness of this interview, and was quickly set to work. First, I had to put on a pair of large, loose, dirty brown looking trousers, with the cardboard feet attached. They were kept on by straps over my shoulders.

"The 'front legs' attired himself in a similar garment. Then we both stooped down to about half our height, and a large, dirty brown covering was drawn over us to form the body, to which the head, etc., was attached. The cord working the trunk was given into 'front legs' keeping, while I was accommodated with that appended to the tail. At first it was most difficult to arrange our strides properly, and we commenced by the 'front legs' making up his mind to take a walking tour by himself, poor 'hind legs' descending into a little jog trot gallop to keep anywhere near. Then we found the positions reversed, and I was told to 'stop tripping up them front legs.' At last we were fairly perfect, and were released with aching heads and stiff backs till the evening performance. I was naturally pretty punctual for the first time, but when the cry, 'the stage waits for the elephant,' was heard no 'front legs' was there. The manager was furious, and the audience impatient, when at last my other half was discovered in the bar 'only getting a drink.' He was promptly hauled along, but the walk of that elephant was decidedly curious during the evening. However, we managed to get along somehow, but I wasn't sorry when my week came to an end, and, taking into consideration the discomfort of head and backache, the decidedly unclean condition of the 'skin,' and the long hours spent in rehearsals and performances, I don't think I ever took a more hardly earned 10 shillings."

Chinese Get a Good Bargain.

D. W. Burnett is the owner of a piece of land on the American river, near Salmon Falls, in El Dorado county. The river bed there, for 100 or 200 yards, had never been mined. Some Chinese made him an offer to lease this land for mining purposes for two years, offering to pay him $100 for the use thereof. This was declined. The Chinese were persistent, though, and after bartering for awhile Mr. Burnett told them they could have the land for the time stated for $150, one-half to be paid in advance and the balance at the end of the year.

The offer was accepted, and Mr. Burnett was congratulating himself on his bargain and considered the $75 to have come into his possession easily.

He was not long in changing his mind. As soon as the lease was signed the Chinese began to work. A force of 18 or 20 men were employed by them. A wing dam was built and a wheel and other apparatus put up there, the cost of which was not over $400 or $500.

About three days after it was rumored that the mine was producing $1,500 a day. An investigation disclosed the fact that the heathen had sent away $8,500 worth of dust within a week after they began work. Several thousand dollars' worth of dust was also disposed of in Chinatown and handed over to one of the Chinese merchants here.—Folsom Telegraph.

Hans' Savings as a Legislator.

A Pennsylvania senator told the other day an anecdote to illustrate the high standard of political morality in the Keystone State. There was an old Dutchman, a farmer, thrifty and prosperous, who had been carefully saving for many years. Finally he was elected to the legislature. It was a peculiarly profitable session. There were several railroad charters up for consideration. Hans served faithfully, never broke silence, and always voted; and after the legislature had adjourned, surprised his friends at home by laying the foundation of a $10,000 house, while there were rumors of a $20,000 bank deposit.

"Have you had a legacy, Hans?" asked a neighbor at last.

"Oh, no," was the reply. "I have only been saving."

"But how could you manage to save $30,000 on a three months' salary of $3 a day?"

"Ah," responded Hans complacently, "that was very easy. You see my wife didn't keep no hired girl last winter."—Boston Advertiser.

Married Good and Strong.

A couple called upon a well known justice of the peace in Webster county, W. Va., and desired to be pronounced man and wife. The sturdy old officer of the law, fully cognizant of the important duty he had to perform, discharged it in the following impressive and obviously novel manner:

"By the authority vested in me as an officer of the great state of West Virginia, which is sometimes called the Switzerland of America, by the hill of half developed corn and groundhog holes that spread out around us; by the howl of the coon dog and the gourd vine whose clinging tendrils will shade the entrance to your dwelling place; by our hillside pumpkins, whose frost bitten presence reminds one of the melancholy face of his grandmother; by the heavens and the earth, and in the presence of these witnesses, I pronounce you man and wife!"—Cor. POSTPONED MEETING.

Owing to the inclement weather there will be no meeting of the STAR stockholders this evening. Notice of a future meeting will be given by the Treasurer.

ENGLISH RECOGNITION.

By appointment British Commissioner Captain A. G. S. Hawes drove to the Executive building this morning and presented to the President the autograph letter of recognition from Her Majesty Queen Victoria.

Companies E and F, National Guards of Hawaii, under command of Captain Zeigler, were drawn up along the avenue, and the Commissioner in his carriage passed through as the band played "God Save the Queen."

Commissioner Hawes was met at the door by Major Potter and was conducted to the Gold Room, where the President and his Cabinet were in waiting. The meeting of the officials was cordial, though it lasted but a few moments.

The meeting was as usual formal. Mr. Hawes in a few words stated that it gave him much pleasure to present the letter of recognition from Her Majesty Queen Victoria and hoped for the continued good feeling between the two countries. The President replied thanking the Commissioner for his remarks and joining with him in the hope for continued amity.

Mr. Hawes then presented his Commission to Minister Hatch who in turn handed him his exequatur, a copy of which is published in the by authority column in todays STAR.

The letter received from Her Majesty Queen Victoria, was as follows:

"Victoria, by the Grace of God, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, Queen, Defender of the Faith, Empress of India, etc., etc., etc., to the President of the Republic of Hawaii, sendeth greeting.

Our Good Friend: We have received the letter which you addressed to us on the 7th day of July last, in which you informed us that you have been elected President of the Republic of Hawaii, in accordance with the Constitution which was proclaimed on the 4th of that month. We thank you for this communication, and we request you to accept our congratulations on this distinguished mark of the confidence of your fellow-citizens; and we offer you our best wishes for your health and welfare, and for the prosperity of the Republic over which you preside.

And so we commend you to the protection of the Almighty.

Given at our Court at Balmoral the nineteenth day of September, eighteen hundred and ninety-four, in the fifty-eighth year of our reign.

Your Good Friend,

(Signed) VICTORIA.

A' LOUISIANA INFAMY.

The old and familiar spirit of the Southern Democracy is abroad again in Louisiana. The revolt of the sugar planters in that State has frightened the Democratic leaders, and they are resorting to the usual unlawful and desperate means to overcome the Republican majorities in the three districts which would unquestionably go Republican on a free vote and a fair count.

It is said that the Democrats have made a canvass of the three districts and have discovered that they will be defeated. Measures are therefore being taken under the direction of the State leaders to defeat the Republicans by foul means. A more infamous scheme than that outlined by a correspondent of the Chicago Inter-Ocean could hardly be imagined.

The parishes in Louisiana correspond to counties in other States. The Police Juries, so called, have the powers of Boards of Supervisors and County Commissioners. Independent local government is practically unknown in Louisiana under Democratic rule. The Police Jurors are appointed by and are removable at the pleasure of the Governor.

In the parishes in which the sugar planters revolted the Police Juries became Republican. Governor Foster, who lives in one of the districts involved, has removed every disaffected juror and appointed suitable tools for the disgraceful work at hand.

These parish Supervisors have absolute power in the matter of fixing the number and locality of the polling places. They have, in pursuance of their nefarious scheme, allowed in some instances only one poll for as many as 1800 voters, which means, of course, to shut out not less than 1000 negroes. In many cases they have placed the polls in out-of-the-way places twenty and thirty miles from the settlements.

The sugar planters who have joined the Republicans are indignant and are doing what they can to counteract these outrageous preparations for fraud. Among other things they are proposing to turn out their wagons and cane carts to haul the negroes to be registered and to vote.

This dire threat has aroused the indignation of Senator Caffery, and he expressed himself the other day in words which will make good reading in Congress this winter. "This is a serious matter to me," he cried. "I believe that the voters of the cane carts will be dumped out and will be counted. The whole scheme is one of the most infamous things that ever sprung from the corrupt brain of a Warmoth or a Kellogg. If the negroes can be carried in crowds by the sugar planters, then the negroes should be denied the right to vote. No people will stand the taking of negroes in droves to the polls."

The Louisville election is solely for Congressmen. The country can now see what it meant to repeal the Federal election laws. Every Republican voter in California and throughout the North should bear the lesson in mind at the election next week.—S. F. Chronicle.

WE WERE DECEIVED.

A wild Juanita, black and tan,
Rode into Wingate on a mule;
Met a Chicago travelling man,
Who told her, as a drummer can,
That she was wildly beautiful.
She smiled, she hoped, she lived. Alas!
She looked into a looking glass.

"You are a poet," my friend said;
"Your fame has flashed from coast to coast.
You will be read when Riley's dead,
And Field has faded. Yes," he said,
"If not before. You're Shakespeare's ghost."
But now I sympathize with her,

HIS MODEL POULTRY FARM.

And the Insurmountable Obstacle Which Made It a Dismal Failure.

Talking of poulets, "here's another story," as Mr. Kipling would say, which was told to me by a gentleman who had settled down to spend his old age in the neighborhood of Interlaken. Monsieur, like many another of us, had spent an idle moment now and then in speculating upon the enormous number of poulets which are daily slaughtered in the Swiss principality. Suddenly a happy thought occurred.

Why should he not have a share in the profits; why should he not start a poultry farm of his own? No sooner thought than done. Monsieur determined that he would spare no expense; he would have the best breed of chickens that could be procured, and then, given a large demand on the one hand and an exceptional supply on the other, he would be sure of a large and profitable business. So he argued in his ignorance, and having spent some £1,500 and many months of careful supervision he found himself the possessor of as fine a colony of feathered nurslings as one need wish to see.

Matters having reached this satisfactory stage, he repaired to one of the mammoth hotels whose windows look out on the glittering heights of the Jungfrau and held an interview with the proprietors. They were acquaintances of many years' standing; his reception was, therefore, all that was gracious, and he was requested to send down a sample of a dozen poulets forthwith. The poulets were dispatched, and a day or two later monsieur attended to hear the verdict. He tried, poor fellow, to subdue an expression of exultation as he mentally contrasted his own plump nurslings with the tough and bony specimens which are usually offered up for the delectation of the guests, and his disappointment was all the greater, therefore, when the landlord shrugged his shoulders up to his eyes and replied: "Ah, the poulets! A terrible failure! Raw, my dear monsieur—absolutely raw! At the last moment they must be sent away from the table. Not even begun to be cooked." "But that was not the fault of the chickens—that was the fault of your cook!" Monsieur sighed profoundly and executed more gymnastics with his shoulders and eyebrows. "Well, we shall then make one more trial. Send me another dozen."

Twelve more poulets were thereupon dispatched, even plumper and tenderer than the last, and again my friend attended to hear the verdict. Another failure, it appeared. "Ah, my dear sir, worse than ever! Burnt to a cinder! It was not even possible that they should appear at the table. At the last moment"— Monsieur interrupted with a show of impatience. "And pray, whose fault is that? It is the fault of"— The proprietor laid his hand upon his friend's arm in confidential fashion. "Come!" he said, "let us now talk together. We are old acquaintances; it is best that we understand one another. My cook will not cook your chickens! He makes his own arrangements with the farmers who supply me, and it does not suit him that I should deal with another. What can I do? It is the height of the season, and my house is full. I cannot afford to be left without my chef. I cannot afford to have badly cooked food to set before my guests. I wink my eye; I see, but I pretend not to see! And for you, take my word for it, if you shall succeed, you sit in the public house and drink with the cooks. You must make bribes—you must laugh and make jokes—you must not be a gentleman any longer—you must also be a cook with the rest!"

It was too true. No cook in Interlaken was found capable of cooking monsieur's poulets, and as he, on his side, was too much of a gentleman to condescend to drinks and bribes the poultry farm died a natural death and left him a wiser and poorer man.—Westminster Gazette.

Knew His Capacity.

"Some years ago," said Judge Arnold of the California bench, "I was on or near an Indian reservation. I had about 40 miles to go to a ranch and was to make the trip in a wagon, as I had some household effects to take along, including a jug of whisky. Some missionaries were stationed at my starting place, and one of them recommended as my escort an Indian named William Penn, a good Indian and one who was active in the Sunday school. He didn't look it, but his recommendations were excellent, and I accepted him.

"In the stable, before leaving, I offered him a drink of whisky from my flask, as the day was very cold, but he grunted and shook his head. I offered it to him again, just after his friend the missionary had bidden me goodby, and he refused again. After we had been on the way an hour I felt chilly and took out the flask and a small glass. The Indian looked at it wistfully as I poured it down. I didn't think he wanted any, but I handed him the glass.

"'Ugh!' he grunted, with a vigorous shake of the head; 'me no kindergarten scholar; gimme jug.'"—New York Mail and Express.

WAUKEGAN CHIEF.

THE NEW WAUKEGAN BARBED WIRE.

Made only by Washburn & Moen Mf'g Co.

We have been appointed Agents for the above Company, and have just received per Steamer "KEAUHOU" the first shipment of this famous barbed wire. We sell the "Waukegan" 4 Point with barbs 3 in. apart, and it measures 16½ ft. to the pound, You cannot build a fence with any other make of barbed wire as cheap as you can with "Waukegan."

Take the following makes for instance, all 4 point, barbs 3 in. apart:

N. and M.	15.30 ft.	to	1 lb.	or	7.84	per cent.	in favor of	Waukengan.
Baddock Wire Co.,	12.62 ft.	to	1 lb.	"	30.75	"	"	"
Ross,	12.44	"	1 "	"	32.64	"	"	"
Roebling Co.,	11.29	"	1 "	"	46.15	"	"	"
Cleveland,	11.83	"	1 "	"	39.58	"	"	"
Indiana Wire Fence Co.,	12.87 ft.	to	1 lb.	or	28.21	per cent.	"	"
Burnell,	13.77	"	1 "	"	19.83	"	"	"

Waukegan Barbed Wire is as strong as the strongest, contains just as many barbs to the rod, and yet weighs less per rod than any other style of barbed wire.

This result is accomplished by using a half round wire in the barb, instead of a full round wire as in all other barbed wires; then it is twisted out once around one of the main wires, thus saving the weight of additional twists. This wire is thoroughly galvanized, something much needed in this climate.

We also sell a special wire stretcher and galvanized steel staples for Waukegan Wire.

All orders for the above, or for plain Galvanized or Black Fence Wire and Staples will be promptly filled at lowest prices by

CULLINGS FROM COURT.

THE MASONIC TEMPLE CASE DECIDED.

Allen & Robinson's Lien Upon the Building Confirmed—Cunningham Case on To-Day.

A decison by Judge Whiting has been filed in the case of Allen & Robinson vs. F. H. Redward and Hawaiian Lodge No. 21 of F. & A. M. In this suit the plaintiff claimed $2,886.45 and interest thereon for goods sold to defendant Redward, and for moneys paid out and expended and commissions and interest as per account annexed to petition.

The plaintiff further claimed a lien upon the Masonic Temple, the property of the other defendant, which may be called the Hawaiian Lodge, situated on the corner of Hotel and Alakea streets, alleging that the goods furnished by plaintiff were for use in the construction of the Temple and that notice of the lien was filed, etc.

The plaintiff had asked for judgment for amount of claim and judgment confirming the lien subject to enforcement. The Hawaiian Lodge and Redward both filed denials, and both relied on letters of bankruptcy.

The Court finds for the plaintiff against Redward $2,834 79, and interest amounting to $338 06, making $3,172 85 in all, effecting also in like manner the Hawaiian Lodge, in that the plaintiff maintains his lien upon the Temple hereinbefore designated.

On this point the court said: "and that said building doth stand charged with and subject to such lien of the plaintiff and that plaintiff do have judgment confirming such lien and for said $3,172.85."

The Cunningham case has been on in the Circuit Court all day. It will probably be finished during the evening.

The calendar of civil cases will be called in the Circuit Court at 10 o'clock Monday morning the 19th.

COMMITTEE'S REPORT TO THE BOARD OF HEALTH.

Sanitary Regulations Are Not of the Best—Japanese Quarters in Bad Condition.

Two weeks ago a committee consisting of Dr. Emerson and Health Agent Reynolds were appointed by the Board of Health to investigate and report on the cause of Malaria at Ewa plantation. The committee took the earliest opportunity to visit the plantation and, in conjunction with Dr. Peterson, Government physician at that place, made a thorough examination into the matter. A full report was made to the Board of Health Wednesday afternoon, the substance of which was as follows:

HONOLULU, Nov. 12th, 1894.

Mr. W. O. Smith, President Board of Health.

SIR: In accordance with the instructions of the Board, on Friday last, November 9th, Mr. Reynolds and myself visited Ewa plantation for the purpose of investigating the causes of malaria fever in that district.

The first one seen was Dr. Peterson, Government physician, who informed us that the first cases of malarial fever occurred after the plowing and planting of new land, about twenty acres of low land as I afterwards learned, situated between the middle and lower camps.

The affected ones were from those who had worked in the field in question and had therefore exposed themselves to the emanations from the turned up soil. There appeared to be one exception to this in the case of a Japanese woman.

When ploughed the land is generally in a dry state. It is only after furrowing and planting are completed that water is applied, and that it seems to be that the germs of disease are liberated from the soil.

From the bookkeeper of the plantation I learned that about 800 acres of land had been broken up by the plow since last March. But it was only about the first of October that cases of malarial fever presented themselves.

There seemed to be no reason to suspect the water supply as the cause of the outbreak. The water furnished for drinking is from artesian wells, either distributed in iron pipes or tanks of the same material. The capacity of one of these tanks is about 400 gallons. They are on wheels and are moved about from place to place as needed.

Dr. Peterson informed us that the fever generally assumed the form of a continuous fever with exacerbations every other day.

The Ewa plantation it should be remembered, is less than the distance of two hours' travel from the Queen's hospital, and it has been found cheaper and more convenient to send most of the fever patients directly to this hospital for treatment rather than to attempt their cure at the plantation. This accounts for the number appearing at the hospital during the last few weeks, which when accompanied by the above explanation need not be a matter of surprise to any one.

The number of people affected has, I believe, been twelve, or slightly over 1 per cent. of the population of the plantation.

No death has occurred, and other than is reported by Dr. Peterson to be excellent.

In company with the doctor we visited and inspected the "upper camp" where there must have been accomodations for three or four hundred laborers. We found an abundant supply of artesian water laid on in iron pipes. The nature of the ground and the situation and structure of the houses was all that could be desired. The condition of the grounds about the quarters, especially of the Japanese seems however to call for remark as indicating utter disregard of hygienic conditions. Foul smelling pools of slops and filty water, intermixed with garbage, was a common sight about the doors and yards.

Dr. Peterson did everything in his power to supply us with information and to further the object of our visit.

We were unfortunate in not meeting the manager Mr. Lowrie until late in our visit, he having been engaged elsewhere. He assured us, however, by his words and his manner of his desire to aid us in every way possible.

We are respectfully

YOURS,
N. B. EMERSON, M. D.
C. B. REYNOLDS,

Y. M. C. A. MEETING.

Reports, Music and Literary Exercises Tonight.

The regular monthly meeting and entertainment of the Y. M. C. A. will take place in the Association parlors beginning at 7:30 this evening. Reports from all of the officers and outstanding committees will be read. Besides, the following program will be presented:

Piano solo by Mr. Fletcher; Mandolin and Guitar selections, by Messrs. Ordway, Miller and Barsotti; choice reading, by Mrs. Wm. W. Hall; Flute solo, by Mr. Barsotti, and a song by Miss Dice. The public is invited to be present.

THE SCHUTZEN CLUB.

Has Recognized With a Very Select Membership.

The Schutzen Club met over the Commercial saloon Saturday night and reorganized. The original charter members were present. Several applications for membership were received and others have come to hand since. It is proposed to limit the membership to fifty or seventy-five.

Harry Klemme, the old and present President, said that he preferred to have a Club of sixty good men than three hundred bad ones. The members of the new club express themselves as wholly loyal to the Republic. The following officers have been elected for a term of six months: H. Klemme, president; L. Touissant, vice-president; H. Barber, treasurer, and W. Fetter, secretary.

Godfrey's corrected reference book and directory was issued to-day.

THE DAILEY BENEFIT.

A Large House Greets the Manager on Farewell Night.

Mr. Dailey's complimentary benefit turned out a pleasant affair and was attended by a very large house. The performance was varied, though most of the selections were generally pleasing to the audience. The first number was "A Kiss in the Dark," which, though produced only in part, was very amusing.

The recitations and songs were very pretty. P. A. Nannary, Al. H. Hallett and Miss Genevieve Nannary recited, and Jean Weiner, Mollie Stockmeyer, Nellie McLennan, and W. R. Dailey sang. Mollie Stockmeyer repeated her Honolulu dance which was received with an outburst of applause. Mr. Dailey's "Before Captain Cook Landed Here" was also repeated and received with loud cheers.

The closet and mad scenes from "Hamlet" were the third part of the performance. In this Richard Scott displayed great ability as Hamlet, though his voice was rather effeminate to carry so heavy a part. Kittie Belmour also appeared to great advantage in this.

"The farce "A Day in Court," was the concluding number. Though old as civilization this play is good amusement for an hour and was enjoyed last night.

The transformation scene used in "Cinderella" was also shown again after which, led by Miss Nellie McLennan, the cast sang "Aloha Oe."

During the evening Mr. Dailey found occasion to thank the public for favors, patronage, etc., etc., and promised to return with a strong company next May.

IN SOOTHING SAMOA.

ROBERT LOUIS STEVENSON IS AGAIN CRITICIZED.

Return of the Land Commissioners—Announcements As to Claims—Artificial Spirits in Apia.

The manufacture of artificial spirits is being carried on at Apia and has called out considerable newspaper correspondence and comment.

There is unwonted activity in the copra market. From all parts of the islands information arrives that the natives never have been so busy as they are at the present time in cutting the nuts.

The 22nd number of the Royal Gazette has made its appearance. It contains announcements as to land claims upon which final decision have been made, also the amendment to the Impounding Ordinance.

During the hearing of the charge against several Samoans of having stolen fruit from the Vaitele plantation, the Chief Justice gave some wholesome and much-needed advice to those concerned therewith.

A meeting in connection with the Benevolent Society will shortly be held for the purpose of electing a new committee and transacting other business. There has been a considerable strain of late on the limited resources of the society.

A rumor has been current in town since the Upolu arrived that the Sydney-Vancouver steamships would shortly touch at Samoa. It is to be hoped that such may be the case, as we cannot have too much of that sort of thing.

The Samoa Herald of October 13th publishes a criticism on Robert Louis Stevenson in which it is charged the novelist has made an attempt to make political capitol out of the building of a new road to his private residence at Valima.

Considerable amusement and some excitement was caused on the Curacoa lately by a canoe race between Lieutenant Alton and Engineer Wall of that ship. Mr. Alton turned out to be the winner, as Mr. Wall contrived to capsize his canoe twice.

The business transacted at the last meeting of the Municipal Council, owing to the importance of its character, is well worthy the attention of the taxpayers. The water works committee made a report and a proposition was made to establish a receiving shed at Apia. The Consular Board also passed the amended Census Ordinance.

The new Mission steamer John Williams may be expected about November 1st. Her arrival here will be celebrated by special services and during her week's stay in port all sorts of meetings and entertainments will be held. It is also announced that her new Captain, Mr. Hore, will deliver his widely-celebrated lecture on the interior of Africa during his stay.

The members of the Land Commission, with their staff, returned to Apia October 25th after having completed the holding of sessions at Falealili and Mulifanua, where excellent progress was made. At the former place some of the Government supporters were unable to be present, consequently—as postponement was impossible—the claims were dealt with in their absence. They will, however, be in a position to bring their matters before the Supreme Court at a subsequent date. They leave for Lufilufi on November 8th and in a few days afterwards their labors will be completed.

Rainfalls and Winds.

Professor Lyons reports a fall of 2 inches of rain at Punahou Tuesday night. The cause of the downpour was the shift of the wind form the south back to the east. The wind will again turn south and heavy rain may be looked for again tonight. The chances are it will be raining more or less each day for a week.

For Nuuanu Wharf.

The following awards have been made for furnishing material for the new shed over Nuuanu wharf: Wilder & Co., corregated iron; Allen & Robinson, wood material; E. O. Hall & Son, hardware. The material will be required at once and Mr. Ouderkirk will likely begin work next week.

HEALTH BOARD MEETS.

A LONG SESSION DEVOTED CHIEFLY TO DISCUSSION.

Report of the Health of Ewa—Trip to Molokai Arranged—Segregation to be More Rigid.

The Board of health met in regular session at 3 o'clock Wednesday afternoon, President W. O. Smith in the chair. Those present were Drs. Emerson, Wood Howard, Raymond and Meyers and Messrs. Ena and Lansing and Health Agent Reynolds. Minutes of the last meeting were read and approved.

Dr. Emerson who was appointed on the committee to visit Ewa plantation and ascertain the cause of the appearance of maleria in that neighborhood, read his report. It stated in substance that the cause of maleria was undoubtedly the generation of marsh gas in newly upturned soil. The report on motion of Dr. Wood was accepted and placed on file.

A letter from Dr. Peterson, Government physician at Ewa, was read as follows:

"Delay in forwarding my monthly report enables me, with it, to send some notes at this time on the matter of the health on the Ewa plantation, of which mention was made at the last meeting of your Board. Had I deemed the amount of sickness so excessive, or even so noticeable, as to warrant an investigation, I should certainly, as a Health officer, have notified the Board of Health, I did not think so. I was cognizant of the fact that Honolulu had a large quota of these cases: that Kahuku, Lahaina and other places over the islands were being visited in like manner, and it did not seem to me at all surprising; that out of a population of about 1000, which is the number of individuals on this estate, there should be at this season of the year twelve cases in all of malarial fever occurring during a month's time, considering the fact that nearly 800 of these persons are constantly at work cultivaring and planting fields just now for the first time broken up for cultivation. I have considered the cause to have been the breaking up of new land, especially in two localities, at this season of the year.

The conditions are as they have been during the year, with the exceptions, as noted above, of season and new land broken, worked and irrigated. The same was the case last year.

The "iron tank system" of furnishing water to laborers in the field has always been in vogue, and some of the fever patients have never used the tank water, though all have been subject to the influences from the newly-broken ground.

Conditions incident to the manner of life and customs of the class of labor employed, that might be supposed to conduce to typhoid have not resulted thus, and the persons constantly living under these conditions, viz., women, children and cooks, are not among the afflicted.

In conclusion, I will state that since I have been here, there have never been as high as 2 per cent. on the sick list from all causes, and, for the most part, 1 per cent. This, I think you will agree with me, is, indeed, a remarkable showing."

Dr. Howard reported on vaccination, stating that he had given virus to about 800 persons since the beginning of the term. He reported considerable sickness among Portuguese children. The cause of the illness he thought to be due to drinking water that had not been boiled.

Dr. Day reported that the only vessel boarded since the last meeting was the China, and on that the health was good.

Health agents desired to know if the Board of Health required that vessels coming from Laysan Island and contageous territory should be boarded by a health officer. Mr. Suhr has objected to the charge on the ground that a vessel from Laysan Island, being an Hawaiian port, did not have to enter at the custom house and should not be made to pay for a health examination. It was decided until otherwise ordered vessels from Laysan Island should be examined.

The usual letters from Mr. Meyers were read.

President Smith reported that the Iwalani would be ready to leave for Molokai Friday afternoon for the convenience of the Board. The steamer would be ready to sail at 8 p. m. Several parties desired to accompany the Board. Dr. Raymond of Kalua, British Commissioner Hawes, Bishop Willis and Dr. Rodgers were among those. The gentlemen will be required to get special permits.

The Board decided, after considerable discussion on a case in point, to begin a policy of segregation of non-leprous children from leprous parents on Molokai. The matter will be carefully looked into when the Board visits Molokai

At 4:30 the meeting adjourned.

A Dubious Compliment.

"You said if I lent it to you you would be indebted to me forever?"

"Yes."

A FEARFUL SHIPWRECK.

THE WAIRARAPA LOST ON THE BARRIER REEF.

One Hundred and Twelve Persons Perish—Captain McIntosh Drowned—Heartrendering Scenes.

By the arrival of the Mariposa this morning the particulars of the loss of the Wairarapa on the great barrier reef together with a list of 112 persons who perished was received. The following are the salient points of the disaster:

AUCKKAND, November 1st.—The uncertainty that has prevailed for the past few days regarding the safety of the Wairarapa has been ended in a manner which few dreamt of. The vessel ran on the rocks at the Great Barrier on Sunday shortly after midnight, and Captain McIntosh and 112 of the passengers and crew are reported to have lost their lives. At the time of the occurrence the weather was thick and there was a heavy sea running. From the narratives of the survivors it will be seen that until the vessel actually struck there was no sign of land, and it is evident that the captain believed that he was on a safe course.

The place where the steamer struck is known as Minor's Head, the northwesternmost point of the Great Barrier. The passengers were in bed at the time but were speedily aroused, and lifebelts served out to them. Although the greatest alarmed prevailed, and the scenes, more especially in the case of those who had children on board, were of the most pathetic and heartrending character, there was nothing approaching panic.

Immediately the vessel struck, Captain McIntosh, who was on the bridge at the time, gave orders to launch the boats; but, owing to the great list of the vessel, and to the heavy seas which were breaking over her, this was a work of very great difficulty, and it was almost impossible to take on board any of the passengers, as the lower portions of the deck were under water. An attempt was made to lower the starboard boats, but they were capsized and a number of those who were in them were drowned.

The life-rafts were cut adrift, and were the means of saving a considerable number, by enabling them to support themselves until rescued by the boats. The majority of the drowned appear to have made for the bridge of the steamer when the accident occurred and to have remained there, or in its vicinity, until it was swept away by the force of the waves breaking on board. The captain was observed up to the last moment at his post, and as the bridge was carried away he was, it is said, seen to plunge into the sea, but was not again observed.

Apart from those on the bridge a number had sought safety in the fore and main rigging, and although the funnel was carried away the masts remained in position and when daylight broke and the sea had somewhat lulled, communication with the shore was effected at great risk by two of the crew swimming ashore with lines. By this means those in the rigging were hauled through the water, all succeeded in effecting a landing save two, who letting go their hold of the rope, were swept away by the current and drowned.

After being on the rocks for over 30 hours, with nothing more sustaining than a few cases of oranges which had been washed ashore from the wreck, the survivors were discovered by some Maori boats, and taken off to Catherine Bay. In the meantime, the third officer and some of the crew made their way overland to Port Fitzroy, and reported the catastrophe. The Argyle, which arrived at that port yesterday morning, took the survivors who had reached there on board, and proceeded to the scene of the wreck, afterwards going on to Catherine Bay, where the remainder were taken on board, and brought to Auckland, arrive about three o'clock this morning.

Liquid and Solid Air.

From recent experiments it seems probable that all gases under ordinary atmospheric pressure would become liquid or solid before reaching absolute zero. It is a well known fact that after a gas has been cooled below its critical temperature it may be reduced to the liquid state by the aid of external pressure. Until a few years ago oxygen, hydrogen, nitrogen, air and a few other gases had never been reduced to their critical temperatures and hence could not be liquefied.

Air has been compressed until it was denser than water without any trace of liquefaction. And so these gases were called permanent or incoercible gases. But in 1879 Caillotet of Paris and Pictet of Geneva, working independently and by somewhat different methods, succeeded in reaching the critical temperature of some of these gases and by great pressure reduced them to the liquid form. Since then all known gases have been liquefied and the old distinction of permanent and coercible gases has been effaced.—Science.

A Penal Offense.

The girl had a lovely complexion; but, sad to relate, it was mostly from the drug store. One day a stranger in town met her on the street, and right away he rushed to an acquaintance.

"By Jove!" he exclaimed, "I passed a complexion on the street just now that was simply perfect."

The acquaintance had seen the young woman.

"Hist!" he said nervously. "Don't talk so loud."

The stranger gasped.

"Why—er—um—why shouldn't I? What is wrong?" he asked.

"You've committed a penal offense."

"How do you mean? What have I done?"

"You've passed a counterfeit!" And the acquaintance thought he was a great fakir. —Detroit Free Press.

MARINE NOTES.

The Kaala arrived last night from the west side.

The brig W. G. Irwin arrived this morning, 18 days from San Francisco. She brought a general cargo, but no passengers.

The Iwalani will leave about 8 o'clock Friday night for Molokai. She will take the Board of Health up. Besides these the following will probably go: British Commissioner A. G. S. Hawes, Bishop Willis, Dr. Raymond of Kolua, and newspaper representatives. One day will be spent there and the vessel will return Sunday morning.

The schooner Mahimahi, owned by Ah Lo, went on the reef off Waialua Wednesday afternoon and was completely wrecked. Her crew, consisting of a native and three Chinamen, and cargo were saved. Improper steering while a stiff breeze was blowing is given as the cause of the accident. The Mahimahi was at one time a steamer called the Akamai. Her register number was 284 and she was 29.27 tons. As the Akamai she was the property of J. A. Dower.

The O. S. S. Mariposa, Hayward commander, arrived at 7 o'clock this morning, 7 days from Samoa, 13 from New Zealand and 18 days from Sydney. She brought only one passenger for this port, Mr. Simpson who came in the steerage. She had altogether, steerage and cabin, about fifty passengers for San Francisco. The trip up was without incident, except, perhaps, that the Mariposa reached New Zealand about the time the wreck of the steamer Wairarapa of the Union S. S. Company was reported, the subject of which was the absorbing topic among the passengers today. The Mariposa left this afternoon at 2 o'clock.

SOME-ODD STORIES.

INTERESTING TALES OF ADVENTURE ON LAND AND SEA.

An Uninvited Guest—How a Straw Broke a Bond of Friendship—An Audacious Person—A Good Lawyer and a Good Singer.

[Copyright, 1893, by American Press Association.]

Howard Stanton is a good fellow and a good singer to boot. Although a member of the bar in Philadelphia, he gives a good deal of time to music, and at the date of which I write he was a favorite tenor of Lambertini, the famous Italian teacher.

Among the people whom Howard Stanton met at Lambertini's was Mr. Paxson, a well to do merchant with whom he had had some professional business a short time before. Mr. Paxson does not recognize young Stanton now, and this is how it came about.

At the meeting just mentioned Mr. Paxson greeted the lawyer warmly and said:

"I'm so glad, Mr. Stanton, to know that you are going to keep on cultivating your voice. I've heard it is very fine, and I envy you. Two of my children, the girls, are coming here. By the way, we are going to have some good music and refreshments afterward at my house tomorrow night. Here is my private address. Can I count on your coming?"

"LET HIMSELF OUT."

Howard had heard of the oldest daughter's beauty, and he knew of the father's wealth; so, not being entirely unworldly, he said, "Yes, with pleasure."

The next night when the young lawyer was ready to go he found that it was raining like "cats and dogs," whatever that common figure of speech may mean, and to add to his annoyance he could not find Mr. Paxson's card, so he concluded that he had left it at the office. He remembered, however, that the house was on Green street not far from the entrance to Fairmount park, and he had no doubt but he could find it.

He made his way out on a street car and was looking about where he thought the house ought to be when the sound of music came to his ears, and he saw that a neighboring house was lit up.

"Ah," he said aloud, "this is the place. I'm in luck."

As he went up the steps he concluded that the singing was not all it should be. There was need of a tenor voice, and he felt elated at the thought that he was just the man to fill the deficiency in the bill.

He rang the bell, and a neatly dressed colored man opened the door.

"Mrs. Paxson?" said Howard from the outside.

"Yes, sah. Walk right in, sah," said the servant.

The colored man took Howard's coat, overshoes and umbrella, and as he did so he whispered:

"Bad night, sah. If you just step back to de dinin room, you'll find wine and crackers."

Howard did step back, took a glass of sherry and a cracker, and having warmed himself by an open fire he went to the drawing room.

His name was announced, and a pleasant faced, matronly lady met him at the door, and in response to his salutation said something he could not understand.

As Howard advanced a jolly looking man who had been conducting pounced on him and called out, "What part do you take?"

"Tenor," was the reply.

"Capital! That's just what we want," and in an instant the last visitor had joined the group about the piano. Howard wanted to pay his respects to Mr. Paxson, but he comforted himself with the knowledge that he could do so later on.

Howard Stanton sang well at all times, but never so well as tonight. He saw that a half score of beautiful girls were watching him and, to use his own words, he "let himself out."

Having exhausted the programme arranged for the evening, Howard sang a song written and composed by himself, and the eyes of the pretty girls beamed on him more sweetly than ever.

After this the lady who had met him brought up the prettiest of all the girls and introduced her as her daughter. Howard could not catch the name, but as it ended in "son" he knew it was all right.

He escorted this young lady to supper. He was in such a seventh heaven of delight that he wholly forgot to hunt up Mr. Paxson, his host.

Miss Kate, though still in her teens, had the easy grace of one accustomed to society, and she soon showed that she had a taste as well as a love for music.

Taking it for granted that the young man knew all about what she called "our own musical set," Miss Kate rattled on in a way that would have been charming had it not begun to dawn slowly and painfully on Howard's mind that he had blundered into the wrong house. If he had any doubts on this point, they were set at rest when the young lady said:

"Mamma is a recognized leader of music in this part of the city. Strange that she did not mention you to me when she was making out her list. But, I recall, a great many were proposed and rejected. By the way, did you hear that there is a lady on this street who, jealous of mamma's success, has started a musical circle of her own?"

"No," said Howard, suppressing a cold shiver. "I was not aware of that fact. May I ask the name of this audacious person?"

"Mrs. Paxson, wife of the rich wool merchant. Her daughters and I were school mates, and they are very nice, bright girls. Ever meet them?"

"I must confess I never have."

"Agnes, the elder, is engaged to a man twice her age. Don't think she loves him; but, then, he's rich and that counts for much. Oh, I forgot to ask you how you liked my father's conducting this evening."

"Excellently," stammered Howard, and he was now sure he had put his foot in it.

"He does very well, but being a doctor with a large practice he cannot of course give as much time to practice as he wants. But now that you have called you will learn to like him better." And so the pretty girl rattled on.

Howard tried to explain his position to Mrs. Tyson, but he found her surrounded by friends about to take their leave. Then he sought out Dr. Tyson, and drawing him out of the hearing of others he told of his mistake.

The doctor laughed heartily, shook the young man's hand and said:

"Oh, I know of you very well. I am glad you made the mistake, Mr. Stanton, and as we have these meetings every Wednesday night we'll be delighted if you become one of us."

Howard Stanton readily agreed to this and thereafter was a steady visitor at Dr. Tyson's.

Howard wrote an excuse to Mr. Paxson, and he might have been forgiven had he not persisted in visiting the house where he first appeared as an uninvited guest.

The straw that broke the bond of friendship between the two fell with the news that told Mr. Paxson that the young lawyer had married Dr. Tyson's daughter.

Too Much Curiosity.

Human nature, particularly in its worst features, is pretty much the same the world over. This is well illustrated by a curious criminal case that was brought to light last year in Turkey, not far from Constantinople.

During a festival of the Mohammedans a well to do merchant named Fanduekli dressed his child, a boy of 8, in his finest costume, which included a silk velvet cap ornamented with a number of gold coins. The child was always in charge of a faithful slave, an old negro woman, who had been his attendant since his birth.

The woman, being called into the house on some business, left the child seated in the open court, which in Turkey, as in southern Spain, is peculiar to the better class of residences. On the return of the nurse the child was gone, and although an immediate search was instituted no trace of the little fellow was found.

In his sore straits the heartbroken father applied for help to the scrasklier, or military commander, of the district.

The officer on reflection came to the conclusion that the child, on account of its eries, could not have been taken far, and that some of the neighbors were responsible for the abduction.

Without communicating his suspicions to any one the officer directed a member of his staff to enter the neighboring mosque that evening at the hour of prayer and in a voice that the worshipers could hear to summon the iman, or priest, to come immediately to the military palace.

Though a very unusual proceeding, the priest obeyed. When he came into the soldier's presence, he received this order and was more puzzled than ever:

"Come back here in the morning and have for me the name of the person who first came to ask you why I had sent for you."

The Turks are, as a rule, as wanting in curiosity as the North American Indians. Consequently on returning to the mosque only one man came to the priest to ask the reason for such an extraordinary summons. The priest gave an oracular reply and reported the circumstance to the officer so commanded.

With the promptness of a man now sure of his ground, the scrasklier sent soldiers to arrest the inquisitive man. He was brought into the commander's presence and charged with the murder of the child. Stoutly and swearing by the holy name of the prophet, the accused denied his guilt.

Meanwhile other soldiers who had been making a search of the man's house put in an appearance, having with them the body of the murdered child that had been found buried under the stairs in the house of the man who on their return was swearing to his own innocence.

It is only in Turkey, where legal methods are arbitrary, that detection could have come so quickly, and it is only in such lands that the penalty follows close on the heels of the crime.

Within one hour the culprit was tried, sentenced and drowned in the waters of the sea of Marmora.

A Modern Miracle.

Perhaps there is not a country clergyman in all the United States who does not shudder when his parishioners hint to him that they are going to give him "a donation party." If the preacher receives this news with Christian resignation, it is sure to upset his wife and throw her into wild hysterics, for she knows that she is expected to set out a good supper in exchange for the wilted cabbages, stony apples and frozen turnips dumped into her kitchen by way of donations.

I was inclined to think that this sort of Christian philanthropy was confined entirely to this side of the Atlantic, but a letter recently received from France gives me the comforting assurance that we are not peculiar in our clerical donations.

Father Pierot, a parish priest, lives near Bergarac in France. He is an ideal cure and is much beloved for his pure life and generous deeds, not only by his own people, but by all who knew him.

It chanced last year, at the time of an unusually fine vintage, one of Father Pierot's congregation, in order to show his regard for the priest, suggested to the winemakers roundabout that they secure a new barrel, place it in the cure's cellar, and that it should be filled by each one's pouring into it a gallon of wine as a gratuity.

The suggestion was promptly acted on, and the barrel was filled.

After the wine harvest was over, the priest, to show his appreciation of the people's kindness, invited them to supper at his house, and, like the professional American donator, they accepted at once.

When all were seated, Father Pierot said:

"My friends, I am sure you are all as anxious as I am to know what the result will be of blending so many different kinds of wines together. If the result is as good as the motive that prompted your gracious conduct, the wine should be something measurably fine. Jacques (turning to the servant), go down to the cellar and bring up a large pitcher of that wine."

The servant did as he was commanded, and soon returning with the vessel in both hands and a puzzled smile on his face he began filling the glasses.

The fluid looked like water, and it did not require a searching analysis to prove that it was water. Expecting that every one else would bring wine, and that his own gallon of water would not be detected among the lot, each one of those generous and pious parishioners, including the man who had started the idea, had brought water, and there was not a drop of wine in the vessel.

The people looked sheepishly at each other across the board, but the good cure rose equal to the occasion. "My friends," he said, "we read in the sacred writings that at Cana of Galilee the Master turned water into wine. That was an ancient miracle. But it has been reserved for the good Christians of modern times to do some thing quite as wonderful, and that is to turn wine into water."

ALFRED R. CALHOUN.

A Witty Irish Priest.

Father Healey of Bray, one of the very few avowed Unionist priests in the distressful country, has been in great form lately. Known for a long while past as one of the greatest Irish wits, he has fairly excelled himself during the last few weeks. The other day an ardent politician asked his reverence: "What do you think now, father? Mr. Tim Healy will be in the first Irish parliament, lord chancellor, attorney general or what?" "Shure, he will be a very old man," was the reply. At Corless' restaurant the other day Father Healey's attention was drawn by the proud proprietor to the fact that Miss Corless had gained some great distinction at the Milan Conservatoire of Music. "And what are you going to do with your daughter after all this?" asked the priest. "Oh, I shall hope to see her on the operatic stage soon," replied Mr. Corless, who is the owner of the most extensive oyster beds on the Irish coast. "You want to turn her into an oyster Patti, then?" said Father Healey, without a moment's hesitation.—Paris Herald.

Her Clipping Experience.

There are many women in Washington who, either on their own account or through their husband's orders, are patrons of clipping bureaus, and some of them have varied experiences. The same clipping received day after day or week after week for a year grows very monotonous—even when it is the truth and entertaining. When it happens to be a false statement, a woman can be excused for becoming wrathful. Women who have had experience in this latter direction will appreciate the sensations of Miss Clara Barton when she found a story to the effect that when she went into Changed His Mind.

"Did Parslow marry that Watkins girl?"

"No. After he saw her mother he swore he'd never have a woman like that for a mother-in-law."

"Why, I thought her mother was a very charming woman."

"She was. That's why Parslow jilted the daughter for the mother."

Marital Felicities.

The Wife—Yes, sir. On my wedding day.—Chicago Record.

GEMS IN VERSE.

Design.

As when a traveler, toiling o'er a height
Heaped of huge bowlders, all at random hurled
Like fragments of a ruined world,
Whose desolation doth the spirit affright,
Rebels at seeming chaos come again
And longs for level reaches of the plain,
So I, with hardship spent
And foiled of mine intent,
Complained that life was less than kind,
That silver clouds were leaden lined,
And Chance, not Justice, did o'er mortal fortunes reign.

But when the traveler to the valley came,
And, turning, gazed at that dim, towering height,
Glorified now by sunset light,
Lo! the confusion that had won his blame
Assumed sublime and awful grace—
The mighty semblance of a godlike face.
Even so as I look back
Upon my weary track
I see its hostile features change
By some divine enchantment strange
Till God's design through all in all at last I trace.

—Julian Hawthorne.

Farmer Brown's Letter.

So ye've got a baby darter now,
Air huntin fer a name,
An ye ask yer plain ole father his
Advice about the same.

Ye think Loyola Imogen
Is 'bout the nearest right,
An b'lieve ye'll saddle all thet sound
On sech a leetle mite.

Oh, Sara, whar's yer sense gone to—
Sense like yer mother held!
She never fed high flown ideas;
She'd sentiments instead.

We called our darter "Sarah," dear,
Fer 'twas my mother's name,
But sence ye've dropped the h often it
It ain't seemed quite the same.

High soundin names is plenty nuff
For them as think it's smart
To let the dear old names die out
That we all know by heart.

They called John's mother Liddy Ann.
Yer mother's name wuz Jane—
In all the novel books ye've read
Ye'll find no sweeter name.

When I called her "Janey" the first time,
One night long years ago,
The tender music of thet word
Set heart and brain aglow.

Oh, choose a name fer better cause
Than jest its sound is nice,
And when your gal's a woman grown
She'll thank ye fer yer chice.

I'll draw my letter to a close,
But jest add this one line—
Thet no Logeda Imogen
Will get a cent o' mine.

—Frances Forrester.

The Old Confederate to His Wooden Leg.

Oh, wooden leg, thou theme of heartless fun
To thoughtless youth, and eke to witless age,
Serene, thou'lt stand the shot from ev'ry gun,
Or aimed by self proved fool or self styled sage!

My faithful leg, with me thou'lt stump around;
All sneers at lameness, age, defeat, thou'lt brave,
And when at last I all my arms shall ground
Thou'lt bear me comp'ny even in the grave.

And then some friends—as true no doubt as thou,
But in their showing of it, late, too late—
May, weeping, say, as round my grave they bow,
"He was a faithful old Confederate!"

When once a Scotchman died, and men on high
A shaft did rear to pay for slights they'd shown—
"Poor Burns! In life," they heard a woman sigh,
"He lacked for bread. In death they give a stone!"

Drive not to pastures bare the warworn steed
And wait for death to show regard well meant.
Some love in life would meet his sorest need—
What care the dead for lofty monument?

—John M. Richardson.

Under the Mistletoe.

She stood beneath the mistletoe
That hung above the door,
Quite conscious of the sprig above,
Revered by maids of yore.
A timid longing filled her heart;
Her pulses throbbed with heat;
He sprang to where the fair girl stood.
"May I—just one—my sweet?"
He asked his love, who tossed her head,
"Just do it—if—you dare!" she said.

He sat before the fireplace
Down at the club that night.
"She loves me not," he hotly said,
"Therefore she did but right!"
She sat alone within her room,
And with her finger tips
She held his picture to her heart,
Then pressed it to her lips.
"My loved one!" sobbed she, "if you—cared
You surely would have—would have—dared."

—George Francis Shults.

One of Us.

The day will dawn when one of us shall hearken
In vain to hear a voice that has grown dumb,
And morns shall fade, noons pale and shadows darken
While sad eyes watch for feet that never come.

One of us two must some time face existence
Alone with memories that but sharpen pain,
And these sweet days shall shine back in the distance
Like dreams of summer dawns in night of rain.

One of us two, with tortured heart half broken,
Shall read long treasured letters through salt tears;
Shall kiss with anguished lips each cherished token
That speaks of these love crowned, delicious years.

One of us two shall find all light, all beauty,
All joy on earth, a tale forever done;
Shall know henceforth that life means only duty—
O God! O God! have pity on that one.

—Ella Wheeler Wilcox.

Hypocrisy.

He died at night. Next day they came
To weep and praise him; sudden fame
These suddenly warm comrades gave.
They called him pure; they called him brave;
One praised his heart, and one his brain;
All said, "You'd seek his like in vain—
Gentle and strong and good;" none saw
In all his character a flaw.

At noon he wakened from his trance
Mended; was well! They looked askance;
Took his hand coldly; loved him not,
Though they had wept him; quite forgot
His virtues; lent an easy ear
To slanderous tongues; professed a fear
He was not what he seemed to be;
Thanked God they were not such as he;
Gave to his hunger stones for bread,
And made him, living, wish him dead.

—Edward Rowland Sill.

Contentment.

He that holds fast the golden mean,
And lives contentedly between
The little and the great,
Feels not the wants that pinch the poor,
Nor plagues that haunt the rich man's door,
Imbittering all his state.

—Cowper.

Trust not to each accusing tongue,
As most weak persons do,
But still believe that story false
Which ought not to be true.

"The Old Clock on the Stairs."

Ernest Longfellow, a son of the great poet, has a token of remembrance of his father at his home in Magnolia which money cannot buy. It is nothing more or less than "The Old Clock on the Stairs," made famous by his father. The clock was formerly owned by Thomas Gold Appleton, and at his death the heirs, of whom one was Captain Nathan Appleton, thinking the clock was of particular value to Ernest Longfellow, on account of his father's connection with the ancient timepiece, donated it to the son of the poet, so that it now adorns a nook in the stairs of his house at Magnolia.

The Amazon Lily.

The Amazon lily can be had in bloom at any time of the year, provided you have good bulbs to start with, by resting them, which is done by withholding water partially, but never altogether. The flower spikes generally appear in about three weeks from the time resting commences. After flowering place in a warm, moist, shady situation and continue watering as before.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

SUBSCRIBE for the Best Weekly Newspaper ever published in the Hawaiian Islands. Try it for three months. It will cost you just a dollar. American money taken at par.
FOR a dollar you naturally expect to get a dollars worth. The WEEKLY STAR will give it to you. One Dollar for three months.
THE question that now agitates the public mind to the exclusion of the tariff and Hawaiian affairs is how to get the worth of your money. One dollar invested in three month's subscription of the WEEKLY STAR will be worth hundreds thrown away on other publications.
WEEKLY payments are all very well, but the WEEKLY STAR is satisfied if you will pay once a quarter, in advance, of course. A common, ordinary U. S. or Hawaiian dollar, sometimes called a cartwheel and sometimes the "Almighty," will pay for three month's subscription to the WEEKLY STAR.
STAR. This word by itself looks lonesome. So did the "Lone Star" of Texas, but it got there all the same, and is now a member of the brightest constellation old Mother Earth has ever known. The "Lone Star" of Hawaii will get there, and don't you forget it. There are two or three kinds of "Stars" but those we are looking out for are the "Annexation Star" and the WEEKLY STAR. The former we are bound to have in time, and the latter costs just One Dollar for three months. Take them both. You will have to, sooner or later.

CANE CRUSHER
THE HONOLULU IRON WORKS COMPANY having secured the EXCLUSIVE AGENCY for the Hawaiian Islands for the Krajewski Patent Sugar Cane Crusher, are now prepared to receive orders for the same, to be delivered in time for the next crop.
This machine, which has been invented but a few years, has been adopted by a great number of cane sugar manufacturers, especially in Cuba, where it was first put to trial and where it became extremely popular. Nearly one-third of the whole sugar crop made in Cuba is being made with the assistance of these crushers. These crushers have also proved a great success in other West Indian Islands, and Louisiana, as can be seen by testimonials on hand.
These crushers when attached to any cane mill will increase its capacity by from 50 to 100 per cent; will improve extraction, will regulate feed of the mill. We have three of these machines in the way. For further particulars enquire at the
