THROUGH CAR DERAILED

Passengers on O. R. & L. Given a Bad Scare.

ENGINEER JOSE IS PRAISED

Accident Occurred Near Local Station—No One Injured.

Some 300 pleasure-seekers returning from Kahuku, Waialua and intermediate points on the O. R. & L. Co.'s through train had a narrow escape from serious injury and perhaps death, as they were nearing Honolulu last evening. To the presence of mind of the engineer, J. Jose, the passengers attribute their fortunate escape from a catastrophe, and there is already talk of a meeting today at which their thanks shall take on a more substantial form than that of mere words.

The through passenger was a trifle behind time as she neared Honolulu about 5:30 p. m. yesterday. When within about three hundred yards of the depot the third car from the rear struck an open switch, and was sent over on its side. Engineer Jose heard the crash and brought the train to a sudden stop. He was not a moment too soon, the third car from the rear lay partly on its side and the one ahead and the one to its rear showed signs of going wild. Inside the overturned cars the passengers were in a state of the wildest confusion and fear. The cries of the women quickly awakened the trainmen and other passengers to a sense of their duty, and they began immediately the work of assisting the prisoners to escape. Fortunately the work was not difficult and the frightened passengers were assisted from windows and doors as fast as they appeared. Fortunately no one was injured, as the car turned slowly, spilling the passengers in a heap on one side, one or two of them breaking through the window glass with their feet. Aside from torn dresses, a few bruises from the rough jolting and fall, and one or two slight cuts from flying splinters or glass there were no casualties and in no case was surgical attention needed. Several of the lady passengers became hysterical and it seemed for a while that physicians would be handy, but the counsel of some of the less frightened passengers had a quieting effect on the ladies. Those most affected by the shock were sent to their homes in carriages. The passengers were compelled to walk the remainder of the distance to King street, and they were all congratulating themselves on their being able to do that.

The escape of the train from a serious wreck with probably large loss of life seems quite miraculous. The first six or seven cars passed over the switch in safety, but evidently their passage had the effect to bend and twist the rail so as to derail the seventh car. Engineer Jose noticed that something was wrong as soon as he passed the switch, and slowed up, so that when the car struck he was able to stop the train almost immediately. Had he not done so the rear cars might also have been wrecked. The coupling was not even broken between the derailed car and those it was attached to. The wrecked car was simply thrown from its trucks on one side, and windows and woodwork badly damaged. The track was torn up a distance of a few feet, the rail being bent and twisted. The wreck will probably be cleared away before today. The property loss to the railroad company will be small. The responsibility for the open switch has not been fixed by the railroad officials.

The passengers are loud in their praise of the engineer and if no meeting can be arranged it is likely that a subscription list for Jose will be circulated among the merchants today.

Murphy Club No. 1.

The most important step yet taken in the Murphy movement was made at a business meeting of the Murphyites held at Francis Murphy Hall on Saturday evening. There was a large attendance of the boys who had taken the pledge and who have contributed so largely by their entertainments to the amusement of the public. The occasion was the formal organization of Francis Murphy Club No. 1, by the amalgamation of Francis Murphy Hall and the quarters of the Waverly Club, which have been leased by the president, Franklin Austin, for the club. Mr. Austin was elected president; W. H. Bradley, club secretary and musician; J. C. Austin, F. G. Noyes, A. B. Wallace, Harry Tromby and Mr. Hamus, directors. Clubs will be organized elsewhere in the group.

Fictitious Values.

Real estate values in Honolulu have apparently had a slump, but this does not argue that the price of real estate is on a decline in Honolulu. The difficulty is that fictitious values have been attached to real estate which auction sales tend to correct. As a matter of fact, actual values of real estate in Honolulu are steadily advancing, as a comparison of bed rock prices now and three years ago will demonstrate, and the real estate of Honolulu will year by year become worth more.—Maui News.

Bank of Maui.

The generous support which the proposition to start a bank on Maui has met is a sufficient demonstration of the need for a bank here. The investors, however, must not imagine that they are opening up a rich gold mine, or even a big dividend paying plantation, which will double and treble the original value of their capital stock. But they are investing their money in a gilt edge security which will not fluctuate in value, and which will pay and steady and satisfactory rate of in terest, and which will furthermore always be convertible into gold coin at its original cost, if not more.—Maui News.

WHERE IS THE CITY OF PEKING?

The Steamship is Now Considerably Overdue From Yokohama.

Has the City of Peking again broken her shaft? This question was pretty generally asked yesterday on account of the delay of the vessel in reaching port. Up to this morning she can be considered forty-eight hours' overdue on her schedule time to arrive here from Yokohama, which was August 3. As nearly all the vessels plying between San Francisco and the Orient, via Honolulu, are in the habit of arriving in Honolulu harbor a day ahead of the schedule date, the Peking is now nearly three days overdue. So far as is known no cable advices had been received at San Francisco for publication prior to the sailing of the City of Peru for Honolulu on July 25, that the Peking was held in quarantine at any of the Japanese ports. There is a possibility that she may have been detained in this manner, although no advices to that effect have been received. The United States gunboat Bennington, which left Yokohama on July 21, did not sight the vessel at any place between Honolulu and Yokohama, although the Peking should have caught up with her if she sailed on schedule time from Yokohama, or did not meet with an accident at sea. In the latter part of January, 1893, the Peking broke her shaft in mid-ocean and arrived at San Francisco in the middle of February, seventeen days overdue. She was towed into the harbor of San Francisco by the tug Vigilant, for which job Spreckels got $5,000. The Peking on that voyage sailed from Yokohama January 10, at 11 a. m., and experienced fresh westerly winds the first ten days. On January 21, at 2:50 a. m., latitude 40 north, longitude 146:16 west, 1,120 miles from San Francisco the shaft broke in the sleeve and the vessel proceeded under sail. During the fifteen days from the time of the accident the ship made 1,340 miles under sail. When the shaft broke Engineer Venker sprang to the machinery and stopped the engines, which threatened to rack the vessel to pieces.

August 5, 2 a. m.—Steamer off port; probably the overdue City of Peking from the Orient.

STRUCK WITH A HOE.

A Porto Rican Laborer Assaults a Tennessee Negro.

Garfield Cooper, the colored Tennessee boy who has recently been quite noticeable in the ranks of the Salvation Army in Wailuku, was the victim of a somewhat serious assault at the hands of one Thomas Kinion, a Porto Rican, about noon on Thursday. Garfield was officiating as water boy for a gang of Porto Rican and Japanese plantation laborers, and while distributing water, he states that he was struck from behind with a hoe in the hands of Kinion. Turning to see whence the blow came, Kinion struck him again with his fist, and then attempted to hit him again with the hoe, but was prevented by other Porto Ricans. Garfield says that he has not the remotest idea why the Porto Rican struck him, as he had not had any previous truble with the man, but he thinks probably that the man asked him for a drink of water; still, as he does not understand Porto Rican, he is not sure.

Kinion will probably be arraigned before District Magistrate McKay this morning.—Maui News.

READY FOR THE SEEDS

Tantalus Garden is Now Well Under Way.

NURSERY HAS BEEN PREPARED

Orchard of Fruit Trees Will Be Planted—Jared Smith Talks of Some Plans.

Half way up the Tantalus road, where it for the second time crosses the valley which runs from the side of Punchbowl away up the slopes of the mountain, there have been prepared the seedbeds and nursery of the United States Agricultural Experiment Station. The work of making ready the lands which have been cleared of eucalyptus trees was begun there, and what has been accomplished, while only the beginning, has been of such a nature that its thoroughness gives much promise of the future.

The beds have been prepared by the terracing of the Ewa slope of the little valley, until about two acres is ready for the planting of the seed and the setting out of the cuttings, which work will be inaugurated at once. The sides of the terraces are composed of the wood from the trees removed from the tract, and there is a perfect view of all the beds from the road, which in front of them is level, thus affording an opportunity for observing the work to all who pass through the tract. While this is only the foundation of the work of the improvement of the lands set aside for the station, the plans for making the tract a vast park have been made, and already there are going out from the office here requests for young trees, which will replace all that have been removed, and make the exhibition of what may grow at once interesting and instructive. It will be all the more interesting as the road passes through the tract five or six times as its winds up the hillside.

In the course of the preparation of the beds which have been made it became necessary to cut the earth from the hillside, often to a depth of seven or eight feet. The workmen have been under the direction of Mr. Conter, who is a thorough German agriculturist, and his investigations during the progress of the excavations have added materially to the needed knowledge of the character of the soils and how they must be treated. For instance, where there was necessary a clean cut of seven feet the character of the soil was carefully observed, and some of the results will be of great use. In the removal of some of the stumps of eucalyptus trees, the cuts were made clear so that the trend of the roots was observed. In the overlying stratum of surface soil, which is very rich, there were found an abundance of small roots, from which the tree gained practically all of its sustenance. Beneath this rich top soil there is about six feet of the volcanic mud, which characterizes all the extinct volcanoes, and this is harder than the ordinary clay subsoil, having in it nothing which will sustain vegetable life for any length of time. The roots of the trees are found to have forced their way into this stratum for some few feet, often three or four, but in many instances the roots have died without winning in their struggle to reach food and water.

That they would have reached it had they had the strength is certain, for below this stratum of red mud there is found a peculiar condition of affairs. There lies a layer of soil, which is analagous with the soils which have been made from the decomposition of tropical vegetation everywhere, indicating a period of centuries before the eruption which last covered this mountain. There is from eight inches to a foot of this layer, and at various points it is mixed with a reddish soil, which resembles nothing so much as the decomposed granite which makes up the soil of California. So rich is this lower statum that where the cutting has uncovered it it has been used as a top dressing. The soil all over the side of the mountain is so full of acid that before there is anything planted there will be given to the plats a dressing of lime.

From the nursery there is a clear view of the entire upper levels of the tract, and this indicates the extent of the orchard which is to be placed there. Mr. Jared Smith, the agent in

PRINCE CUPID KILLS BIG GAME AND FIGHTS BOERS

Prince Cupid writes from South Africa as follows:

"We left Cape Town on March 20th for Kimberley, and the accommodations of trains here are very poor indeed, about as good as on a third class American train. On arriving at Blood river, 9 o'clock, March 21st, we stopped, as the Boers had cut the line, and here I received my first experience of warfare. Five hundred troopers were sent up country, following about an hour after us, when we found out what had happened. The train coming from the opposite direction had been derailed, and we waited patiently until the soldiers had arrived and got to work raising the engine and fixing the track. It was dusk then. We were getting ready to proceed and the pickets were returning when we heard two or three shots fired. We learned later that one of our pickets had been swiped and shot by the Boers. Shortly after the bugle sounded and the soldiers advanced in different directions from the train. Five minutes afterward we heard more shots and then the soldiers fired volleys to draw the Boer's fire. It was very dark now and in a few moments bullets were flying in all directions, and we felt badly scared. It was a funny sight (that is, it was a funny sight after the fight was pau), all the men hiding under the cars, or running here and there very excited, while the women were taking it easy and laughing at the men. The shooting stopped in about half an hour, and men were sent out, returning with one of our pickets shot and two killed Boers. They were buried near the railway. We left that night for De Aar, arriving there next morning. The commandant of the place told us that the Boers had broken the lines in front of us, and that two Boers were caught and shot. Here we were far from Cape Town and in a nice mess. We left soon after for Orange river, where we met Major Mann, the officer in command, who told us we could go no further that night as the Boers were all over the country, and it would be dangerous to go on. We dined with him and his staff and after dinner he presented me with a gun and cartridge belt which he had taken from a Boer at the battle of Modder river. The English were charging the Boers, and while the major was giving a wounded Boer some water, the fellow tried to shoot him, but the major was too quick and killed him with a shot from his revolver. He took the gun, belt and shambox away as a souvenir and presented the last to the Princess. We had rather a jolly night and left next morning for Kimberley, passing over the battlefields of Belmont, Gras Pan, Modder river, Magersfontein, arriving at the famous city next morning. Here we wanted to see the diamond mines, but first we visited the strong room of the De Beers Co. to see the diamonds there, and it was worth seeing the piles of precious stones, valued at $2,500,000. Mr. Gardiner Williams, the manager, took us around and showed us everything from the diamond filled sand coming down up to the sorting rooms. The output amounts to $75,000 per day. I had several photographs taken of the works,

We went through the mines to the depth of 2,400 feet and we returned. De Beers presented the Princess with an uncut diamond of a very odd shape. The stone is small but on it is seen the face of a man—eyes, nose, chin, forehead and even moustache being quite clear. It was found that way, and it is a very interesting curio. They showed us an uncut diamond of 275 carats which was not so valuable as a small nine carat pink diamond. I never knew there were so many different kinds of diamonds. There are sparkling white, ordinary white, dark white, white with black spots, white with black veins, light yellow, dark yellow, dark and light blue, dark and light pink, and coffee colored. The costliest of all is the dark orange, of which we saw a four carats one, worth $15,000. We had letters from Cecil Rhodes and that was why we were treated with so much courtesy. On the 28th I left for Bullawayo with Sir Charles Metcalfe and some officers for a hunting trip to the Zambesi river and the Victoria falls, and we had some good shooting, killing some big game. I was out one day with Captain Hawks when we met a herd of buffalos. The captain wounded one and the infuriated beast charged us, knocked the captain down and then I fired and killed him with a shot through the heart. Had I missed him you wouldn't have got this letter and my remains would have been meat for some African animal. I have had the head of the buffalo stuffed and will bring it home. I killed a leopard, a hippopotamus, and some antelopes. On April 27th, re returned to Kimberley and I joined the forces in an expedition against some Boer raiders. We lost six killed and two wounded, but captured 3,000 head of cattle, 16,000 sheep and 200 horses. The Princess and I have enjoyed our visit in Africa immensely. More by next mail."

DUTY CASH NOW STAYS

Custom Receipts In Bank After Long Wait.

MONEY NEEDED FOR BIG WORK

Nearly $100,000 on Hand and the Growing Demand for Greater Outlay.

Upon the receipt of notification that the bond of the First National Bank had been completed at the Treasury Department at Washington, the customs receipts were at once placed upon deposit there, and from this time on this drain upon the financial resources of the Territory will cease. The first deposit was made Wednesday of last week, by Collector Stackable, when a sum in excess of $86,000 was put into bank. Each day thereafter such moneys as came in were deposited, until now the amount reaches the approximation of $100,000.

In view of the immense works which are in contemplation by the government, it is improbable that any receipts of the custom house within the next two years will have to be sent to the Mainland. At the present time the work of dredging out the opening to Pearl Harbor is the only considerable project which is under contract, but the indications are that before the year is ended there will be contracts for the inauguration of the entire system of improvements which are to make this one of the foremost of the national workshops. There are now appropriations for the construction of some of the first buildings upon the site of the naval station at Pearl Harbor, and nothing is lacking except the determination of the suits to start work upon the machine shops, the foundry, and the residence of the commandant.

There will be considerable work done in the way of improvements to the custom house here, as well as that which is contemplated at the present naval station, and for all this the payments will be made out of the moneys collected at the custom house. It is more than probable that the cash which comes this way will be allowed to accumulate until the appropriations are made for the extensive works which finally will be authorized for Pearl Harbor, when the money will have to be paid out on contracts. The ultimate cost of the Pearl Harbor station is placed at several millions, so that there is small prospect that there will be any further draft upon the cash of the Territory for some years.

The amount of money which has been sent to the Mainland in pursuance of the old law, which required all collections at custom houses to be paid over into the nearest subtreasury, is estimated at $1,500,000, in round figures. The first shipment was made thirteen months ago, and the amounts have been increasing since the first shipment was made. The extent of this drain is shown by the statement that the collections, and consequent shipments, covering the month of June, 1901, were above $154,000. The collections for July were smaller, falling a little below $120,000. Of this amount some $25,000 had been sent to San Francisco before the announcement of the arrangement by which the money will be deposited here in the future, stopped the yellow flow.

The change in conditions was made possible by the passage through Congress at the last session of a law which amended the revised statutes of the United States so as to permit the depositing in any national depository of the customs collections in Hawaii, Porto Rico and Alaska, thus doing away with the heavy charges on the shipments of coin.

As a bill will be necessary for the reimbursement of the collector for the loss of the shipment which went down with the Rio, plans are being made by the department officials for carrying through of this business. A bill will be introduced, granting permission to the Secretary of the Treasury to issue $30,000 of gold certificates, to replace those which were lost in the wreck.

Both Doing Well.

Princess Theresa Wilcox's account of her sojourn in Washington makes very good reading. That she regrets leaving the great American capital is evident, but whether she misses most the companionship of President and Mrs. McKinley, or that of her garden and chickens, which seemed to be doing well too, is hard to determine from the narrative. —Hilo Herald.

Defend Dr. Cofer.

Editor Advertiser: At a meeting of the Hawaiian Territorial Medical Society on the evening of August 3d it was resolved that the recent attacks made upon Dr. L. E. Cofer, of the United States Marine Hospital Service, for alleged impropriety and discrimination in examining passengers on the America Maru were unfair, uncalled for and not justified by facts. It is furthermore learned that Dr. Cofer called upon the Japanese Consul and Mr. and Mrs. Okabe and made explanations which were accepted by those parties as satisfactory and Dr. Cofer's call was returned by them.

HOT INSIDES OF VOLCANO

Kilauea is Still Warming Up But Has Not Exploded Yet.

The trip to the Volcano has become a little more interesting of late on account of rumored manifestation of fire about this outlet of infernal regions, presaging more magnificent things for the future. Nor are the rumors without foundation, although something may be taken from the most vivid efforts of the imagination that have gone abroad. As Mr. Waldron, the proprietor of the Volcano House says, "I don't want exaggerated reports of the place to go out because they do more harm than good in the long run. I don't want people from Honolulu or from the Coast coming here with the idea in their heads that they are going to see several square miles of boiling hades, because they won't see it, and then they will go home and kick and the sound of their kicking will not only reach the skies but divers portions of the earth inhabited by people who yearn to trip to Hawaii and might possibly satisfy the yearn, but for the kick aforementioned. In my opinion this crater is worth traveling some leagues, even on the Kinau, to see, and people who come here will think so too, if they don't come here with visions of molten lakes in their nuts."

A trip made by night to the crater proves that this is the case. The pit of Kilauea is in itself a wonder showing the dead remains of past upheavals and its steaming fissures and central pit wrapped in clouds of smoke prove that in itself it is far from dead. Near this central part where the eruption of 1894 occurred, for about half a mile on the Kona and Kau side symptoms of a new outburst are distinctly manifest in intense heat and visible fire which in the larger cracks is seen distinctly to approach the surface, the rocks being at a white heat nearly to the top. That there is a lake of molten lava within a short distance of the surface there can be no doubt. Just as it stands the sight is one of great magnificence, although, as Mr. Waldron says of the outbreak itself no one can predict. It may come in a day, and it may never come; but as one dodges the big cracks and glowing rocks it seems as if the storm were not far off.—Hilo Tribune.

BOY ACCIDENTALLY SHOOTS HIMSELF

Hawaiian Lad, While Out Hunting Birds, Loses His Life.

William K. Kualaina, a fifteen-year-old Hawaiian boy, better known to the readers of this paper as "Little Billie," who was for a time a typo in the News office, accidentally shot himself about 4 o'clock Thursday afternoon, near his residence in Iao Valley.

He had been out shooting birds, and was standing on the hillside near his home. He called to attract the attention of the people in the house, and when they looked out, he amused himself and them by going through the manual of arms with his shotgun. He was lost sight of for a few minutes, and then the report of his gun was heard. A younger brother ran out and saw him lying down. Waiting a few moments, the younger brother noticed smoke rising from his brother's clothes and ran up on the hillside and found William dead.

The only known witness to the tragedy was a small Portuguese boy, who states that William's gun seemed to slip from his hand and fall to the base of the rock on which he was standing, immediately after which it was discharged. After the shot, William straightened up and stood erect for a few moments, and then reeled and fell dead. The shot entered the abdomen and ranged upward, doubtless penetrating the heart.

The sheriff and several officers were soon on the scene, but the evidence of accident was so apparent that it was deemed unnecessary to hold an inquest. —Maui News.

SUNDAY SERVICES

Rev. G. C. Adams At the Central Union.

REV. MR. PEARSON'S STRONG DISCOURSE

Lieut. Col. French Holds an Evening Service at Central Union Church.

The 4 o'clock services at the Y. M. C. A. hall yesterday afternoon were conducted by Rev. Dr. Adams, of Central Union Church, who preached an interestng sermon on the life and character of Barnabas, who was given his name, meaning "the son of consolation," by the apostles for his generosity. Mrs. Dr. McDonald was present, and assisted in the services, by singing, in her usual sweet voice, a sacred solo.

Dr. Adams read the Scripture lesson from the last verses of the fourth and the first verses of the fifth chapter of the acts, in which the conversion of Barnabas, and his gift to the disciples, are related; the story of how Barnabas sold all his lands and gave the entire sum of money that he received for them, to the disciples that they might not be troubled about the making of their living expenses in their higher work.

The minister compared this act of generosity with those of Aananias and Saphira, who endeavored to gain favor with the disciples and the grace of God by selling their lands and giving to the disciples only a small portion of the proceeds, untruthfully saying that they gave all. In describing the character of Barnabas, Dr. Adams said that it is usually the man of large generosity and kindly impulses that falls victim to drink, and other weaknesses, and that if the right influence is exerted, the same generosity that leads him into the sin will lead him from it, to love something better and more elevating; also, that when such people are converted, their conversion is apt to be complete, and their entire interests and whatever they possess, are turned over unhesitatingly to the new life. He said that it is a great mistake of many parents and teachers to be pointing out always the sinful and wicked characters of the Bible to those they would lead upward, hoping that the traits of the characters pointed out will be avoided. They should rather, he thought, point out the grand and ennobling characters, that they may be taken as an inspiring example. To illustrate this principle the minister said that a ship is coming into the harbor was not on her guard to avoid this coral reef, but instead that she steered straight ahead in the safe course that had been established for guidance, and that by following the right way, the wrong ones were avoided without trouble; also that in the voyage of a steamer from the Coast to these Islands, the captain was not continually trying to avoid going too much to the south, or too much to the north, but that he steered steadily a little to the south of west, following the right line, and that he thereby avoided what would have been the wrong directions. In this way, he said, one should follow, without deviation from it, the life of Christ as nearly as one could, and by so doing one would avoid being like Ananias, and all other wicked and ignoble characters.

DR. ADAMS' SERMON.

Rev. Dr. George C. Adams preached at Central Union Church Sunday morning from this verse: "Being such a one as Paul, the aged." He said:

Onesimus was a runaway slave; Philemon, the master from whom he had escaped, and whose money he had stolen. On some visit to Ephesus Philemon had heard Paul preach, and had become a Christian. At some place Onesimus had heard Paul, and had been converted; he became convinced that he ought to return to his master. Paul shared this conviction, and wrote the letter to Philemon, to be taken to him by Onesimus. This letter is infinitely tender; it is no diatribe against slavery, but brings master and slave together, heart to heart, in a spirit that pronounces the sure doom of slavery when that spirit shall become general. The motive he urges on Philemon is given in the text. Let us notice the spirit of Paul the aged. It is no captious spirit; there is no acid in his ink. He is not mourning that the former days are better than these. What grander sight is there than a young old person; one in whose companionship children delight. We know that our childhood home is changed, that we have no longer a right there, but that does not mean that the world has grown worse. The aged man or woman can still be a student and a thinker, can still be preaching Christ in his daily life, though his best years have passed. Again, notice the loneliness of Paul the aged. In his letter to Philemon he mentions five comrades; in writing to Titus a year later he only says, "all those with him;" a year later still he writes to Timothy, "only Luke is with me;" the "beloved physician" is faithful, as he has been so many times in history; all the rest have left him. Such is the loneliness of all the aged; the friends of youth and middle life have passed on, and no new friends can take their places; every year adds to the feeling, until one stands utterly alone. It is a thought for the young to remember. Notice the comforts of Paul the aged. They are all what philosophers call subjective, within himself. The greatest comfort of the aged is not the couch, nor the chair, nor the proper food; all these are good, but the real comfort is within. All else may pass away, but love endures. Emerson, at the funeral of Longfellow, his own brain weakened, his faculties failing, had forgotten even the name of his lifelong friend, but recalled that he was a loving soul. Paul the aged knew that love would last, and his joy was only in what love had wrought. See the usefulness of Paul the aged. He made friends of Philemon and Onesimus, when they had been only master and slave before. He wrote to Timothy, "Let no man despise thy youth," and at the same time he wrote to the people at Corinth to see that if Timothy came he should be among them without fear; he smoothed the way on both sides. So the aged man can cheer the youth, whether he be entering on the ministry, or business, or anything else. The aged may be a blessing in spite of years and all infirmities.

COLONEL FRENCH PREACHES.

Lieutenant Colonel French, of the Salvation Army, delivered the evening sermon at Central Union Church, being introduced to the congregation by Rev. Dr. Adams. Colonel French's subject was "In Darkest America," and in illustrating it the eminent Salvationist explained at some length the workings of the Salvation Army in the slum districts of the large cities, citing incidents and giving life-stories wherein the courageous and unselfish women of the army have done a great good. Although the sermon was unusually long, it was an interesting one, and held the attention of the congregation throughout. A special program of sacred music was given, Mrs. Cordelia Damon, assisted by the choir, singing Himmel's "Incline Thine Ear," and Miss L. M. Winnie singing the offertory, "Prayer," by Sosti. Dr. Adams dismissed the audience with a silent prayer and benediction.

AT METHODIST CHURCH.

The Rev. G. L. Pearson, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal Church, took for the theme of his evening sermon, "A Citizen of Zion," basing his remarks upon the 15th Psalm. The following is an outline:

The religion of the Bible is not mere faith, but faith whose reality is shown by a life of holiness. "Faith without works, is dead," says the Apostle James, who calls for a demonstration of faith by good works. In this passage the psalmist anticipates James. This psalm which describes a citizen of Zion begins by asking some important questions which it proceeds to answer. Definite questions with clear and comprehensive answers is a good way of imparting truth—a method often used in Scripture. This psalm affords a test by which we may ascertain our citizenship. Self-examination, when performed with thoroughness and in the right spirit, is a good exercise, but, alas! most people make a poor job of it; largely, perhaps, because they begin it with the hope and even purpose of making out a good case for themselves. Sick men often flatter themselves in the same manner, but it does not cure their disease, nor perceptibly retard its progress. With a view to self-improvement let us give attention to this portion of Scripture.

IN THE OTHER LIFE.

In my Father's house are many mansions.—St. John, xiv:2.

What pursuits and pleasures will occupy our attention in the next life? This is a question which not only excites our curiosity, but seriously demands an answer. Since every day brings us nearer to the great mystery of death, we naturally inquire concerning the conditions on which we shall enter after we leave the valley of shadows and emerge into a world about which only the faintest hints have been vouchsafed.

We are not, however, left entirely in the dark on this subject. This little we know leads to many a reasonable surmise, for since there is a certain fixed consistency in the realm of spirit as well as of matter, it is safe to build a future out of the capacities and longings of human nature.

The scientific imagination predicts with considerable assurance the kind of physical life which exists on the planets of our system, and its statements are received with undoubting confidence. In like manner the student of the soul may venture without much hesitation to declare that a given environment must result from our passage into the immortal life. It would be folly to insist on details, but general principles may surely be depended upon.

The fact that the drudgery of our earthly career will be dispensed with and the soul will be free to follow its unhampered inclination is itself a prophecy of what will happen. In this under world physical necessities press upon us like a heavy burden, while the spirit of man very rarely has full scope. The body is always in evidence, but the soul is in the shadowed background.

Manual work in order to maintain existence, daily struggle to supply our material wants is the tragic element of this lower life. We have neither time nor ability to provide food for the soul, because so much time and energy are required to provide food for the body. Millions of men are hardly conscious of their immortality, because from the cradle to the grave they spend their best selves in keeping a roof over their heads and earning bread for their children. The years pass and when the end comes the spiritual nature is still undeveloped. This is one of the puzzles which confront us when we try to understand the providence of God.

But with death we leave this burden at the churchyard gate. No more anxiety about the body! It has done its work and is reverently laid aside. When clothed with a spiritual body physical drudgery ceases and the pure soul comes to the forefront. We may declare therefore that the next life will furnish us with intellectual opportunities which heretofore have been denied. Mind and heart, aspiration and affection, only the nobler man, but the real man will be free and the watchword of immortality will be growth. The radiance of infinite wisdom and love will beckon us toward the ideal, the universe will be our schoolroom and God himself our teacher. We shall begin then with a condition which is now almost inconceivable, but which will be unalterably blessed. Under such influences there must needs be an awakening of dormant powers, and the dimmed and blurred souls of earth will have an eternity in which to become archangels.

I believe that everyone has the breath of God in his nostrils. That breath constitutes personality—a personality which will persist forever. It will not be absorbed in the infinite as a drop of water is absorbed by the ocean, but will maintain its separate identity throughout eternity. Moreover, it will, amid the opportunities of another life, slowly educate itself and rise to heights not dreamed of. No part of God can die; neither can it remain dormant. It will, when it becomes conscious of itself, push its way into broader spheres of influence and development, coming nearer to the Father in the passing cycles of eternity, until at last the morning stars will once more sing together over a redeemed world—a world awakened in the glorious work of accomplishing it.

Such thoughts fill the dark landscape of the present with glorious light. We belong to Christ, and boundless love shelters us with its protecting wings. A faith like that uplifts our struggling and despondent souls, for when we have borne our burdens bravely death will give us the relief we pray for, and eternity will welcome us to a larger life. We must, therefore, be cheerful, patient and courageous, nor let ills of the present unfit us for the blessings of the future. God is our father, and we should get nearer to Him with every trial and sorrow. We shall not really live until we live again.—George H. Hepworth in New York Herald.

"I can't understand," said a customer to us the other day, "how a dry goods store can continue prosperous while claiming to sell at or under cost, for I assume that honorable merchants mean just what they say."

This lady was not aware that the advertised articles are but a small portion of a firm's stock, and that only extraordinary values can find their way into print. A merchant who advertises falsehoods is doomed to failure. No wise one would do so.

The following under-priced values get mentioned this week:

MARKET FOR OUR COAL.

"The United States has only to step in and win the market," says Consul F. D. Chester at Budapest in a communication to the State Department in reference to the coal situation in Hungary. He says the coal question has become more important for Hungary than the problem of her industrial development. While England and Germany produce good coal and the latter consumes almost all it produces, Austria produced in 1898 about 32,200,000 tons and exported 1,333,000 tons to Hungary. Hungary produced in 1899 only 5,200,000 tons, and was compelled to import from Austria the above stated amount. As this import just covers the decrease in production from 1898, the consul says it is of importance that American exporters should not be deterred from their efforts by reports of the decrease of Hungary's import. The decrease for last year was in stone coal only. The import since January of this year from Austria and Germany has increased, and from Great Britain it is five times as great. Asiatic Turkey exported to Austria, in December, 1900, a consignment of 986 tons of stone coal, while only two and one-seventh tons were sent to Hungary from the United States. It is obvious from these figures that American exporters need to get into more direct connection with the importers of Hungary.

The consul notes that there is at present no duty on coal in Austria-Hungary, and says the principal consumption is by the state railroad and numerous distilleries. The production of stone coal in Hungary is entirely in private hands. Consul Chester says a feeble attempt is now being made to float new shares of the largest coal concern of Hungary on the market of Budapest, but only some 25 per cent of the whole coal production in Hungary is stone coal, and the approaching changes in international commerce are not favorable to the rapid success of new mining schemes in that country. More than half the stone coal imported by Hungary has hitherto come from Austria, and the trade of both countries from the beginning in this article has always been in favor of the competing outside world.

THEY WASHED THEIR NECKS.

Slang that is perfectly familiar to the people of one locality is often interpreted in even a nearby region in a totally different way from that which is intended. This was well illustrated last week, when a man from Boston and a man from Nova Scotia met in a New York hotel and were introduced by a mutual friend. After a little talk the friend left them, and, having had no time to discover kindred interests, the conversation sagged painfully. At length, breaking a long pause, the Nova Scotian said:

"Wouldn't it do you good to wash your neck?"

"What's the matter with my neck?" exclaimed the Bostonian, flushing a fiery red, "and what's the matter with you that you ask such a question? I have you know, sir, I consider it an impertinence—an impertinence, sir!"

"Gee!" exclaimed the surprised Nova Scotian. "I did not mean to offend you. I had no idea you were one of these total temperance cranks!"

"I'm no temperance crank, either," retorted the Bostonian, now doubly offended and surprised, also.

"Ain't you?" queried the Blue Nose. "Then why did you get so mad when I asked you to take a drink?"

"Asked me to take a drink!" almost shrieked the man from the Hub. "You—asked me? When?"

"Surely I did," said the Nova Scotian. "Asked you to wash your neck, you know. On the inside, you understand. With good liquor, don't you see? Not on the outside, of course. My remark was not intended to hint that application of water to your skin was needed. An invitation to wash the neck is only our Nova Scotian way of asking a man to irrigate the dust of travel out of his throat. Will you join me, now?"

"Don't care if I do," said the mollified Bostonian.

A FRANK ADVERTISER.

A gentleman who has a Christian spirit and a horse for sale advertises as follows in a Minnesota paper:

We have a good family driving horse for sale, providing you carry insurance.

He is not over particular as to feed. In fact, he prefers our neighbors' hay stacks and cornribs to our own.

We feed him whenever we can catch him, which is seldom.

He is partly gentle. The other parts are not, and you must govern yourself accordingly.

We will throw in the derrick and telegraph pole combination which we use to hitch him up with.

If you are fond of driving we would advise you to engage a cowboy that owns a fast horse to do your driving and be sure and get on top of the barn before he begins to drive the horse.

For price and coroner's address apply to the owner.

It is evident that the pernicious doctrines of David Harum have not taken root everywhere. Furthermore there will be no excuse for a damage suit if this advertiser ever succeeds in disposing of the goods. In view of the present day greed for gain all this is highly encouraging.—Chicago Record.

BULL FIGHTERS AFRAID OF COWS.

It will probably not surprise many readers to hear that most Spanish bull fighters object to fighting cows. The real reason may, however, astonish them. A sportsmanlike objection to persecuting a female animal has nothing whatever to do with it. The fact is that the average toreador is sincerely afraid of a cow.

And he has good reason. The cows of the half-wild breed used for the arena are much quicker in their movements than are the bulls. Their horns are more pointed and more formidable; they do not lower their heads to the ground, shut their eyes, and charge like a locomotive upon the rails, but are alert and ready to follow every movement of their persecutors. Their warlike tactics have been adapted not to blind bovine frontal attacks, but to the strategy of active and cunning beasts of prey, of which the humble bullfighter is only a feeble mimic. If these cheap idols of the Spanish populace would face young and active cows which had just been robbed of their calves they might, perhaps, forestall the butcher, but they would, at any rate, do something to earn their laurels.—Pearson's Magazine.

A KINAU EVENING

Engineer Johnson Feasted by Friends.

PRESENTATION OF A WATCH

A Happy Feast, Good Speeches and a Fine Time Generally.

From stem to stern the flagship Kinau, of the Wilder Steamship Company, was ablize with lights last night in honor of Superintending Engineer W. A. Johnstone of the company. The popular head of the engineer department of the company was banqueted by his comrades of the sea and also presented by them with a beautiful gold watch, appropriately engraved with his monogram on one side, while on the reverse was an enamelled three-bladed propeller, the emblem of the profession.

On the inside cover of the watch was the following inscription: "Presented to W. A. Johnstone, Superintendent Engineer of Wilder's Steamship Company, H. I., U. S. A., by his grateful juniors for valuable assistance, in January, 1901."

Seldom, if ever, has the Kinau's dining saloom presented a handsomer appearance than last night. Around the ceiling cornice ran a light festoon of maile, while the posts and woodwork above the table were similarly covered, relieved here and there with bunches of roses and carnations. The table was arranged in the form of a T, with the cross table at the end opposite the main companion way, where the toastmaster sat. Behind the chair was an electrical design denoting "Welcome," with alternating currents to light up parti-hued globes. The table fairly groaned beneath a weight of good things to eat and drink, to which the guests did ample justice.

The guest of honor sat at the end of the table, flanked by Commodore Beckley, of the Wilder Company, and Superintending Engineer Keech of the Inter-Island Company. The veteran guest of honor was deeply moved at the expressions of good will tendered him by his comrades and the employes of the company for which he has given his best efforts in the past score of years, and in thanking them for the token of esteem was at first unable to voice his feelings, but happily ended by making an address replete with wisdom, choice bits of poetry and a full cargo of good will for those who are associated with him. That "Billie" Johnstone, as he is familiarly known in the company, has many and good friends was evidenced by the number of speeches made around the banquet table in which all expressed the heartiest admiration for their chief.

The guests, with few exceptions, included only the employes on the various steamers. A. L. Inman proved a worthy toastmaster and kept the banquet moving in the right way. He drew upon the Wilder Company's fine speakers for addresses and none were disappointed in the result. All entered into the spirit of the evening and proved thir claim to being after dinner speakers by flows of oratory, interspersed with marine terms, which surprised even their old comrades in the service.

The menu cards were handsome, that for Chief Johnstone bearing the legend: "On Board the Kinau—Welcome to our 'Billie,' Honolulu, August 4." On the inside cover was a sketch of a man in tattered clothes and woebegone appearance on a tropical beach. It was labelled, "In Acapulco, 1879," the time when Johnstone's knees stuck through the holes in his trousers while he was searching for the gold which he did not find.

Those present were: W. A. Johnstone, superintending engineer; Captain Clarke, superintendent; A. W. Keech, Inter-Island Company; W. Quinlan, K. R. G. Wallace, James Lynch, A. W. Watkins, O. Wilder, I. King, R. Windrath, Chas. T. Littlejohn., Chas. A. Kibling, T. A. Burningham, W. McGregor, James Sutherland, A. L. Inman, Capt. Parker, Capt. Wm. Bennett, Capt. Fred Bennett, M. M. Kohn, A. P. Taylor, A. Harford, H. Mocine, A. Anderson, Chalmers Graham, Joe Little, George C. Beckley, W. A. Johnstone (our guest), Wm. McKay, Captain Clarke, Jake Wagner, Wm. Jarrett, Geo. Beckley, Jr., H. Wharton.

JAY GOULD'S FIRST TRADE.

Two boys who became distinguished in widely different ways were Jay Gould, the multi-millionaire, and John Burroughs, the naturalist. They attended together the humble school in Roxbury, N. Y. John loved books, and Jason was fond of making trades. Young Gould had some books which his school-fellow wanted very much to own. The more Burroughs thought about the coveted books, the more diligently he strove to save up his pennies. Finally, he had 80 cents hoarded. Taking his wealth to Gould, he found that thrifty young gentleman quite willing to do business. The books were traded off for the money—mostly big copper pennies—and both boys were made happy. Mr. Burroughs has never regretted his end of the bargain.—Success.

charge of the station, has planned the development of a fruit orchard on the tract, with berries and grapes interspersed where the soil seems best adapted. There will be little new in the orchard. There have been experiments in the past which have shown that practically every variety of fruit of the sub-tropical and temperate zones may be grown at some elevation on the sides of the mountains. The experiments which will be made by the United States station will be directed to the selection of those varieties which will best flourish, which will stand the pests and produce most seasonably and fully.

For instance, when coffee is taken up it will be the plan of the agent in charge of the work to develop not only a tree which will produce high-class fruit, but as well will bear abundantly and will blossom in a regular season, instead of, as is the rule on some parts of the Islands, producing the cherry in all stages at the same time, thus making it necessary to have a force picking the coffee practically the whole year round, adding to the cost of the production. The same will be true of teas and the various fruits which have been in successful bearing, but which might be improved by selection and cross-breeding. This branch of the work is the most fascinating to the horticulturist, and the department expects to have stationed here an expert in that particular line, to assist the agent in charge.

According to the plans of Mr. Smith, the hillsides will in time bear hundreds of varieties of fruits, the orders which he has out for various species comprising the very best of the kind and the best kinds. Prof. Hilgard, who is in charge of the California station at Berkeley, is now arranging to send here at the season for transplanting, a full line of all the fruits which have been so successful in that State. In addition there will be trees from other States where the sub-tropical range is found, and the best things of the West Indies are now being gathered for this station. Already there are some of the seeds of the most profitable trees coming to hand, among these being the kola, of which a consignment of nuts was received in the last mail. This is but a sample of the way in which the department at Washington feels toward this station, and that all the possible assistance that can be given will come, is assured.

One of the new things, in so far as a crop is concerned, which is on the way, is the grapefruit, and to this much space will be given. In the United States the demand for this fruit has grown with rapidity in the past few years. Where a few years ago it was looked upon as a novelty now it has become a necessity almost in many households. While there is no doubt that the fruit may be produced here, full test of the varieties will be given and there may be found a level at which this tree will grow with such freedom that it will be a great addition to the crops of the group. Another feature of the proposed planting will be a seedless grape, of the Sultana group, which is growing with success in California. This grape is a native of Italy and the hillsides here should furnish the conditions which bring it to such full bearing there.

This is the principal plan for the improvement of the uplands, the replacing there of the trees removed by fruits. The men who have investigated the soil think if there is care in the planting, if there is a sufficiently large hole made and the young tree given a good amount of rich soil in which to start its life, there will be no difficulty in making the experiments with the fruit a success. The sub-soil will be broken up so that the young and tender roots will have a chance to get down to the rich earth below. It is hardly likely that the course which is followed in some parts of California and Dakota will be necessary—the planting of trees with dynamite. There the hardpan, which is about like the red mud, is broken up by the use of a stick of dynamite, which is put into the hole made in the mud with a crowbar or hand drill. This will be done if there is as much mud on the higher levels as is found in the bed of the valley.

The seedbeds and nursery are placed at a level of 1,000 feet and the limit of the reservation is at 1,350 feet. This range of elevation gives an opportunity for the testing of all kinds of trees which may be grown here, and is especially suited for the station, since little land which is below that level is left outside the plantations, when it is capable of cultivation.

The lower levels of the Kewalo-uka tract, those which lie behind Punchbowl, will be used for the purpose of the dairying tests and the growing of grains. There will be tested the various grains, the beans, millets and similar green foods which would be of great service to the small farmer, if the genus ever succeeds in getting an opening. The Secretary of Agriculture says he wants experiments in milk and butter made, and the investigations will be thorough. There on a commanding knoll is situated the house and offices of the station and the agent, so that the official may be in the midst of his work. Mr. Smith said in discussing the work of the station:

"Our plan is not to introduce new things, but to improve the agriculture and horticulture of the country. We will give our time to the investigation of the various fruits and vegetables, study plant diseases, character of soils and what may be done to change them to make them fruitful. The idea of such a station here should be the demonstration that there is a field for small farmers. The need of a new Territory as this, according to the belief of the authorities at Washington, is a body of citizens, ready to defend the flag, to stand off an enemy until relief may be had from the Mainland, to remove the danger of the nation having to defend the Islands the moment there is any disturbance, and to have such resources as will render the group self-supporting in case there should be war. The opinion when this station was thought of was that it should be demonstrated that a small farmer could make his way out of the production of fruits and dairy products and other small crops. That this may be done I fully believe, and it will be the work of the station to show what seems best fitted for the soil.

"Our work will be slow for the reason that this is the only State or Territory where it was necessary to do all the work. Everywhere else the grounds have been prepared and the buildings erected, so that the appropriation of the United States was left free for the work of investigation and experiment. Here there will be only small work done for the first year, as everything has come out of the money placed at our hands by Congress. The work has been done so far as it has progressed from a solid foundation, so that it will last, as the station will be a permanent one. Whoever carries it on will pursue the same general lines that are being followed now, branching out as time passes and as resources permit.

"The work of the station in addition to the mere growing of the fruits and other products will be to study conditions closely and print bulletins which will go everywhere, showing just what is being done and what may be accomplished; bulletins which will show the farmers how to proceed to accomplish the same results that we obtain. This is an important branch and Secretary Wilson is now preparing to send out men who will analyze soils, study plant diseases and look into irrigation conditions. When this force arrives some close scientific work will follow and then the results will be spread before the people of the Territory, to show them how to combat poor conditions and to take advantage of favorable ones."

The work of the station in so far as it relates to the erection of new buildings is about complete, the only structure yet to be raised being the house for the keeper of the upper gardens, which will be just below the house at the Territorial station. It will be so built that there will be the largest roof space, so that water for the irrigation of the garden will be obtained, to guard against a drought. In time there will be put in a reservoir at the foot of the little valley, where there are several springs, and from this the water for the lower fields will be taken.

Hundreds are awaiting the opening of the Oklahoma claims, and distress is feared for those in the rush.

THE SAMOAN ISLANDS.

Consular Report on Commerce, Population, Imports and Agriculture.

Conditions in the Samoan Islands since the transfer of Tutuila and Manua to the United States, and Savaii and Upolu to the German government, is the subject of a report by the British consul located in the islands, a copy of which has just been received by the Treasury Bureau of Statistics. The report is as follows:

"The islands of Savaii and Upolu were annexed by Germany on March 1, 1900. Shortly afterwards, on April 17, the United States took possession of Tutuila and Manua. The only export for many years has been copra, amounting to, in 1897, £45.000; 1898, £60,000; 1899, £90,000; 1900, £46,000. Copra, largely used for the manufacture of soap, candles, etc., goes to the United Kingdom, France, Germany, Russia, Italy and the United States, principally to the United Kingdom and Germany. One of the first acts of the governor was to protect the natives by enforcing fair weights. He is now endeavoring to induce them to make a better article.

"At the present time cacao is engaging much attention here. At a distance of two or three miles from the sea it grows almost wild, and can be cultivated with success everywhere in Samoa, except perhaps on the summit of the mountains, where the climate will probably be too cold. The quality is good. Mr. Carruthers' cacao fetched lately the highest price in the London market. The governor is introducing plants of the celebrated Soconuso variety from Mexico. Cacao planting should draw the attention of home capitalists. The great drawback is that leases from the natives for a longer period than ten years are not likely to be confirmed, as the government does not wish to encourage land speculators and refers any application of this kind to the Berlin authorities.

"Coffee has been a failure. Even the hardy Liberian coffee introduced a few years ago, is now suffering from the same disease that destroyed the Mocha and other varieties. Vanilla and Kola promise well. Rubber should also succeed. Bananas and pineapples are shipped occasionally to Auckland in small quantities, but the time occupied in transit is too long, and the fruit is often spoiled on the voyage.

"The principal articles imported are: Salt beef in kegs and tinned meats, entirely from Auckland; soap, from Auckland and Sydney, although during the last three years merchants have begun to import from Hamburg many articles formerly brought from the Colonies. Kerosene oil, tinned biscuit, and lumber, come from San Francisco.

"Commercial travelers from Auckland and Sydney visit Samoa regularly for orders. The large German firm founded by the Godoffroys, for many years established in this group, imports from Hamburg the greatest part of the manufactured goods used in the carrying on of its business.

"At present the import duties are as follows: Ale, 50 cents per dozen quarts; spirits, $2.50 per gallon; wine, $1 per gallon; sparkling wine, $1.50 per gallon; tobacco, 50 cents per pound; cigars, $1 per pound; sporting arms, $4 each; gunpowder, 25 cents per pound. On all other articles, ad valorem, 2 per cent on invoice cost and charges. It is supposed that some alterations will be made before long in this tariff.

"Storekeepers pay a yearly tax of from $12 to $100 per annum, according to the business done. The tax on buildings is 1 per cent yearly on two-thirds of their value; that on trades and professions is from $3 to $60 per annum. There is an export tax of 2½ per cent on the value of copra shipped. All of the above were imposed originally in accordance with the Berlin treaty of 1889.

"The population of German Samoa consists of about 200 whites, 300 half-castes, and 32,000 natives. Imports, therefore, cannot be very large, native wants in a climate like this being limited; but should planting companies be formed, and the land utilized, matters will assume a very different aspect.

"There is more protection for property now than formerly was the case when the islands were under the rule of a native sovereign. The government is conciliating both parties with much success, and at present the relations between the natives and all foreigners are most amicable. If a rebellion should occur, it would rise out of the disputes between the old conflicting native factions.

"The area of Upolu is 220,000 acres; of Savaiii, 410,000 acres; in all, 630,000 acres, of which only 20,000 acres are now being cultivated. One hundred and fifty thousand acres have been sold to foreigners. Commerce would be increased to a very great extent should the land generally be thrown open to improvement by sale or 40-year leases. The price of the land ranges between $2.50 to $25 per acre, according to its situation and improvements. An American company lately sold several thousand acres in blocks at from $2 to $5 per acre.

"There are several schools in Apia, Roman Catholic and Protestant, in which English services are regularly held.

"The area of Tutuila and Manua is small, perhaps 35,000 acres, much of which is steep and mountainous. Tutuila is seventy miles from Apia. Four thousand natives are living on Tutuila, and 1,900 on Manua, and about 20 whites and as many half-castes."

The imports of the Samoan group in 1900 were about £80,000 in value, and the exports £48,000. No details of the 1900 commerce were available when the report was sent, but the 1899 figures showed that the United States held second rank in the countries supplying the imports, the figures being: From British Empire, £70,137; from the United States, £18,549; from Germany, £16,290.—New York Maritime Record.

WALTER G. SMITH - - EDITOR.

MONDAY : : : : : AUGUST 5

The Kilauea eruption resembles a play which is pretty nearly all overture by the advance agents.

Tired of waiting for Madame Pele to begin, Messrs. Gehr and Loebenstein of Hilo have begun to cough lava, hot air, incandescent rocks and mud, with results that are being watched with apprehension by the people crowding to the beach.

Judge Gear is growing in public esteem because of the kind of juries he selects, although the method of choice continues to leave the way open to fraud. Juries ought to come by lot in the American way. But personal choice could hardly do better than has been done in getting grand and petit juries for the ensuing term. The names in the main inspire confidence both in the chances to get justice and in the intent of the court.

The report that General Blood will succeed Lord Kitchener in South Africa was anticipated in the news reports of several weeks ago. Kitchener has had his laurels cheapened in the Boer country and would, very probably, be glad to escape, as Lord Roberts did, to the comforting assurances of his friends. Whether General Blood will fare any better is doubtful, for even Napoleon, when he met guerrillas, as he did in Spain, could make no headway.

THE LOCAL PRESS.

About a year ago Rev. Dr. S. E. Bishop, in the course of an interview, remarked that the press of Hawaii, with all its faults, kept itself clean and was rather high in the scale of respectability when compared with some journals of distinction on the Mainland. In saying this Dr. Bishop voiced a sentiment not uncommon among our people who note with pride that the opinions of the Hawaiian daily newspapers are not for sale and that the men who produce them recognize their obligations to a moral community.

Feeling that the Hawaiian press deserves this meed of praise, the Advertiser read with surprise and indignation an article credited to a correspondent of the New York Tribune, in which the following strictures appear:

Nearly every newspaper published in the Islands is subsidized by a corporation, and under the protection of the ostentatious patronage of the subsidizer is able to levy blackmail with impunity. Some of the least corrupt newspapers confine themselves to political libels as a source of revenue, but others know no limits to their appetite for dishonorable gain.

We know of no newspaper in the field of daily journalism here which is subsidized by anybody or has ever been accused of levying blackmail, political or otherwise. In a small and gossipy place like Honolulu a blackmailing newspaper would soon be known as such and indelibly branded; and the fact that no such brand appears is pretty fair evidence that none is deserved. Of course, here as elsewhere, the newspapers are abused by people who have been worsted by them or have reason to fear their searchlights; but the general reputation of our press is good.

Domestic scandals are the favorite means of livelihood among the newspapers. Many families have been ruined financially in their efforts to prevent the publication of facts which endanger their social standing, and others have been socially ruined by exposure in the columns of papers which they were unable to satisfy pecuniarly. Prominent families have been compelled to flee from the Islands and take up residence in the United States in order to avoid infamy at home.

This is a sheer libel. Domestic scandals here are usually kept out of print but not for pay. The talk about families being ruined financially or driven away is entirely new to us and, we believe, to the people of these Islands.

As a rule the newspapers are conducted by men whose practices in America have forced them to leave. These men are, therefore, well prepared to carry on their hideous trades as soon as they arrive in Honolulu. Indeed, they ascertain the conditions in the Hawaiian Islands before they leave America.

The editor of the other morning paper came here by invitation of his employers from the Boston Traveller; the editor who serves during his absence is an old resident of sound antecedents and good character. The editor of the Star is the present Superintendent of Public Instruction, who has lived here half a lifetime and his managing editor was, before coming here, a reputable journalist in Chicago and San Francisc. The editor of the Bulletin came to Hawaii several years ago at the request of the then owners of the Advertiser, from a newspaper at Bangor, Me., and is a man whose personal character, so far as we know, has suffered no reproach. The editor of the old Royalist paper, the Independent, has been a resident of Hawaii for over twenty years and as he came from Denmark has "no practices in America" to apologise for. As for the business managers of the local press they have never, we believe, been accused of any offence against law or morals here or anywhere else.

It is true that circumstances have in a measure forced the newspapers to shameful practices. No legitimate newspaper could flourish in the Islands, for the reason that the circulation of the various sheets is confined to 1,000 white men and the advertising columns must be filled for less than a dozen firms. Under the conditions the newspapers must diverge from the usual policy. They must not gather news for the public, but for the sake of those interested. They, therefore, announce marriages for the purpose of preventing them, publish obsequies in order to terrify the bereaved and give accounts of social events in order to mortify the entertainers. In order to understand this it may be necessary to know that of twenty-four marriages of prominent persons announced to take place during the past year nineteen were broken off owing to accounts published in the newspapers concerning the principals, and four shooting affrays resulted in which editors or reporters were shot. Of six prominent persons who died five were traduced, and of three fashionable social events that took place in Honolulu two were described in the papers as feasts of Phryne.

There are something like 20,000 white people, including Portuguese, in the Islands, and about 3,500 to 4,000 who take English daily newspapers. Advertising is much more generous here than in places of similar size on the Mainland, labor can be had economically, telegraphic expenses are nil, and job work and binding materially help a newspaper out. These facts and not blackmail account for the moderate success which newspapers are having in Hawaii. The particularized statements with which the extract given above concludes are arrant falsehoods as everyone who lives here knows.

We cannot imagine who wrote the Tribune correspondence. He might have been a discharged employe of one of the local prints; he might have been some rogue scourged by the newspapers for his crimes and after his revenge; he might have been a conscienceless space-writer or a crank. Whoever he is he has deceived the New York Tribune and made that great journal bear false witness towards a school of insular journalism which does not deserve ill of the profession on the Mainland.

INCREASED TAXES.

With ninety appeals from the assessment of the Tax Office pending, and the knowledge that there will be at least a few of that number which will fail of success, the outlook of the Territory for an increased revenue from taxation is good. The consequent eclipse of the special session talk is better, and the fact that in all probability there will be money enough for all necessities, and for a few needs, is best.

The assessment was fairly made, according to the plan followed. In assessing the value of real property the assessor took the value of the near by lands, where there had been sales, and again when there had been personal returns made by neighbors, and this valuation was given weight in the matter of the surrounding property. This has resulted in an assessment which is based on the ground of equality and should there be seen any partiality the condemnation must rest upon the head of the official who permits such considerations to weigh.

The fact that there are so many appeals does not mean that that number of men alone had reason to believe that they had been placed too high on the assessment rolls. There are many more, but they must suffer for the results of the inflation which has been going on, in some parts of the city during the past two years. There are many cases in point, for the fact that there are sales recorded during the past few weeks at a certain price, while the man who adjoins has been holding his property at twice that figure, and the assessor had made his returns upon the estimated value to the owner, is borne out by the records. This puts the burden on the owner of the last purchase, for he bought and finds that he has to meet an assessment on a figure above the actual value.

But for one of this variety of mistake there are dozens of the other kind, where the man who made the purchase has been compelled to pay the top price and then give up the higher taxes, and felt as well that his purchase set the pace for the entire neighborhood. The close watching of sales, close inquiry and close attention to districts have produced the returns which are now being questioned and the result is that the Territory will be the richer by thousands of dollars by the returns from the tax office proper.

What then must be the joy of the Independent when he finds that the hope of any extra session has been drowned in a tide of prosperity, which may mean that after all the Islands will get much that they need despite the croakings, and at the same time will be guaranteed their Territory rights freed from another siege of the lawmakers.

There attached to the proposed issue of bonds, which are out of the question now, little of deep significance, for without an act of the Legislature, which was not forthcoming, there could be no use made of the rights to provide the bonds. This is the fact, not that there has been any defeat sustained, or that there was any member of the Government who has tried to do more than he is entitled to carry through. Had the bonds been approved during the recess of the Legislature the result would have been the same.

The outlook then is much better for the many who are waiting eagerly for the declaration of the return. There will be sufficient taxes to more than pay all bills and perhaps to permit of some new works, which are badly needed.

TOBACCO A "BRAINY" CROP.

Professor Chapman of Lake City, Florida, said, ten years ago, that there was more money for a brainy man in raising good tobacco than in any other crop. He said this because it responded in its profits the most liberally to intelligent cultivation. The price of the article varied from five cents to a dollar a pound, according to the quantity of brain put into it.

The problem in Florida has been to raise the delicate Sumatra leaf, which has a high market value, and in some cases has returned $1,000 per acre. This leaf, owing to its fine quality, displaces the American leaf as a "wrapper." Even the enormous duty of $2 per pound has not excluded it from our markets.

A series of experiments were made with the Sumatra seed. These have been made successful through the work of the Experimental Station. Admirable scientific methods have been tried, and a profitable industry has now been established in that State. The "rule of thumb" followed by farmers was abandoned and the "rule of knowledge" put in its place.

The United States Experimental Station of Connecticut has also experimented with the tropical Sumatra plant. It was raised under new and artificial conditions. The plants were covered with cloth so as to exclude insects and excessive heat; new fertilizers were used and the best conditions obtained. To do this required a thorough knowledge of chemistry, organic and inorganic. The scheme is successful and the farmers of the State are delighted. The book-student has beaten the "practical" farmer.

At the Paris Exposition of 1900 the United States presented the finest exhibit of tobacco. All countries sent their best samples; but the Americans showed the effect of good brain-work in improving the plant.

Under intelligent culture the tobacco of Cuba is now raised in Florida, and it now nearly equals in flavor and aroma that which is grown in the noted Vuelta Abajo district of Cuba. It is claimed that in due time it will equal it and bring the same high price. There is a large region in Texas where the best Cuban tobacco may be raised whenever the true conditions are known.

Whether a tobacco of the finest quality can be raised on these Islands is still a problem. The Experimental Station will solve it in due time. The brains which have produced it in Florida may produce it here.

SUMMER HOMES.

Many people, especially those in moderate circumstances, are unable to secure accommodations during the summer months on the higher altitudes of these Islands where a decided change of climate is found. This is due, no doubt, to the fact that the white population is not large enough to make hotels and boarding-houses a remunerative business on these altitudes.

But it is certain that if the health of the white people is to be preserved in the tropics they must be cooled off at some season of the year. It is a condition of things which we must recognize in the establishment of a virile civilization here.

There is no reason why a movement should not be made towards creating "tented" cities on the higher altitudes of this and other Islands, as it is successfully done in many places on the Coast and in the mountains of California. A contemporary says: "Some 1,500 Rochester people think they have solved the problem of how to live comfortably and cheaply during the summer. They are encamped in what they call their White City, on the shores of Lake Ontario. Some of them have been pitching their tents there for ten years, and the idea has grown in popularity until this year tents crown the bluffs for a mile and a half east and west and half a mile north and south. The tents are pitched in April and folded in November, being constructed so that they may be comfortably heated in spring and autumn. The canvas is stretched over a frame, like that of an Indian bungalow, and the largest of these summer dwellings are spacious enough to allow of three sleeping-rooms, a dining and a sitting-room. Cooking and other domestic duties are done in smaller tents in the rear. This summer city is surprisingly like a permanent municipality. It is regularly laid out, with streets named after the Presidents. It has its social sets and its cliques, and many of the campers do not know the names of their neighbors in the next street any more than they would in New York city itself. The men of the colony go to their business daily in Rochester, covering the eight miles quickly on the trolley-cars."

There are, of course, difficulties in the way of procuring food and water at the high levels, but intelligent co-operation would remove them, and white families should be able at small expense to get the benefit of a bracing air. A gentleman of this city has tried, this summer, the experiment of placing a tent of unusual size at an altitude of over 4,000 feet on Haleakala, Maui, and it has done excellent service. It stood with little damage the force and fury of the recent high winds.

Philanthropy cannot operate on better lines than in creating one of these "tented" cities.

OF CURRENT INTEREST.

The Smallest Village.

Long Island has the smallest village in the world. It is called First Place. According to the last census the village has a population of ten. There are two houses and two families, the Parsons and the Millers. Every male resident of First Place holds office, and there are political fights just the same as there are in New York. For almost a century the population of First Place has been about the same, for during all that time there have been no other residents than the Parsons and Miller families. Three generations of each family have constituted the population of First Place.

He Sowed Diamonds.

A London diamond merchant, while going to his office recently, in a fit of abstraction pulled an old envelope out of his pocket and commenced to tear it up. When he reached the last section the terrible fact dawned upon him that it was the envelope in which were some 1,600 small diamonds valued at $500, and that he had been sowing these broadcast over a public thoroughfare. Some of them have been recovered, but others have never been heard from.

Austin is 66

Alfred Austin, the poet laureate of England, is sixty-six years old, and it will soon be fifty years since he wrote and published his book, "Randolph; A Tale of Polish Grief." For three years he regularly attended the assizes at York, where he wore his barrister's wig, but never practiced. Thirty years ago he had the exciting experience of representing a daily paper in Paris during the siege.

Wanted What He Paid For.

An Englishman staying at an English inn ordered a bottle of wine for luncheon, but only consumed a third of it at that meal. When he asked for the remainder at dinner he was told that all wine left at table went to the waiter as a perquisite. The landlord supported this statement, but when a summons was issued for the value of the missing wine the claim and costs were paid.

The Hub's Eagle-Teaser.

Curtis Guild Jr. was chosen to give Boston's Fourth of July oration. The annual speaker is paid $100, but the custom is to return the check to the city. The orator will, however, receive a number of copies of his oration bound in fine morocco leather, embossed with the seal of the city and containing his picture, by way of remuneration—and it is pay enough.

Our Great Increase in Savings.

In the United States the savings deposits of 1870 were $549,874,358, distributed among 1,630,846 depositors. This amount was multiplied by more than four in 1900, when $2,384,770,849 was distributed among 5,875,450 depositors.

INCREASE IS RAPID

Lung Diseases Are Killing the Natives.

ISLANDS ARE A DUMPING GROUND

For Consumptives From States. Changed Conditions Cause of Disease.

Honolulu physicians agree that tuberculosis is increasing at a rapid rate among the people in the Hawaiian Islands. The greatest spread of the dread disease is among the natives, and the majority of physicians who were seen by an Advertiser reporter yesterday attributed it to the mode and manner of living of the natives, together with their changed conditions as brought about by advancing civilization. The records of the Board of Health show an ever increasing percentage of deaths due to consumption, almost wholly among the natives. Of the first few days of the present month, two out of the five deaths were attributed by the attending physicians to tuberculosis.

Another startling statement brought out by inquiry among the physicians, was to the effect that Honolulu is being used as a dumping ground for consumptives by the Western States, some of which are already agitating legislation to prohibit the inflow of afflicted persons who seek the higher altitudes within them in their endeavor to stay the progress of the disease.

Below are given some of the interviews had with such physicians as could be seen yesterday:

Dr. W. H. Mays—"I have been here but a year, and am hardly competent to answer the question as to whether tuberculosis is increasing in Honolulu. From my observation during my residence here I should certainly say that it is increasing to a great extent among the native races. The change in their habits of living, moving from the open into houses in town, when used to the open air, their mode of dress, all make them very liable to the disease. They are very susceptible to colds, which in many cases settle on their lungs. Like any half-civilized race, or one just emerging into civ- them, like in the case of the American Indians, who were carried off by the ilization, disease spreads rapidly among thousands during the smallpox epidemic. I do not agree with the physicians of the Board of Health that the disease is not hereditary, and think it can be handed down from father to son."

Dr. W. H. Howard—"The disease is slowly increasing. I have been here eight or nine years, but only in the past few years have I noticed the increase. This is due more to the mode of living of the natives than to anything else. They are not so cleanly as are the whites, by this I mean the lower classes. They eat out of the same dish, and they have a reckless habit of expectorating everywhere and without regard to anything. It is only among this class that tuberculosis is increasing."

Dr. Bowmann, of Victoria Hospital—From my experience at the hospital I believe the disease to be increasing in the Islands at an alarming rate. This is not only among the natives but among the whites. They are dumping consumptives here now from the Coast on nearly every steamer. I know of several cases where consumptives were sent to Honolulu from hospitals, with the hope that the climate might do them good. Tuberculosis is spreading at such a rate that the Queen's Hospital has refused to take patients with this disease, and we are being pressed for room to care for them. Of the eighteen incurables now at the Victoria Hospital ten of them are consumptives. The whole trouble it seems to me is in expectoration. It dries and gets in the air, and is liable to be communicated to any one. At the hospital all expectoration is burned. The plan of sending consumptives to Honolulu is not a good one. What they need is a high, dry place; here it is low and humid."

Dr. Pratt—Tuberculosis is increasing very fast. Extreme precautions are necessary to prevent a further spread of the disease, especially among the natives. Their habits and mode of living are responsible for this. It seem to me that the circular just issued is very much needed, and should be stringently observed by all people, for only by strict measures can the disease be eradicated or confined within narrow limits. I would again call attention to the need of a strict observance of every part of the circular issued by the Board of Health."

Dr. Peterson—"I haven't the least idea whether it is increasing or diminishing. The records of the Board of Health would best show that. I haven't had a case of tuberculosis for years."

Dr. G. W. Burgess—Yes, I believe it is increasing among the natives and half whites to a great extent. They are very lax, and rarely give the attention they should to pleurisy, pneumonia and other diseases. Their diseases in nearly every case settle on the lungs. I do not know of many cases among the whites. A good many people are coming here to be cured but I do not believe this to be a good place for consumptives. The climate is equable enough, but they need dry air."

A NATIONAL UNIVERSITY.

Within the last few days the final steps have been taken in the organization of a new university for post-graduate work at the national capital, to be known as the Washington Memorial Institution.

Both in his annual message to Congress and in his last will and testament George Washington expressed an urgent desire to see the city of Washington made a national educational center. In recent years many friends of higher education have realized that the scientific and other resources of the government at Washington ought to be made accessible to students and investigators.

The prime object of the organizers of the Washington Memorial Institution is to erect a building and create a responsible central agency through which students may utilize these new privileges. Universities and colleges all over the country have been invited to co-operate in the enterprise. An intercollegiate board of trustees has been named, including one member from nearly every prominent university, and it is expected that the new institution will be ready to begin work next autumn. The government privileges that have been granted can be utilized only by a limited number of specially qualified investigators, but the best graduates from each college will now have a chance to enjoy scientific facilities in Washington which exist nowhere else.

This is not exactly the national university which George Washington had in mind when he urged that provision be made for the promotion of science and literature, but it is the nearest approach to it that is feasible under present conditions. It will be maintained by private funds and not by congressional appropriations. It will be at once a fitting memorial to the man whose name it bears and an important addition to the higher educational facilities of the nation.—Chicago Tribune.

WOMEN AS GUIDES.

The woman who contemplates a trip to London this summer would do well to remember that one institution in the British capital is of special value to the visiting stranger. Reference is made to the women guides, whose express purpose is to supply women tourists with members of their own sex to pilot them safely over the popular tours of England and the British isles—in fact, over any part of the Continent of Europe into which the tourist may wish to penetrate. These guides are women of culture and must speak French, German and English, else their applications for these rather agreeable berths will not be considered. They tip the servants, pay the cabby, point out the distinguished people met on the drives or promenades, and comment intelligently upon all places of interest as these come into view, with which they must be familiar. They must also be thoroughly "au courant" with the gossip of the town, must accompany their patronesses to the concert or the theater if desired. They are expected to work six hours daily, and they receive but 10 shillings per diem, equivalent to about $2.50 of American money, for which small sum they save the traveler every possible annoyance. They are always trustworthy, sober, obliging, frequently a brilliant and interesting companion.—Chicago Chronicle.

AN AUTOMATIC GUNNER.

The "automatic gunner" is the latest device to be tried in the French navy. Experiments were made on board the warship Valmy, a London Express Cherbourg message says, with a new invention which is to do away with gunners in training and firing the guns after the first shot has been fired. The automatic gunner was adapted to a 320-millimetre gun placed in the turret of the warship. The first shot set the mechanism in motion. The gun was returned to the battery, the breech was opened, the cartridge extracted, the new projectile introduced, and the gun made ready again to fire. The experiments were successful, thirty shots in succession being fired. There is nothing to suggest, however, that the automatic gunner can lay his gun accurately and can be guaranteed to make good shooting.

SOLEMN SERVICES

Last Tribute Paid to Mrs. Parker's Memory.

MANY FRIENDS WERE PRESENT

Rev. H. H. Parker Speaks of Her Fervent Love of Her People and God.

In death as in life: the same simple ceremony marked the funeral services yesterday, as long characterized the life of the late Mrs. Samuel Parker. Loved in life, she was revered in death, the silent testimony of friends from every walk of life, high as well as low, native and white, all gathered yesterday at the bier of a woman whose whole life had been given to the service of her race.

'Mid a sorrowful silence, broken now and then by an unrestrainable sob, the Rev. H. H. Parker spoke of the deeds that will cause the memory of Mrs. Parker to linger long after she is laid to rest. Solemn yet without pomp, the service was one that would have pleased the deceased most in life. The music consisted wholly of the hymns and songs which were so dear to Mrs. Parker, and the music of the Government band was also of the same solemn character.

The house was crowded long before the hour set for the ecremony, and the gathering and the general demeanor of those present were an indication of the esteem in which the deceased had been regarded in life. The floral offerelngs were very numerous and of rare beauty. The bier was on a raised platform, and was almost hidden by the profusion of flowers. Above were crossed half a dozen kahilis, symbolic of the ancient burial custom of the chiefs. The services were conducted in the large room in the front of the residence on King street, the mourners being seated in the adjoining room, which opened into the larger room. The coffin remained closed during the ceremony.

While the mourners were gathering the Government band played a few appropriate selections upon the lawn.

The service began at 3 o'clock with the singing of the old familiar "Rock of Ages" by the choir of Kawaiahao church, of which deceased during her stay in Honolulu was a regular attendant.

Rev. H. H. Parker, pastor of the same church, then read selections from a portion of the 23rd Psalm, and portions of the 15th chapter Corinthians, followed by a prayer.

He then spoke briefly though eloquently in an eulogistic strain of the deceased. He alluded to the two strong points of her life, first her love for her people, and second her love and faith in God. As an example of both he retold a conversation he had had with her not many years before her death, in which she spoke of the changed conditions of the Hawaiians. She spoke freely upon the subject, expressing her solicitude because of the young people of her race and the probable effect upon them. She hoped for the best, however, and wanted them to adapt themselves to the new order of things; to the new conditions, and take hold and do the best they could as American citizens. "I asked her," continued Rev. Parker, "whether blame should be attached to any one for the conditions here. She said she thought mistakes had been made, but she would not judge any one for them. She was always charitable, and she believed the hand of God was behind it all. She led me to think that she felt the thing to be inevitable."

The speaker then referred to her strong Christian faith; her love of God was very marked, and she said whatever came i nthe future she would put her faith in God. She believed he was master of all and inspired every event. He also referred to her as an affectionate wife and mother, a good woman, a type of woman much needed among the natives, and of whom there are few among the Hawaiians. He expressed also his belief in the continuity of life and held out to her relatives as a hope for the future meeting, comforting the family as well as it was possible to do.

Following the close of the remarks by Rev. Mr. Parker, the choir sang two verses of "Jesus, Lover of My Soul," which closed the solemn services.

The remains will be shipped to Hawaii for interment tomorrow.

THE "BLACK DANGER."

British officers in Basutoland believe that a new factor, dangerous to both Boers and British, must soon be reckoned with in South Africa. They report that there are indications of an uprising of the natives—the "Black Danger" which several times has brought Dutch and British in South Africa together in resistance to savagery.

There are in Cape Colony 320,000 whites to 1,200,000 natives. In Basutoland there are only about 600 whites to 250,000 natives. In the Transvaal, before the war, there were 345,000 whites and over 748,000 natives. In the Orange Free State there were about 80,000 whites and 130,000 natives. In Natal there were 61,000 whites and 787,000 natives. In Rhodesia there were 10,000 whites and 500,000 natives.

In the several divisions of South Africa there were at the beginning of the Boer war 800,000 whites and 3,400,000 natives. The latter, under the leadership of men not friendly to either Boers or British, are watching events closely, with the purpose of seeking their own advantage through the continuance of the war.

So far in the war both British and Boers have been at great pains to give the natives no excuse or opportunity for hostilities. Should there be an uprising now, it would be as great a danger to the Boer peoples as to the British colonies. The white men, could there be peace among them, would be in better condition to meet such an uprising than ever before, because of the 200,000 British soldiers in the field. But to meet it there must be co-operation between the British and the Boers.

There have been times in the past when Boers have appealed to British against the "Black Danger," and when British have appealed to Boers. There have been times, too, when the natives have appealed to British against the Boers, but there never has been a time when British and Boers were more intent on destroying each other than now.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

The Waiakea Mill Company are going to grind the Olaa cane, and have commenced this week to make sugar out of it. It is good so far, resembling Waiakea canes in saccharine and purity. It will be brought in on the Olaa railroad and cars, run into the mill company's scows and taken to the mill for grinding. They expect to take off 200 acres of cane. On account of so many strikes, both here and in America, it will take longer to get the mill ready.—Hilo Tribune.

The sailing dates of the transports for the remainder of the year, as furnished to Major W. W. Robinson, depot quartermaster at Honolulu, is as follows: Kilpatrick, August 1; Meade, August 16; Sheridan, September 1; Logan, September 16; Sherman, October 1; Hancock, October 16; Thomas, November 1; Meade, November 16; Sheridan, December 1; Logan, December 16.

UP-TO-DATE JAPAN.

Economic developments in Japan during the past few years have been very striking indeed. From a native source the Kobe Chronicle reproduces certain figures which show what an enormous expansion there has been in the capital invested in joint stock companies since the war. This has been specially noticeable in the banking and money lending groups, and among manufacturing companies engaged in cotton spinning, coal and the tobacco industries. Cotton spinning capital was 30,313,000 yen in 1899, the last year for which figures are available, and in 1895 only 18,658,000. Cotton weaving capital increased from 1,563,000 yen to 3,976,000. In coal mining 14,241,000 yen was employed against 1,013,000 in 1895. In tobacco, 11,420,000 yen, against practically nothing in 1895. Other big increases were 4,757,000 yen to 7,909,000 yen in the electrical lighting industry, 2,019,000 yen in machinery manufacturing, and 4,214,000 yen in ship building, the two last practically new industries. Sake brewing accounted for 6,133,000 yen, against 1,322,300.

Far and away the greatest increase is, however, in banking and money lending, now responsible for 275,432,000 yen, against 79,370,000 yen in 1895, and, if the figures are reliable, it is not surprising that the necessary competition for business has resulted in disaster. Taking the various groups of joint stock companies, we have the following comparisons: Agricultural companies, accounted for 2,287,685 yen in 1899, an increase of 765,000 yen over the 1895 figures, commercial and financial accounted for 335,503,000 yen, against 99,786,000 yen in 1895, an increase of 235,716,000 yen; manufacturing for 147,783,000 yen, an increase of 89,055,000 yen; and transport, sea and land, for 198,147,000 yen, an increase of 108,186,000 yen. It is estimated that the increase in the capital of joint stock companies in 1899, as compared with 1895, when the figures were roughly 249,998,000 yen, was 433,722,000 yen. Moreover, fully 15,234,000 yen represents the increase in debentures raised. In round numbers, 450,000,000 yen represents the increase in the capital of joint stock companies in Japan since the war, or nearly 175 per cent.

Putnam's Cherry Cough Comfort

Cures coughs and colds quicker than any other known remedy. It is quite agreeable to take and the first dose will give relief.

If you have a cough don't neglect it. There's no cure for consumption in advanced stages. A neglected cough leads to consumption.

It is particularly valuable for throat and lung diseases, such as colds, croup, whooping cough and influenza. Children take it readily.

To Buy . . . . . Plumbing Material

WITHOUT A PLUMBER to put up the articles in first-class style is of very small advantage to the average householder. The people of Honolulu have been "cinched" so often by plumbers that they are afraid to set one onto a job by day's work.

BAILEY'S PLUMBING SHOP will put your plumbing in condition and connect with the sewer for a very low figure. And guarantee the job will PASS INSPECTION by the GOVERNMENT officials. And also guarantee that day's work by honest men is cheaper than contract. Contracts are taken, however, and promptly filled by

The Great Stocking Sale!

Plain and drop stitch black lisle thread hose for ladies. All sizes.

Absolutely stainless because they were dyed by Hermsdorf.

They were formerly sold at 65 cents per pair, but as we have too many we wish to clear them out before taking stock. We have therefore made the price

$2.00 per Box

Of six pairs. We will not sell pairs singly. They go at $2 per box from Monday, August 5th. Sale lasts two weeks only.

P. S. We are selling Victoria Lawns in 10-yard lengths at $1 per piece. Former price was $1.25.

French Dry Cleaning

The M. E. Killean Co., Limited
HOTEL STREET.

Has taken the agency for the Hawaiian Islands for the F. THOMAS PARISIAN DYEING AND CLEANING WORKS, SAN FRANCISCO.

Mr. H. N. Cauwet, Superintendent of the F. Thomas Parisian Dyeing and Cleaning Works, is in the city, and will be at the local agency daily from 10 to 12 a. m. until August 5th, and will give his personal attention to the prompt and perfect execution of all orders for dyeing and cleaning.

Special attention is called to our FRENCH DRY CLEANING PROCESS, which is invaluable for the most expensive articles, as no matter how elaborately trimmed the garments can be beautifully cleaned, whole and without any injury to color or fabric. Stains are removed from the most delicate articles. KID GLOVES CLEANED to look like new. Feathers, Feather Boas dyed, cleaned, curled and made waterproof. Never attempt to remove stains as it will, in almost every case, result in making the stain worse than before. Fine lace curtains our specialty.

Last quarter of the moon on the 6th at 9:32 p. m.

Times of the tide are taken from the United States Coast and Geodetic Survey tables.

The tides at Kahului and Hilo occur about one hour earlier than at Honolulu.

Hawaiian standard time is 10 hours 30 minutes slower than Greenwich time, being that of the meridian of 157 degrees 30 minutes. The time whistle blows at 1:30 p. m., which is the same as Greenwich, 0 hours 0 minutes. Sun and moon are for local time for the whole group.

LONDON'S FLOWER GIRLS.

On Saturday the London streets were blazing with daffodils, narcissi and roses. But why is the London flower girl so persistently unpicturesque? Her trade is the sweetest in the world. She herself is quite the reverse of sweet. Similarly the horse is a noble animal, but the dealer in horses is usually ignoble. We can scarcely hope to make the horse dealer as noble as his wares; but it should be possible to make the flower girl as sweet as her merchandise. Is there not an eccentric millionaire in London who will design, order and pay for a flower girl's costume.—London Chronicle.

From the reports of the dealers in this city, we think no proprietary medicine has a larger sale than Pain-Killer. Its valuable properties as a speedy cure for pain cannot fail to be generally appreciated, in case of accident, or sudden attack of dyssentery, diarrhoea, cholera morbus.—Montreal Star. Avoid substitutes, there is but one Pain-Killer, Perry Davis'. Price 25 cents and 50 cents.

After a stay of a week in port the United States gunboat Petrel resumed her homeward-bound voyage Saturday afternoon, after taking on 195 tons of coal. She will proceed direct to Mare Island and go out of commission.

FORTY-FIVE CHOICE RESIDENCE lots just opened to home-seekers, comprising a seven-acre tract of land adjoining the Punahou grounds, each lot facing on a good broad street and bounded by Wilder avenue, Piikoi, Beretania, Alapai, Wyllie, Isenberg, Malcalf and Dole streets. The land itself is unquestionably, aside from its being desirable on account of easy access to and from the city, the best and cheapest property yet placed on the market. Wide streets, electric cars, high and alluvial soil, besides being situated climatically unexcelled.

Terms most reasonable. Those building homes will do well by calling or filing their applications early. Only applications from responsible parties will receive recognition.

FOLLOWERS OF THE TRAMPING FAD IN HONOLULU

THE SENSIBLE THING.

It is a fad in the right direction. Society has not done anything so sensible in a long time. I cannot say too much on behalf of outdoor exercise. Nature is right at the city's elbow and it has long been a source of wonder to me that so few people of our beautifully environed Honolulu have taken advantage of these things. I observe that recently the women have taken to tramping trips with commendable enthusiasm, and that the masculine sex are not far behind.

While the tramping fad is an excellent thing, however, it is also bad in a way. If it spreads to any great length we physicians will suffer a great falling off in our practice and exchequer will be less frequently replenished with fees.—DR. WALDO BURGESS.

THE TRAMPING GIRL has come to stay. She may be found almost any morning climbing over the rugged steeps of Punchbowl, strolling meditatively along the glittering stretch of sands at Waikiki, or walking briskly cityward over the road from Diamond Head or the Pali.

She has a big hat and short skirts—as the tramping girl—and her boots are high-topped, heavy-soled and aggressively bulldog-toed—such boots as would strike horror to the heart of Derrick's lady love, whose "little feet, like mice, peeped in and out," for the tramping girl's boots are not of the sort that could peep, under any circumstances. They come forth boldly and absurdly sensible, asserting the independence of the girl who wears them, and they tramp over smooth ways and rough with undaunted persistency.

The tramping girl is a refreshing innovation. She is thoroughly American. She is strong, healthy and nature-loving. Furthermore, she is independent as man. The day when a man was necessary in the crossing of a brook or a rough place in the path is over. The tramping girl gets along quite well without him. In fact, he would be quite a nuisance. The tramping girl would be at a loss as to what use to make of him. So she usually leaves him at home.

In twos and threes or alone she tramps over the hills and through the valleys, or along the sands by the sea, the invigorating salt-air fanning her fresh cheeks, and the sunshine, unrestrained, doing its best at tan and freckles. To her a tramp from the end of the Waikiki car line out along the beach to Diamond Head, an hour's climb over the rugged lava boulders of the old crater, and back again through the smooth roads of Kapiolani Park, is mere child's play and incidental to a morning's pleasure.

What put into her head to tramp she doesn't quite know. Perhaps it was a manifestation in her of the tendency of the age. She who tramps is usually the same girl that swims and rides or plays. And she is growing more numerous every day. She may be found in an assortment of dispositions and temperaments. There is the jolly, rollicking, robust girl, who is never without companions and was never known to be in repose; the feminine, chatty girl, who tramps in confidential pairs, and the girl who is fond of loneliness and solitude, finding always some subterfuge to get away from bothersome companions and tramp alone. Sometimes the tramping girl carries a sketching pad or camera, and sometimes a substantial luncheon.

The tramping fad struck Honolulu in good earnest some months ago. The occasional climbs over Punchbowl became more frequent, and were extended to Tantalus; tramping parties were organized on Saturdays by the High school girls and a number of teachers, and became the recognized thing among the vigorous feminine fraternity. On fine mornings the Tantalus woods were full of them, and the road to the Pali became a favorite route for them, short-skirted, shirt-waisted and shod in heavy, high-topped boots.

It has become a matter of rivalry, and tramping enthusiasts vie with each other in the exercise. Three or five mornings of every week finds the tramping girl up betimes and at her walk. Some of the more enthusiastic have carried the fad to the point of sunrises, but the average tramper prefers her last "forty winks among the pillows," content to catch the 10 o'clock breeze from the sea.

The fad by reason of its wholesome and beneficial pleasure has endured, and though there is perhaps less enthusiasm in the matter than at first it is an established thing. Miss Gertrude Scott is one of Honolulu's champion trampers, and Miss Alice Hoffman, Mrs. Charles Elston and Miss Juliet King are of those who are foremost in the rank of climbing and tramping. Mrs. H. C. Brown's large family of Y. W. C. A. girls are nearly all devotees of the fad, and Dr. Luella W. Cleveland at the Battle Creek Satitarium lends a personal example of her professional approval, being a tramper of strength and endurance and heartily enjoying the exercise.

A number of other physicians have been interviewed on the subject, and all unhesitatingly approve of the fad, if such it is. Perhaps the name is a mistake, for it is likely to be of longer duration than the things of the hour; the girl who tramps does not forget the thrill of exhilaration and the wholesome breath of outdoor existence that comes from a morning's tramp. Other means of exercise are obviously less beneficial in the Islands particularly, for the tramping girl climbs up from the lowlands and breathes in the fresh, pure air of the higher elevation, with its invigorating ozone, the while the beautiful views from the altitudes, with the Hawaiian marvel of harmony and color, delights her eye and brings her into a wholesome sympathy with Mother Nature.

The prevalent tendency to morbidness and depression cannot but be benefited by such a practice. There is nothing so effective in the casting out of the blue devils or in ridding one's self of an ugly mood as an hour or so of brisk walking beside old ocean or of tramping through the woods of Tantalus. So says the tramping girl.

The tramping girl is good to look upon.

The doctors approve of her. Society approves of her. She approves of herself. She is a landmark in the tendency of the age. A few more generations of her and American women will shelve their nerves and their frailties.

The next time you get out the wrong side of the bed and find the world all gone wrong, try it. Breathe in the fresh air, absorb the sunshine, and feel nature's subtle sympathy stealing away the sharpness of your vexations.

The tramping girl gets more out of her fad than mere exercise. She does not forget the sense of freedom it brings; she does not forget the intoxicating consciousness of her own physical strength, or how her feet come to walking briskly beneath her, seemingly without effort, or how good the world is to one when the sun shines and the breezes blow, and the earth is beautiful.

It is something of the pleasure of these things that brings the followers of the tramping fad from their pillows while the dew is still on the grass, and it is the wholesomeness of them all that brings the trampers home with clamoring appetites.

It is also the confession of Dr. Burgess that the tramping fad is bad for the exchequer of the physician. In the case of the ill-wind, the tramping girl has the best of it.

And as to what the young man thinks of it—there can be no doubt about it. His nose is somewhat out of joint by the falling off in the feminine demand for his assistance, but a broken nose is a wholesome thing for him. When he is permitted to go along he has plenty to do to keep up. Between his admiration and his broken nose he is quite at sea in the matter, but he has one consolation: If there be an orthodox chaperone in the party it is safe to figure that not one in ten chaperones can survive a six-mile tramp!

Robust in body and mind, lithe of limb and light of heart, the tramping girl says she is here to stay. Kensington work and fancy embroidering is relegated to the incidental, and she tramps.

The tramping girl is cosmopolitan; the business girl tramps in her hours of leisure, and the society girl tramps as well. May the originator of the fad long be toasted by both the woman in the world of business and the sensible girl of good fortune, who, if she inherits nothing to do, at least inherits the brains to find something for herself to do that is healthful, pleasurable and beautifying. May the tramping fad, if such it be, linger long, and the neat figure of the tramping girl long be seen on the picturesque roads and the rugged trails that lead outward and upward from our city—going forth to lose her petty vexations and her petty cares in the breeze, and bringing back in their stead a sparkle of the eye and a tint of the cheek born of wholesome exercise, pure air and the sunshine.

NAN BYXBEE.

SHOULD BE A PART OF DAILY LIFE.

The Young Woman's Christian Association of this city is glad to express its cordial approval of so sensible, so pleasurable and so beneficial a fad. And it entertains also an optimistic prediction that the merits of the tramping fad will render it long in the passing.

It should not remain a fad but become a part of the daily life of our girls, conducive, as it is to the erect carriage, springy step, exquisite complexion and general splendid physique.

The kangaroo figure of the tall girl is disappearing. Tall girls now "stand up" to their inches. It may be due to the fact that rapid walking necessitates correct breathing, consequently a breadth of chest—a broad-chested girl can never stand crooked.

I am glad to see the tramping fad gaining such a strong foothold with our Honolulu girls. We need a lot of exercise in this climate, and tramping is such a nice way of taking it. It makes play out of work.—MRS. H. C. BROWN, Secretary of Y. W. C. A.

A NATURAL EXERCISE.

Approve of it? Most certainly I do. There is no exercise or medicine like it. It is a most energizing tonic, filling the blood with oxygen, stimulating the entire physical organization and giving a clear skin and rosy color to its devotees. It is conducive to a feeling of well-being physically that extends to the temperament and banishes the "blues," and it brightens one up mentally. The advantage that tramping has over other exercises, particularly in the Islands, is that it is usually taken through the woods and on the hills or mountains where the air is particularly pure and full of ozone. Some of its pleasures are that you can rest when you like, eat when you like, and spend the time of resting in reading magazines or, if you are interested in botany or any of the studies that nature offers such opportunities for in Hawaii, you can turn your attention to that, or to sketching.

Tramping is the natural exercise, and longer periods of it can be taken in this way out of doors than in any other, with less fatigue and greater benefits. Horseback riding, tennis, bicycling, rowing and golfing, while all excellent exercises in themselves, are not to be compared with tramping, which certainly leads them all from the viewpoint of general health. The other exercises have their place in giving a variety to exercise, but tramping should have the palm.—DR. LUELLA CLEVELAND, Battle Creek Sanitarium.

A GOOD FAD.

I must say that the tramping fad has my hearty approval. There is nothing more beneficial or more conducive to robust health than plenty of outdoor exercise, particularly walking. The woman who tramps free and untrammelled by the uncomfortable and injurious nonsense of conventional dress is bound to develop a physique far superior to that of the indoor woman.

Fresh air, brisk exercise and good common sense in the matter of dress are three things essential to the physical building up of such women as Hawaii, with all its natural encouragements of freedom and climate, ought to produce.

Aside from actual bodily development, the fresh air and the exercise are well calculated to produce a pleasant frame of mind and an elevation of spirits most beneficial to the health as well as to the disposition.—DR. C. B. WOOD.

VIGOROUS MORNING WALKS THE BEST.

Those who have tried the tramping plan and felt the glorious consciousness of strength, elasticity of step and the power of a healthy physique can best understand how a morning tramp braces one up, both in body and in spirits.

Society has done very well to turn its attention to such a fad. It is more elevating than any number of pug dogs or golf sticks.—DR. E. C. WATERHOUSE.

MEN! DO YOU!

Do you want to be strong? Do you want to feel the vim, the snap and fire of manly vigor? Do you want courage, energy and ambition to support you in your cares and troubles?

I have devoted my life to the development of manly and womanly vigor. I've made a great success. My methods are approved by the greatest doctors and copied.

I've proven that electricity is the basis of all animal life and that "weak men," dyspeptics, rheumatics, sufferers from lost energy, weak kidneys, pains in the back, head, chest and shoulders from varicocele and its allied weaknesses, etc., are weak in electricity. My Electric Belt restores his life in a few weeks and cures every time. If it fails I ask no pay.

Describe your case to me, and if I say I can cure you I will guarantee to do so.

Drugs won't restore your strength. They only stimulate. If you have to take a stimulant, take whisky. Taken in moderation it does less harm than the others.

"Every sign of pain and weakness has disappeared. I appreciate what your Belt has done for me," writes J. Schwarz, Coleridge, Trinity County, Cal.

I will gladly send you my book on this subject. It has 82 pages of neat to people who want more "fire." Sealed, free.

CAUTION.—Makers of old-style, blistering and burning belts are now offering imitations of my Belts and Electrodes. LOOK OUT FOR THEM.

LIST OF NEW TEXT BOOKS

Board of Education Decides on a Few.

CHANGES IN THE TEACHING CORPS

Government to Be Asked for Land in Waialae for Boy's Industrial School.

The Board of Education adopted a new list of text books for the common schools at the regular meeting held Saturday morning. The list is one reported by the committee of teachers and approved by the text book committee and in turn adopted by the board.

The list of books for the higher grades and the high school is still in a state of preparation, but it is said that the report to be made means an entire breaking away from the book trust, whose books have been in use by government schools for years. These books are to be provided under contract by the government and none of the local book dealers have laid in a supply.

The list so far adopted includes the following:

Bass' Beginner's Reader.
Baldwin's Readers.
Supplementary Reading — Hawaiian Young People, Home and School Classics.
Prince's Arithmetic.
Language—The Mother Tongue. Rice's Rational Spelling.
Redway's Geography.
Eggleston's History.
Doe's Young Citizen.

The names of the publishers of these books were not given in the report, and were not known by Superintendent Atkinson.

Permission was given to Superintendent Atkinson to make formal application to the government for land in Waialae, to be used for an industrial school for boys. All the money for the building has not been appropriated, but the board hopes to begin work as soon as possible, and take chances on securing the balance as needed. It was decided to appoint three substitute teachers who are to report every morning at the secretary's office, for which they will receive a dollar per day; and in case their services are required they are to get three dollars for each day they teach. At present there is great difficulty in securing substitutes from the normal and the new plan is expected to obviate the difficulty.

The following report wes presented by the teacher's committee and adopted:

Ookala, Miss Mary McKinley to be re-appointed to take charge of this school in place of Miss Eleanor A. Thomas.

Hakalau, Eugene Capellas, transferred from Kealahou.

Kalaoa, Miss Florence J. Scott, transferred from Kailua to take charge of this school.

Makuhona, Manuel Luiz, in place of Miss Blanche Howard, resigned.

Honomokau, Miss Jenny S. Glass, in place of Miss Jones.

Paauilo, it was decided to recommend that Eugent Horner of Kaopanu be transferred to the principalship of Paauilo, in place of Mr. Judkins.

Lahaina, Miss Lily Auld from the Normal School, in place of Miss Aoe Wong Kong.

Honokowai, William Kaluakini transferred from Honokohau.

Waihee, Miss L. Aoe Wong Kong, transferred from Lahaina.

Wailuku, Miss Louisa Pihi from the Normal School, in place of Miss Millie Hons.

Haiku, Miss Evelyn Smith transferred from Makawao, in place of Miss Oss, resigned.

Pala, M. G. Anjo transferred from Hakalau.

Kaupakulua, A S. Medeiros, a graduate of the Normal School.

Nahiku, Miss Eliza dos Reis, transferred from Pala.

Manoa, Miss Violet Beckley, assistant from Normal School.

Kaahumanu, Miss Ivy Girvin, a graduate of the Normal School,, in place of Miss Martha B. Hitchcock, resigned. Miss Nellie McLain transferred from Kalihiwaena.

Pauoa, Miss Louise Aheong, re-appointed to her former position after a year's leave of absence to attend the Normal School; Miss Edna Scoby.

Kauluwela, Miss Karen Nielson, transferred from Kalihiuka, in place of Mrs. Sara E. Greene, who was transferred to the Kaahumanu school.

Kalihika, Miss Jennie Nielson, from the Normal School, in place of Miss Karen Nielson.

Normal School, Mrs. Lila G. Marshall. Mrs. Marshall has been temporarily employed in this school.

Kalihiwaena, Miss Ida Belle Lamb, transferred from Kaahumanu.

Honouliuli, Miss Augusta Bruce, transferred from Kaunakakai, to fill the position made vacant by the resignation of Miss Farmer.

Waianae, Miss Mary Parker, substitute for Miss Smith; Miss Ethel Wolfe, transferred from Hilo Union, in place of Miss Vestal.

Kaneohe, Z. McKeague assistant, the school having become too large for one teacher. Mr. McKeague taught last at Haena, Kauai.

Waimea, Miss Jean Harwood, in place of Miss Mahlum.

Makaweli, Micc Charlotte Stewart, in place of Mrs. Godfrey, resigned.

Koloa, John Bush, transferred from Kilauea; Miss Ada Bush, transferred from Kilauea; Miss Florence Bush transferred from Kilauea; Miss Margaret Miller from the Normal School.

Kapaa, Miss Mary Yoshioka, in place of Miss Chase, resigned to go to the Philippines.

Kilauea, Isaac M. Cox, in place of Mr. Bush, transferred to Koloa; Mrs. I. M. Cox.

Haena, Miss Mary Lono, an additional teacher.

Miss Helen Bicknell, transferred from the Normal to Miss Cousin's school, in place of Miss Ida Horner, who is to be married soon.

Miss Millie Morris, transferred to Waikiki from Waihee, in place of Miss Cook, who will study for a year at the Normal.

AN AUSTRALIAN RELIGIOUS JOURNAL ON MURPHY'S WORK

IN OUR May issue of Glad Tidings there is a paragraph upon Mr. Murphy's work, but as this temperance advocate was a complete stranger in our midst, we could not speak out with the confidence we can now, after longer acquaintance. Since the writing of the paragraph referred to, Mr. Murphy has conducted missions at Newcastle, Maitland and at York-street Central Methodist Mission, Sydney. At the two former places successes were achieved, to what extent we cannot say, as we have no particulars to draw from. But of the York street campaign we can write with the utmost confidence, having been a witness of the proceedings, and also one of the workers.

In relation to the Missioner himself, perhaps no one has had a better opportunity of peeping into and knowing something of his inner life than the writer. Mr. Murphy has made this W. C. T. U. headquarters his home for several weeks, and the old adage is, "You must be with a man if you want to know him." Our friend is just the same simple-hearted, sincere, loving and lovable man in the home as he is when before the eye of the public. He generally keeps a vigilant sentinel, wide awake, close to the door of his lips, lest he should speak unadvisedly, and be drawn into some intricate argument. He always has a sword, or rather, the sword, in the use of which he is familiar, close at hand—the Word of God. And, we have reason, approvingly, to suspect that he goes forth from his knees to the battle. In the home he is pleasant, entertaining and wisely communicative, especially all alive on his return from a good meeting. There is no need to say more with respect to his home life, and his public life, methods, style and utterances are now well known. Of him we may simply say the man is an adept at imitation, but he himself is inimitable. Public speakers who have heard him are at a loss to know wherein his power lies. He quotes from the Bible, tells stories graphically, makes desultory remarks, gives word-paintings of characters, suitable to illustrate his subjects, with marked effect, and nearly always winds up his forty minutes' address with flashes of real eloquence.

Crowds have flocked to his meetings at the Centenary Hall nightly for twelve or fourteen nights, and the noonday services have also been well attended. Two very large gatherings took place in the Domain, where Mr. Murphy gave stirring addresses, and Mrs. Alway assisted admirably at one of those services. The last Sabbath of the campaign was a red-letter day indeed. The president of the Wesleyan Conference, the Rev. G. Lane, preached a delightful sermon in the hall in the morning, drawing lessons from the patriotism and work of Nehemiah. The afternoon service was conducted in the large Town Hall, which was crowded. The evening service was held in the Centenary Hall, and the building was packed, and hundreds were unable to gain admission. The best of all is, hundreds signed the pledge; and, better still, a large number came right out and gave themselves fully up to Christ. Not for years have we witnessed such scenes as those we witnessed at many of the after meetings, when stout-hearted men knelt with tearful eyes at the feet of Jesus and sought and found pardon. The whole of the series of meetings deserved columns from the reporter's pen in the dailies, and yet but scant notice was taken of them. It is high time that the churches should unite and have a good, strong, independent paper of their own, to take up all the great questions of the day affecting good citizenship and the State. Then we could have a fair field for reports on all subjects—moral, religious and political.

From rather careful observation of Mr. Murphy's services, we have drawn several inferences, one of which is that the plain, but glorious, gospel is the chief factor to use in the temperance cause to secure the desired effect. Our friend kept Jesus Christ to the front in all he said or did, whether in committee, in private with friends, or on the public platform. He believes most firmly that Jesus saves from every form of sin, and that He can keep as well as deliver. This he proclaims, out and out, without reservation. And the men and women he seeks are not repelled, but like this kind of address, and are drawn and subdued by it. This is an answer to those who are asking, "What is the secret of Mr. Murphy's success?" It is the Christ in the man and fervently proclaimed by the man, as the Savior from drink and the devil. We give prominence to this, because many truly devoted temperance advocates are afraid, almost, to mention Christ's name, or to make allusion to religion in their addresses, for fear of giving offence. We have long seen that more of the Divine element is needed to give life, strength and success to temperance work. Supposing those constituting committees, organizations or audiences are composed of men and women of various creeds, opinions and shades of thought, yet if the name of Jesus is used aright, and for a right purpose, God will take care to honor those who honor Him by accepting His well-beloved Son, with whom He is well pleased. Let us try this new plan of seeking the destruction of the drink curse, and rescuing its victims by the Gospel of Love. E. M.

FRANCIS MURPHY'S SUCCESSFUL WORK

He Reports Great Progress in Australia for Temperance Crusade.

The editor of the Advertiser has received the following letter from Francis Murphy, the great temperance leader, now working for the blue ribbon cause in Australia:

Sydney, July 4, 1901.

My Dear Sir: I have just closed a most successful work in Sydney. We had great interest, and audiences ranging from 3,000 to 6,000. We had blessed results. Multitudes of noble men who were deceived by drink were inspired to break away from the slavery of evil habit. Could you see the strong men who would give their right hand to be free and were afraid the devil of evil habit would overtake them, looking into the friends for courage. The brave word, "Go on, Tom, we will go with you, we will sign too. Come, come, come on men, God will help us. We will be free," won the advance, won the cheers of "Well done, bravo."

The celestial sea of life is stirred to its utmost depths and great waves dash against the windows of the soul and tears of admiring love rain down the faces of brave men and queenly women and beautiful children because the lost is found, the dead is alive. All hail the power of Jesus' name. The new commandment, that ye love one another as he loved us will emancipate the whole world from selfishness.

I am in good heart and in good health, and best of all God is helping me. I am to visit Melbourne for ten days, beginning on the 20th. Am due in Frisco 2d of September. My best love to all the press and ministry and people and to my dear Bro. Austin and all who joined us in the blessed vow of abstinence.

To your good self and loved ones and the capable little girl on your splendid paper. I enclose you little clippings.

May God continue with you in your beautiful Island. Yours ever,

FRANCIS MURPHY.

PRESS CENSORSHIP IS DENOUNCED

NEW YORK, July 25.—The war correspondents in South Africa have united in a belated revolt against the military censorship, says the London correspondent of the Tribune. Mr. Bennet Burleigh, a veteran of many campaigns, describes the censorship as a "bungle and a blunder," and declares that the sooner the whole matter of unofficial correspondence is put upon a definite basis conformable to free institutions the better it will be for everybody. Mr. Edgar Wallace asserts that there is nothing so far as the military position is concerned to justify the maintenance of censorship, and that it is creating a bad precedent, since the only service which it can render is a political one savoring "somewhat of Russia; nay, it is Krugerian." Mr. Howell Glynne, who has remained in the field continuously since the outbreak of the war, holds his peace. In addition to the general restrictions based on military reasons established at the opening of the war, the following regulation enables any censor to reject or condense every dispatch submitted to him:

"In future the length of correspondents' wires will be in proportion to the importance of the news contained therein."

The correspondents consequently are disabled, and unable to justify by cable work the expenses of their service. The country, which is heavily taxed for a costly war, does not know what is going on, and is forced to be content with casualty lists and Lord Kitchener's inventories of Boers killed, wounded and surrendered, and of stock, rifles and ammunition captured.

It must be stated, in justice to the War Office, that the London journals were warned in advance that their correspondents would not be left at liberty to write and to go as they pleased, and were asked to adopt practical measures for reducing the number of men in service, and for relieving the wires from the pressure of newspaper work. These consultations at the outbreak of the war were fruitless, and scores of correspondents were sent to South Africa without any attempt on the part of the newspapers to regulate the business of reporting campaign news. With long lines of communication, and with the wires clogged with routine messages required for the movement of troops and the provisioning of a great army, the press dispatches were neglected, held back, condensed and mutilated.

It is not easy to understand what are the political motives for the suppression of news from the seat of war. The government has a well drilled, obedient majority in the Commons, and is supported by the great mass of opinion in the country. There is no revolt against it either on the ministerial side or in the constituencies where bye-elections are held. The opposition is faction-rent and demoralized, and quite incapable of offering strenuous resistance to government policies; and the pro-Boer agitators have made no impression upon public opinion. There is no alternate government possible while the campaign remains in progress, and ministers have no conceivable reason for dreading possible revelations from the seat of war. Some of the incidents which have been suppressed would bear heavily against the advocates of the Dutch cause, both here and on the continent. The Vlakfontein atrocities, for example, if fully confirmed in detail, would tend to alienate the sympathy of irreconcilable radicals and admiring foreigners for the Boers. The fact that the horrible story of the shooting of the wounded has been suppressed for over a month, and left to come out little by little in soldiers' letters to their friends at home, excites suspicion that there may have been drastic measures on the British side in effecting the clearance of various districts and in establishing concentration camps.

WHAT CAUSES DANDRUFF.

Greatest European Authority on Skin Diseases Says It's a Germ.

The old idea was that dandruff is scales of skin thrown off, through a feverish condition of the scalp. Prof. Unna, Hamburg, Germany, European authority on skin diseases, says dandruff is a germ disease. The germ burrows under the scalp, throwing up little scales of cuticle and sapping the vitality of the hair at the root. The only hair preparation that kills dandruff germs is Newbro's Herpicide. "Destroy the cause, you remove the effect." Not only cures dandruff, but stops falling hair and causes a luxuriant growth. Delightful hair dressing.

Gentlemen: Yours of March 25th re catalogue of ship chandlery goods has been received.
We have used a number of the John A. Roebling's steam plow cables, and have found them far superior to the English cables, and at the same time a great deal cheaper; in fact, we sent for some of these cables, and we put a new Roebling and a new Fuller cable on the same set of steam plows, one on each engine, of course, and that was considerably over a year ago. The American cable is much better than the English cable in every way, and today is not nearly as badly worn. We are perfectly satisfied here that the American cables are the best.
We shall certainly bear in mind your stock of goods whenever we need anything in your line.
Very truly,

NEWS OF THE WATERFRONT

The Mohikana's Position Yesterday Causes Some Alarm.

THE PRODIGAL SHIP.

(Home Song of the Petrel.)

There was a ship upon a time,
There was, there was,
She made a trip to a foreign clime,
She did, she did,
They worked her long, they worked her well,
And let her generally go to ——,
'Till for old iron she would not sell,
Sing tral al al al al al a,
Sing tral al al al al al a.

A Survey Board then met and talked
They did, they did,
And over the knotty question balked,
They did, they did,
And then they this opinion gave,
That to send her out upon the wave,
Would send her to a watery grave,
Sing, etc.

The opinion of the Survey was
Of course, ignored,
The Admiral said he knew more about it
Than any board.
He sent her to Cavite slip
And rigged and trigged her for the trip;
He almost made her a clipper ship,
Sing, etc.

He sent to her a captain bold,
He did, he did,
And on her deck put a load of coal,
He did, he did,
He painted her outside nice and white,
But as she was not water tight,
The inside was a —— of a sight.
Sing, etc.

And then he went through all the fleet,
He did, he did,
And picked out the people to put on the Pete,
He did, he did,
He patted the boys all on the back;
Said "Go to 'Frisco by any old track,
But get out of here and don't come back.
Sing, etc.

She started out to go to Japan,
She did, she did,
And around the world this message ran,
It did, it did:
The Petrel's coming over the seas,
She may blow in on any breeze,
The people had better take to the trees.
Sing, etc.

The things she did when she reached Japan,
Were great, were great:
She soon had the people in anything but
A sober state.
She filled their skins all up with rum,
And put them generally on the bum,
Until they were glad she started home.
Sing, etc.

They started in to celebrate
July the Fourth;
Before it was over they found out what The Pete was worth.
When next she goes to Yokohama,
The people will go to spend the summer
Upon the top of Fujiyama.
Sing, etc.

Before she left, the flagship came,
She did, she did,
The Admiral heard of the Petrel's fame,
He did, he did.
Afraid the flagship would not shine
As long as the Pete remained in line,
He fired her out upon the brine.
Sing, etc.

ALARM is felt along the waterfront for the safety of the little Island schooner Mohikana, which went to sea last Saturday afternoon for Maui. Yesterday afternoon she was seen about twenty miles out and sagging over to leeward. She sailed from Honolulu for the Island of Maui, and her appearance on the horizon at sundown last evening standing away over Waianaeward seems to indicate that she is unable to beat over to windward and keep on a general course for her destination. The Mohikana had lots of trouble Saturday in leaving the harbor, narrowly missing both the gunboat Petrel, which was going out, and the gunboat Bennington, which was about to enter the harbor. The little vessel seemed not to answer her helm and drifted into dangerous proximity of both vessels. It is said that she is very foul, and this, together with her general crankiness, seems to have sent her out of her course. She carried a captain and five men. It is probable that unless she is sighted somewhere around the Molokai or Maui coasts this afternoon that she has drifted away to leeward.

Bennington Here Again.

Just at sundown on Saturday the United States gunboat Bennington lowered her flag and anchored in Naval Row after a voyage of fourteen days from Yokohama. The handsome war vessel, which saw considerable service in the Philippines, and has often been in Honolulu harbor, is homeward bound and upon arrival at Mare Island will go out of commission. She is the last of the Asiatic squadron to return home, as the other vessels destined for home ports will be sent via Suez canal. The gunboat will coal here and leave for San Francisco next Wednesday. She carries 154 jackies and marines whose terms of enlistment are about expired, while the officers have concluded their Asiatic service. The officers are: Commander E. K. Moore, Lieut. R. F. Lopez, Lieut. N. A. McCully, Lieut. S. E. Moses, Lieut. G. E. P. Stone, Lieut. G. B. Rice, Lieut. A. Crenshaw, Ensign W. H. Reynolds, Ensign W. C. Asserson, Surgeon R. M. Kennedy, Paymaster G. C. Schafer, Pay Clerk E. C. Griswold.

The Bennington left Honolulu for the Philippines in February, 1899, and a month or two later experienced her first engagement near Malabon, when the jackies, under Captain Taussig, were landed for observation purposes and were attacked by the Filipinos. In this engagement Lieut. Emory Winship, who is a social favorite in Honolulu, was severely wounded, together with several of the crew, and one man was killed. On the day in question the main body of the crew was taken ashore, nearly all the ship's boats being used. Lieut. Winship used the launch "Balango," which formerly belonged to the Spanish squadron. A 37-m.m. gun was mounted in the bow. The landing party also took ashore a gun of like caliber. Near the shore was a group of convent buildings surrounded by a thick, high wall. The entire party, with the exception of sentries, went inside the enclosure where photographs were obtained and some loot secured. The first notice the party had of the presence of Filipinos was the firing of a rifle at a sentry. Captain Taussig's party finally marched toward the shore to take to the boats. As they retreated, the sailors and marines returned the fire of their unseen enemy, who blazed away from the trees. The engagement was at close rifle range. Lieut. Winship and a boat's crew had remained behind in the "Balango," and soon opened fire on the woods with the rapid-fire gun. This action drew the fire of the enemy and a rain of bullets fell around and inside the boat. Notwithstanding the perilous position, the officers continued to cover the retreat of the landing party. Before the column had reached the shore several men in the boat were wounded, one killed, and among others the brave Winship was struck and put out of action. The Bennington upon hearing the sound of battle steamed into seventeen feet of water and shelled the woods, effectually quieting the fire of the Filipinos and giving the crew an opportunity to return safely to the ship. A marine named Surk, and the coxswain, Terry, were wounded before the boat pushed away from the beach. Winship's action on this occasion protected the landing party from being cut up. The Bennington's crew returned, however, with a few relics from the convent, which had been abandoned long before. An old Spanish ball, four inches in diameter at the bottom, was amongst the trophies, while several old oil paintings also found their way to the war vessel. At another time the Bennington's crew co-operated with a military jarty under Major James, at Cebu, where several small engagements were participated in. Of the sailors and jackies who landed at Malabon but few are now on the Bennington.

Dry Docks at Pearl Harbor.

Pearl Harbor drydocks are to be cut out of the solid coral formation encircling the waters of that Naval base. From one of the Naval Officers in Honolulu the report comes that after the location of the proposed drydock is ascertained and the area blocked out, the Naval constructors will rig up a certain class of dredging machinery known as channellers. These are provided with knifelike arrangements which cut into rock in a manner not unlike ice cutters. It is proposed to cut the coral out in solid blocks which in turn will be used in the construction of many of the Naval Station buildings. The work of cutting out the coral will be done in sections until the basin is of the depth to permit the largest battleship in Uncle Sam's Navy to enter. This done the sea end will be provided with a lock system and opened. When the lands around the harbor, now being sued for in the United States District Court of Hawaii on condemnatory proceedings, become available, it is proposed to employ about 400 men there, whose wages will average about $3 a day each. The pay roll will thus amount to about $1,200 or about $365,000 a year, leaving out Sundays and holidays.

The Teachers Depart.

Promptly at noon the transport Thomas got away for Guam and Manila. The rails swarmed with teachers, most of whom were liberally bedecked with leis and boquets. The number of college yells and songs which emanated from various groups on deck indicated how widespread has been the system of selecting instructors for the Philippine service. A number on deck responded gaily, the Wellesley yell being the most prominent, outside of the local institutions. Regretful goodbyes were said, and it was quite evident that most of the young pedagogues would have been satisfied to remain in Hawaii rather than proceed to Manila. Honolulu has undoubtedly profited by the week's stay of the teachers in port, as they were liberal in their use of the mails, sending to their homes in almost every State of the Union, reams of description about the beauties of the Paradise of the Pacific.

An Amusing Incident.

As the transport Thomas was moving out of her slip into the harbor yesterday, the last man on shore, came running down the dock. The only connection between the vessel and the dock was the bow hawser. Nothing daunted, the steward, who was provided with a good-sized jag, took hold of the hemp and began working his way upward. Half way up he gave out and clung to the swaying rope. In this position a black object dropped from his hip pocket. Some thought it was his pocketbook, and expressed regret that it had gone to the bottom of the harbor. Others with keener eyesight saw that it was a bottle filled with liquor. Some of the sailors saw the man's predicament and threw a small line with a noose in the end. The steward calmly inserted one arm and then the other into it, pulled it down to his waist and let go. He swung against the side of the vessel and suffered himself to be drawn to the deck. Spectators on the dock laughed heartily over the incident, but the principal took the situation solemnly.

Aorangi Comes and Goes.

The Aorangi came in from Vancouver on Saturday, late in the afternoon, and departed for the Colonies at 2:30 yesterday morning. She arrived here one day late, owing to delays in the arrival of the English mails at Vancouver. She called at Victoria, leaving there on July 27. For three days westerly and west-northwesterly winds were encountered, after which easterly and east-northeasterly winds were met, until this port was reached. The Moana was passed at 2:50 a.-m., August 2. The Aorangi made a good, fast trip between Victoria and Honolulu, despite her late start. According to the officers, she will "whoop it up" and attempt to arrive at her destination as near schedule time as possible. She carries a number of soldiers of the New Zealand contingent who participated in the Boer war, back to their places of enlistment.

Harbor Mixup.

The little Island schooner Mohikana got cranky Saturday afternoon in the harbor and channel, and literally rubbed noses with the gunboats Petrel and Bennington as the former was getting ready to leave for the Coast, and as the latter was about to enter the narbor. The Petrel stopped in time to avoid a collision with the schooner. When the entrance to the harbor was reached the schooner's sail fluttered for lack of wind, and she sagged over toward the Bennington, which did considerable maneuvering to keep out of the schooner's way. The officers and men of the two gunboats did everything in the language line except praise the little schooner.

Shipping Notes.

Steamer W. G. Hall brought from Kauai yesterday, 1,862 bags sugar, 44 bags rice, 60 bags taro, 7 horses.

Purser Christian makes the following report of sugar on the Island of Kauai awaiting shipment: Koloa, 2,000 bags; Makaweli, 5,000; G. & R., 150; Kekaha, 1,400; V. R., 400; W., 1,100. Total, 10,050 bags.

The steamer Hanalei will leave Makaweli next Wednesday for this port.

The schooner Johnson has all her freight unloaded at Kauai. None of the other Coast schooners have started to discharge yet.

A large scow belonging to the Inter-Island Steamship Company was brought from Hanamaulu to Honolulu on the steamer W. G. Hall yesterday.

This week the Claudine will take the Kinau's run, so that repairs on the latter can be made.

The Claudine's cargo this trip home consisted of 79 sacks of corn, 27 sacks potatoes, 82 sacks taro, 58 hogs, 1 horse, 97 packages sundries.

A load of cattle was brought to Honolulu yesterday on the gasoline schooner Eclipse, from Kona.

On account of the laying-up of the Kinau on the Marine Railway this week the steamer Maui will take the Claudine's run.

The ship St. James is again discharging coal at the Naval dock in the place made vacant by the transport Thomas.

The schooner Expansion has moved over from the stream to the wharves to discharge.

Mahukona shipping the past week is summarized as follows: Departed—July 28, schooner Minnie A. Caine, Orsen, for San Francisco. Cargo, 1,427 tons sugar, 153 hides. Total value, $122,236.54. Hawaii Railroad Co., Ltd., agents. Arrived—July 31, schooner Ida Schnauer, A. Sanderson, twenty-eight days from Port Townsend. Lumber to H. R. Hind.

Purser Beckley, of the Kinau, brought the following report of sugar on hand the past week on the Island of Hawaii: Waiakea Mill, 2,000; Wainaku, 7,800; Onomea, 11,728; Pepeekeo, 5,600; Honomu, 9,341; Hakalau, 13,000; Papaaloa, 3,100; Ookala, 6,500; S. S. Maui, loading; Kukaiau, 3,000; Honokaa, 3,000; Kukuihaele, 200; Paauilo, 2,000; Paauhau, 3,000; S. S. Helene, loading; Punaluu, 5,500; Honuapo, 600.

Cargo of Kinau, arriving August 3: 242 sheep, 107 bags corn, 46 bags taro, 56 pigs, 19 cords wood, 2 horses, 113 pieces koa wood, 60 cases merchandise and 210 packages sundries.

An event of unusual interest took place on board the Inter-Island steamer Mauna Loa Saturday at noon, when Chief Steward Aki celebrated his fifty-second birthday with a dinner to officials of the company and his friends on the steamer and the wharves. Port Steward Frank Costa had charge of the spread, to which all present did ample justice. The dining saloon of the steamer was decorated in a fitting manner, in which potted plants, festoons of maile and other Island flowers played the principal parts. An orchestra was in attendance discoursing music during the dinner. Aki was toasted many times o'er.

Wilder's steamer Lehua starts on her new run tonight at 5 o'clock for Halawa, Pelekuna, Wailau and Kalaupapa. She will return tomorrow. On Wednesday she will sail for Kaanapali, Lahaina and Olowalu, returning on Sunday morning. The Mokolii, which had a portion of the run is now out of service.

The Philadelphia's crew had boat practice yesterday in the harbor and channel.

The sentry watch on the Naval dock at which the "Phillie" is lying, is as cautious after dark as if a war was in progress. The marines have orders to prevent any one from walking across the dock after nightfall, and the sharp command of "Halt!" is given the instant one not a sailor puts in an appearance on the edge of the dock.

The Bennington's sailors were not given shore leave yesterday on account of orders received from headquarters affecting the health of the men.

Few People Realize

That their hair is sick when it shows signs of falling and that in its feeble way it is crying for nourishment. If your hair is falling or dry or turning gray, or if the scales of dandruff are continually falling like snow from your scalp, it is very evident that it is not enjoying good health; therefore the only intelligent thing to do is to treat it.

PACHECO'S DANDRUFF KILLER quickly cleanses the scalp of all humors and dandruff, it arrests the fall and imparts a healthy, natural color to the hair. It is scientifically compounded and is the result of many years of experience and study of the diseases of the human scalp.

DON'T WANT TO LEARN

Natives Not Anxious to Study Our Language.

NIGHT SCHOOLS ARE ABOLISHED

The Adult Japanese and Chinese Monopolize the Schools.

Superintendent Atkinson, who was among the first and most earnest advocates of night schools for the purpose of teaching native Hawaiians the English language, is now just as firmly opposed to that institution, and on his motion at Saturday's meeting of the Board the night schools were abolished. The Hawaiians are not seeking a knowledge of the English language, is the statement made by the Superintendent, and the schools have been turned into free training schools for Japanese and Chinese, who now monopolize the instruction and teachers. The Asiatics at least are anxious to obtain a knowledge of the language of the Islands, but the Board of Education is of the opinion that they should be made to pay for such instruction.

"I was an earnest advocate of the night school," said Mr. Atkinson, in presenting the matter to the Board, "but the schools are not doing what they should. We hoped for a large attendance of Hawaiians, but they did not materialize, and during the year have only averaged from eleven to sixteen. For the first three months they did very well, and showed much interest in the facilities placed at their disposal, but at the end of that time all interest was lost and the attendance has dwindled almost to nothing. On the other hand, the Chinese and Japanese were quick to take advantage of the offer of free instruction in English, and now comprise the entire school. The most of them are adults, and I cannot see why we should provide the Asiatics with education at no expense to them. The average attendance for the last month has been 173 Japanese, 66 Chinese, 42 Portuguese and but sixteen Hawaiians.

"The expense of conducting these schools has been considerable, not only in the cost of supplying teachers, but also for extra janitor service; the cost of lighting is also very heavy.

"There is generally friction also between the pupils who attend the day schools and those who go at night. Books are lost or missing, and the day pupils blame the night scholars. I have felt for some time that the night schools were not going along the lines originally planned by the Board, and in view of that fact I think they should be abolished.

"The plan was also tried of separating the schools, it being complained that the buildings were located so as to be difficult of access to the majority of Hawaiians, and on that plea we tried putting them in different parts of town. This plan did not prove the success anticipated, and did not result in any material increase in attendance. Employment has been provided for all the teachers at the night schools to whom positions are due from the Board, and I suggest that a motion would be in order not to reopen the night schools."

On motion of Mrs. Jordan this action was taken and the night schools will not be reopened.

WE ARE NOT CIVILIZED FOR THIS ALABAMA PULPITEER

The following letter from a negro preacher in Alabama to one of his former flock now at Spreckelsville, is printed verbatim. From it the public will draw the disappointing knowledge that the writer will not be with us in Hawaii "until the light of Americal civilization has illuminations lighted up the who Islands."

Constitutional Convention Chamber.
Montgomery, Ala., July 2, 1901.

Mr. S. W. Wiggins. Spreckelsville, Maui, H. I.

My dear friend and Brother,

I am the happy recipitant of your kind favor of June 2nd. Words alone are too inaduquate to express my feeling. I am so glad to hear from you, and to know that you were as you said, "Well and doing well" If in your letter there was one sintance noted above all others certainly it was to know that you were as above stated Well and doing well. Still there has been so many rumors afloat, that the Negro, is so badly treated over there, is this true? I understand that every letter sent from there is inspected and if it gives the facts of things over there, the inspectors are not pleased with it, it can not come. Do you know this to be true, I am not thinking of coming out there now, nor until the light of Americal civilization has illuminations lighted up the who Islands.

I want you to write me a letter that I may read to our people in church, giving the true conditions of things there. It may be that there will be thousands to leave this country for some port, bu I can not say when they will go. The Constitutional Convention is stil in session thy have not come to a final point as to what thy will do with the negro.

I should like much to have went with you all to this country of yours, not to stay but to do as Dr. Nesbitt did to go and return I am determing to die upon American soil. I mean within a reasonable distance of my homestead. I am glad that you did not play truant I am glad that you complyed with your promis, for God's Choice blessings rests upon those who are faithful to their trust. God bless you and yor family.

Bro Wiggins, I trust that while you are out there, you will establish an A. M. E. church there, God will assist in any efford which you may put forth in this direction. I let Bro. Johnson See your letter he told me that he rec'd one from you Also, I told him About the 50c and I presume that he will attend It the Chuch is doing about as well as could be expected. It has and is very hot here about now Governor Samford died, the Pres't of the Senate, W. D. Jelks, is Gov. now. Many of your friends join me in tender regards to you. How is Miss Nellie Singleton Give her my regords as well as all of our people who are there Rember that we in this life may expect disappointments but in that other world, we shall have none. Many God bless you all.

Yor friend & Bro
GEO. W. DOAK.

AVERTING A SARCASM.

"You seem very self-satisfied today," said Miss Cayenne.

"Yes," answered Willie Wishington, "but don't let that influence. Everybody says I've got dreadfully poor taste."

The Slopes of Punchbowl.

The slopes of Punchbowl are becoming more and more the favorite residence portion of the city; this is not to be wondered at, as a drive through the newly graded upper streets will demonstrate. The elevation gives an atmosphere noticeably cooler and more invigorating than that of the lowland in which the city proper is situated, and the beautiful view of Honolulu's coral-reefed harbor alone more than compensates one for the slight inconvenience of climbing the incline. Within a few weeks the new electric line will overcome the only objection to Punchbowl as a residence site, and those who have been fortunate to secure residence lots in the upper district will have the most desirable location in the city. The elevation renders the residents free from the danger of malarial fevers, and the combination of the healthful and the beautiful will attract many others to the slopes, which are already well covered with handsome residences surrounded by terraced lawns, and the limited number of lots left will soon be at a high premium.

A MELANCHOLY OPINION.

"I see that the managers are now playing Shakespeare's works," said the casual observer.

"No," answered Mr. Stormington Barnes. "There's no art in it. They are merely working Shakespeare's plays."

IT LOOKS SERIOUS.

PACIFIC UNION OIL CO.

Located in the Famous Coalinga Oil Fields of California.

Proven oil lands, completely surrounded by as rich oil producing wells as there are in the State, yielding from 50 to 250 barrels per day.

Contract prices for oil at the Coalinga wells, 70 cents per barrel.

With twenty-five producing wells of 100 barrels each per day, you can make your own calculation as to profits.

The oil industry in California is in its infancy, yet many fortunes have been made by judicious and lucky investments in oil stock. Many more will be made in the near future.

The average advance on original sales of oil stock in twenty leading companies in California has been from $1 to $108 per share.

Oil lands have advanced from $1.25 to $1,000 and $2,000 per acre.

When the Pacific Union Oil Company has a number of producing wells on its property, its stock will have the same show for even a greater advance, as some oil stock has advanced from $1 to $1,500 per share.

The Pacific Union Oil Company has no salaried officers, and is controlled by well known gentlemen of integrity, who will see that the money derived from the sale of stock will be legitimately applied to the development of its property.

For further information, apply to J. H. FISHER & CO., Stock and Bond Brokers, and Hawaiian agents for the sale of a limited amount of Pacific Union Oil Company stock. Stangenwald building, Merchant street.

This is the time of year when bright suns, stiff winds and flying dust remind us that we have EYES.

If the verdant hues of Nature's attire do not bring ease to tired eyes after work, be sure it is not a case for Nature's cure, but rather one for glasses.

Many who complain of the bright sun hurting their eyes never pause to think the trouble lies in their eyes, not the blessed sunlight.

THE NEWS OF MAUI

What is Doing in the Isle of Vales.

THE MAKAWAO LITERARY SOCIETY

Old Cane Fields Burn—Crude Oil for Spreckelsville—Kihei and Nahiku Plantations.

MAUI, Aug. 3—Last evening, the 2d, the August meeting of the Makawao Literary Society took place at the pretty residence of Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Baldwin, of Hamakuapoko. It was a most agreeable social affair, as it surely should have been, for, as is customary, eighty or a hundred people came from miles around upon sociability bent.

The following program, for the most part of a musical nature, was much appreciated:

1. Piano Duet, Mesdames S. E. Damon and H. A. Baldwin.
2. Song, "Kentucky Babe," with banjo accompaniment, by Miss Huntington.
3. Recitation, Miss Eva Smith.
4. Vocal Solo, Mrs. Otis.
5. A Talk Upon the Relations of Insects to Plants, by D. D. Baldwin.
6. Piano Solo, Mrs. H. A. Baldwin.
7. Reading, "Mr. Dooley upon Christian Science," by W. E. Beckwith.
8. Song, "Annie Laurie," Mrs. Otis.

The singing of "Annie Lurie" by Mrs. Otis, of Honolulu, was by far the most pleasurable event of the entertainment, though the whole program was excellently given. Among the summer visitors present were Mesdames Otis, Augur, S. E. Damon, J. P. Cooke, D. B. Murdock, Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Richards, Misses Kimball, Walker and Barlow, and Mr. Ricker.

OLD CANE FIELDS AFIRE.

The burning of old cane fields at Waikapu has lighted up Central Maui most brilliantly during two evenings of the past week.

WILL BURN CRUDE OIL.

After the present stock of coal on hand has been exhausted, Spreckelsville plantation will change their furnaces, and burn crude oil for fuel. By this change they expect to save 66 2-3 per cent. The cost of the proposed change is very small in comparison with the great saving of fuel. The plantation has six large pumps, in addition to their mill, which consume coal for their power, so this innovation means much to the H. C. & S. Co.

KIHEI'S BIG PUMP.

At Kihei the plantation people are putting in another gigantic pump—the second one—in their deep shaft. All the necessary machinery is now on the ground. It is stated that the pump now in daily operation consumes 1,000 tons of coal per month. The new pump which is of the same size, will probably demand the same amount of fuel. If Kikei will also follow the example of Louisiana planters in regard to the use of oil as fuel, they, as well as Spreckelsville, will make a great saving.

NAHIKU PLANTATION.

The Nahiku Sugar Company is to be reorganized. The old corporation is to be merged into a new one. On what basis—just how—is not at present given out. Messrs. J. P. Cooke and H. A. Baldwin, with a party of Honolulu business men, visited Nahiku by Wednesday's Claudine, to make a permanent decision in the matter.

THE SUMMIT HOUSE.

Recent visitors to Craigielea, the tip-top house on Haleakala, report the building to be in a most dilapidated condition. The wind has blown away most of the iron from the roof, the remainder being kept in place by stones, and some most thoughless people have torn up the floor and pulled down the closet, using the lumber for firewood. Inasmuch as the walls are thick and strongly made of stone, they are still in good condition.

LOOKS LIKE A TOWN.

Camp 5, Spreckelsville, is fast assuming a town-like aspect. The mammoth mill, with its two 180-foot smokestacks, and the framework of its four high stories; the large two-story clubhouse, sometimes called Hotel Renwick, in compliment of its housekeeper; the roomy office, two stories high, recently completed; the new and pretty Catholic church, not to mention a multitude of smaller plantation houses, all contribute to impress the observer. It is very easy to prophesy that Camp 5 will some day annex the seaport village of Kahului, and together they will form the largest and most popular city on Maui.

Blackberries are ripening in large quantities at Olinda, and akalas and and ohelloes are plentiful on the slopes of Haleakala.

GENERAL NOTES.

During Saturday evening, July 27th, Miss Hons, of Wailuku, gave an "at home." A large number of Wailuku friends were present. The veranda and pretty lanai were brilliantly lighted with Japanese lanterns. There was fine music during the early part of the evening, and dancing during the later hours.

Maui plantation men, despite of the prevailing scarcity of labor and the high wages demanded, are feeling jubilant concerning the fact that every steamer from the Orient for some time to come will bring at least 200 Japanese laborers.

On the afternoon of the 27th there were tennis and polo games at Sunnyside grounds, Paia.

On the 25th of July Mabel Taylor, the daughter of S. E. Taylor, of Hamakuapoko, fell from a mango tree, breaking her arm in three places.

Italians and Porto Ricans are the principal attendants at the new church near Puunene mill.

Today James Kirkland, manager of the Kahului store, will depart for a month's business visit to San Francisco. He will purchase a new stock of goods, including Christmas novelties.

During the week Messrs. King and Faxon, of the California Feed Company, visited Wailuku, Makawao, Waikapu and other places. Their trip was one of pleasure, combined with business.

Mrs. J. P. Cooke and four children arrived by Wednesday's steamer, and are at Haiku.

Rev. Alex. Mackintosh and Dr. Cofer, chief of the United States quarantine department of Honolulu, made a circuit of Wailuku, Makawao and Lahaina districts during the week. They will take a return steamer from Lahaina next Tuesday.

Mr. Theodore Richards is at Puuomalei, Makawao, for a month's vacation.

Leslie Scott is employed in the office at Kihei.

Dr. Dinegar, of Kihei, visits Spreckelsville twice a week since the departure of Dr. Stith for the Mainland.

By today's steamer Miss Hall, who has been visiting at Hamakuapoko, departs for the Coast: Misses Lottie Baldwin and Walker return to Berkeley, and Mrs. S. E. Damon to her home in Honolulu.

Weather: Light showers from the sea.

Wailuku Plantation.

On Tuesday of this week, the Wailuku Plantation finished its season's run with a total output of 8,100 tons, the largest season's yield on record for this plantation. The yield would have been larger still had the labor been available for stripping cane.—Maui News.

The Government Benefits.

Three years ago there was only one place in Woiluku where liquor could legally be bought and sold, and today there are six such places, and yet as a matter of fact there is not any more drunkenness if as much now as there was then. The only difference is that there is not so much illicit liquor made or sold now as then, and the Government gets the benefit of the changed condition of affairs, in the bargain.—Maui News.

Spreckelsville Mill.

The Spreckelsville mill is still running, and it will probably take two months longer to finish grinding this year's crop. The output to date is about 18,000 tons, and there is yet about 9,000 tons to be run, making the total output of the Spreckelsville for the season 27,000 tons. The yeild would have been larger but for the heavy kona storms of the past winter, which destroped or injured quite an area of cane. There is now no scarcity of labor on Spreckelsville plantation, and planting for the new crop is well under headway. Assistant Manager B. H. Baldwin has taken charge of the plantation during the absence of Manager Lowrie, and Senator H. P. Baldwin will make his home at Spreckelsville during Manager Lowrie's absence and generally supervise the management of the plantation.—Maui News.

Fruit for School Children.

Many years since a gentleman prominent in educational circles in California came to the Islands and became a prominent educator. Some seventeen years years ago he was assigned to the Wailuku school, and realizing the importance of planting fruit trees on Maui, he planted a number of mango, orange and alligator pear trees in the schoolhouse yard. Today he sleeps his last, long peaceful sleep in the Wailuku cemetery, and the grove of trees, loaded with fruit, stands as a beautiful monument to his memory, and in commemoration of his kindly thoughfulness. This is a silent but eloquent appeal to the people of Wailuku to emulate his example for the benefit of those who are to come hereafter. Had others emulated his example at the time, Wailuku would today be rich in fruits for home consumption, with plenty to ship to the Honolulu market.—Maui News.

H. B. Gehr Seeks A. B. Loebenstein's Scalp.

HILO STATESMAN WIELDS A CLUB

A Warlike Correspondence Between Two Men in the Rival Hilo Newspapers.

Editor Hilo Herald: The letter of Mr Loebenstein, published in the Hilo Tribune of July 26th, whether expressing his own views or those of another, who is not willing to speak for himself, and whose pliant tool Mr. Loebenstein appears to be, has the refreshing merit of being an open expression of enmity which has hitherto found vent only through cowardly methods and anonymous channels.

Mr. Loebenstein makes no attempt to reply to the statements published in the Herald of the 24th of July as emanating from me, but inasmuch as he has seen fit to interfere in a matter which in no way concerned him, I now deem it my privilege to correct an erroneous impression that might be gained by his letter by one unacquainted with his record, even though the language of his letter, and especially the footnote to the same, should be a sufficient indication of the spirit that prompted it.

Mr. Loebenstein has never, to my knowledge, claimed any personal indebtedness from me, and he does so now only inferentially and in ambiguous language, a fault which I shall endeavor to avoid.

Mr. Loebenstein prepared a tracing from a government map and a supposed legal description of certain lands acquired by the Kohala and Hilo Railway Co. at Waiakea. As the result of his efforts was incorrect, it will be necessary to have the work done over again by a competent man, and this fact is easily demonstrable. After consultation with men of his profession and others, I am of the opinion that no reputable surveyor on the Islands would ask more than fifty (50) dollars for this service, even were it correctly performed. For the work done by Mr. Loebenstein he rendered to the Kohala and Hilo Railway Co. a bill for the sum of one thousand (1000) dollars, and when objection was made by me to the attempted extortion, Mr. Loebenstein informed me that if the bill were not paid he would "soak the ... and H. R'y Co. hard when he got into the Legislature."

The force of this blackmailing proposition was dissipated last November, after the ballots were counted.

I now regret that I did not take Mr. Loebenstein seriously and at his word when, at his request and by appointment, I called upon him one Sunday morning in Honolulu, at the time the ... and H. R'y franchise was under consideration by the government, at which time and place he told me that he (Loebenstein) "was a —— —— rascal, and to look out for him, as he would get the best of me if he could."

Let the person mentioned in Mr. Loebenstein's letter, "of whose hospitality he (I) was the recipient, etc.," himself come forward in an attempt to be a man and speak for himself, and then the statement will merit attention and receive a full and prompt reply.

Whether or not, through any fault of mine, I have "forfeited the support, financial and moral, of local interests," is a question upon which Mr. Loebenstein, speaking either for himself or as the facile underling of another, is not competent to pass judgment. I leave a decision upon that question to be rendered by those with whom in the past I have had and now have business dealings.

The above may serve to convince Mr. Loebenstein that insofar as he, at least, is concerned, the scene on the court house lawn, by him so graphically pictured, should have represented me as facing my opponent, as this has been my position during my three years' residence on the Islands, and it will be in the future, whoever my opponent may be.

HERBERT B. GEHR.

Hilo, T. H., July 29, 1901.

MR. LOEBENSTEIN REPLIES.

Editor Tribune: Again has my whilom friend, the president of the Kohala-Hilo R. R. Co., seen fit to kick over the traces and once more is a long-suffering public condemned to act as spectator in the drama entitled "How Not to Pay One's Bills," with a change in the cast, the curtain rising this time depicting Gehr, him the president of the Kohala and Hilo R. R. Co., pouring out the vials of his deadly wrath on poor Loebenstein—Waxfield having been done up.

So that the sanguinary spectacle of a battle or l'outrance between the president of the Cholera and I. O. U. R. R. Co. and his wicked detractors, predicted by the wicked Loebenstein, was not merely a figment of the imagination, but promises to resolve itself into a positive fact, the tragedy of honors, the curtain falling on the final scene, representing Pay-no-Bills Gehr in an attitude of victory over his prostrate enemies—among them the hated Waxfield and the wicked Loebenstein, brandishing aloft before their glazing eyes the prospectus of the new Maulua plantation and a large batch of unpaid bills.

Now there did exist in the public's mind a lurking suspicion that the wicked Loebenstein did not say his prayers each morning by 8 of the clock, and that the innocent and guileless Gehr, with his large batch of unpaid bills, was no match to him called Loebenstein, who now by his own words does he stand condemned, thus saith the guileless Gehr, with his large batch of unpaid bills and the public always believes the guileless Gehr.

But, Mr. Gehr, you have shirked the issue. Hard words break no bones. The public is not interested in your chronicling of private feuds, it cares little for your opinion of either this or that individual, it does not ask and it cares less whether or not you have identified yourself with plantation development schemes, with seeking to forcel your R. R. location to tap the Maulua Settlement Association lots of which you were the deus ex machina, or other feather brained schemes which never materialized. It simply expects and demands that you dig up.

It may be that the wicked Loebenstein has imposed upon your credulity and sell you a gold brick. That remains to be seen and can be fought out in another arena. But "there are others" upon whom the gaze of the wicked Loebenstein rests as did the Peri's on the outer gates of Paradise for this year there is weeping and wailing and gnashing of teeth from Dan to Bersheba—beg pardon from Hilo to Kohala. There is scarcely a single merchant doing business to any extent between these two points (the latter) who does not gaze with anxious eyes and beating heart on your unpaid account. The Squator and I. O. U. R. R. has not paid one cent of rent for lands leased to them in good faith, lands which could never have been secured but through the mediation of the wicked Loebenstein whom the guileless Gehr proposes to gerrymander.

In srort you have antagonized, you have throttled, you have miserably miscarried and stamped as a failure a project which administered and directed by other hands than yours would long since have proven an unqualified success.

So that in parting I would merely renew my former admonition: Pay your bills.

A. B. LOEBENSTEIN.

Raising Good Cane.

Puako Plantation, which was started near Kawaihae about fourteen months ago, is making a good showing under the management of Mr. Vredenberg. Samples of cane brought from there this week show excellent growth, the sticks running eighteen feet long and having six to eight inch joints. The samples are of cane planted a year ago. The two pumps are doing excellent work and the quality of the water is fairly good.—Hilo Herald.

Japanese Injured.

Two Japanese riding rapidly in opposite directions on Waianuenue street yesterday morning collided with serious results. Both were thrown off and one sustained injuries on the head that rendered him unconscious. He was taken to the hospital, where an examination by Dr. R. H. Reid disclosed a fracture of the inner plate of the skull. An effort was made to raise the bone with but partial success. Indications point to internal injuries, and the physician has little hope of his recovery. The injured man is a cane planter, residing in Kaumana, near Gamalieson's place.—Hilo Herald.

Federal Jury Pay.

Some change should be made in the compensation of Federal jurors in this Territory or the mileage allowance. Citizens who go to Honolulu tomorrow as jurors are not allowed enough as mileage to pay their cabin passage on the Kinau and as they are obliged to wait in Honolulu for several days before court opens they are under expense without any returns coming in. When the schedule of jury fees and mileage was arranged it is not likely that the Kinau was taken into consideration. In the States the distance can be made on the railways for about two cents a mile, here it is about ten cents. Under the present understanding each juror from Hilo is out of pocket something like twenty-three dollars, independent of whatever loss is incurred by him by his absence from business.—Hilo Herald.

THE MAILS DELAYED.

The Volcano House as a General Detaining Depot.

Kau, Hawaii, July 29, 1901.

Editor Advertiser: Through the columns of your paper the residents of this district desire to register a kick regarding the aggravating manner in which the postal authorities are handling the mails. The foreign mail that arrived in Honolulu on the 16th was detained in Hilo thirty-six hours, and was then forwarded to the Volcano House, where it was held for thirty-six hours more before being forwarded, or a delay of three days more than the time required. Then again the mail that arrived in Honolulu on the 24th was sent to the Hamakua coast on the 25th, when our direct steamer Mauna Loa left for our ports on the 26th. Our citizens were naturally disgruntled when they found we were minus our mail, and our local postmaster kept the telephone hot till at last a "wee small voice" said there was a bag of local mail at the great detaining station (the Volcano House). Upon thorough investigation, however, it proved to be the missing bag, and by sending a special messenger, it was received by us late in the evening, some thirty odd hours later than if it had come by our regular steamer, and had not a special been sent for it we would have had to wait two days longer. It seems to us that a little interest should be felt in towns outside of Hilo and Honolulu, and if the mail agents here are not doing their duty they should be made to, and if the arrangements are faulty they should be corrected. It would be a first rate plan for the authorities in Honolulu to take a little pains to learn where a steamer is bound before throwing mail aboard.

The king is dead; long live the king. The new power on the local diamond is the Honolulu Athletic Club, which by winning the championship on Saturday established, in its first season, an undisputable claim to supremacy among the other city nines. On Saturday's exhibition the Stars must be relegated to the limbo of Charlie Mitchell and the baseball giants, now decrepit, of yesteryear.

The two clubs have cut a victorious swath in the league games this season, neither until Saturday having lost a game. The Stars, basking in the deceiving glamor of former greatness, were supremely confident of success, and their overweening confidence was so infectious that when the game was called the black and whites had legions of backers. The Athletics were by no means sanguine of victory but were determined to do or die. The kanakas were with them to a man and a wad of haole money was placed on the red and whites simply on account of the grit and enterprise shown by the club in the season of its inception, and belief in the old saying that nothing succeeds like success.

Long before the time announced for the game a great crowd had assembled at Punahou and by the time of the third inning fully two thousand people were in attendance. Old-timers remarked that it was the biggest baseball crowd that Honolulu has ever seen. Among the spectators, prior to the game, opinions were freely expressed that the Stars were unfortunate in not having been able to secure a stronger pitcher than Babbitt. Many of the spectators did not hesitate to criticize the condition of more than one of the Star players, and, whereas the Stars had been firm favorites in town when the game was called it was an even break as far as favoritism was concerned.

The game was bitterly contested until the sixth inning, when the score was two all. It looked up to the seventh, as if the score would be kept down wonderfully. The Stars retained Babbitt just an inning too long and it in great measure lost them the game. In the seventh the Athletics scored at their own sweet will and accumulated nine runs. In this they were materially assisted by errors on the part of Davis and Bowers. The former was palpably out of condition and seems to have forgotten all that he may ever have known about the game.

Morris Keohokalole and H. Whitney, Jr., officiated as umpires and their work was a revelation to those unfortunate enough to have witnessed the alleged umpiring of former league games. What they said went, and that their work was satisfactory is best attested by the fact that not a word of dispute was voiced during the entire game. The best of order prevailed and the game was unmarked by the offensive ribaldry which has done so much to dispopularize baseball in Honolulu.

The Athletics opened the ball futilely and when their opponents' turn came they got one of their members home and joy sprouted in the hearts of their supporters.

The clubmen evened matters up in the second, thanks to loose fielding, and the Stars were retired for the proverbial goose egg.

In the third the Athletics' efforts were again brought to naught and the Stars secured a lead of one. The Athletics came back with another in the fourth, tieing the score, and the fifth and sixth proved barren.

At this juncture a young lady in the crowd remarked to her escort that the Athletics were her favorites on account of their nice clean suits.

"Oh, that don't count," replied the young man, who wore black and white ribbons in the lapel of his coat; "they never played ball before and their suits haven't had to be washed."

In the seventh Babbitt went to pieces and it was good-bye Stars. A three-bagger, a two-bagger, stolen bases and singles fell out of the box with grace and promptitude, and Davis and Bowers did all in their power to help the good thing along. The score at the close of the eventful seventh was, H. A. C., 11; Stars, 4. The clubmen stood a good show of adding another run or two to their total in the seventh had not Dayton lapsed into somnolence at first base and his slumbers been rudely disturbed by the Star custodian.

When the Athletics retired in the seventh the club choir rendered "The Stars Were Chasing the Ball Around the Field." The selection was vigorously applauded.

It was "all off" with the Stars. Al. Castle, the old Oahu College boy, supplanted Babbitt, and Davis, who played worse as he grew older, was shifted from first to third, but it was like searching the wharf after the opium is hidden under the boards in Ah Sing's rotisserie.

The two nines each annexed a single in the eighth and both eggs failing to hatch in the concluding act, the Stars set and the Athletics went to town in hacks.

The correct score of the game, which differs materially from that kept by the official scorer, is as follows:

DIAMOND DUST.

"Who are, who are, who are we?
"We are, we are, H. A. C."

The Honolulu Athletics achieved a notable distinction by winning the championship the first time out.

Al. Moore was in the game with a game leg.

It is safe to bet that the President's cup was appropriately christened on Saturday night.

Gorman, as usual, was seen to advantage both behind the bat and in "bull con."

Babbitt was good while he lasted.

Three old Oahu College boys played for the Stars.

Castle's work with the ball made a good impression with the crowd.

Jimmy Williams at short played brilliantly and is in the front rank of the home talent.

Safe-placed hits were few and far between on Saturday.

Lewis is an artist of no mean order with the stick.

Kaanoi, Brown, Lewis and Hansman were responsible for some beautiful catches.

It is said that the Athletics have a strong football team in sight.

A game between the champions and a picked nine will be worth patronizing Pain's street-car service to witness.

DRINK GOOD COFFEE AND HELP A CHILD

About a year and a half ago I opened a home in Kona, on the Island of Hawaii, for orphans and other needy children. I now have twenty children to feed, clothe and educate. I am dependent largely on the coffee raised at this home for the support of the children. I have on hand the crops for three years past. I have just opened the Kona coffee store on Fort street near King, telephone Blue 1621. No. 1 Kona coffee, fresh roasted and ground to order, delivered to any part of town or Waikiki. Call at the store or order by 'phone. Help support a needy child by helping yourself to a delicious coffee.

GRAND AND TRIAL JURORS SUMMONED

August Term of Circuit Court Begins Today—1000 Acre Case Continued.

The grand and trial juries for the August term will appear in court this morning, and the business of the new term will be taken up by Judge Gear. The matter of chief interest will probably be the charge to the Grand Jury, which, it is expected, will begin immediately upon the consideration of the cases of the half dozen prisoners who were released on habeas corpus, and immediately re-arrested for their old crimes by Sheriff Brown.

The Grand Jury was drawn by Bailiff Hopkins, and is composed as follows:

John Adams Baker, Charles Notley, George Parmalee Castle, Charles Spencer Crane, William Montrose Graham, John H. Wise, James Erskine Fullerton, John Harry Soper, Frank Pratt McIntyre, Robert A. C. Peterson, Frank H. Armstrong, Frederick Joseph Church, John Crowder, Henry R. Macfarlane, Frederick John Cross, Albert Andrews Wilson, William Saffery Wond, James A. Low, Prince David Kawananakoa, Frederick Martin Lewis, Charles Thomas Wilder, Lemuell Clark Abels, Horace Joseph Pratt, Nathaniel Sanders Sachs.

The trial jury was served by Bailiff Ellis, and is made up of the following:

J. B. Atherton, F. W. Beardslee, W. A. Baldwin, Henry Buchanan, Isaac L. Cockett, Oscar Cox, S. M. Damon, B. F. Dillingham, Robert W. Davis, W. F. Irving, Antone Fernandez, E. S. Holt, W. W. Hall, E. K. Hanapi, D. K. Hoopili, Frank Harvey, P. C. Jones, Joseph Kunewa, George Kekauoha, Thomas Krouse, J. A. Legros, R. C. Lane, David Lawrence, J. A. McCandless, George Nawaakoo, B. Naukana, A. W. Pearson, D. B. Renear, Mark P. Robinson, W. C. Rowell, G. F. Renton, James Spencer, W. J. White, John S. Walker, Joseph Zablan.

GOVERNMENT MAY INTERFERE.

In the case of Atherton vs. the Wahiawa Sugar Co., in Circuit Court Saturday, Attorney Dunne appeared in response to the request of Judge Gear on behalf of the United States, relative to the thousand acre clause, which the plaintiff is alleged to be violating, and asked a continuance until he could communicate with the United States Attorney General at Washington. The plaintiffs objected to the delay of thirty days as asked by Mr. Dunne, claiming that the rights of the Government would not be impaired, no matter what the outcome of the present case. Judge Gear granted the continuance.

COURT NOTES.

Suit has been entered in the Circuit Court by Victoria S. Buffandeau vs. A. A. Montano of Monoa, for the partition of land in Manoa in which she holds two thirds interest, and the defendant one-third. The property in question is largely taro land.

Grateful Chinese Workman.

There is one Chinese in Honolulu who is full of thanks and gratitude, and that is Chi Kan, who is just out of the hospital, where he has been for several weeks past, suffering from a severe fracture of the right leg. Chi is a very hard worker, for the reason that he has in China an old father and mother who live by his exertions. While working at Moanalua he was knocked down by a mule cart and the wheel passing over his leg, the fracture was the result. Mr. Samuel Damon, for whom he was working, was informed of the accident, and had the unfortunate Chinese sent to the hospital, where he has been cared for until his convalescence. During all this time Chi Kan has been easy in mind for his wages have been going on just the same. He has been constantly visited by Mr. Frank Damon, and kept supplied with all that is good for him, so that he now leaves the hospital with much gratitude and many thanks to his benefactor.

At last reports the steel combine was about to invoke the assistance of the United States courts by injunction against strikes.

The steamship St. Paul arrived at San Francisco from Nome last week, with two and a half million dollars.

OFFICE OF CARROLL WHITAKER, ATTORNEY,
Hilo Hawaii.

Hilo, Hawaii, June 7, 190[illegible]

Dear Sirs—In my innocence I purchased here in Hilo a jar of your

PIN-MONEY PICKLES

(put up by Mrs. E. G. Kidd, Richmond, Virginia.)

It brought me great trouble, and of three things must occur:

1. You must stop making them;
2. I must get them at less expense;
3. I'm a ruined man.

Since my first venture I've had many "jars." My family from early morning "Pickles;" neighbors ring the door bell and shout "Pickles;" relatives write me in expectation of "Pickles." Your pickels are my Nemesis. Please, dear sirs, quote them by the keg, barrel, hogshead, ton or shipload, and "preserve" me. Yours very truly,

CARROLL WHITAKER.
