LIFE.

Why should youth always be sighing,
While nature's replete with her charms,
And Time's with his hour-glass flying
Around us to spread his alarms?

Let us look at each grain of the sand,
As a year to be spent without sorrow,
And glide through this life hand in hand,
And dream not of cares on the morrow.

Let's away, to some shade where are flowers,
Where nature's sweet choristers sing,—
There whisper of joys to be ours,
While happiness through the woods ring.

We'll breathe the sweet fragrance together,
That's wafted from emblems of love,
And sip from the goblet our measure
Of joys that are shed from above.

Thus live, unalloyed by the hand
Of "dull care," who each moment oft follows,
To mix with that portion of sand,
A few moments of life's bitter sorrows.

And while Time with his sickle is mowing
The years as they pass o'er each head,
We'll weep not for age that is growing,
But tears of pure joy we will shed.

Then away! to some wild shady bower,
And 'neath its broad leafy retreat,
We'll rob the gay dew-drops each hour,
Of their joys,—as they fall by our feet.

Oh! what happiness yet can be had,
And given to those who will prove
As faithful as He who created,
Our forms for devotions love.

VIOLETTE.

Honolulu, January, 1861.

VARIETY.

A woman who wants a charitable heart wants a pure heart.

The heart is a book which we ought not to tear in our hurry to get at its contents.

Many are willing enough to wound who are yet afraid to strike.

It is the work of a philosopher to be every day subduing his passions and laying aside his prejudices.

It is the best proof of the virtues of a family circle to see a happy fireside.

He that thinks himself the happiest man really is so; but he that thinks himself the wisest is generally the greatest fool.

"Tom, what in the world put matrimony into your head?"

"Well, the fact is, I was getting short of shirts."

The surest way to prevail on a young couple to get married, is to oppose them. Tell them you "would rather see them in their graves," and twelve months after their baby will pass you twice a day in a willow wagon.

Some things come by odd names. The most uncommon quality in man is called "common sense;" a paper half a mile long is a "brief;" and a melancholy ditty, devoid of sense or meaning, is a "glee."

Button your coat to the chin when a proud man flatters you. His assaults upon your understanding betray a design upon your pockets or principles.

Some people carry their hearts in their heads; very many carry their heads in their hearts. The great difficulty is to keep them apart, and yet keep both actively working together.

There is an anecdote of an editor of old times, who, when he was short of matter, or grudged the labor of typesetting requisite to put it into print, used to send out his paper with one side or page entirely blank, merely drawing his subscribers' attention to the fact by a note—"This space will be very useful for the children to write upon."

How inferior are men in moral qualities to the animal creation! For example, let a bird discover a store of seeds or fruit, and the foolish thing goes and tells of his good fortune, and all the birds in the neighborhood flock to enjoy it. Even a little ant will bring his whole tribe to feast upon a newly-discovered dainty. But let a man discover a mine of gold, or any kind of valuable treasure, and he will keep it to himself as long as possible, and take the greatest care to conceal it from others.

Pure Air.—Another great fallacy is the dread of night air. What air can we breathe at night but night air? The choice is between pure night air from without, and foul night air from within. Most people prefer the latter. An open window most nights in the year can never hurt any one. In great cities, night air is often the best and purest air to be had in the twenty-four hours. One of our highest medical authorities on consumption and climate has told me that the air in London is never so good as after ten o'clock at night.—Florence Nightingale's Notes on Nursing.

American "Aristocracy."—Heroes of the Revolution.—It may be a consolation to "stuck-up people," whose great boast is that they have never been engaged in any useful employment, to be told of the following facts:—

Washington was a surveyor and farmer.
Franklin was a printer.
Greene was a blacksmith.
Warren was a physician.
Sumpter was a Shepherd.
Roger Sherman was a shoemaker.
Marion was a farmer, as was also Putnam, Allen, and Stark.
Hancock was a shipping merchant.
Trumbull was an artist.
Arnold (who, though a traitor, was a brave man and a good general) was a bookseller and druggist.

Gen. Jackson and the Bully.—On his return from legislating, Jackson was elected a judge of the supreme court of the State, and his conduct in that capacity gave rise to various myths, one of which, known apparently in the State as "the Russell Bean anecdote," (under the name of the hero) has assumed, after many variations, the following shape, which is amusing enough to be authentic. One day during court, a great hulking fellow, armed with pistol and bowie-knife, took it upon himself to parade before the shanty court-house, and curse the judge, jury and all there assembled, in set terms. "Sheriff," sang out the judge, "arrest that man for contempt of court and confine him." The sheriff found it impossible. "Summons a posse," said the judge. The posse did not like the job, as the fellow threatened "shoot the first skunk that came within ten feet of him." "Mr. Sheriff," said the judge, "summon me." "Very well, judge," said the sheriff, "I suppose I must." Jackson walked up with his pistols, and said. "Now surrender, you infernal villian, this very instant, or I,ll blow you through!" The man put up his pistols, with the words, "There, judge, it's no use; I give in." A few days afterwards, being asked his reason, he said, "Why, when he came up I looked him in the eye, and I saw shoot, and there wasn't shoot in nary other eye in the crowd; and so I says to myself, says I, hoss, it's about time to sing small, and so I did."

She Works for a Living.—Commend us to a girl of whom it is sneeringly said, "she works for a living." In her we are always sure to find the elements of a woman—a lady—true, we are not prepared to see a mincing step—a haughty lip—a fashionable dress—or to hear a string of nonsense about young men and balls—the new novels the next party; no, no; but we are prepared to hear sound words of good sense—language becoming a woman—and to witness movements that would not disgrace an angel.

You who are looking for wives and companions, turn from the fashionable, lazy haughty girls, and select from any of those who work for a living: and never—our word for it—will you repent your choice. You want a substantial friend, and not a doll; a helpmate, and not a help-eat; counselor and not a simpleton. You may not be able to carry a piano into your house, but you can purchase a spinning wheel or a set of knitting needles. If you cannot purchase a novel, you may be able to take some valuable paper. If you cannot buy a ticket to a ball you can visit some afflicted neighbor. Be careful where you look for your wife and whom you choose. We know many a foolish man, who, instead of choosing the industrious and prudent woman for his wife, took one from the fashionable walks of life, and is lamenting his folly in the dust and ashes. He ran into the fire with his eyes wide open, and who but himself is to blame?

The time was when ladies went visiting and took their work with them. This is why we have such excellent mothers. How singular would a gay woman look in a fashionable circle darning her father's stockings, or carding wool to spin? And yet just such a woman would be a prize for somebody.

COMMERCIAL.

THURSDAY, JANUARY 31, 1861.

[REVIEW FOR THE MAIL PACKET.]

SINCE the departure of our last mail packet on the 31st ult., our commercial reports have been marked with extreme dullness, the weather, which has been very stormy and rainy, having had a depressing influence on trade. This being our rainy season, such weather has been looked for. We have, however, been unusually exempt from losses or damage to our coasting fleet and foreign shipping centering here. The foreign arrivals since the 1st inst., have been as follows:

Jan. 2—Am. wh ship Montreal, Sowle, and Am. wh bark Florence, Spencer, from a cruise; both sailed again same day for the West.
6—Haw. sch Marilda, Keyte, from Fanning's Island, with about 11,000 galls cocoanut oil.
9—Russian ship Nicolai I., Krogius, 20 days from Sitka, with salmon, etc., to H. Hackfeld & Co.
10—Am clipper ship Ocean Express, Hale, 12 days from San Francisco en route for Baker's Island, bringing U. S. mail for Honolulu. Anchored outside.

17—Am clipper bark Comet, Smith, 9 days and 20 hours from San Francisco, with U. S. mail and cargo of merchandise.
18—Am clipper bark Early Bird, Cook, 11 days from San Francisco, en route for China: anchored outside on the 28th, and sailed again next day. She brought 25 bags oats, 1 keg saltpetre, and one passenger (Mr. Chas Sandford,) to this place.
21—Am clipper ship Fair Wind, Crowell, 8 days and 17 hours from San Francisco, en route for Baker's Island. Anchored outside.
22—Am clipper ship Norwester, Almy, 9½ days from San Francisco, en route for China.

The departures during the same period have been:

Jan. 1—Hanoverian bark Harburg, Thomsen, for Hongkong, with assorted cargo.
2—Am ship Siam, Rice, for Jarvis Island, to load guano.
3—Am bark Bhering, Gilliat, for New Bedford, with oil, bone, hides, &c.
9—Haw brig Mary Ellen, Bennett, for Victoria and Oregon, with a full cargo island produce.
10—Danish ship Triton, Neilsen, for Valparaiso via Tahiti, with Wilson & Co.'s Circus Company, and lumber.
12—Haw wh brig Wailua, Lass, to cruise.
13—Old'g wh bark Planet, Dallman, to cruise South.
15—Am clipper ship Osborne Howes, Baxter, for Phoenix and M'Kean's Islands, with 21 Hawaiian laborers.
16—Am clipper ship Ocean Express, Hale, for Baker's Island, with 70 laborers.
17—Haw sch Marilda, Keyte, for Fanning's Island.
19—Russian wh bark Amoor, Nordgren, to cruise.
20—Russian ship Nicolai I., Krogius, for Cronstadt.
20—Russ. wh ship Grefie Berg, Enberg, for Bremen, with a cargo oil, bone, hides, &c.
26—Am wh ship Emily Morgan, Whiteside, to cruise.
28—H. B. M.'s steam-sloop Alert, Pearse, for Fanning's Island, Tahiti and Valparaiso.
30—Am. bark Zoe, Bush, for San Francisco, with coal, pulu, hides, &c.

The few arrivals and numerous departures have left our harbor unusually bare of shipping for this season of the year. We have in port but one whaleship, one bark, two brigs, and eight or ten coasting vessels of various tonnage. The clipper Fair Wind lies at anchor in the roads, outside the bar. Our coasting fleet has been busily employed in freighting produce and stock between the various islands, though generally at low freights. The steamer Kilauea, which is also engaged in the coasting trade, being owned by a chartered company, has been much improved in her sea-going qualities, and is believed to be admirably adapted to the service she is engaged in. She came out from New London under a brigantine rig, with light spars, but has had her rig changed to that of a fore and aft schooner, with new and heavy masts and sails, enabling her to take advantage of our steady trade winds. The introduction of steam into this group is still an experiment, but it is believed that it will prove successful and remunerating.

The report of the destruction by fire of the steam flour mill with a number of buildings in its neighborhood, was conveyed by the extra issued from this office and forwarded by the last packet, but will also be found in our issue of January 3, by this mail. A plan for the erection of a new steam flour mill and bakery has been completed, and the work will be immediately commenced. An agent of the new company goes forward by the Comet to procure in San Francisco, the necessary machinery and apparatus, and it is intended to have the whole completed by May 1st, to grind the incoming crop. Besides the steam mill in Honolulu, there are two mills on Maui, driven by water power,—the three being of sufficient capacity to supply us with all the flour needed for home consumption.

The commercial statistics of the Kingdom for 1860, as prepared by the Collector General, have been published, and will be found in our issue of the 24th inst. The principal items are these:

Total foreign importations		$1,223,749 05
" Domestic exports	$480,526 54
" Foreign exports	320,932 66
" Domestic & Foreign exports		807,459 20
" Custom-house receipts		117,302 57
Number of merchantmen ent'd 117; tonnage		41,226 00
" of whaleships (spring & fall season)		213
Ardent spirits entered and consumed, gall's		14,295

In nearly every item, a large falling off is shown from the totals of the previous years. The causes of this decline are attributed mainly to the decrease in the foreign whaleships visiting the islands, but in part to the new tariff of 10 per cent. on merchandise of all kinds, which went into force in June, 1860. The former tariff was 5 per cent., which some think is as high a duty as the best interests of the islands will admit, without materially checking trade. This subject is now being freely discussed by the local papers.

The annual statistics also show a large decline in the production of the principal staple products of the islands, which is looked upon by all parties as somewhat singular, and not so easy to be accounted for. The Polynesian attributes it to drought and blight, but the Commercial denies that these causes have had even as much effect during 1860, as in previous years; but attributes it to the financial policy of the government. The following table shows the decline referred to:

	1860.	1859.	1858.	1857.	1856.
Sugar, lbs	1,444,271	1,826,620	1,204,061	700,556	554,805

Pulu, lbs	649,204	4,059*	3,887*	2,882*	4,129*
Hides	20,249	14,661	13,201	9,835	5,358

Whalebone, lbs	39,958	60,480	39,300	21,997	....

* Bales.

Notwithstanding the unpropitious aspect of our commercial statistics for the year last past, it is evident that the anxious question has arisen, "what shall we do to be saved" from the dark prospects ahead. A fresh impetus will have to be given to the sugar and other agricultural interests, for it is to the development of these we must look for the increase which, by development of our resources, will enable us to hold a place among the commercial nations of the world, and not to allow our sovereignty to remain but an empty title. Let us then consider for a moment the amount of the crop of sugar which, for the year 1860–61, is estimated will be produced at these islands. From careful and thorough inquiries, we learn that it may be laid down as follows:

Island of Hawaii	500 tons.
" of Maui	400 "
" of Kauai	400 "
Total	1,300 "

The price of this staple last year, netted the producer on an average, 7c., giving about $182,000 for this year's supply to the agriculturist. We possess large lands as yet untouched, which are capable of yielding bountifully to the labors of the planter and it is estimated that 500,000 tons of this succulent, can with ease, be raised on these islands.

The crop of Mauritius alone, for the year 1857–8, according to Harper's Cyc. of Com., fol. 1335, was 240,000,000 lbs. or 120,000 tons, which commanded for vacuum clarified 9½c. per lb. and for good and fine yellow 8c. per lb. Mauritius is only about 150 miles in circumference, and nearly circular in form, a considerable part of the surface being covered with mountains. How much our advantages surpass those of Mauritius must be acknowledged, when it is known, that in the district of Hilo alone, on the Island of Hawaii, there are 600 square miles of land capable of sugar cultivation, with a soil rich as in any portion of the world; this gives us 384,000 acres. Allowing one-third to be under cultivation, and producing one ton per acre, we have 128,000 tons of this sweetener of the "ills which tea is heir to."

Through the courtesy of the Collector-General, we have been favored with some statistics relative to the quantities of staple goods imported during the year 1860, which are given in connection with the items noticed.

COAL.—Importations for the year foot up 1,063 tons, of all kinds. The stock has been reduced by recent shipments to San Francisco, and the quantity on hand is only sufficient to meet the local wants till the arrival of the Oriental, from Boston, which vessel has about 400 tons.

LUMBER.—Owing to the non-arrival of cargoes looked for, the stock has become somewhat reduced, and is thought not to exceed 400,000 feet of all kinds. Boards have advanced to 2½c, and probably scantling will advance shortly to the same figure. Total importations of all kinds for the year have been 3,769,544 feet.

BARLEY.—Importations 413 sks. The consumption of this article is very limited. Price nominal.

HAY.—Importations 675 bales.

SALMON.—The stock of salmon is very large, exceeding the wants of the trade. We quote at $7 @ $9 and very dull. Total importations for 1860, 2686 bbls. & hf bbls., of which 1200 bbls. are in bond.

CANDLES.—The trade in candles is comparatively limited, the natives using oil almost wholly. Total importations have been 254 cs. of all kinds.

CIGARS.—The amount of cigars imported has been unusually large, and the stock now on hand is heavy. We quote Manila No. 2, at $11 @ $12. Importations for 1860, have been 2,947,000 of all kinds, of which 1,050,000 remain in bond.

OPIUM.—Importations 920 taels and 76 lbs. The consumption and traffic in opium is confined mostly to the Chinese population.

BEERS—Heavy importations have been made during the year, and prices have ruled comparatively low. We quote ale $3; porter, $2 75 ₩ doz. The following are the imports:

	179 hhds.
	70 cases.
	12 casks.
Porter	1,172 dozen.	624 dozen.
Stout	200 "	1,069 "

PRINTS—The importations for the year amount to 500,872 yards. There are, in addition, in bond, 194 cases and 36 bales.

HATS—3,272 dozen hats and 304 dozen caps have been imported during 1860. This includes all varieties.

DRILLINGS—Total imports, blue, 24,218 yards; brown, 20,797 yards; white, 2,313 yards.

DENIMS—Imports, 182,371 yards.

SOAP—The domestic manufacture of this article has increased during the year. The total importations for 1860 have been 4,821 boxes against 3,975 boxes for 1859. Of the above total, 1,098 boxes are held in bond. We quote brown 6c @ 6½c.

Of crushed and loaf, the importations for 1860 foot up 65,220 lbs. The market is at present well supplied. We quote crushed at 12c ₩ lb.

MOLASSES—There has been a brisk demand during the past week, and sales have been made at 23½c @ 25c.

FUNGUS.—The production and demand for this singular edible, is rapidly on the increase. It is a warty excrescence growing on the forest trees, and grows chiefly during the rainy weather. It is estimated by the Chinese dealers in it that the recent protracted storm, will produce a crop worth for export to China, at least $20,000. The labor of gathering it from the limbs of the trees in the forest, gives employment to a large number of men and women. The present price paid by the dealers is 8c @ 8½c ₩ lb.

COFFEE.—The supply of Kona is abundant, with but little demand.

EXCHANGE.—U. S. Consular, endorsed, and whaler's drafts, also endorsed, have both been taken up in small amounts at par, which we quote as the rate at this writing.

MEMORANDA.

☞ Schooner Nettie Merrill, Gulick, reports—Left Honolulu on the 11th inst.; experienced extremely bad weather on the passage up. Arrived at Lahaina on the 12th, and lay there 30 hours waiting for a change of weather. Sailed again for Hilo on the 14th; encountered heavy squalls and whirlwinds off Ukumehame; arrived off the port on the 15th at 8 P. M. While at Hilo, had eight days continual rain, with heavy squalls from the E. The surf being so unusually high, we were unable to take in cargo till the 25th. Left Hilo on the 26th, passed to windward of Maui and Molokai—trades light and weather fine. Arrived at Honolulu on Monday, the 28th, at 2 P. M.

☞ Schooner Emma Rooke, Chadwick, reports—Left Honolulu on the 10th inst.; had strong trades on the passage up. Arrived at Lahaina about 4 P. M. next day. During Saturday and Sunday, the wind blew very hard from the eastward. Left Lahaina for Hilo on Monday morning about 7 o'clock—at 8 the weather became calm, and continued so till the afternoon, when a light breeze sprung up again; passed Makee's Landing at 8 o'clock P. M.; at 10, took the trades strong, with heavy squalls of rain. At daylight, was within 4 miles of Kohala point, wind blowing heavy from E. by S., with occasional squalls of rain, accompanied with a heavy sea. Tacked ship, and stood to the N.E. About 7 o'clock, the wind blew a perfect gale, and we were compelled to run back and take shelter under the lee of the island, having a scow of eight tons on deck. At 4 P M., the weather having abated a little, made another attempt, but without avail. During the night the weather was very severe. Thursday morning, finding the native passengers and horses had become short of food, it was considered prudent to run for Kawaihae to procure a fresh supply, where we arrived at 2 P. M. After replenishing our stock of provisions, we sailed again at 6 P. M.; had calms and light airs during the night. In the morning, took the trades strong again, with rain, but the sea having gone down considerably, we were able to continue on our way to Hilo, where we arrived on Saturday, the 19th. Lay there a week without being able to land cargo, owing to the continuance of rough weather. Left Hilo on the 26th, touched at Lahaina on the 27th; sailed again for Honolulu on the 28th, at 5½ P. M. and arrived on the morning of the 29th—all well.

So soon our transient comforts fly,
And pleasure only blooms to die.
Is there no kind, no healing art,
To soothe the anguish of the heart?

Thy comforts were not made to die—
Then gentle patience smiles on pain,
And dying hope revives again;
Hope wipes the tear from Sorrow's eye,
And Faith points upward to the sky."

THE PACIFIC Commercial Advertiser.

THURSDAY, JANUARY 31.

THE subject which we discussed last week,—the national trade statistics,—has continued to engross public attention, as well it may; revealing, as it does, some abnormal hindrances to our domestic industry not less than to our national prosperity. To blindly shut our eyes to these important facts, and conceal or cover up the truth, is little else than moral dishonesty. If the national health has become prostrated, and the public heart beats sluggish, common prudence urges us to seek to restore a vigorous pulse and full activity to every part of the system. The statistics which we published, show beyond a peradventure that the state of trade and of our national prosperity is approaching a critical epoch, when theoretical schemes and policies, however plausible they may be in the minds of those holding them, if not adapted to the time, the place and the exigency, must be discarded, and such a commercial policy pursued as may tend to restore our trade and develope our industrial resources.

The ministerial organ, in its last issue, after a great deal of squirming and wrangling, arrives virtually at the same conclusion which this journal has demonstrated, that great irregularity exists in our national trade; but it only yields this after vainly seeking to assign other causes for the irregularities and decrease in our trade and finances, than those given by us. This is perfectly natural. A ministerial press, owned and supported for an avowed object, must endeavor to accomplish that object, though it be at the expense of truth and honesty. The public, not less than the ministry, expect no other service from it, and if the editor is unable to accomplish the feat to satisfaction, a reserve corps is ever ready to lend a helping hand, as appears to have been the case in its last issue.

Seeking to evade the odium which must and does attach to the policy of the present very unpopular ministry, the public organ searches for other causes than official incapacity and an entire ignorance of the operation and working of fiscal regulations, which, however well they may be adapted to older countries, possessing an exhaustless reserve capital and internal resources and industry, can in no wise be beneficial when applied to a comparatively poor and semi-barbarous people, just emerging from abject poverty and hereditary inertia. To expect that such a people should suddenly develope, under some mysterious law, the same resources, the same industry and the same capital which attend the experiment of high protective duties or a revenue tariff when made in old and highly civilized countries, is seeking too much. Our fiscal policy must be adapted to the circumstances and condition of the people.

The official organ, in its search for causes of the decrease in our domestic productions, states that drought has been the sole cause of the reduced production of sugar, and blight that of coffee, when every one knows that no unusual drought beyond the average of the past ten years has been experienced, while with the coffee blight, there has been less of it during the past year, than any of the three previous. The item of tallow was not alluded to by us; but if there has been a decrease in the export, it has been suggested that the consumption, aside from that shown in the manufacture of soap, which we are happy to learn of, may have been for official use to make the wheels of the government machinery move more easily, as they have been creaking badly of late. The importation of foreign soap, however, has been larger for 1860 than the previous year, as the Custom House figures will show; but there is room for an increased healthy use of both the foreign and domestic article.

In speaking of Hawaiian whalers, the ministerial organ states that a large decline of over $40,000 has occurred in our exports of oil and bone. This is true, and no one can deny it? Now what has caused this decline? If we mistake not, it is the very one which we have assigned—a wrong financial policy. Let us look the facts in the face. Formerly, we did not tax our whaleships, and we found their number increasing till, in 1858–9, we could boast a fleet of about eighteen sail. Most of these whalers were owned in part in foreign countries, as we have not the capital needed to carry on extensively this branch of commerce. No sooner, however, had this fine fleet been launched, than our ministry thought it a capital chance to tax it and make up, in part, the deficiency in the revenue from brandy, heretofore paid mostly by seamen. A liberal and thoughtful ministry would have sought to exempt this new and growing branch of industry from every tax, instead of striving to crush it. There certainly could be no great advantage for foreign vessels to register under the Hawaiian flag. Indeed, we have heard it asserted that there are disadvantages; for the capital invested, after being taxed in some form in the foreign country where owned, must submit to another taxation here. Besides, there are increased expenses in shipping seamen, which would not be incurred if the vessel sailed under a foreign flag. What is the consequence? Why, foreigners are compelled to withdraw their capital, notwithstanding the advantage afforded by proximity to the whaling grounds for cheaply carrying on this branch of commerce, and the fact that up to this date it has paid even better than the average per ton of other foreign vessels employed. As a necessary consequence, our whaling fleet has decreased, and our importations and consequent exportations of domestic oil and bone have decreased and will very soon disappear altogether. Indeed, our fleet of Hawaiian whalers (those carrying the Hawaiian flag) has been already reduced to only SIX VESSELS. Here is one of the strongest proofs in support of our position and of the assertion made last week, that there is some error in the financial policy of the country, and no man of sane mind can gainsay it. The "organ" can "put this and that together," and digest it at its leisure.

Now what is to be done? Are we to go on laughing at our decreasing commerce and revenue, as the ministerial organ does? It is the duty of the press to point out this state of things to the public—to show the faults of the ministerial policy, if it is faulty, and seek to have it changed. Our highest aim has been to witness the happiness and prosperity of the people, and the advancement of the whole kingdom in industry, wealth, stability and permanency. We have shown that our foreign commerce and domestic industry are both on the wane; we have pointed out some of the causes and what we believe to be some of the remedies. The ministry, through their paid organ, ridicule the idea that there is any serious trouble, and hoot at the thought that they are in any way blameable. We have, therefore, as in duty bound, proclaimed that the present ministry are not worthy of the confidence of the nation, and that the exigences of the day call for a change.

How is it in other countries? When, after full discussion, any given policy is found unadapted to the country, a change is made, either of the ministry or parliament or of both, and such reforms instituted as necessity calls for. Our Government is not yet so advanced in the science of political economy, that it cannot learn something from its neighbors. In the colony of Victoria, (Australia,) a most liberal plan has, after long discussion and opposition, been carried into effect, to encourage emigration thither, no less than three millions of acres of land having been surveyed, and are now offered to settlers from all parts of the world. Regarding this measure the Melbourne Herald, says:

"Any man with from £40 to £320 in his pocket may go out on any portion of this 3,000,000 of acres of country land, when it is surveyed and proclaimed, and may choose any block he pleases of not less than 40 acres, or more than 320 acres, and will have it conveyed to him, on the payment of £1 per acre. * * * Capital is less wanted here than population, and that class of persons most wanted, is the class inured to out-door-employment, and most expert at handling the pick, the spade, and the plough. High class farmers would do well to remain where they are, if they do not wish do sink money in agricultural pursuits. But any industrious man, able to purchase his 40, 80, 160, or 320 acre block, and till it himself, with the help of his family and friends, would find this colony, in the course of a few years, the high road to competency, if not to perfect independence."

It is such liberal measures that are pushing forward the new and small governments around us, and will make of Victoria a rich and powerful nation. We do not, by any means, say that the same policy here would have the same results, but we do need some energy, some sterling enterprise and efficiency in our ministry, which will seek to develop the national prosperity and resources, instead of utterly destroying them.

Turning to another quarter, we find that even old Hayti, of the West India group, whose population is composed entirely of negroes, under the economical and prudent rule of a negro Emperor, Geffrard, is putting on a new face—an orderly and progressive government is being established over a nation of ignorant, immoral heathen, not long ago slaves, and almost ever since their emancipation the prey of worse tyrants than their former masters. In enumerating the changes which have already taken place, one of the New York papers says:

"Geffrard has made sweeping economical reforms in various departments. The government is out of debt; the army, which has been reduced from 30,000 to 16,000 men, is regularly paid; the customs officers are capable and upright men; the national currency, which was so depreciated that a peck measure full would scarcely represent a silver dollar, is diminished in quantity and advanced in value; two steamers are in process of building, as the nucleus of a navy; waste and abandoned land is reclaimed; roads and other public works are going on under direction of government; premiums are given, encouraging the cultivation of cotton and sugar-cane; ornament and utility are united in the erection of fountains and public buildings; improvements evincing the most liberal views have been made in the prisons; four colleges, and more than 150 schools, have been established, including institutions of medicine, music, art, and agriculture; postal facilities are increased; a census is ordered; marriage, which was almost entirely disregarded, is made honorable, and everywhere the hand, mind, and eye of a statesman is seen."

NOTES OF THE WEEK.

THE ALERT'S BALL.—On Thursday evening last, the Captain and officers of H. B. M. steamer Alert gave a ball to the fair Honoluluans at the Armory of the Honolulu Rifles. The hall was plainly but tastefully decorated with flags, devices and evergreens, and the refreshments were plenty and of the best. His Majesty the King honored the ball with his presence, and, although the company was not so large as on other occasions—owing to the previous bad weather and serious apprehensions of its continuance—yet we believe that the occasion was enjoyed with all the better spirit for the risk run of a soiled chaussure or a spoiled coiffure in coming or going. "Fortune favors the brave," however, and the gentlemanly hosts were favored with a cessation of rain for several hours previous to and during the whole of the ball. The ball broke up at a late hour, and we have no doubt that with all of the guests, and, we hope, with the entertainers also, the pleasantest recollections of the Alert's visit to Honolulu will by some mysterious association of the heart or the mind connect themselves with the ball on the 24th instant.—Polynesian.

BAD ROADS.—The rainy weather of the past few weeks has cut up our roads most sadly. In some places they have been almost impassible. The Nuuanu Valley road, which ought to be one of our best thoroughfares, has been a constant cause of complaint. If nothing more is done, why can't a good sidewalk be constructed, as far at least at Rosebank. We have often wondered how the "Laird of Hazelbank," who always walks in preference to riding, has so long endured this abominable road, when it could so easily be remedied. Why, our gang of devils, with three shovels and two wheelbarrows, could construct a sidewalk along the entire length of the above road in less time than the Supervisor has been conning over it, or the public in grumbling at it. In Manoa, too, a road and bridge is needed, which though the taxes have been paid for it, and we have called attention before to it, has never been constructed. Where's the fault?

PERSONAL.—We learn that it is the intention of T. T. Dougherty, Esq., late United States Vice Consul, and for the most of the past eight years, confidentially connected with that Consulate, to leave for San Francisco in the bark Comet, en route for Philadelphia, the place of his nativity. The kindness always shown to, and endeavor to please every one who had occasion to do business at that office, will be readily recalled, and his departure leaves a void in our business circles not easily to be filled. We wish him a thousand alohas, and a happy meeting with his kinsfolk and friends. We also learn that Mr. Dougherty will be Bearer of Dispatches from the United States Legation to the Government at Washington.

THE BURNT DISTRICT.—This tract, which was swept of its buildings by the fire of the 29th Dec., has nearly resumed its former busy aspect. Messrs. Thompson & Neville, have erected a new and commodious blacksmith shop; Messrs. Fosters have built a shipcarpenter's shop, about 80 feet in length, and more convenient than the old one; besides which several butcher shops have taken the place of those destroyed. Mr. Thos. Hughes is about erecting two spacious one-story buildings, each 46x35 feet, one for a machine shop and the other for a foundry. These completed, will restore the burnt district to its former busy aspect, the mill alone being wanting. The latter is to be erected in another part of the town.

☞ In one of our exchanges we notice the following item. Whether this is one of the results of the "panic" prevailing through the Union, we are not informed, but it evidently constitutes a link in the crisis, and demonstrates the supreme folly of betting, even with the best of men and in the best of causes:

We are informed, upon the most satisfactory authority, that Hon. Abner Pratt, ex-Judge, etc., who just came home from Honolulu, with a handsome fortune, made a bet with a Republican, of $500, some time since, that Lincoln would not carry Michigan by 10,000 majority. When the stake-holder was called upon for the $1000, he replied that Judge Pratt had assigned the stake, and the assignee had forbidden the stake-holder to pay over. So much for so much.—Lansing Michigan Republican.

☞ We received yesterday, a letter from Hilo and one from Kau, Hawaii, both dated Jan. 9, having been 21 days on the passage, the latter complaining that the Commercials arrive very irregularly, often two weeks behind time. The papers are mailed regularly at the post-office, on the day they are published. Over the mails we have no control, but the frequent complaints made to us, show that letters and papers do not pass along as fast as they should.

THE WEATHER.—From all parts of the group, we hear that the fall of rain has been very heavy, and the pastures much improved. The storm, which is now over, has been unusually severe. The schooner Henry received some damage at Hana, losing her rudder by striking the rocks. The schooner Warwick parted her chains while at anchor at Molokai, but was saved from injury by a native diving and fastening a hauser to the anchor.

NEW WATER WORKS.—We are glad to see this substantial and important public improvement going steadily forward towards completion. The reservoir, which will hold over 200,000 gallons, is about finished, and the large 12-inch main pipes are being rapidly laid through Nuuanu avenue. When the work is completed, it will be a great blessing to the city.

☞ We notice the return of S. Hoffmeyer, Esq., from Lahaina, in feeble health. He will no doubt be happy to see his old friends.

Does the Law "Authorize" Prostitution?

The Polynesian of January 19th, vents a column of bile against the reported doings of Rev. T. Coan and his Church Conference. The only part of this requiring comment is the aggrievance felt because they called the new law for prostitutes, a law "authorizing the prostitution of women."

The editor begins to feel keenly the disgrace that must rest on the public champion of such a law in any decent community, and has been for some time trying to evade it, by misstating and softening down the actual purport and working of the law. He persists in representing it as a law "to cure a disease," and not "to authorize the sin by which the disease was occasioned."

Let a few obvious considerations dispel the fog in which he is striving to hide the real character of his favorite statute.

We all know that this statute does not in so many words directly and categorically authorize prostitutes to practice their infamous trade. It does not in express terms repeal or limit the action of the old statute punishing the crime.

But is any intellect so obfuscated as not to see that this law in reality does assure full impunity to all prostitutes who comply with its requisitions? This is of necessity implied in the law. What use could be made of such a law if it did not ensure exemption! Would any prostitute be at the trouble and shame of coming under government inspection, if she only thereby fixed the eye of the police more distinctly upon her, to observe and punish her sins? What inducement can the law hold out to a prostitute to register herself, except that thereby she is to sin under shelter? Suppose the vigilant police were to follow up and pounce upon these registered women, all ticketed and branded as they are, and should enforce diligently the penalties of the old law upon them, would it not end the working of the new law at once? By necessary implication therefore it exempts those under its shelter from the action of previous statutes; else it is a nullity, and stultifies itself and all concerned in it. This is so obvious that I am almost ashamed to argue the question.

Has a single arrest for moekolohe ever been made of a registered prostitute? That tells the story.

The authors and promoters of the law fully comprehended this feature of it from the first. They clearly saw that express exemption was unnecessary, when the law necessarily implied it. They wisely omitted therefore to express what would have been too obnoxious if nakedly presented to the honest native members of the Legislature, who never would have consented to the law, had time and public discussion enabled them to perceive its true character.

What disgusting hypocrisy it is for the Polynesian to deny the real and obvious purport of its favorite measure. If we are to have prostitution protected by law, let us not be bullied into calling the fact by a softer name.

To "mitigate the evils" of prostitution! It is like mitigating the evils of small-pox, by driving in the disease to save the looks, as if the ravages of venereal disease were the chief of its evils. Legalizing and protecting the vilest feature of social life, instead of hunting it down and destroying it.

The main object of this law is to make vile indulgence safe. If its promoters were as zealous as they profess, to check the ravages of disease, why did they make a law to apply a remedy to one very small class alone? Why did they not make a special health law for the whole nation, as in the case of any infectious or contagious disease, requiring every case to be immediately reported to and treated by competent and authorized physicians? It is plain that their object was merely to establish among us the vile system of legalized, medicated prostitution.

The Polynesian will undoubtedly continue its attempts to evade the plain truth on this subject. But hide its head in the sand as it may, the dirty carcass protrudes, and the public see it.

I close by repeating the resolution of Mr. Coan's church, and seconding the motion to adopt:

Resolved, That this law is a very bad law, and it is of a filthy character among this people; and because it is opposed to the good effects of some existing good laws; therefore be it resolved, that this conference (and all good people) pray greatly to the Lord that he may cause the repeal of this bad law.

NAKED TRUTH.

"Led Astray."—What is it?

MR. EDITOR:—The first official Quarterly Report under the law which legalizes prostitution, contains some expressions extremely ambiguous—which fact is owing to a novel, and very extraordinary use of plain English.

The inquiry at once arises, whither have they been led "by those whose word for years they have looked upon as law?" Many of the readers of this Report, educated in other lands to sundry antiquated notions, innocently suppose that the "strange woman, whose feet go down to death," "whose steps take hold on hell," has already strayed from virtue to its exact antipodes—and consequently any further straying is, in her case, simply an impossibility. Any change of position, brings her, by just so much, nearer her original point of departure. And perhaps this is precisely what the reporting officer means. Perhaps these estrays are the veritable fifty-six, who have "returned their certificates." This supposition is the more probable from the fact stated in the Report, that they were "led astray" by those "who preach so much about charity."

Now the fact is beyond gainsaying, that there is in this kingdom, a class of men and women who have grown gray in aiding and abetting this straying extraordinary. Under their influence, it is quite possible that, according to the Report,

5 have "strayed" into the visible fold of Christ.
23 have "strayed" back to their husbands,
22 have "strayed" away to their parents,
1 has "strayed" off to virtue, and
5 have "strayed" into the marriage relation.
56

But if the meaning of the Reporter is not thus to be interpreted, then the question returns, when Government prostitutes are "led astray," what do they stray to? and again, when they return, what do they return to?

The Report states that "Four have been sent to prison during the quarter, for violating sec. 4th of the law." This statement suggests a third question—Of the 149 married prostitutes reported, how many have been sent to prison for violating the statute laws of this kingdom in relation to marriage?

If any competent person will give a categorical answer to these questions, he will confer a favor on an earnest INQUIRER.

A GOOD STORY.—Captain Kilmer, of the ship Othello, tells a good story. It appears his crew is composed mostly of students from some college in the interior of New York—they are intelligent young men, and of wealthy families, and are treated very kindly by the captain and his officers. While off Cape Horn, on her passage out, the ship encountered a very heavy gale, accompanied by hail and snow; and after lying to for many hours under nothing but a close-reefed main-topsail, it became necessary to take in even that sail. All the "boys" were safely stowed below in the forecastle, when the mate went forward and sung out: "Come on deck, all of you, and furl this main-topsail." Surprised, after the lapse of a few minutes, in not seeing the crew come up, the mate again went forward and said: "If you don't come on deck soon, this topsail will blow away." 'All right, Mr. Sherman,' was the reply—Please tell the captain that we have concluded to let the old topsail blow away, and we'll pay for it!"—Exch.

[The following communication was handed to us for publication some two weeks since by F. L. Hanks, Esq., late U. S. Consul.]

To Whalemen visiting New Zealand.

AKAROA, Canterbury, New Zealand, June 27, 1860.

To the Consul General for the United States, HONOLULU:

DEAR SIR:—I must premise what I have to say, by begging you will excuse this intrusion on your time, and hope that you will permit the importance of the subject to be the best apology I can offer. The disturbances on the North Island of N. Zealand, and the present attitude of the aboriginal race to the Government, may decide some, if not many, of the commanders of your numerous fleet of whale ships upon not calling hither at Mongonui, or the Bay of Islands for their usual recruits. To these gentlemen I would wish to point out, (and it is in this I would, as the Collector of H. B. M's customs at this port, solicit your aid in your high official capacity,) that Akaroa will afford them every possible recruit that they can desire. As a port once frequented by whalers, it was well known to many, but, for some reasons not patent to me, it has been for some years not much frequented. I have visited the different farmers and small cultivators, and urged upon them the necessity of being in a posititiion to supply at least 25 ships, and am happy to be able to state that preparations are already made for the cultivation of a considerable breadth: firewood and water abound, both of qualities so good and so easy of access, that praise is unnecessary. I am in correspondence with our Provincial Government upon the subject of making a special reserve of timber for the whalers, to insure firewood in perpetuo.

The police regulations have been much improved, and every protection is given to the interests of the owners:—and there is no fear of the commanders having venereal complaints to cure after visiting the port. All the usual facilities in money matters are afforded. There are half a dozen shipwrights in the port; also, two excellent smiths, and castings can be had if necessary, and spars to be had for the cutting. Lastly, and by no means least in the catalogue, outside our Heads is the very best ground in these seas,—for the last few years the whales have been found more numerous than during the preceding ones. The surveys of H. B. M's ships Acheron and Pandora, in the most recently published charts from the Hydrographical office in London, are kept for sale in my office. I have enclosed the directions for the Port, which I would request you to permit to be exhibited in some conspicuous place in the Captain's waiting room in your office. A seaman myself, I only wish to be useful to the district of Banks' Peninsula, over which my official control to the Custom's department extends, and this desire is the only valid excuse I can offer for this letter, and my request that you will communicate the contents of it to the gentlemen in command of your magnificent fleet.

I have the honor to be, Dear Sir,
most obediently, your servant,
ROBERT GREAVES.

"Necessitas non habet Legem."

MR. EDITOR:—It was with great pleasure I read in the Polynesian of the 10th inst., the letter of "Bucephalus." It is high time Government officials should have their accounts audited. The system adopted in lavishing the public moneys has been for some time past a subject of severe criticism by the community.

Let facts be placed in view of the Government, and it is to be hoped the evil will be remedied.

Is it right to pay out of the public revenue fifteen dollars ($15) for any article, when one equally as good could have been purchased for ten dollars ($10)?

Is it right to pay six cents (6c.) per lb. for an article, when another offered to supply it for five cents, (5c.,) and make no charge for the supply required for the contractor's own family? This article can be supplied all the year round at four cents (4c.) per lb., or less, (without perquisites,) by public tender.

Is it right to pay one cent and a half (1½c) per lb. for any article, when it can be contracted for at one cent (1c.) per lb.?

Is there no competition in other articles?

Let the public auditor reply.

In conclusion, I would endorse the remarks of "Bucephalus" for the Government to advertise and offer to public competition, by sealed tenders, (to be opened in presence of the contractors or their agents,) for the supplies required for each quarter. Such a course would remove a stone of offence to many taxpayers, and save a waste of money.

Let the Government accounts be audited for the last two years; the corruption of the present system will be exposed and discountenanced.

Yours, A TAXPAYER.

P. S.—In a future article I may give you the price current of certain government situations that have been disposed of for a money consideration, or its equivalent. A. T.

BORROWED SPLENDOR.—Rev. Dr. Tyng of New York, told his society the other evening that an eminent jeweler's house of that city cleared, from diamonds rented to ladies to glitter in the presence of royalty, at the grand ball, a sufficient sum to pay the rent of their store for a year.

MATRIMONIAL GOSSIP.—Fernando Wood, Mayor of New York, has purchased a Fifth-Avenue house, corner of 32d street, for $32,000, and proposes to get married (for the third time) and move in shortly. He marries a Miss Mills, upon whom, it is understood, he agrees to settle $100,000 on the day before the knot is tied.

The late defeated candidate for Mayor of Boston, Moses Kimball, was one of the City Council which ten years ago refused the use of Faneuil Hall to Daniel Webster, when he desired to address the people of that city in support of his vote in favor of the compromise bill of that year. Kimball is now signally rebuked for the insult and indignity he then offered to that great man whose orations have done so much to make Faneuil Hall memorable in history.

Cyrus McCormick of Chicago, the man who invented a reaping machine, and made $1,300,000 thereby, and was refused an extension of his patent by Mr. Holt, then Commissioner of Patents, on the ground that he had been sufficiently paid for his ingenuity, will again apply to the authorities. He is now understood to want an extension on eight or nine patents, for improvements in reaping machines.

A VETERAN VOTER.—Dr. Lyman Beecher, who cast his first vote for Gen. Washington, President, was taken by his son to the polls, that he might cast his last vote for Lincoln. As the venerable man, with flowing and silvery locks, entered the room, the crowd parted right and left, and silently made way for him.

Captain Travis, the celebrated marksman, in order to test the truth of the assertion that the hide of a rhinoceros will resist a bullet, shot at a specimen of this pachyderm, on exhibition in Memphis, on Saturday night last. The bullet fell to the ground, flattened by contact with the thick skin. The animal did not even move when he was struck.

A shark, recently captured near Port Jackson, N. S. W., carried the following curious miscellany in his capacious stomach: Half a ham, several legs of mutton, hind quarter of a pig, head and fore legs of a bull dog, with a rope round his neck, a quantity of horseflesh, a piece of sacking, and a ship's scraper. No wonder that twelve gallons of oil were obtained from his liver!

NEW SHIPS.—A new system of ship-building has lately been introduced into England by M. Tovell. The bow is copied from the head of a salmon, the stern from the after body of a swan. Vessels built upon this principle have all proved to be fast sailers, with great stowage capacity. The keelson is curved, not straight, as in many other ships.

SEVERE WEATHER IN EUROPE.—A letter from Chamberry, France, states that a rather heavy fall of snow took place there in the evening of the 7th Nov., and that all the mountains in the environs were covered. From Marseilles we learn that there was a sharp frost there on the 8th, the thermometer standing at two degrees below freezing point.

THE PRINCE'S VISIT TO BOSTON.—The special correspondent of the London Times, under date of Nov. 7th, gives a letter of over two columns in length, descriptive of the visit of the Prince to Boston. He says:

"Boston has given the Prince of Wales a reception inferior only to New York in its magnitude. Its warm, cordial enthusiasm, its decorum, its immense outpouring of a people's welcome equalled that at the capital, and even more so than it would be impossible to say. It was, on a more confined scale, a repetition of the same grand scene which he witnessed in the Broadway. If there could be a distinction drawn between such heart-stirring ovations, I should feel inclined to lean rather in favor of the enthusiasm of Boston, but this slight shade of difference, if any really did exist, may be more than accounted for by the fact that on the day of the arrival at New York the people had been quietly waiting in dense masses for eight hours, and it was so dark when the Prince got down the Broadway that one-half of the people saw nothing of him at all. Certainly, New York and Boston have as completely eclipsed all other cities in this tour, in the intense cordiality of their welcome, as Halifax surpassed every other place in its street decorations, or Montreal in its ball."

THE PRINCE OF WALES ATTENDING A PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH.—The young Prince, while in Illinois, chanced to spend the Sabbath at Dwight, and, with his suite, attended the Presbyterian church of that place. No commotion was produced by it, and no change made in the exercises. The pastor of the church, the Rev. P. D. Young, preached a plain gospel sermon, making no personal allusion to his distinguished hearers, doubtless regarding this as one of the places where the rich and the poor, the high and the low, should meet together on common ground, and as having a common standing in the sight of God. On Monday morning the Prince sent a donation of $40 to the pastor, with a request that it might be expended in completing the church building, which was in an unfinished state.—Observer.

THE NEW PRESIDENT'S WIFE.—A letter writer of the New York World, who has just visited Abraham Lincoln at his home in Springfield, Ill., gives the following sketch of Mrs. Lincoln:—

"The future lady of the White House is, perforce, a personage to whom just now the liveliest interest attaches. That she will adorn and grace even the exalted position to which she bids fair to succeed, none who have the fortune to see her can doubt. She is yet apparently upon the advantageous side of forty, with a face upon which dignity and sweetness are blended, and an air of cultivation and refinement to which familiarity with the courtly drawing-rooms of London, or the aristocratic saloons of Paris, would hardly lend an added grace. She is admirably calculated to preside over our republican court. If one were permitted so far to describe her personal appearance as to meet half way the respectful curiosity which is generally felt upon the subject, the description would be: that she is slightly above the medium stature, with brown eyes, clearly cut feature, delicate, mobile, expressive; rather distinguished in appearance than beautiful, conveying to the mind generally an impression of self-possession, stateliness and elegance. I distrust my own opinion upon subjects of the kind, but I concur in the belief prevalent hereabouts that she will make as admirable a leader of the stately dames and lovely demoiselles of the national capital, as the most fastidious social martinet could desire."

A THIEF OVERHAULED AND INSPECTED.—Our readers will remember Mr. and Mrs. Hamm, who gave several vocal concerts in this city some years since. The following has transpired respecting Mr. H.:

Some weeks ago, says the Napa Reporter, A. N. Hamm, the getter up and ostensible manager of the Collegiate Institute in this place, suddenly "got up and got," leaving the public minus from three to five thousand dollars. He exhibited the utmost impartiality in his operations, treating servant girls, cooks, butchers, merchants and printers all alike. Just before leaving he got possession of some $2,500 by means of collections and a transfer of his interest in the college property, and vanished from the sight of this community. Mr. B. W. Latta, of the firm of Latta & Blain, was among the sufferers, and determined to give chase to the fugitive. Having obtained some clue, he succeeded in tracing him to Santa Cruz. He found Hamm already engaged in negotiating for getting up another "Collegiate Institute," and on applying for the necessary papers to arrest him, found it difficult to persuade the Magistrate that Hamm was the man he was after.

The worthy Justice had spent the day with Mr. H. examining and comparing the various building sites for the proposed institution! Mr. L. succeeded, however, and arrested this speculator upon public credulity, just on the eve of a fresh speculation, and placing him on board the stage—with handcuffs ready to put on in case of any attempt to escape—started for Napa via San Jose. Mr. Latta, on arriving in the latter place, directed the driver to "drive round to the county jail." At this point Hamm 'weakened' and agreed to shell out, on condition that he should be taken to a hotel instead of the prison. He then reluctantly disgorged $456—the amount of Latta's claim, besides $40 additional for expenses incurred, and was suffered to depart.

This Hamm is well calculated to take among strangers. He is a singing master by profession, and has given concerts at the East and South, and also in the Sandwich Islands, California and Washington Territory. We are told that he once had a minor theater in Baltimore. If reports we have heard be true, his operations in Napa are only a repetition of similar speculations elsewhere. He is probably about forty years old, nearly six feet tall, heavy set, florid complexion, light eyes and hair, and is exceedingly plausible in manners and address, besides being a "professor of religion."

Political.

JOHN BROWN MEETING BROKEN UP.—A few abolitionists and colored people undertook to hold a meeting in Tremont Temple, Boston, Dec. 3, to "mark the anniversary of the martyrdom of John Brown," but the Union men went in and took possession, ousting Fred. Douglas and others after a free fight, and passed strong Union resolutions.

Fred. Douglas, who was on the platform, called the proceedings of Mr. Fay the coolest thing he had ever known. Mr. Fay was sustained, and read a series of resolutions, which were received with applause, and adopted by a large majority. The following are the resolutions:

Whereas, It is fitting upon the occasion of the anniversary of the execution of John Brown for his piratical and bloody attempt to create an insurrection among the slaves of the State of Virginia, for the people of this Commonwealth to assemble and express their horror of the man, and of the principles which led to the foray, therefore it is

Resolved, First, That no virtuous and law abiding citizen of this Commonwealth ought to countenance, sympathize, or hold communion with any man who believes that John Brown and his aiders and abettors in that nefarious enterprise were right in any sense of that word.

Second, That the present perilous juncture in our political affairs, in which our existence as a nation is imperilled, requires of every citizen who loves his country to come forward and to express his sense of the value of the Union, alike important to the free labor of the South, and to the interests of the commerce, manufactures, and agriculture of the world.

Third, That we tender to our brethern in Virginia, our warmest thanks for the conservative spirit they have manifested, notwithstanding the unprovoked and lawless attacks upon them by John Brown and his associates, acting, if not with the connivance at least with the sympathy of a few fanatics from the Northern States, and that we hope they will still continue to aid in opposing the fanaticism, which is even now attempting to subvert the Constitution and the Union.

Fourth, That the people of this city have submitted too long in allowing irresponsible persons and political demagogues of every description to hold public meetings to disturb the public peace and misrepresent us abroad, that they have become a nuisance, which in self defence, we are determined shall henceforward be summarily abated.

Fred. Douglas then rose again, and was exceedingly severe in his condemnation of the proceedings. He made an allusion to Daniel Webster, and cheers were given for Webster and repeated. He was continually interrupted with cries that he had exceeded his time. All was confusion, and the negroes particularly uproarious. A motion to dissolve the meeting was carried.

Cheers were then given for Virginia, and the Union and the Constitution, after which, in obedience to the orders of the Mayor, the police cleared the hall and locked the doors.

After the chairman had pronounced the meeting dissolved, Fred. Douglas, Sanborn, and a few others manifested some resistance to the police, and were ejected from the platform and hall. During the uproar Rev. J. Stella Martin announced that a meeting would be held in his church in the evening. In response to this announcement the Baptist Church (colored) in Joy Street, was filled at an early hour. The edifice was small and a large proportion of the audience were black. Here Wendell Phillips, John Brown, jr., and a few other leading John Brown sympathizers, ventilated their opinions freely with little interruption.

SPRINGFIELD, ILL., Nov. 14, 1860.

AN HOUR WITH LINCOLN.—The timid gentlemen who are expecting Mr. Lincoln to issue a pronunciamiento after the manner of successful Mexican chiefs, wherein his policy will be declared, for the conciliation of the madmen who are threatening the secession of a few of the states of the south, do not know the president elect. It was my good fortune to talk with him an hour, yesterday, in relation to this secession movement, and, though he makes no concealment of the uneasiness which the contemplated treason gives him, he is not a bit alarmed by the aspect of affairs, nor is he at all inclined to yield an inch to the well intended but mistaken solicitations of his friends. He believes that his success is only a public pretext for what has been long preparing; that his position on all questions of public concern—all which affect the slavery question nearly or remotely—is so well known that no declaration of his would change the treasonable purposes already announced; and that a reiteration of his views, which are patent to all men who have sought to know them, would be an evidence of timidity which he does not feel, and of which he would have no man suspect him. He is cautious, discreet, and wise, in his replies to questions as to what may or will be done. But those who know the steadfastness of purpose, and the conscientious firmness, which are his distinguished characteristics, have no doubt that he will adopt that policy, when president, which a proper regard for the whole country dictates; and that he will pursue it firmly, persistently, and, if necessary, obdurately, to the end. 'I know,' said he, 'the justness of my intentions, and the utter groundlessness of the pretended fears of the men who are filling the country with their clamor. If I go into the presidency, they will find me as I am on record—nothing less, nothing more. My declarations have been made to the world without reservation. They have often been repeated; and now, self-respect demands of me and of the party that has elected me, that when threatened I should be silent." Cor. N. Y. Eve. Post.

THE REMOVAL TO WASHINGTON CITY—LINCOLN'S PROBABLE TIME OF DEPARTURE FROM SPRINGFIELD.—Although the simplicity of the domestic life of the President elect will prevent the coming removal of himself and family to the Federal Capital from being a source of much tribulation, the female members of his household are nevertheless already busily engaged in preparing a proper "outfit" for the journey to the White House. His two boys are most impatient to see the grand sights of Washington City, having never been beyond the limits of this State. They think and talk of nothing else.

The time of departure is not yet definitely determined upon. It will probably take place on or about the 20th of Febuary, as a visit to some of the Atlantic cities, previous to the entrance into Washington.

THE PERSONAL LIBERTY LAW IN VERMONT.—The final action of the Vermont Legislature, before its adjournment, on the 27th ult., was to refer this whole subject to the commissioners on the revision of the State, with instructions to report whether the present law upon the rendition of fugitive slaves is in conflict with the Constitution of the United States.

The appointment of Mr. Black as Secretary of State has been confirmed—one third of the members of the Senate voting against him.

Secretary Thomas has left for North Carolina. He favors the secession of certain States in friendly cooperation only, when the non-slaveholding States refuse to give Constitutional guarantees.

HON. A. H. Stephens, a leading member of Congress from Georgia, has taken strong ground against secession, and made a powerful speech to the people of Augusta, showing the madness of such a proceeding.

NEW REPUBLICS.—The Cleveland Plaindealer thus maps out five new Republics, and gives some account of their staples:

Republic No. 1.—A Southern Republic with all the slave States, save Delaware and Missouri, the latter in fact and feeling being a Western State and will soon be as free as Ohio, with New Mexico and the Indian Territory.

The staple productions of this Republic would be cotton, tobacco, sugar and niggers.

Republic No. 2.—A Western Republic, including the seven Northwestern States, Missouri, Kansas and Nebraska.

The productions of this Republic would be wheat, corn, beef, pork, potatoes and Popular Sovereignty.

Republic No. 3.—The Central Republic, including New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Delaware. The latter named State has elected a Lincolnite to Congress, and has not niggers enough to-day to run a respectable hotel.

The productions of the Central Republic would be a great variety of cereals, panic-makers and politicians.

Republic No. 4.—The Puritan Republic, including the six New England States.

Productions—Prayers, priests and pumpkin pies.

Republic No. 5.—The Pacific Republic, including California, Oregon and Washington Territory, with the eventful addition of Sonora and Utah.

Staples—Gold, grizzly bears and babies.

EDWARD BATES, OF MISSOURI.—The prospect that this conservative and justly popular statesman, is likely to become a leading member in the Cabinet of the new President, will be received in all parts of the Union with delight. Regarding this movement, the St. Louis correspondent of the Bulletin writes:

Edward Bates, of this city, received a despatch December 15, from Mr. Lincoln, asking his immediate presence at Springfield, and he left by the train of that afternoon. This visit is taken to mean that Mr. Bates can have a seat in the Cabinet if he will accept—and his friends here assume that he will. As he is the first prominent politician who has been summoned to a conference, and as the conference seems to be a protracted one, there is room for belief that Lincoln has accepted him as chief consultee and adviser. If this is so, Mr. Lincoln may be taken as having adopted, in prospective, a conservative course, and one that will be at war with the ideas of the ultra Republicans. There is no doubt of Mr. Bates' conservatism in a general sense. He is, however, strongly in favor of coercive measures towards South Carolina and any other seceding State, and wants them brought back to duty to the Union by force of arms if they persist in repelling a fair compromise, or the acts of an administration which shall make no war upon their rights. He makes no secret of his coercive policy, talks of it daily here with his brother lawyers, and displays much warmth on the subject. In the midst of a heated discussion the other day with an old friend of fifty years standing, but a political opponent, he averred that he had an old sword, a relic of 1812, which he would whet and carry to South Carolina to aid in putting down treason.

European.

The steamship Great Eastern will remain open to visitors during the winter. Some 30,000 persons had visited her during her stay at Milford Haven.

On the 26th November, Lord Palmerston presided over the annual meeting of the Leeds Ragged School Society.

THE GREAT EASTERN.—The Great Eastern realized $70,000 by her trip to the United States; it will take $5000 more than that to fit her for another voyage, and she has gone into winter quarters.

There is an ominous cloud of war upon the European horizon. France and Sardinia on one side, Russia, Prussia, and Austria, on the other, are arming with a vigor which is full of the ominous import of battle.

GARIBALDI'S POVERTY.—A letter from Capua in the Presse says:—Garibaldi, having told his secretary and two aides-de-camp to hold themselves in readiness to depart, they felt it indispensable to remind him that he was absolutely without money, and that he must think how to procure a few hundred francs for his voyage. The fact is that the man who has given to Piedmont eight millions of subjects has never taken a sou of pay or salary for himself.

SPAIN.—The intolerance of Spain has been fully exhibited in an open refusal to grant liberty of worship to British subjects. The constitution is sufficiently explicit in support of the course of the Government. It says: "The religion of the Spanish nation is, and perpetually will be, the one true and only true Roman Catholic and Apostolic Church. The nation protects it by wise and just laws, and prohibits the exercise of every other religion." It is, however, strange, that when the Pope is asking Protestant powers to interfere to restore his authority over his unwilling subjects, his representatives in Madrid should be the first to put in force such an enactment against the English.

THE PRINCE IMPERIAL IN THE FIELD.—The Prince Imperial profiting by the example of his father, breakfasted with his regiment, in which he holds the rank of corporal. It was the funniest sight imaginable, to see him walking beside his father, in full uniform, with chapeau and sword, and the broad ribbon of the legion of Honor across his breast. He walked steadily along, as grandly and as gravely as if he felt the full importance of his position. He is really a remarkable boy for only four years. Later in the day he was mounted on the field on a beautiful little pony, perfectly trained, which galloped as steadily as a rocking-horse. His rein was held by an officer who acted as his equerry, and he was attended by several servants on horseback. He rode erect, and sat as firmly as any Marshal of France. All along the line the people greeted him with most enthusiastic cheers—the men waving their hats and shouting "Vive le Prince Imperial!" and the women kissing their hands to him and holding up their children to look at him. After making the circuit of the field, he rode back to the royal stand, kissing his little yellow-gloved hand to the spectators, who replied to his salutations with the most hearty cheers I have heard in France.

I was so much touched by his beauty, his innocence, perfect grace and trustfulness, that I felt like shouting Vive le Prince Imperial! myself; and if I, a stranger, could be so strongly impressed by his appearance, how much more deeply must the French people have felt, who have watched him from his cradle, and who look upon him as their future sovereign? Louis Napoleon omits no opportunity of endearing himself and his family to the French people, and this affection for the Prince is one of the strongest links that binds them to him.

The War in New Zealand.

The following is an extract from the correspondence of the Nelson (N. Z.) Examiner of the 31st September:

TARANKI, September 14.

Last Monday a grand expedition proceeded to Waitara against the rebel pahs, consisting of 1,270 privates, and in all more 1,400 men. They took many guns from town, and went up to procure more from Nelson at Waitara. The force halted at about eight miles distant, and on Tuesday morning, being joined by Major Nelson and the guns, one a six-pounder, proceeded, accompanied about 50 Taranaki Volunteer Rifles under Captain Strapp. They most gallantly stormed four empty pahs, and burned them; but on attempting to enter a road leading through some light bush, to another pah, some natives who had been previously observed to enter the bush, fired a volley upon the advanced guard of the 40th Regiment, wounding one man, who fell, Maories appearing to be in force. To the shame of the English, it has to be recorded that the men of the 40th turned and fled in disorder, leaving their comrade behind them, whether alive or dead they did not know, and did not stop till they had left three cannon (posted in the rear) exposed, to be captured by the Maories, as there were only 15 men who remained with them. One of the officers, it is said, fell over a stump and lost his sword, and could not afford time to regain it. The "retire" was then sounded, and the whole force retreated, having been baffled by 200 natives, who soon fired shots at them in derision from a distance. Commodore Loring, with a rocket-tube and six bluejackets, was also left exposed by the flight of the 40th, and had to retire as best he might.

The advanced guard were again directed to advance, and at least recover their comrade, but a second time retired in confusion, and a general retreat was ordered—some to Waitara, and the rest to their halting place of the night before, and next day reached town in safety. The general returned to town by the steamer from Waitara on Tuesday night. When the 40th retired, it is said that it was intimated to the general that the 50 Taranki Volunteers were ready to enter the bush and drive the Maories out; but he said where he would not send soldiers he would not allow volunteers to go.

So ended the great expedition of 1,400 men against 200 Maories. Surely some different mode of warfare must be adopted before we can hope to defeat the Maori. There have been terrible rows with the women and children about forcing them away from their homes,—in fact some of them, who were warned to go by the Airedale, are gone somewhere with their husbands' guns, and cannot be found. Captain King (militia) was put under arrest for refusing to hand some soldiers to fetch the women out of their houses.

HEALTH, STRENGTH AND HAPPINESS are obtained by cleansing the blood of its impurities. Blood, we are told, on the highest authority, is the "Life," or at least the medium of Life to the Body; and it is, we know, the great feeder of every part of the frame. Thus the blood is the great channel of disease; consequently, a good or bad state of the system, or constitution, is no more or less than a good or bad state of the blood. We have made the composition of the blood our study, and are satisfied that two-thirds of all diseases are caused by impurity of the blood.

Believing the above facts, we made ourselves acquainted with the blood chemically with a view to a reliable medicinal agent, that would correct all impurities of the blood, and at the same time effectually cure all diseases arising therefrom. We have succeeded beyond our most sanguine expectations, as thousands can testify who have tried the virtues of the preparation known by the name of

The Next Dance.

[A late number of Punch has a fine picture representing Mr. Punch introducing the Prince of Wales to Miss Columbia, with the remark, "Now, my boy, there's your pretty Cousin Columbia—you don't get such a partner as that every day." The representation is most admirable, and the attitude of each of the figures in the scene exceedingly graceful. The following stanzas, composed by Mr. Punch, accompany the sketch:]

Yes, dance with him, lady, and bright as they are,
Believe us, he's worthy those sunshiny smiles,
Wave o'er him the flag of the Stripe and the Star,
And gladden the heart of the Queen of the Isles.

We thank you for all that has welcomed him—most
For the sign of true love that you bear the Old Land:
Proud heiress of all that his ancestor lost,
You restore it, in giving that warm, loving hand.

And we'll claim, too, the omen. Fate's looking askance,
And Fate, only, knows the next tune she will play,
But if John and his Cousin join hands for the dance—
Bad luck to the parties who get in their way.

MY HOUSEKEEPER.

BY RALPH HUMPHRIES.

"A lady who can give the best references as to character and ability, wishes a situation as Housekeeper in a gentleman's family. References required.
Address M. L. SMITH, Box 1004."

I am, I mean I was, a bachelor. I had plenty of money, but I was forty-five years old, and had never arrived at a satisfactory way of spending it. I concluded that my error was the want of a home of my own; conceiving a sudden disgust for hotels and boarding houses, I took a handsome house in a respectable part of the town, and began looking for a housekeeper. The advertisement which heads this narrative had just met my eye, as I glanced over the "Wants" in the evening paper. It pleased me. In fact, I suppose Destiny had decreed that I should be pleased with it.

I was reading it for the twentieth time, when a servant knocked at my parlor door, and announced my sister-in-law, Mrs. Eliza Bishop, and her daughter Eliza. Mrs. Bishop was the widow of my eldest brother, and her care for my comfort was really touching.

She followed her name into the room, leading her daughter—the eldest and best behaved of the three. She was a handsome woman, of commanding, imperial order, and she looked her best that winter afternoon, in her rich furs and velvets, her cheeks crimson with the effects of the keen, frosty air, and the exercise she had been taking.

"I am very glad to see you," I said, as I handed her a chair. "There are some things you women know more about, than an old bachelor like me, and I want to consult you. I have concluded to go to housekeeping."

Eliza's face brightened into an expression even more beaming than the one she had previously bestowed on me. It never occurred to me, that she could be thinking of my future home as a convenient residence for herself and three. She answered warmly—

"An excellent idea, brother Sandie, if you are prepared for all the expense and trouble it involves. The expense, to be sure, is not much of a consideration to you. You have been so successful, that you would not require so close an economy in your house as I used to practice in poor Robert's time. He always said I made one dollar do the work of three. But there will be a great deal of trouble. In the first place, you'll have to find a housekeeper."

"The very thing I wanted to speak to you about."

Her smile was positively brilliant.

"How kind, Sandie."

"Not kind at all, troubling you about my affairs."

"For shame! as if you ever had reason to think that anything I could do for you would be a trouble."

A very just remark, considering that her voluntary service amounted, besides frequent visits, to a pair of slippers, with a pink-eyed pussy-cat on each toe, and a smoking-cap with the device of a green-eyed poodle, couchant.

I hastened to place before her the paper in which I had marked the advertisement which heads this article.

"There, Eliza, there is what I have been thinking about. Somehow I fancy I should like Mrs. M. L. Smith; Mary, I imagine her name is. I am going to write to box 1004."

"But aren't you acting on impulse, Sandie?"

"Perhaps so—I always do—and, somehow, my ventures have been tolerably fortunate."

"Yes, but this is such an important thing. Of course you know"—and she laughed rather uneasily—"that you will be sure to marry the lady."

Marry! I believe every woman has in her character the elements of an Eve. Here was an apple I should never have seen, but for my sister-in-law. It was my turn to laugh.

"Why, no, Eliza. That is an objection, of course, which I never thought of. I don't imagine it would prove to be one with me, though. I am not a marrying man. Besides, she is without doubt a widow with children, and—"

I stopped, for I remembered my sister's bereavement and incumbrances. Her face turned crimson.

"All men do not think it impossible to marry a widow with children, and you may not, when Mrs. Smith has kept house for you for six months; though, to be sure, I don't think some women would ever make up their minds to marry again."

I supposed "some women," referred to herself, and I was glad of this hit as to her sentiments, for poor Robert had left his family very comfortable, and I did not want to see his children subject to the untender mercies of a second papa. After a few more cautions from Mrs. Bishop, and a few strong expressions of admiration for various articles of feminine adornment from little Eliza, which extracted from the pocket of her good natured uncle the customary amount of bush money, my visitors departed, and I wrote my letter to box 1004. In it I stated my residence, the salary I was willing to pay, and the number of my household. I gave her my name, and the names of a few of my friends who would be ready to afford her whatever information she required as to my means and character. I added a postscript to say that I particularly objected to children, and would make it a point with my housekeeper to leave hers behind her. If she liked the terms and the stipulations, I requested her to call at my counting-room the ensuing morning.

It would be idle to say that I attended very closely to business the next forenoon. The housekeeping fever, the home longing, had taken full possession of me. I must confess, besides, to no small amount of curiosity as to the personal appearance of M. L. Smith. I wanted an agreeable housekeeper. Not too young—that wouldn't look well—no toothless, wrinkled crone to sit opposite me at my board, but a pleasant, cheerful woman, young enough to make my home lively.

It was about eleven o'clock when my young man waited upon the lady in. My previous favorable impressions were fully confirmed by her appearance. I did not think her handsome, certainly in the style of sister-in-law. She was a small woman, light-footed, and slender, with a sunny, pleasant face, which might have testified to thirty-five summers, but no winters, surely; or, if she had met storm or chill, she had borne them with such brave patience, that her face reflected only the sunshine. Her brown hair was put simply and smoothly away from her tranquil face. Her eyes were frank and cheerful. Her mouth not small, but winning and smiling. When she spoke, her low, pleasant tones endorsed the expression of her countenance.

"Mr. Bishop, I believe; the gentleman who wrote this letter?"

And she drew my epistle from her pocket.

"The same, madam."

"I came, sir, to say that I would accept your propositions, if you still wish it, now that we have met."

I was about to say that I wished it more than ever, since I had seen her, but fortunately recollected, in time, that compliments to my housekeeper were no proper part of the programme, and very decorously concluded my engagement in a matter-of-fact and business manner.

The next week she entered upon her duties. I had never known what it was to be so comfortable. My house was a model of convenience and simple elegance; at least, my sister-in-law, when she went over it, previous to Mrs. Smith's commencement, pronounced it perfect. I had a sort of home feeling that I had never known before; room enough for all my possessions; a place to welcome my friends to; a very agreeable companion in my housekeeper when I chose to talk to her, an unobtrusive minister to my comfort, when I was silent.

True, Mrs. Bishop found, whenever she honored me with a visit, that something or other was not ordered as she had managed it in poor, dear Robert's time. "Housekeepers, even the best of them," she was wont to remark, "require a little looking after. They can't be expected to take so much interest in one's affairs, as one's own relations." Her comments did not give me much uneasiness, however.

I went home one day a little earlier than usual. I thought a quiet chat with my housekeeper, over the dining-room fire, would not be unpleasant. I had begun already, to take altogether more interest in her than I was prepared to acknowledge to myself. I pictured, as I hurried home, the cheerful room, the table handsomely laid, and Mrs. Smith in her neat, quiet dress, sitting by the fire with book or work, waiting for the dinner to be brought up. As I reached my own door, however, I found it open, and three children of varying ages, taking a most affectionate farewell of my housekeeper. I had never cared enough for any one before to experience such an emotion as jealousy, but I think no other word would adequately describe my feelings as I walked into the parlor and shut the door. Presently Mrs. Smith made her appearance.

"I am very sorry, sir," she began.

"Not at all, madam."

"O, but I am. I remember your stipulations about the children, perfectly. I surely did not intend they should annoy you. I presumed you would have no objections to their coming sometimes in your absence, and I like to see them as often as I can, but they shall not be here again at an hour when you are likely to come home."

She must have thought me an ungracious boor, for I growled out, merely,

"No matter—no matter at all."

I was in an ill humor. The pleasant anticipations with which I had hurried home had not been realized. Moreover, I suspected I was becoming too much interested in my housekeeper to like to be reminded that others had stronger claims upon her. That evening I sat on one side of the bright fire, and Mrs. Smith on the other. I abhor furnaces—it is one of my whims. I loved, when I was a boy, to make pictures in the fire, and the habit and I have grown old together. We had sat silently for some time. I was watching in two embers two little boats sailing on lovingly side by side. At length I asked, abruptly,

"What was Mr. Smith's business, madam?"

"A merchant. He was in a dry goods firm; and able to give us every luxury until he failed."

So that was it. He had failed and died, and left her all those children to support. I looked into the fire again. The boats had drifted far apart, and were sailing down a flame colored river—

"He on the one side—she on the other."

I mused on, half sorrowfully, until at length I said, speaking unconsciously out loud—

"Perhaps I could have stood the children, if it weren't for thinking that she had loved somebody else. She'd be looking back, and all the time comparing me with No. 1."

"Sir."

My voice had attracted Mrs. Smith's attention from her book, but she had evidently not understood what I said, and was looking up inquiringly. Thank fortune for that. I laughed, a little nervously, I imagine.

"Nothing. I was not speaking to you. In fact I think I was talking in my sleep."

She looked down again, and I watched her, instead of the fire. She was pretty—prettier than I had given her credit for at first. I thought, too, she might be younger than thirty, as I surveyed her now. There was a delicate peach blossom color on her cheek, an innocent, almost girlish expression on her face. Well, cheek and expression were nothing to me. I got up and went disconsolately to bed.

The next day, my sister-in-law came to see me. As usual, she had plenty of suggestions to make to Mrs. Smith, which that lady received in silence, but with a peculiar twinkle in her eyes. At length Mrs. Bishop followed me into the library.

"Well, Sandie," she remarked, seating herself, "since you do not seem disposed to fulfil my prediction and marry your housekeeper, I suppose I may speak of her freely. I have thought, from the first, that she was a very artful woman. I have no doubt that when she came here, she meant to marry you. She is very attentive now, but of course she has her own motives. I can see. If any trial should come, you would find out who your friends are."

Mrs. Bishop was right in this, for the trial did come, and I saw who my friend was, my own friend.

I was taken ill early in the Spring. My sickness came on suddenly. I was attacked with severe headache and sharp pains in my back. The first two days Mrs. Bishop spent in assiduous care of me; though, to confess the truth, her attentions were unwelcome, and I would far rather have been abandoned to the tender mercies of my housekeeper, who rarely came into the room when my sister-in-law was there. The third morning my physician pronounced my disease small-pox. Even in that moment of terror I looked at Eliza Bishop. Her face paled, and I could see her hands shake. She spoke in a trembling voice—

"I wish I could stay with you, Sandie; I wish I could. If it were only for myself, I would, but my children."

"I would not have you stay," I answered. "I would not have you run the risk for worlds. I trust you have not endangered yourself. Good-bye, sister Eliza."

She went out of the room, and I turned to Mrs. Smith, who was standing near.

"Now you must go, also. The doctor will find some one to nurse me, and you, too, must look out for your children."

"I must look out for you, sir. My duty is here, now. Live or die, I shall stay with you while you need me."

The little woman's voice was firm, and her eyes shone with a clear, resolute light. I had not thought she possessed so much will and courage.

"Consider," I said. "Do you realize all the risk you run? Of loathsome disease, disfigurement, perhaps a terrible death!"

"I have considered all, sir, and shall stay."

Was I selfish to allow it? Perhaps so, but even in that hour of deadly peril, I, who had never loved woman before, longed to have her at my side, to share my danger, nay, to die, if I died; to live for me, or, failing that, for no other.

I need not give the details of the sickness which followed—the weeks of terrible suffering when my body and soul could scarcely cling together. I look back upon it, strong man as I am, with shivering dread.

It was owing, under God, to her, that Death, who stood waiting at my pillow, day after day, at length passed me by. What a nurse she was! —vigilant, sleepless, untiring. Perhaps it was owing to her calm courage that she did not take the disease. She seemed to be always near me, and yet she found time to make herself look as neat and even tasteful as usual. Everything in the room, after I was able to notice anything, was in scrupulous order. Delicate flowers, as fresh and sweet as herself, bloomed on my table; a pleasant dreamy, half-light filled the apartment. What a change from the old boarding-house days!

I was thinking of all this gracious care and tenderness as I sat up for the first time at the window. Mary—I had learned to call her so during my illness—was out of the room, but the tokens of her presence were all around me. Presently she came in and sat down by my side.

"Mary," I said, almost involuntarily, "I have been thinking I ought to thank you for saving my life. And yet I do not know as I am grateful. Life will not be of much value, unless you will share it. With you for my wife, I could be happy, but if you cannot love me, you might as well have let me go by the board."

I had spoken as I felt, seriously and sadly, but a merry twinkle danced in her eyes.

"So you think, now, you could stand not only the children, but my having loved some one else?"

"Then you heard the foolish speech after all. It wasn't meant for your ear. Forgive it. You are too good for me, any way. I ask nothing better, if you can love me, than to take you just as you are."

"Children and all?"

"Children and all; I'll try to be a father to them, Heaven helping me."

"I shall be satisfied, sir, if you will be their brother, since they are my mother's children, not mine."

"And Mr. Smith is—?"

"My father. He failed in business last year, though I am happy to say he is living and well. I wanted to help him, but the only thing I knew how to do, was to keep house. It seemed a proper enough occupation for an old maid like me. You see I am not very young, sir. When I found you thought me a widow with children, I determined to favor the old mistake. I thought it would seem more dignified. I am not Mrs. Smith, though, but simply Mary Smith, spinster, at your service, or at service in your family, if you like that way of stating it better."

"And you will change your title, and retain your situation?"

Her answer is no one's business but my own.

Six weeks afterwards, my sister-in-law was invited to my wedding. She looked surprised, but she forbore any comment, save a reminder of her prediction, that Mrs. Smith would conquer my prejudices against widows with incumbrances. The laugh was against her when I told her that the future Mrs. Sandie Bishop was to go to the hymenial altar for the first time.

I have been married five years. My prejudices against children have yielded to the fascinations of a bold little Sandie, and a winsome little Mary, and sitting by my own peaceful fire-side, I bless the day and Providence that first made me known to my housekeeper.

The constantly increasing demand from those who have long used the PILLS and the satisfaction which all express in regard to their use, has induced me to place them within the reach of all.

The Profession well know that different Cathartics act on different portions of the bowels.

The FAMILY CATHARTIC PILL has, with due reference to this well established fact, been compounded from a variety of the purest Vegetable Extracts, which act alike on every part of the alimentary canal, and are good and safe in all cases where a Cathartic is needed, such as Derangements of the Stomach, Sleepiness, Pains in the Back and Loins, Costiveness, Pain and Soreness over the whole body, from sudden cold, which frequently, if neglected, end in a long course of Fever, Loss of Appetite, a Creeping Sensation of Cold over the body, Restlessness, Headache, or weight in the head, all Inflammatory Diseases, Worms in Children or Adults, Rheumatism, a great Purifier of the Blood and many diseases to which flesh is heir, too numerous to mention in this advertisement. Dose, 1 to 3.

CHILDREN TEETHING

MRS. WINSLOW,
An experienced Nurse and Female Physician, presents to the attention of mothers, her

SOOTHING SYRUP,
FOR CHILDREN TEETHING,

which greatly facilitates the process of teething, by softening the gums, reducing all inflammation—will allay ALL PAIN and spasmodic action, and is

SURE TO REGULATE THE BOWELS

Depend upon it, mothers, it will give rest to yourselves, and

RELIEF AND HEALTH TO YOUR INFANTS.

We have put up and sold this article for over ten years, and CAN SAY, IN CONFIDENCE AND TRUTH of it what we never have been able to say of any other medicine,—NEVER HAS IT FAILED, IN A SINGLE INSTANCE, TO EFFECT A CURE, when timely used. Never did we know an instance of dissatisfaction by any one who used it. On the contrary, all are delighted with its operations, and speak in terms of commendation of its magical effects and medical virtues. We speak in this matter "WHAT WE DO KNOW," after ten years' experience, AND PLEDGE OUR REPUTATION FOR THE FULFILLMENT OF WHAT WE HERE DECLARE. In almost every instance where the infant is suffering from pain and exhaustion, relief will be found in fifteen or twenty minutes after the syrup is administered.

This valuable preparation is the prescription of one of the most EXPERIENCED and SKILLFUL NURSES in New England, and has been used with NEVER FAILING SUCCESS in

THOUSANDS OF CASES.

It not only relieves the child from pain, but invigorates the stomach and bowels, corrects acidity, and gives tone and energy to the whole system. It will almost instantly relieve GRIPING IN THE BOWELS, AND WIND COLIC, and overcome convulsions, which, if not speedily remedied, end in death. We believe it the BEST AND SUREST REMEDY IN THE WORLD, in all cases of DYSENTERY AND DIARRHŒA IN CHILDREN, whether it arises from teething, or from any other cause. We would say to every mother who has a child suffering from any of the foregoing complaints—DO NOT LET YOUR PREJUDICES, NOR THE PREJUDICES OF OTHERS, stand between you and your suffering child, and the relief that will be SURE—yes ABSOLUTELY SURE—to follow the use of this medicine, if timely used. Full directions for using will accompany each bottle. None genuine unless the fac-simile of CURTIS & PERKINS, New York, is on the outside wrapper. Sold by Druggists throughout the world.
