JUBILEE CONTINUED

RECEPTION AND LUAU AT OAHU COLLEGE.

Historical Address—Other Short Speeches.

The second and last day of the Semi-Centennial of Oahu College has passed. Friday morning the visitors at the College began to assemble before 11 o'clock, the appointed hour when the reception was to have been held. Professor and Mrs. Hosmer, of the College, were assisted by Mr. A. F. Judd in receiving what may be truly called a multitude. So continuous was the throng of callers that more than an hour was taken up in receiving them. Shortly before 12 o'clock noon, Her Majesty Queen Liliuokalani arrived, accompanied by Hon. A. S. Cleghorn and attended by Major Robertson, H. M.'s Chamberlain, Captain Lilikalani, Mrs. Jas. W. Robertson, Mrs. C. B. Wilson, Mrs. J. O. Carter, Mrs. W. H. Aldrich and Mrs. C. A. Brown. All the members of the Cabinet were present, with the exception of His Excellency Hon. H. A. Widemann, who was absent on account of sickness.

After the reception, a large number of the people sat down to one of the largest luaus that Honolulu has seen for many days. It was truly a royal spread, and heartily was in enjoyed by fully over a thousand people. All the meats were cooked in the Hawaiian style; besides the fish, roast pig, potatoes, melons, etc., there was an inexhaustable supply of poi. Few were seen using knives, forks or spoons. Besides the articles of food mentioned, there were cakes, sandwiches, etc., enough to supply a much larger and hungrier crowd.

The appetites of all having been satiated, attention was turned to the intellectual feast. Chief Justice A. F. Judd was chairman for the occasion. He, before calling upon the speakers, mentioned the receipt of many letters, reading one from Hon. C. R. Bishop, who is now probably on his way to Europe, if he has not already arrived there. The reading of this letter, as well as when frequent mention was made of the greatest benefector of the College, called forth hearty applause, showing the appreciation of his favors for this institution.

Another letter that was read by the Chief Justice was from Messrs. B. F. Dillingham and A. L. Smith, in which was offered a $1,000 bond of the Oahu Railway and Land Company. This was offered as a memorial in honor of the late Rev. Lowell Smith.

Mr. Judd then, as upon every presentation of a speaker, spoke in a manner that showed his apt qualifications as a master of ceremonies. He introduced Prof. W. D. Alexander, the "Oahu College Historian," who read an historical address. The speaker was frequently interrupted by hearty applause. It speaks for itself as THE paper of this anniversary of the founding of Oahu College.

The address is given in full on the second page.

Then followed a series of addresses of "three to five minutes each," which with hardly an exception took up double, some treble, the "five minutes." To give even a brief outline of each speech would take up column after column of space. Each one was replete with anecdotes and reminiscences of their old college days, showing that those venerable grey-haired men were boys as boys are. Their remarks and expose of each other at times caused smiles both "broad and loud."

His Excellency Sam'l Parker, Minister of Foreign Affairs, was the first called upon. He warmly responded, congratulating the college upon its success, both wishing and prophesying greater achievements.

Rev. Hiram Bingham answered to the call on the part of the original donors to the institution. He spoke with much feeling and force, telling of the early donations, how the land was first acquired by his father from the then Governor of Oahu, and how freely and cheerfully it was given.

Rev. E. G. Beckwith spoke for the former teachers of Punahou. He told of their early training and of the Christian spirit that filled their minds and was imbued in the hearts of their pupils. He mentioned the trust that was placed in former presidents, and encouraged and beseeched the present President, Prof. F. A. Hosmer, to follow their examples.

Miss M. A. Chamberlain answered to the introduction by the Chief Justice with remarks for the "Daughters of Punahou." After her reading, the Glee Club favored the audience with a song that called for an encore.

Then came the anecdotes and reminiscences by the score. Rev. T. L. Gulick, for the "Boys;" Hon. H. P. Baldwin, the "Maui Boys;" Mr. W. R. Castle, the day students.

"Professor" Wahalama was persuaded to appear; he was quite overcome with his first appearance before the public, that his tongue refused utterance. A collection of some thirty dollars had been taken up among the old alumni for his benefit by the way of kindly rememberance for his many years of faithful service.

After a song was sung by a number of voices, Rev. C. M. Hyde responded for the Trustees; as did Mr. P. C. Jones for the business men who have made munificent endowments to the institution. Their earnest, sober words were no less listened to than the pleasing remarks of Rev. W. H. Gulick and General S. C. Armstrong.

Prof. Hosmer was prevailed upon to address the assemblage, which he did in a few well-chosen sentiments.

A prayer was then offered by Rev. Dr. E. G. Beckwith, after which several rousing College yells given, in which not only the old and young boys but the ladies joined. Thus ended the Semi-Centennial of Oahu College. It is fraught with incidents dear to many, and the recollections refreshed in the memory by this reunion will last as long as live the participants.

HISTORICAL ADDRESS.

Delivered by Prof. W. D. Alexander at Oahu College, June 26, 1891.

MR. PRESIDENT, LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:

It seems almost but yesterday when we celebrated the Quarter Century anniversary of the founding of the school at Punahou. It is hard to realize that half a century has passed away since some who are present here to-day entered this school as pupils. Yet, as I look around, I am reminded of the fact that the crown of gray hair is no longer as rare as it once was among it graduates, and that a number of our best and noblest comrades have dropped out of our ranks in the battle of life.

It is true that our Alma Mater is still a small and unpretending institution, but it is also true that the Universities of Harvard, Yale and Princeton sprang from equally humble beginnings, and that they too had to pass through a long period of poverty, and to encounter prejodice, misrepresentation and obloquy. Our feeling to-day is not one of complaint, but rather of gratitude to the kind Providence which has favored the College thus far, and to the noble benefactors who have placed it on an independent basis.

The site which was chosen for it is not without historical associations. It has been observed that springs—the "eyes" of the land, as the Hebrews called them—have often been the haunts of the Muses, and centres of rising civilization. And we may venture to hope that not even the spring of Castalia or that of Vaucluse will, in future ages, be more illustrious than that of Punahou; and that this last may prove to be what its name signifies, a "new spring" of knowledge and pure religion.

The ancient legend concerning it was thus told to the writer by the venerable Kauhi and his wife Martha Pohopu, some thirty years ago. Long ago an aged couple were living near the present spring. It was a time of drought and famine, when the people were obliged to search the mountains for ti-root and wild yams for food, and to trudge to Kamoiliili to fill their calabashes with drinking water. The outer spring seems to have dried up. One night the old lady dreamed that a man appeared to her, to whom she complained bitterly about her having to go so far for water, upon which he said, "He wai no!"—(there is water)—and told her that beneath the stump of an old Pandanus tree near by there was water. She awoke her husband and told him the dream, but he made light of it. The next night he had a similar dream. The apparition directed him to go to the sea and catch some red fish, to roast them in ti-leaves, reserving a part as an offering to the family deities, and then to pull up the old tree by the roots. He awoke, and lo! it was a dream. But the impression it made on him was so strong that, in the morning, he hastened to carry out the directions that he had received, and when at last he pulled up the tree, water oozed out from beneath its roots. He dug out the place, and thus was formed the inner spring. A fish-pond was formed below the spring, and a dozen or more taro-patches irrigated from it.

After the conquest of Oahu by Kamehameha I. in 1795, he gave Moanalua, Kapunahou and other lands to Kameeiamoku, one of the four great chiefs who had raised him to the throne, and who had aided him in all his wars. This chief was notorious for having captured the little schooner Fair American, and having massacred the crew with the exception of Isaac Davis in revenge for an outrage committed by Capt. Metcalf, of the Eleanor, some months before. Kameeiamoku died at Lahaina in 1802, and his lands descended to his son Hoapili, the most intimate friend of Kamehameha I., who afterwards became Governor of Maui. Hoapili resided several years at Punahou, near the spring, and during the Conqueror's second residence on Oahu, from 1804 to 1811, he also and his wives frequently visited this charming retreat. Hoapili gave Punahou to his daughter Liliha, who married Governor Boki, and on their return from England in the Blonde in 1825, they frequently resided here.

In 1831 Kaahumanu caused a stone wall to be built, extending from Punchbowl Hill, across Punahou, nearly to Moiliili, in order to protect the cultivated lands above it from the cattle and horses grazing on the Kulaokahua Plain. Part of this old wall still exists between Punahou and Piikoi streets. A large rock was placed on each side of the Manoa road by Governor Kuakini, to form a gateway, of which the smaller rock on the Ewa side still remains. The larger rock on the other side, about ten feet in height, and weighing several tons, in spite of its historical associations, was broken into pieces, about 1857, and used in building the wall enclosing the old "lower pasture." The story of the moving of this rock, as told by Dr. Judd, is as follows:

"When Kuakini, alias Gov. Adams, had called out the people of this district to build the wall, he assigned the section adjoining Punahou to the 'Hulumanu,' or body-guard to the young king, Kamehameha III. The 'big rock' was then exhumed from its bed (on the west side of the road leading to Manoa Valley, opposite the old 'Cow Pen'), and rolled upon a frame-work of ship's spars. The young king then seated himself upon the apex of the rock, and gave the word of command when rock, king and all were lifted upon the shoulders of the Hulumanus—numerous as ants tugging at a kernel of corn—and carrid it down to its place."

The advantages of Punahou, as a site for a boarding-school, were observed as early as 1830, for in that year the Rev. Reuben Tinker, while riding past, remarked to Dr. Baldwin, his companion, "Tnat, sir, is the site of the future college." And before Mr. Bingham's return to the United States in August, 1840, he had offered the land for this purpose.

In 1831, Mr. Bingham built the "old house" of adobe, behind the site of the President's house (near a clump of hau trees), where it stood for over thirty years. To this cool and quiet retreat he often retired from the heat and noise of the plain.

The land lying between the taro patches and the gate was planted with sugar cane in those days, and the famous "bathing pond" (afterwards enlarged by Mr. Rice), was first excavated to serve as a storage reservoir for the purpose of irrigation.

The wall along Punahou street was built in 1836 under the direction of Mr E O. Hall assisted by Mr. H. Dimond, while the remainder of the enclosure was completed by the natives under Mrs. Bingham's supervision.

The need of a school for their children had long been felt by the missionaries (who were themselves men of liberal education), and no hardship of their lot was so keenly felt as the heart-breaking separation from their children, sent away from loving homes at a tender age, to a distant land for their education.

At the General Meeting of the American Mission in May, 1837, it was voted that the enclosure of the premises be completed, but that the erection of buildings be deferred until there should be a definite prospect of a teacher for the school.

The great financial crisis of 1837-8 in the United States compelled severe retrenchment in all the Missions, so that after another discussion in 1839, the subject was again dropped. But in the General Meeting of May, 1840, it was resolved "That it was expedient to establish a boarding school at Punahou, that the sum of one thousand ($1,000) dollars be appropriated to commence building with, that Rev. Reuben Tinker be invited to take charge of the school, and that Dr. G. P. Judd, Rev. Lowell Smith and Mr. S. N. Castle be a committee to carry these resolutions into effect." Mr. Tinker, however, declined to serve, returning to the States in October, 1840, so that nothing further was done that year.

At length in the meeting of May, 1841, the school was definitely founded, the sum of two thousand dollars was appropriated for buildings (which was supplemented by private subscriptions), and Rev. Daniel Dole with his wife, who had just arrived, together with Miss Marcia Smith, were appointed teachers.

The first Board of Trustees was then chosen, consisting of Messrs. Armstrong, Chamberlain, Dole, Emerson and Judd. During the year 1841, the site was prepared under Mr. Chamberlain and Dr. Judd's direction, a cellar dug, and the old one-story adobe thatched buildings erected, enclosing two courts open on the lower side. Four additional rooms were built in 1844 at an expense of $600. They lasted for forty years, but exist no longer except in the memories of the older alumni. The "Rice Hall" was built in 1846 and the "Dole Hall" in 1848.

It was voted in 1842 that the Trustees have discretionary power to admit other children besides those belonging to the Mission, provided that they board at the school. This permission was somewhat enlarged in 1849.

The school was opened at Punahou, July 11th, 1842, with fifteen scholars in attendance that day. During the first year, there were thirty-four pupils, of whom fifteen were boarders, their ages varying from 7 to 12. It was in that year (1842) that some of the pupils planted the old tamarind tree, which still stands in front of the "Rice Building." Although the school was in part self-supporting, and most of the provisions were produced on the place, yet it is surprising to find that the cost of board during the first two years averaged only 50 cents a week. There was plenty of "plain living" if not "high thinking" in those days. The youngsters were not spoiled by luxury or flattery.

In the summer of 1844, the faculty was reinforced by Mr. and Mrs. Rice, who were transferred from Hana, Maui, to assist in the school, where they remained till 1854, Mr. Rice having special charge of financial matters and of the out-of-door work.

We read that in 1846, the boys worked three hours a day, chiefly in cultivating the farm.

I think I may be indulged in dwelling a little more in detail on that first period of the school, when it formed part of the Mission establishment, from 1841 1853, as it was so unique an experiment in education, and under such peculiar conditions. Probably no teachers ever had a deeper sense of personal responsibility for the children committed to their care, or more unselfish devotion to their work. The atmosphere of the school was Puritan in the best sense, dominated by the grand idea of Duty. Perhaps some of the "boys" may now think that there was in it more of Law than of Gospel, more of the spirit of the Old Dispensation than of the New.

Be that as it may, the same ideal was kept before us, as the great object of life, which Dr. Arnold impressed on the young men of Rugby, viz.: to do as much good as possible in the world; and the lives of devoted men like Brainard, Payson and Judson were constantly held up as models for imitation.

In short, the object aimed at was to develope the moral and spiritual nature equally with the intellect, and to lay the foundation of the character deep and solid in religious principle.

Our devoted and indefatigable matron, Miss Marcia Smith, had an intense abhorrence of shiftlessness, and labored to impress upon us a sense of the inestimable value of time. Pains was also taken to eradicate any self-conceit or undue self-assertion on the part of the youngsters, some of whom thought that this austere discipline was carried too far, though all will now acknowledge the debt of gratitude which they owe to her.

Here I would fain pay a tribute to the memory of the founder, who planted the germ, and nurtured it through its period of poverty and obscurity, Rev. Daniel Dole, the ripe scholar, the patient instructor, the Christian gentleman, the results of whose labors speak for him better than any words of mine. Under his administration the school gained the confidence and esteem of the island community, while his pupils generally took high honors in the first colleges of the United States.

The educational methods and text-books of those days may be regarded as antiquated, but they produced habits of accuracy and literary tastes, which have since in many cases born fruit. The defects of the course were common to most schools of that period.

The practical and business side of education was attended to by Father Rice, who gave us object lessons in diligence, economy and thrift, as well as the example of a noble, unselfish life. The grounds were then cultivated with crops of corn, beans, pumpkins, bananas, etc., which helped to defray the expenses of the school.

With her came a gentle and gracious companion, with her refining and elevating influence, who brought something of "sweetness and light" into our narrow and secluded life, and taught us lessons of priceless value, which could not be learned from books. Surely her "boys" will "arise and call her blessed," and "her own works do praise her in the gates."

A very erroneous impression has been created if any one supposes that it was "all work and no play" in those days.

The "old set" of boys were passionately fond of open air sports, such as prisoner's base, base ball, alias "ai puni;" played with less science but more fun than in these days, wicket, running and jumping matches, swimming, etc. Saturday afternoons were generally spent in excursions to the mountains or the sea; and one party achieved the feat of scaling the ridge back of Manoa Valley, descending the precipice into Koolau and walking home by way of the Nuuanu pali the same day. They named all the principal peaks of the region, and made collections of ferns and shells, and observations, which are even now modifying the current theories held about the evolution of species. Time would fail me to recount the tragic story of the deer, the wars with trespassing goats and their owners, the wonderful school papers called the "Gazette" and the "Star," and many other boyish memorabilia.

The day scholars generally walked to and from school across the super-heated, shimmering, treeless plain, bare, except for the creeping nohu with its prickly burrs, the terror of bare footed urchins.

In 1849, steps began to be taken looking towards the enlargement of the plan of the institution.

A charter was granted by the Government, June 6th, 1849, to the Trustees of Punahou School, seven in number, empowering the Mission to fill future vacancies in the corporation.

The Rocky Hill pasture and the Manoa wood lot were purchased and enclosed the same year.

In 1855, the land of Punahou was conveyed by Royal Patent 1958 to the American Board, and by that body, 128.94 acres of it were deeded to the Trustees of Oahu College March 12th, 1863. The stones for the present school house were quarried from Rocky Hill pasture before 1849, but the building was not completed till 1852. The rate of tuition was fixed in 1851 at $10 a term, and the price of board for teachers at $2 a week.

Miss Marcia Smith returned to the United States in 1852, after ten years of faithful work. We are glad to learn that she is still living at Dover, Illinois, at the advanced age of 85, and enjoying a serene and happy old age.

During that first period of 12 years, 1841-53, 121 pupils received instruction, of whom about 93, or 77 per cent of the whole number, are still living, of whose record any institution might be proud. The "fossils" have held out well. About the end of this first period, important changes were taking place, of which we have not yet seen the full results.

The discovery of gold in California in 1849, and in Australia in 1851, brought this "hermit kingdom" into close connection with the rest of the civilized world, and into the track of the world's commerce. At the same time a far-reaching series of measures was commenced by the American Board, in view of its gradual withdrawal from these islands as a missionary field, of the reorganization of the Hawaiian Evangelical churches on an independent basis, and of the more permanent settlement of its missionaries here as Hawaiian subjects.

It was plainly seen, however, that they could not safely withdraw from the Islands until they should have established here a permanent institution of learning.

It was fitting and proper, when a constitutional government had been organized here, and when the independence of this Kingdom had been recognized by foreign powers, that steps should be taken for our becoming more independent of other countries in education as well as in other respects, and that this institution, which had been founded as a private school, should then be placed on a broader and more permanent basis as a national college.

Moved by such considerations as these, eight years after the founding of the school, its Trustees applied to the Government for a charter, which, as we have stated, was granted in 1849.

In anticipation, however, of the future growth of the country, a new and enlarged charter was applied for and granted May 23d, 1853, under the title of "Oahu College," with thirteen Trustees, including the President. It was a year of "great expectations," which are not yet fully realized; and it was the hope of the Trustees to furnish here a full college course, so that our young people might be able to obtain a liberal education without leaving the Islands.

The "hour and the man" had come for an important step in advance.

The Rev. E G. Beckwith, who had arrived here in 1851, and had conducted the Royal School with remarkable success for three years, was formally installed in the office of President under the new charter on the 25th of September, 1854, Mr. Dole remaining two years longer as professor of languages. The new President proved himself not merely a teacher, but a born educator. The impulse which he gave not only to Oahu College but also to the cause of education throughout the Islands, is well known to you all.

A group of young men of unusual promise were induced to remain and form a collegiate class, most of whom afterwards entered advanced classes in New England colleges. In the spring of 1857, it was deemed best to suspend the college for nine months, and to send Pres. Beckwith to the United States to labor for its endowment, but he met with only partial success in consequence of the severe financial crisis of that year.

Still about $14,500 was raised in the United States at that time, besides a special grant from the American Board of $5,000.

The principal donor in the United States was the late James Hunnewell of Boston, who made donations at different times amounting in all to $10,000. He was the first officer on the brig "Thaddeus," which brought out the first Missionaries to these Islands, where he afterwards resided as a merchant, honored and esteemed by all who knew him. The American Board also made a special grant of $3,000, to build the first President's house, better known as the "Octagon," which was built in 1858.

The Hawaiian Government afterwards granted the land of Hamakuapoko on Maui and three small lands on Kauai, the sale of which realized $7,745 63.

In consideration of this grant to the endowment, the Government has the right of appointing two of the fifteen Trustees.

The college was reopened in January, 1858, after the long intermission, and went on prosperously with seventy-six pupils during the year.

In February, 1859, occurred the famous expedition of the Faculty and twenty of the students on the schooner Kinoole to visit the great eruption of Mauna Loa of that year. On the 22d of August, Pres. Beckwith was obliged by the state of Mrs. Beckwith's health to tender his resignation in order to seek a cooler climate.

The Rev. Eli Corwin acted as "President pro tem" until the arrival of the Rev. C. T. Mills and wife in November, 1860. The experience which they had gained by conducting the Batticotta Seminary in Ceylon for five years stood them in good stead here. I need not enlarge on the well-known administrative ability which they brought to the service of the college, and which afterwards found a fuller scope and a wider field in California. Their friends and former pupils here rejoice in the success of the sister institution, which bears their name, and which has just celebrated its twenty-fifth anniversary, and regret the absence to-day of its honored foundress.

When failing health compelled Pres. Mills to resign his position in the summer of 1864, he had brought up the college from a position of partial dependence on the American Board to a self-supporting basis.

Among the improvements made during his administration may be mentioned the laying of water pipes from the spring to the building in 1861, and the addition of verandahs to the school hall in 1853, the funds for which were mostly raised by a concert given by the school. The course of study was also rearranged, and in some branches, such as vocal music, the results then attained have not been surpassed since. One sweet voice, which added a charm to the school exercises of those days, has since delighted thousands in many other lands.

For the next seven years, the writer of this essay was forced by circumstances to occupy the difficult position which had been so ably filled by his three gifted predecessors. Fortunately I had efficient helpers. During the first year Prof. Brigham was my assistant, and as might be expected, the physical training of the students of both sexes was thoroughly attended to. During the remainder of my term, I had the able assistance of Prof. and Mrs. E. P. Church, who took special charge of the boarding establishment, as well as that of Mrs. M. R. Whitney and of Miss H. Coan and Mrs. Dillingham.

In 1865, a set of improved school desks were imported from Boston, to take the place of the ancient green desks which were transferred to the Waialua Girls' Boarding School. Two new pianos were purchased in 1865, for about $1,100.

On the 15th day of June, 1866, the 25th anniversary of the founding of the school was celebrated at Punahou with much enthusiasm.

In "looking backward" after the lapse of twenty years, it is easy to perceive many shortcomings and mistakes. It is a trite proverb that "hind sight is better than foresight." But I can say that the petty trials and sorrows of that time have faded and grown dim, while its nobler pleasures stand out more clearly in the picture gallery of memory.

The lasting friendships then formed with so many choice young spirits are the most precious treasures of my life. Their later careers I have followed with pleasure and pride; though several of my brightest pupils, who bid fair to become ornaments to their race, have left me to mourn their untimely death.

In the Spring of 1871, I accepted a position in the Government service, leaving the College under the able management of Professor and Mrs. Church (aided by Mr. Chickering), who maintained a high standard of discipline and scholarship.

A small printing press was purchased by the students, and a small weekly newspaper, the "Punahou Journal," published by them for several years, which was creditable to the school.

From this time two school omnibusses were run between Nuuanu and Punahou, which had the effect of increasing the attendance.

In the summer of 1875, President Church obtained a year's furlough, and in the following spring, having decided to remain in the United States, he tendered his resignation. It is with pleasure that we have since observed his uniform success as an educator, and the high estimation in which he is held by the teachers of Michigan.

Mr. Amasa Pratt, who had been temporarily filling his place, was formally elected President, April 17th, 1876. He filled the place with great acceptance for three years, but took the unwise step of resigning in 1878 to enter the sugar business. He afterwards returned to his true vocation, which he has followed for the past eight years, with great success at Columbus, Ohio.

Rev. W. L. Jones of Oakland, whose ability and force of character are well known here, accepted the position and entered upon its duties in June, 1878. The fortieth anniversary of the founding of the school, celebrated June 15, 1881, may be regarded as a turning point in the history of the College. A large and enthusiastic "love feast" was held in the old north court, at which the claims of the institution on its friends and alumni were eloquently presented. The Trustees published an appeal to its friends, both here and abroad, for a building fund of $50,000, and the appeal was not made in vain.

A goodly share of the wealth poured into this country by the Reciprocity Treaty has been invested in educational and benevolent work, and Oahu College has not been forgotten by her children. In 1880, the late Mrs. Laura Dickson and others contributed the necessary funds to lengthen the School Hall, by building an enclosed stairway on the N. E. end, thus enlarging the assembly hall and the library room.

On the 8th of January, 1881, S. N. Castle, Esq., resigned the Treasurership of the College, the duties of which he had faithfully discharged for forty years, without accepting any remuneration, and without the loss of a dollar from its funds. In 1882, more than $30,000 was contributed to the building fund, and during the next year the new main building was erected under Mr. Jones' supervision.

Another improvement of equal importance was the purchase of the Armstrong lot at the head of Richard street, and the opening of the Preparatory School there in January, 1883, under Miss L. Moore, which has supplied an urgent need.

During the summer of 1883, President Jones retired after five years of faithful service, and was succeeded by Rev. W. C. Merritt, who for seven years more conducted the affairs of the College with great energy, devotion and business ability. The following year the Bishop Hall of Science was built and furnished with a laboratory, apparatus, etc., out of Hon. C. R. Bishop's generous donation of $15,000 for the scientific department.

It can no longer be said that "Chemistry has to be taught without a laboratory, or Astronomy without a telescope." The chair of Chemistry and Natural Science has been ably filled, first by Professor Van Slyke, and then since 1889, by Professor A. B. Lyons, an alumnus of whom the College is proud. The Government assists this professorship by an annual grant of $1,200.

The late lamented Dr. S. C. Damon left by his will $4,500 to the College, part of the income of which was to be set apart for the Library; and in 1885, nearly $1,000 besides was raised for the purchase of new books. The new building, called the "President's House," was built by the liberality of friends of the College in the fall of 1885. In 1888 a fine swimming bath was added to the attractions of Punahou, to replace the old "bathing pond," which had been filled up. In the following year, $56,000 was added to the Endowment, of which sum $40,000 was given by Hon. C. R. Bishop, and $16,000 by other friends of the College. At the same time by the generosity of its patrons, the Preparatory School building was re-constructed and enlarged in a manner that left nothing to be desired.

After "seven years of plenty" and prosperity, the College was obliged last summer to lose the efficient services of Mr. and Mrs. Merritt.

The torch has been passed on to another hand, but its light still shines as brightly as ever, and we may congratulate President Hosmer on the auspicious beginning of his administration.

The good work still goes on, and as late as March the College received another munificent gift from Hon. C. R. Bishop of $50,000 towards the Endowment Fund. The noble donor evidently believes in the maxim: "Bis dat qui cito dat" (He gives twice who gives quickly). Long may he live to see the good results of this wise investment.

It is to be hoped, however, that this will not close the series of benefactions to Oahu College. Her friends have done nobly, but it still remains to provide the institution with ample means for a thorough course of physical training, that she may send forth sound minds in sound bodies to meet the trials of life.

One impression which this historical review impresses on the mind is the desirability of greater permanence in the Faculty of the College. Yale College has had but five presidents since 1795, averaging twenty-three years to an administration, while Oahu College has had nine since 1841. This is not the place to discuss the causes of this. No doubt the latter place is the harder of the two to fill under existing circumstances. Yet it is to be hoped that the present administration will, in this respect, follow the Yale precedents rather than our own.

The Fifty-year Catalogue will contain 904 names of pupils who have been connected with the institution since 1841, of whom 538 were males and 366 females. Of the whole number about 796 are believed to be living. Out of this number many have since graduated at colleges and professional schools in other countries, eighty are pursuing advanced studies elsewhere, eighteen are clergymen, twenty-eight are lawyers, eighteen are physicians, about thirty are engaged in teaching, while others are engaged in agricultural, mechanical or mercantile pursuits; in short, in every useful and honorable calling. As nearly as can be ascertained, 656, constituting a majority of the whole, have settled in Hawaii nei, and are counted among her most loyal and public spirited citizens. Indeed, the waters of the Punahou spring seem to have the same virtue that is ascribed to the fountain of Trevi in Rome, viz., that those who have drunk of it once are sure to return, sooner or later, to drink of it again.

But many who have remained abroad have shed lustre on their Alma Mater.

In the late civil war in the United States, a number of her alumni volunteered for service on the side of the Union, and bravely did their part in the bloodiest battles of the war, while others served in the Christian and Sanitary Commissions. Others have been engaged in an equally glorious warfare, in which "the weapons are not carnal, but spiritual," in Spain, China, Japan, and the United States.

As in the Grecian legend, the fountain of Arethusa descended beneath the sea to reappear in the far distant islet of Ortygia, off Syracuse, so a rill from the Punahou spring has gushed forth at Hampton, Virginia, and is making the waste places of the South to "rejoice and blossom as the rose." The elder school regards with pride her stately daughter, "Matre pulchra filia pulchrior" (fairer child of mother fair).

Time would fail me to call the roll of alumni who have reflected honor on their Alma Mater. It is not the few individuals who become conspicuous in the world's eye; but the high average character of the mass of its graduates, that constitutes the true glory of any school. Still I may be pardoned for referring with pride to a few absent friends, to a modest missionary in Japan, who is called by Prof. Romanes, "the most profound of living thinkers on the subject of evolution" (Rev J. T. Gulick), to the talented young mechanic whose designs and working drawings for the battleships of Uncle Sam's new fleet, have received such high praise from the Secretary of the Navy to our little colony of professional men and authors in Chicago, to the distinguished young scientist employed on the U. S. Geological Survey, and to many others who are laboring in many ways for the good of mankind, "That which they have done but earnest of the things that they shall do," during the next half-century.

Few of us will live to see the Centennial anniversary in 1941. Mighty changes will then have taken place, in which the pupils of this college will have borne an honorable part. The methods of teaching will have changed, new studies will have been developed, new realms of science will have been opened, but the moral purposes of knowledge will be the same, and the eternal principles of loyalty to God, of the love of truth, of devotion to the good of our fellow-men and of self-respect, will remain as the foundation upon which will rest the future character and success of Oahu College.

"German Syrup"

Croup. We have selected two or three lines from letters freshly received from parents who have given German Syrup to their children in the emergencies of Croup. You will credit these, because they come from good, substantial people, happy in finding what so many families lack—a medicine containing no evil drug, which mother can administer with confidence to the little ones in their most critical hours, safe and sure that it will carry them through.

ED. L. WILLITS, of Alma, Neb. I give it to my children when troubled with Croup and never saw any preparation act like it. It is simply miraculous.

Mrs. JAS. W. KIRK, Daughters' College, Harrodsburg, Ky. I have depended upon it in attacks of Croup with my little daughter, and find it an invaluable remedy.

Fully one-half of our customers are mothers who use Boschee's German Syrup among their children. A medicine to be successful with the little folks must be a treatment for the sudden and terrible foes of childhood, whooping cough, croup, diphtheria and the dangerous inflammations of delicate throats and lungs.

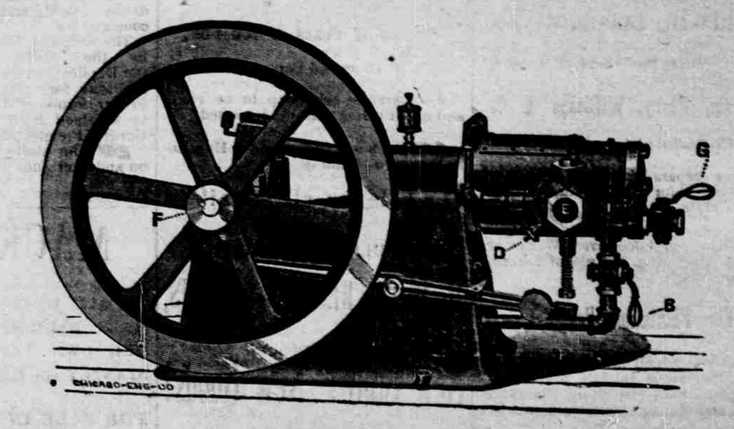
REGAN VAPOR ENGINE!



The above cut is an excellent illustration of our Horizontal Engines which we manufacture in sizes from ¾ to 20 Horse Power, and are adapted for Pumping, Electric Lighting, Running Elevators, Harvesting and Thrashing Machines, Printing Presses, Boot and Shoe Machinery, Circular, Band and Jig Saws, Hoisting, Mill and Mining Machinery, Coffee Mills and Roasters, Polishing and Fanning Machines, Ventilating Apparatus, Emery Wheels, etc.; in fact everywhere power is needed.

☞The REGAN VAPOR ENGINES having more than realized the anticipations of purchasers, we have now the pleasure to submit Local References.

REFERENCE:

MR. JOSEPH TINKER: HONOLULU, June 1, 1891.

DEAR SIR—I purchased from you one of your 2 Horse-Power HORIZONTAL REGAN VAPOR ENGINES, and after four months' trial it has worked in every way most satisfactorily. The Engine making 230 Revolutions and running a Rotary Pump with a belt making 180 Revolutions without any effort. It is delivering the water with great force 45 feet above, at the rate of 30 gallons per minute, or 1,800 gallons per hour. It is run by the yard man, and he finds no trouble whatever in running it. It is doing everything thatwas claimed for it, and I should consider it a very Handy, Safe and Simple Engine for anyone to run who is not an engineer, and therefore recommend these engines to anyone.

I remain, yours respectfully,
MARK. P. ROBINSON.

☞Illustrated Catalogues can be had and the Engine can be seen running in full operation at the CITY MEAT MARKET, Nuuanu street.

IOLANTHE.

The following is the plot of the opera to be presented at the Hawaiian Opera House to night:

ACT I.—Scene, a Fairy Grove.—Strephon, an Arcadian shepherd, is in love with Phyllis, a ward in Chancery. The Lord Chancellor has refused his consent to the marriage, and Strephon appeals to his mother Iolanthe, a fairy, to intercede for him. Iolanthe has just been pardoned by the Fairy Queen after a banishment of twenty-five years for having married a mortal The pardon has been granted on condition that she does not make herself known to her husband, who unknown to Strephon, is the Lord Chancellor. She however, consents and at that moment Phyllis and the peers enter, and Phyllis' jealousy is aroused at the sight of Iolanthe, whom she will not believe is Strephon's mother, as she looks so young. Phyllis then offers herself to Earls Tolloller and Ararat, but is not decided which to take. Strephon calls on the Fairy Queen for aid, and she punishes the lords by saying that Strephon shall go into Parliament and they shall vote just as he wishes them to. Fairies and peers part in anger.

ACT II.—Houses of Parliament. —Sentry stands guard. Fairies and peers meet and fall in love with each other. Queen enters and reproaches them with disobedience to the fairy law which is "Every fairy must die who marries a mortal." Lords Tolloller and Ararat are going to fight about Phyllis, but decide it is not worth while. The Lord Chancellor is in love with her himself and comes to the decision that he will marry her. Meanwhile, Strephon and Phyllis meet and make it up. Iolanthe then intercedes with the Lord Chancellor, and in so doing has to make herself known to him. The Queen enters and is going to put her to death, when she learns that all the fairies have married peers, and if she kills one she will have to kill all. The Lord Chancellor then suggests that the law be change to "Every fairy must die who DON'T marry a mortal." The Queen consents and marries the sentry, whereupon all go off to Fairyland.

To those who need a pleasant Tonic for any kind of debility, we can recommend Clements' as the best. For sale by HOLLISTER & Co
