CID agents get sued

Businesswoman cries illegal detention

By Rafael I. Santos

A BUSINESSWOMAN has filed a civil rights lawsuit against six police investigators, alleging she was illegally detained in February on suspicion that she was involved in drug trafficking.

Leticia Flores De Dumo filed a 9-page civil suit in the U.S. District Court yesterday afternoon.

Named as respondents were Claudio Norita, Jack Salas, John Sakau, Donald Babauta, Ishmael Aguon, and Paul Ogumoro, all from the Department of Public Safety's Criminal Investigation Division, and a certain Wally Guerrero.

De Dumo said she was working at her office in Lower Base on February 18 when Guerrero entered and inquired about Jack Torres, the general manager of a business with which she was working. Guerrero was acting as an agent for the DPS during that time, according to the suit.

When the agent left, De Dumo locked the front door of their office located at Rainbow Construction building. Five minutes later, Norita knocked on the front door asking that he be allowed to enter.

Moments after Norita entered, two other officers identified in the lawsuit as Salas and Ogumoro entered the premises and initially stood in the waiting area of the office. Then Sakau, Aguon and Babauta also came in.

De Dumo was interrogated by Norita, asking her if she received $700 from a man a few minutes before they arrived, the lawsuit stated. She said a man came in and asked for the general manager but that she did not receive any money from him.

Agent Salas then handcuffed her and told her she was under arrest for drug trafficking. Without any warrant or a probable cause, the investigators began

Board seeks audit of past CPA deals

THE BOARD of Directors of the Commonwealth Ports Authority yesterday approved a motion seeking an investigative audit of the authority's financial transactions and operations for the past five years.

During its monthly meeting, the board adopted a motion made by Vice Chairman Juan T. Guerrero to ask the Public Auditor to perform the audit looking into past official actions of members of previous boards.

According to Frank S. Rosario, CPA public information officer, the audit being sought would be different from the financial audit conducted on the authority every year.

It will seek to cover all expenditures, leases, contracts, purchases and all other financial deals the authority had five years back.

"It will be a wide-ranging audit," said Rosario, "covering almost all aspects of CPA's finances."

The audit is being pushed by the board owing to allegations in the past that some previous boardmembers have used their

CUC woes blamed on rates structure

By Rafael H. Arroyo

THE COMMONWEALTH Utilities Corp. defaulted on its contractual obligations to Commonwealth Development Authority and Mitsubishi due to its failure to establish an adequate rate structure, a draft federal audit report on the utilities firm indicated.

The audit, performed by the Interior Department's Inspector General covering the period October 1987 through September 1993, also cited the inadequate rates structure as reason why the utilities firm incurred or stands to incur additional interest charges of up to $16.4 million.

According to the draft audit report from the Interior Department Inspector General, CUC has gotten into trouble with its $51.6 million CDA loan debt and its $41.2 million contract with Mitsubishi after it failed to produce sufficient revenues to address the debts timely.

By not establishing an adequate utilities rate structure, it failed to provide for its operating costs and debt service and contractual obligations for capital improvement projects and equipment purchases.

"This condition occurred because the utilities corporation postponed its plans to raise utility rates," said Marvin Pierce, then acting Assistant IG for Audits, in a June 15 letter that accompanied the draft report.

This, he said, was because of the CNMI Legislature's opposition to the increase.

The audit, which was conducted by the IG from May 1993 through April 1994, is being finalized from its current draft form. It may be issued out next week.

The focus of the audit, according to Pierce is the effort being taken by the CUC to establish rates that amount to full cost recovery. Its objective was

Miller may be visiting CNMI this November

George Miller

A CONGRESSIONAL delegation headed by US Representative George Miller is considering a plan to visit the Commonwealth next month, this was learned yesterday.

Informed sources, including House Speaker Diego T. Benavente, confirmed hearing of the plan when he and other CNMI officials were in Washington, D.C. last month for the immigration and labor hearings conducted by the Senate Subcommittee on Mineral Resources Development and Production.

According to Benavente, he learned about the planned congressional visit from American Samoa Delegate Eni Faleomavaega whom he met when he was in the nation's capital.

Faleomavaega is said to be part of the delegation which is expected to come by for a two or three day visit on the latter part of November.

"When I talked with Mr. Faleomavaega, he did tell me he will be part of the Miller delegation.," Benavente said in an interview yesterday. "Aside from him,

Israel pledges war vs. militants

After 20 people died in bomb explosion

By DAN PERRY

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) - As Israel recoiled from its deadliest attack in 16 years, Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin convened his Cabinet Thursday to consider a new crackdown on Palestinian militants.

Ministers met behind closed doors at the Defense Ministry in Tel Aviv shortly after 8:30 a.m. (0630 GMT), the day after a suicide bomber blew up a crowded bus in the heart of downtown Tel Aviv, killing 20 people.

"I don't want to be next," read signs carried by anti-government protestors in Tel Aviv and Jerusalem Wednesday night, hours after a suicide bomber blew up a crowded bus on a bustling Tel Aviv street, killing 20 people.

Rabin said he would ask for special powers to crack down on the Hamas fundamentalist movement, blamed for three deadly attacks in Israel in less than two weeks, including Wednesday's bombing.

"I am against torture, but it is inconceivable that a (militant) involved in murder can appeal to the Supreme Court and win because he didn't get enough sleep" during interrogation, Rabin said, alluding to Israel's relatively liberal legal system.

An opinion poll in the Yedioth Ahronoth daily suggested that Rabin would have wide support for tough action. It showed that 85 percent thought Israel should deny entry to Palestinians from autonomous Gaza and Jericho in the West Bank, with 71 percent backing the idea of sending the army into Gaza to "liquidate terrorists." The poll had a margin of error of 4 percent.

Israel already sealed off the Gaza Strip and West Bank - a move that risks increasing support for extremists by denying tens of thousands of impoverished Palestinians access to jobs in Israel.

In remarks made Wednesday night, Rabin also appeared to depart from his cautious approach to peacemaking by advocating a settlement which, unlike the pact reached in September 1993 with the PLO, will divorce Israelis from the Palestinians of the West Bank and Gaza Strip.

"We need a separation between us and the Palestinians, not just for days but as a way of life," Rabin said.

Police said 20 people were killed and 48 wounded when explosives, apparently strapped onto a suicide bomber, shattered a rush-hour bus traveling down Tel Aviv's main shopping street.

The blast created a gruesome scene. Members of Israel's official religious-run burial society labored for hours to remove body parts strewn on the street and on rooftops.

Izzedine al-Qassam, the military arm of Hamas, claimed responsibility for the bombing.

The group also was blamed for a Oct. 9 shooting spree in Jerusalem that killed two bystanders.

Militants then kidnapped a soldier, and the chilling videotape of him pleading for his life touched a deep national nerve. The Israeli soldier was killed by Hamas just as commandos stormed their hideout Friday. A commando and three militants also died in the raid.

Government opponents blamed the upsurge in terror on Rabin's peace policies, which granted autonomy to Palestinians in Gaza and the West Bank town of Jericho five months ago.

Ariel Sharon, a former right-wing defense minister, claimed Rabin was using the bus blast to justify a secret future agenda of removing the 120,000 Jewish settlers from the occupied lands and turning it into a Palestinian state.

If Israel displayed weakness, Sharon warned, "terrorism will continue ever stronger."

PLO chief Yasser Arafat's office condemned the attack, then issued an unusual statement asserting that the Palestinians are "fully cooperating with the Israeli government to search and arrest the perpetrators." But there were no reports of arrests by the police in Gaza.

Israel has maintained the Palestine Liberation Organization does too little to rein in radical Islamic groups. Arafat supporters say they want to avoid civil war in the autonomous areas.

The attack wiped out joy over Monday's tentative peace agreement with Jordan. Israel was preparing for a festive signing on the border to be attended by 5,000 guests, including President Clinton, next Wednesday.

But an increasingly prosperous Israel seemed more attuned to Rabin's pragmatism than the fury that might have greeted such an attack in the past.

At Zanzibar, one of the trendiest nightspots in Tel Aviv, the crowd Wednesday night was as lively as ever.

"It was a rough day," said Sarah Isha, a fashion designer in her 20s, as she ordered a tequila sunrise. "But we drink, and tomorrow will be better."

"The show must go on," said actor Yisrael Gurion, applying makeup Wednesday night in Tel Aviv's Cameri theatre that earlier served as an attack information center. "Anything else would be giving in to the terrorists."

Cop nabbed for threatening witness

By Rafael I. Santos

A POLICEWOMAN who used to handcuff and escort female criminal defendants to jail was herself handcuffed and detained at the Department of Public Safety's pre-trial detention the other day.

Police officer Josepha L. Kaipat was arrested Wednesday and held in jail after she allegedly threatened to kill a witness in a criminal case involving his brother.

In a single-count complaint filed yesterday, the government accused the policewoman of obstructing justice when she "unlawfully tampered with A.T. M. Mouzaffour Hossain."

Hossain is a key witness in an ongoing trial involving Francisco L. Kaipat, brother of the police officer.

"On or about October 19, 1994,... Josepha... unlawfully tampered with...Hossain, a witness in CNMI v. Francisco L. Kaipat, in violation of § 3302, Title 6 of the Commonwealth Code and punishable under the same provision," said the complaint signed by Cheryl M. Gill, assistant attorney general.

Francisco is charged with two counts of assault with dangerous weapon in connection with two separate incidents in June in which he allegedly attacked Hossain with an axe and attempted to cause him bodily injury using a rifle.

Josepha appeared in court yesterday morning with Assistant Public Defender David Juarez for bail hearing. Judge Miguel Demapan imposed a $15,000 cash or property bail for the defendant's release.

She was scheduled to make another appearance before the judge in the afternoon. Earlier, the government opposed Juarez as counsel for the defendant. Josepha's brother is being represented by Assistant Public Defender Ted Christopher.

Castro asks for judge to hear Governor's 2 cases

By Rafael I. Santos

THE Superior Court yesterday asked Chief Justice Jose S. Dela Cruz to appoint a special judge to hear two civil cases against Governor Froilan C. Tenorio, saying "impropriety" might result if one of the judges handled the cases.

At the same time, the court cited conflict of interest as one of the reasons why there is a need to appoint a special judge in the two pending cases involving the governor.

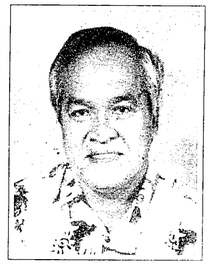
The request was made by Superior Court Presiding Judge Alexandro Castro, a day after he indicated there was a reason for the disqualification of commonwealth trial court judges in Jeanne Rayphand's lawsuit.

Since judges will be substantially affected by the outcome of the taxpayer's lawsuit, Castro decided on Tuesday that they won't handle the case.

The lawsuit alleges among other things that judges and justices are overpaid and that their salaries are being paid without a valid appropriation from the legislature.

"Because of the conflict of interest [Rayphand case] creates, as well as the appearance of impropriety that might result from the assignment of the case to one of the sitting judges, I believe that a special judge should be appointed," Castro said in his letter to Dela Cruz.

Castro issued an order on Tuesday granting Rayphand's motion to file a second amended complaint. In the same order, he indicated they won't hear the case because of conflict of interest.



Froilan C. Tenorio

Alexandro Castro

In his memorandum, the presiding judge also noted that the House of Representatives case should also be handled by the same special judge because of some similarities between it and Rayphand's.

Although the House lawsuit does not involve judicial salaries, the legal theory underlying the case appears to be identical to that underlying Rayphand, Castro said in his letter a copy of which was furnished to the media.

House members sued the governor a few weeks ago following his decision to appropriate $6.2 million which was paid over to Mitsubishi. The lawmakers said the payment was made without authorization from the legislature.

Castro wanted the two cases to be handled by one special judge to avoid possible inconsistency in the decisions.

"In order to avoid the problem of inconsistent determinations on this important public issue, I believe that the two cases should be handled by the same judge," Castro added.

Four Saipan lawyers serve as special judges in Superior Court. They are Jane Mack of the Micronesian Legal Services Corporation, Timothy Bellas, Larry Hillblom and Rexford Kosack.

Guam Superior Court Judge Benjamin Cruz has also served as special judge in the past.

Gov't files a motion vs Taitano reinstatement

By Rafael I. Santos

FORMER youth services administrator Maggie Olopai-Taitano may not be able to get back her previous job at least for the meantime while awaiting a district court's decision on a government motion opposing her reinstatement.

The worst thing that could happen is that she may not be reinstated as head of the division. The government and the Department of Community and Cultural Affairs are opposing her return and have just succeeded in one of their attempts against her reinstatement.

U.S. District Court Judge Alex R. Munson ordered the government last week to reinstate Taitano on grounds that she was not informed why he was terminated as Division of Youth Services administrator and to challenge such action. The order was in response to an oral motion from Taitano's lawyer,G. Anthony Long, lawyer.

Long moved for his client's reinstatement on October 11 after a jury found that plaintiff's due process rights were violated when she was not given any opportunity to be heard following her transfer and terminated.

The reinstatement was supposed to take place within a fourteen-day period since the order was issued. However the government, which is a defendant in Taitano's discrimination lawsuit, filed a timely motion this week asking for a stay of the reinstatement order.

Later, Assistant Attorney General Douglas Strand filed a motion for reconsideration.

The motion to stay, which was heard yesterday morning, was granted by the federal court. Strand wanted the court to suspend the implementation of its order pending the outcome of the motion for reconsideration.

The second request is scheduled to be heard on November 18.

Taitano filed a discrimination lawsuit last year, alleging that she was wrongfully terminated by DCCA. She claimed that her "demotion" and subsequent dismissal from DYS was due to her gender, race and her political affiliation.

An eight-member jury found there was not discrimination but said Taitano's due process rights were violated when she was not given an opportunity to be heard and contest her termination.

Her lawyer then made oral motions seeking her reinstatement and an award for attorney's fees. Both motions have been granted.

A weekly dose of the governor

THE GOVERNOR'S decision earlier this week not to continue holding weekly press conferences at his Capitol Hill office has elicited various reactions ranging from disbelief to scorn, from worry to indifference.

There were quite a number of people who thought this is unthinkable for the governor to do.

Not so much because he needs to open up to the media, but more because abruptly changing his stance on openness may not look good. Closing out is such a complete turnaround on how to deal with the fourth estate.

Coming from a governor who has repeatedly professed his adherence to the concept of an open and transparent government, the news about such a decision really came as a surprise to many avid governor watchers.

They could not believe their eyes and ears he is pulling the plug, the same ones that have seen and heard him through from possible oblivion to greatness.

But wait, this guy is a born leader, no doubt. Someone destined to be entered into the annals of the Commonwealth democracy as one helluva statesman, with or without media exposure.

Governor Froilan C. Tenorio, since the time he was Washington Representative, has always been viewed to be a man of intense and fiery personality.

This is evidenced by the way he carried his own political agenda in the nation's capital, at times brushing against the chief's on Saipan; right down to the time he began seeing his gubernatorial fortunes unfold early morning last November 7th at Ben Camacho's Capitol Hill estate.

From then onwards, Froilan's media rating has become high until the news about the cancelation of the weekly media meeting broke out and it became apparent this governor cannot go much further in terms of patience to the prying eyes of the media.

The governor may have had a point in resenting intense scrutiny and "hostility" from the certain members of the press, but then he should know that in the end taking the harsh questions and the low blows is just part of the whole game that is called politics.

A certain degree of tolerance and level-headedness is essential.

Never mind the relentless attacks from the other side of the street. Any governor worth his swivel chair must deal with such kinds of criticism as it becomes the hallmark of a capable leader — coming out of the slander game in one piece, that is.

We sincerely hope the governor reconsiders his decision to shun the weekly media meetings.

We in the local media are just too eager to get a glimpse of him and see how he is doing the task of nationbuilding.

Anything less than weekly would be less assuring. The less exposure may mean more misunderstanding.

But the important thing is that the people out there want to hear and read about him on a regular basis, see what direction we all must go.

JR's Agenda

by John S. DelRosario, JR.

There's a steady climb in the number of tourists visiting paradise. It is an industry that is constantly growing and the promise for continued growth is positively certain. With the opening of the Kansai International Airport, more tourists will be dropping in to experience the triad of sea, shore and the sun.

While it is very encouraging that the number of visitors continue to climb it seems we have fallen far behind in meeting this positive growth. Though Governor Froilan C. Tenorio has embarked on economic missions in hopes of kick starting the economy, global economic recession has each nation in the Pacific Rim guarding her purse, Japan included.

Furthermore, the concentration on trade and investment has shifted to Communist China, a sleepy giant who recently woke up to attend to meeting the needs of nearly two billion of her people right at the home front. It is such a huge market presenting grand opportunities for trade and investments for nations of large economic scale: Japan, Australia, the European Community and the Western Hemisphere.

We were hoping that the out-migration of wealthy Chinese from Hong Kong would consider the Micronesian Region a serious area for investment. Unfortunately, they overflew these islands including the State of Aloha. Most decided to invest in Canada. Thus, Canada has become the hub of a huge infusion of Hong Kong money.

Despite the economic doldrums so forced upon us from without, I remain optimistic that the global economy would rebound, its ripple effects of which we would begin to feel about two to three years down the road. It's a slow process to which we really have no control over. There's the hidden link between economies of scale and ours which doesn't even measure up to anything given that we're dependent on the global economic climate.

Though we've had our share of weary economic despair, nothing is stopping us from improving the tourism facilities we have in place. May I offer the following suggestions.

The passenger holding area at the Saipan International Airport needs to be air-conditioned. It may cost money. But it is our responsibility to ensure that the people who spend more than $500 each to relax and recreate out here be given the royal treatment. Let's roll out the red carpet and treat them with the hospitality that our people are known for.

The argument that this is the tropics is baloney! On hot summer days, tourists sweat it out after a good shower in preparation for their return trip back home. On days when we're frequented by inclement weather, most of the holding area is wet. Again, our visitors had to endure the rain driven wind from the east. We're giving them either the sweat 'til you're drench experience or hide behind some wall 'til boarding time and may you have the sweaty or wetly experience.

Perhaps we have emulated the Honolulu International Airport. Fine! But the Hawaiian Islands have the usual trade winds that sweep across the Aloha State on a year-round basis. The air has far less humidity, not to mention the cool breeze given that Hawaii has cooler weather than the CNMI. The airport is so designed taking into account the normal trade winds direction. Even with its tropical design, it still maintains air-conditioned holding rooms.

That tourism is the largest industry here raking in millions of dollars mandates our taking into consideration ways to ensure that our visitors are comfortable from the first day they arrive 'til they leave. Public education must be put in place to drive home the message that it is through this industry that we have been able to provide for ourselves. Therefore, everybody must partake in discouraging robbery against our visitors. That Magellan named these islands "Ladrones" doesn't mean we have to confirm it. Let's all join hands and show the world the very essence of Chamorros and Carolinians!

I find it bothersome that we've only been able to catch small fries both in drugs out in the community and corruption in government.

That forty-seven percent (47%) of our high school students have tried drugs makes you wonder whether in fact "shabu" is a prevalent drug out here. It must be the case given that the number of students who have done drugs on or off-campus. There are two concerns which our astute leaders must seriously consider in the apparent proliferation of both drugs and corruption in this community.

The salaries for customs, immigration and labor employees need to be raised to a decent level where fairness is achieved among fellow co-workers. The door of temptation is wide-open and we'd only be fueling it if Employee A with equal qualifications with Employee B is making less. That there's no checking system in place to trace any anomaly, Employee A would simply say "Hell, we have the same qualifications but he makes $30,000 while my salary remains at $18,000...might as well sell my services in and out of office."

Mind you, we have heard of former government employees who have allegedly made a bundle selling Entry Permits at a price per bogus document anywhere between $300 to $6,000 apiece. The most dangerous aspect of this scam is when it is done through networking among "selected" employees and the bag man out there. It makes mandatory that this aspect is seriously considered in addition to providing the requisite training and a system's check for every and all employees in customs, immigration and labor.

We also must dig deep into our social conscience to determine the root cause of students engaging in drugs. Is it purely a fad (peer pressure) or far more serious than what meets the eye? It is concerning given the large number of young minds engaging in a negative activity that would lead their precious potential elsewhere rather than the desired collective goal of making them productive and contributing members of our community. Is the culprit the low statutory minimum wage of $2.45 an hour or value system or both?

I say both! If my parents aren't interested in my progress at school, why should I care either? Let's go party every night! If the minimum wage is so low, it is easier to make windfall profit peddling drugs! The collision of a heedless value system with slave labor salaries are two anomalies that we need to address with the commitment to resolving them forthwith.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Problems persist between Kerrey and Clinton

WASHINGTON — The greatest threat to Bill Clinton's political prospects may be a fellow Democrat who saved his hide just 14 months ago: Sen. Bob Kerrey, D-Neb.

It was Kerrey who delivered the dramatic vote that saved the Clinton budget last August. Since then, the rivalry that began during the Democratic primaries has grown into a feud that could undermine the chances for comprehensive entitlement reform next year.

While Rep. Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., and the rest of the Republicans waste no opportunity to scream about the Clinton administration Kerrey has quietly grown tired of living in the shadow of the man who beat him for his party's 1992 presidential nomination. And Clinton is tired of Kerrey assuming the role of chief contrarian on many of the administration's top priorities.

Kerrey's record over the past two years bespeaks a man who has wasted little opportunity to tweak the White House at nearly every chance. Next year, the feud between Clinton and Kerrey could spell the difference between success and failure of the most recent effort to rein in the growth of entitlement spending.

The seeds of trouble between Kerrey and Clinton go back to the presidential primaries in 1992. Both from the same generation, and both opponents of the Vietnam War (though Kerrey was a Navy SEAL before turning against the war), they soon found themselves vying for the same segment of voters.

It was Clinton who wound up taking the high road— because he could afford to. Both were idealistic, but Clinton could abandon that to appeal to specific segments of voters. Clinton went for the applause lines while Kerrey delivered moral soliloquies.

The strain of Kerrey's dissatisfaction with Clinton remains as it began during those primaries. Here was a brother in ideals, age and political experience, who would settle for less to make a political deal. Said Kerrey in New Hampshire: "Gov. Clinton wants to take it short of the mark. He's figured out what it takes to get elected. What I'm trying to figure out is how do we make America the greatest country on Earth." Kerrey's admonitions won him a distant third in New Hampshire.

Though Kerrey supported Clinton in the general election, the strife picked up once Clinton took office. Less than three months after inauguration, Kerrey joined three other Democrats in opposing Clinton's $16.3 billion economic stimulus package. The opposition eventually won, dealing Clinton the first legislative defeat of his presidency.

When Kerrey decided at the last minute to vote in favor of the budget package, it was not without a price. Not only did Kerrey make Clinton promise to create the Entitlement Commission, he also took the floor of the Senate with a vitriolic speech bemoaning the budget deal as a "half-measure."

The animus continued from there, as Kerrey deserted his president on key issues such as health care. While Kerrey the candidate embraced universal health coverage, Kerrey the senator was one of the first Democrats to oppose the now-defunct Clinton plan. When Clinton asked him out for a jog in June to lobby him on some pressing issues, Kerrey wore a T-shirt which read: "Hillary Knows Best."

It is the Entitlement Commission, however, that could create the next major row between Clinton and Kerrey. In a recent interview, Kerrey expressed cautious optimism that Clinton will have the political will — and strength—to reform costly entitlements like Medicare and Social Security.

"I don't want to get engaged with something here that's going to just be a political exercise but doesn't have a fighting chance of being successful," Kerrey told us. "We know it's a risky political issue—not just for us but for the president. We can't do it unless we have presidential leadership. But we're not going to get presidential leadership if he sits there and says, 'I'm going to get cut off at the knees as soon as I go out front on it."'

Kerrey has attacked the commission's mandate with the same guts and zeal he showed as a Navy SEAL in Vietnam. But cutting entitlements invariably means angering large groups of voters, something no politician is eager to do. Kerrey also admits he was concerned that his chemistry with Clinton could interfere with the Commission's work

"There is unquestionably a break—we are not close," Kerrey told us. "But the speculation that I am going to challenge him in the (1996 presidential) primaries is completely untrue." When pressed on the issue, however, Kerrey refused to rule it out absolutely: "I can't imagine the circumstances," Kerrey said. "I really can't. But I have learned never to say never."

Gill lashes back at Hill

Dear Mr. Editor:

UNDER the rules of the Superior Court and the ethical rules applicable in the Commonwealth, I am precluded from commenting on the evidence in or merits of specific criminal cases. Suffice to say, however, that your understanding of the facts in the two cases you discussed in your letter of October 14, 1994 is not borne out by the evidence developed in DPS investigations. Of course, that is one of the problems in relying on allegations reported by the media - they may be inaccurate or wrong.

Although the ethics and rules of my profession prevent me from specifically refuting what you seem to believe are the "facts," I can and have a responsibility to comment on your express and implied criticisms of the Criminal Division of the Attorney General's Office. Prosecutors have an ethical and legal obligation to charge and continue cases only if there is sufficient evidence such that a reasonable trier of fact could find guilty beyond a reasonable doubt. Thus, if someone is prosecuted, you can be assured that there is sufficient evidence to support the prosecution. Conversely, if someone is not prosecuted, the usual reason is lack of sufficient evidence. Please note Dr. Hill, that the Criminal Division of the AGO does not investigate criminal complaints or "find sufficient proof." That is the role of various law enforcement agencies in the CNMI. The Criminal Division is responsible for the prosecution of criminal cases once sufficient evidence is developed. It is a responsibility that the seven attorneys in the Criminal Division take very seriously.

For your information each of the seven attorneys in the Criminal Division works an average of 50-60 hours a week. It is not unusual for some attorneys to work as much as eighty (80) hours a week. Indeed, during one three-week period in August, 1994 I worked two hundred and fifty hours. My experience is representative of every other lawyer in the office.

You should also be aware Dr. Hill that the Criminal Division

Demapan not to run anymore?

Dear Editor:

LAST week I had the opportunity to sit down with the Senate President under a kamachile tree to talk to him about his future political plans since his senatorial re-election is fastly approaching. My conversation with him was one of those melody sweet time with the soft music and birds singing in the background....our conversation was so natural and inspirational that our time together lapsed so fast without the catch of our naked eyes. The darkness of our surrounding environment was already telling us that the sun had gone to sleep, and it was time for us to go home.

Now that the sun had risen mixing together with little rain of natural pure water from heaven above, let the raindrops fall in the following:

1. Demapan has no future political plans at this point in time.

2. Demapan is most likely not seeking senatorial re-election next year due to emergency reasons that he has to fulfill as a priority.

3. Demapan will still be reporting to the Republican Party when a meeting is conducted to officially announce his decision to step down from the senate race next year.

4. Demapan wants to give others a chance to run for the Senate next year.

5. Demapan's only worry is that once he retires the minimum wage of $4.25 may be rejected and not passed into law.

It seems that the CNMI will be losing a quality politician of Demapan's stature and intelligence ability. Perhaps, now is the right time to call him and inform him that he is making a big mistake by not running for public office again.

Nick Sablan implores for better roads

Dear Editor:

I HAD the opportunity to drive around the Island and I must protest to our dear friends in congress about our roads on some part of the island. I would like to suggest to our friends in congress to appropriate a Million Dollars to resurface the road that leads to Tanapag and the back road. I felt that this amount is a drop in the bucket to return to the taxpayers for the $150 Million that our Government is collecting from us the taxpayers. I know that the Department of Public Works is on the move to re-build all these roads. But, for the meantime, our cars continue to break with the kind of roads that we have. Besides, when is this going to take place and how long is this going to be accomplished? Through experience, a one mile road normally takes about a year to finish. So, I suggest that they should resurface those roads while they are working to rebuild it. Anyway, if this becomes impossible, then we should consider asking every car owners on this island to chip in a few bucks, so we could fix these roads ourselves. A few bucks to chip in now, will benefit us a great deal in the long run if we have to consider the wear and tear and the cost of repairs later. Think about it.

CPA puts bond plan on hold

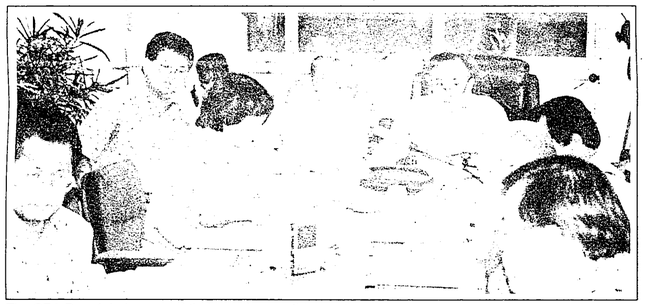
By Rafael H. Arroyo

THE COMMONWEALTH Ports Authority Board of Directors yesterday decided to put its current plans for a $26.5 million bond issue on hold after it received a protest from one of the bond companies who made a pitch for the underwriting contract.

In its October regular meeting yesterday, the CPA board decided to adhere to a memorandum directive to "cease and desist" from moving the proposed floating of revenue bonds "until all parties are satisfied."

Sutro & Co., a California-based investment company late last month, wrote CPA Executive Director Roman Tudela questioning the board's selection of Altura Nelson for the revenue bond job.

According to Sutro Managing Director Mark A. Curran, there is no question that his firm offers CPA the most experienced and qualified investment banking team to serve CPA's interests.



The CPA Board during one of their regular monthly meetings.

He said that despite the "highly professional" proposal it gave, even exceeding CPA's needs, it was rejected "without a review on the merits due to an supposedly "imaginary conflict of interest."

Curran was apparently referring to what he said CPA may have perceived as a conflict posed by Sutro Senior Advisor on Saipan David Wickline, who is also financial advisor for Commonwealth Development Authority.

CDA is the local agency that overseas the economic development of the Commonwealth. No bonds may be issued by the Commonwealth or any of its instrumentalities, CPA included, without the approval of the CDA Board.

The issue of possible conflict stemmed from an alleged opinion from CPA counsels that a conflict existed as a result of Wickline's advisory relationship with CDA, an angle looked at by Sutro as the possible reason why it did not get the job.

The bond issue was conceived as a form of creative financing aimed at relieving CPA from the project funding options offered by two government agencies - Commonwealth Development Authority and the Retirement Fund which both loaned $13.5 and $13 million respectively for the Saipan Harbor Improvement Project.

The port project involves the rehabilitation of the facilities of Charlie Dock and expansion of the port area to resolve the congestion that has been delaying the movement of goods in the Saipan harbor.

The harbor improvement also would require the expansion of berthing areas in the dock so bigger ships need not stay long in anchorage as they could be accommodated in wider, deeper draft berths.

Prior to the commencement of the project two years ago, CPA got both CDA and the Fund's approval for the monies as interim sources of funds to rehabilitate Saipan's Charlie Dock.

Since most of the CDA loan money for the project have already been released for the project and the entire $13 million Retirement Fund loan is yet to be drawn, CPA thought of floating a bond to enable the CPA to pursue the project without having to make full use of the loans.

But after selecting Altura Nelson from among mainland-based bond underwriters, to manage the transaction, tthe Sutro complaint came.

Although Curran in his letter felt the Wickline conflict issue may have been a factor in their non-selection, Wickline himself said yesterday, conflict of interest is no longer the focus of the controversy.

"The real issue right now is which underwriter best serves CPA and the Commonwealth," said Wickline in a telephone interview with the Variety. "We feel we have submitted the best proposal, meeting all CPA's objectives at the lowest cost."

The Sutro adviser, who was instrumental also the last time CDA floated a bond in 1986, insisted the company will just be aiming to make suretheir bid is properly reviewed and fairly understood by the board in the selection process.

"Believing we got the best proposal, all we want is to be given a fair review based on the merits of our proposal," said Wickline.

Yes to arms embargo No to double standard

IT HAS recently been argued here that ending the arms embargo on ex-Yugoslavia so that the Bosnian Muslims could obtain the arms they need to defend themselves would not be a contribution to peace.

This was on the rather simplistic basis that sending more arms to an area where there are far too many already could not possible have this effect.

Although the United States Congress - dragging a reluctant President Clinton in its wake - wanted this, the European members of the contact group did not. Argument was already getting hot on the subject and would have become embarrassing if the matter had been brought before the UN Security Council. Both the British and French, the main contributors of troops to the UN force in Bosnia, as well as the UN secretary general, had stated clearly that the UN force would have to leave if the embargo were relaxed.

Now President Izetbegovic of Bosnia has taken the contact group members off the hook. He has said his government does not want the embargo to be relaxed for at least six months. It would be disastrous for his people if the UN force were to leave before the winter, since this would leave them in the hands of the Bosnian Serbs, who have shown no mercy.

The arms embargo applies to all sides in the conflict. It is just that the Bosnian Serbs have had more access to arms than the Bosnian Muslims - although even this may now be in doubt in view of the blockade by the Belgrade government.

Those who do not want the arms embargo to be lifted do not imply by their attitude that both sides in the conflict are of equal moral standing. It is true that the United Nations has to make a show of neutrality. For others, however, moral neutrality is not acceptable. It is clear that the Muslim Serbs are the aggressors and the Bosnian Muslims the aggressed. The two sides are not alike. Even if the Bosnian Serbs were to accept the latest peace plan, it would mean that aggression and subsequent ethnic cleansing had been rewarded.

Demapan seeks MVB help on APPU meet

By Ferdie de la Torre

SENATE President Juan S. Demapan has requested the Marianas Visitors Bureau to provide travel and other expenses for four members of the Senate staff who will attend the parliamentarians' meeting in Thailand next month.

But MVB board denied yesterday the request and instead agreed to contribute $3,000 intended to sponsor a breakfast/lunch reception in that meeting for promotional purposes.

In his letter to MVB Managing Director Anicia Tomokane last week, Demapan underscored the importance of the CNMI's participation in the conference in terms of political and economic standing of the commonwealth around the world.

The 56th Asia-Pacific Parliamentarians' Union (APPU) Council Meeting and 29th General Assembly will be held at Chiangmai Plaza Hotel, Chiangmai Province, Kingdom of Thailand from November 14-18.

APPU attracts a wide variety of National Groups, Associate Member Groups and Observers including from the Republic of the Philippines, Cook Islands, Federated States of Micronesia, Fiji, Japan, Kingdom of Tonga, Malaysia, Papua New Guinea, Republic of China, Republic of Kiribati, Republic of Korea, Republic of the Marshall Islands, Republic of Naru, Republic of Palau, Republic of Vanautu, Solomon Islands, Tuvalu, Western Samoa, Guam, the Lao People's Democratic Republic and The Socialist Republic of Vietnam.

"We would greatly appreciate your assistance in the process of forming a delegation to attend this very important gathering. It would be ideal to have representatives from MVB whose primary purpose would be the promotion of the CNMI," Demapan told Tomokane.

The senator pointed out that the promotion would include a sponsorship of a breakfast/lunch reception and also the provision of various souvenirs and videos that characterize the people and lifestyle of the CNMI.

"We would also appreciate if you could provide travel and other expenses for four members of the Senate staff," Demapan said. "We sincerely believe that this is an extremely important occasion and, with your generous assistance, we hope to represent the Commonwealth appropriately."

In yesterday's MVB board meeting held at the Commonwealth Development Authority conference room, some members of the board objected the idea to have MVB "answer" the travel expenses for four Senate staff, pointing out "it has no justification."

Realizing Demapan's intention to promote CNMI, board member Felicitas Abraham moved a motion to assist the Legislature defray the cost by giving $3000 out of MVB's promotional funds.

Anicia Tomokane

Abraham likewise stressed that aside from the money needed to help the Legislature for sponsoring a luncheon, informational package to promote CNMI will be provided in that affair.

Board Chairman Antonio S. Guerrero told the Variety that the board recognized the importance of the upcoming meeting for CNMI's promotional package so they agreed to help the Legislature defray cost with the luncheon expenses.

With regards to shouldering travel expenses for Senate staff, Guerrero stressed that the board disagreed with Demapan's request.

"I don't think it's on MVB's position to do that," said the chairman. He did not elaborate.

Some board members appeared reluctant to give their comment on the senator's letter. The appointments of the board members are subject for confirmation from the Senate.

Man mauled for breaking argument

A MAN who tried to stop an argument between two persons ended up hurt after he was assaulted in San Vicente Wednesday night, the Department of Public Safety said yesterday.

DPS spokesperson Sgt. Edward Manalili said the victim, described as a 30-year-old man, suffered a cut over the left eye.

The arrestee, identified as Oscar C. Sablan, 26, was picked up for charges of assault/battery and assault with a dangerous weapon.

Manalili said the victim claimed while he was trying to stop an argument, Sablan instead kicked him several times on the stomach.

Not contented, the suspect whisked a wooden spear gun and hit the victim on the left eye.

In Chalan Kanoa, a man sought police assistance after the five checks of $27,000 issued by a person were returned by the bank for insufficient funds.

Last April the suspect allegedly signed a promissory note stating he would pay the victim $30,000 based on their lease agreement.

In Garapan, a 30-year-old Japanese tourist said he lost his camera worth $400 30 minutes after he left it inside a bag on the dance floor of Gig's Disco Wednesday night.

In another case, a 46-year-old woman was taken to Commonwealth Health Center for minor injuries when a man suddenly punched her on the facial area while she was sleeping.

In Gualo Rai, a thief ransacked the office of Rainbow Construction Wednesday morning of telephone, a type writer and fax machine, police said.

to determine whether CUC's rate structure produced sufficient revenues to provide for debt service and for its capital improvement obligations and new equipment costs.

The $51.6 million loan debt was incurred by CUC when it entered into three major loan agreements with CDA for power- and water-related projects.

Although the deadlines for payment has been up, CDA has given CUC grace periods at the request of the CUC Board in 1992.

On the other hand, the $41.2 million incurred by CUC for its power plant expansion projects, involves two phases worth about $20 million each.

Phase II of the project narrowly escaped a default declaration when the Guerrero Administration then paid off $5.5 million. Only recently, the Tenorio Administration coughed up $6.7 million out of CDA bond monies to cure the defaulted Phase I project.

Miller...

I am not aware of any other congressional members joining Miller in his trip," he said.

According to another source who was also in Washington D.C. last month, he learned of the planned visit from John Lawrence, staff director for Miller's Natural Resources Committee.

The source spoke on condition of anonymity owing to the tentative nature of the plan. He, however, confirmed Faleomavaega may indeed be coming with Miller.

"The trip is not just a brief stopover. We may be looking at a two or three day stay here for the chairman and his delegation after this year's congressional elections," said the source.

Miller, who has oversight responsibility over the insular areas including the CNMI, was supposed to have visited the islands early this year. Such plans however did not materialize.

Instead, Miller sent one of his staff, Linda Chase to join Virgin Islands Delegate Ron De Lugo in a whirlwind visit of Saipan in April this year.

De Lugo, then accompanied by staffmembers, Manase Mansur and Jeff Farrow, met with CNMI officials over the issue of reforms. He also had a chance to tour Saipan garment factories and other alien worker sites.

Miller, who has been critical of how the CNMI handles its alien labor, human rights, minimum wage and taxation policies, is perceived to be the one biggest influence in the House as far as critical issues are concerned.

With Miller visiting the CNMI this time, it is possible that workplaces and garment factories may be on the tour sites list of the chairman, a known advocate of labor rights in Congress.

Asked for comment on the planned Miller visit, Saipan Garment Manufacturers Association Richard A. Pierce said the trip will be an important one for the industry.

"We want him to see the place," said Pierce. "We liked Mr. De Lugo coming and we would be delighted to have the chairman see the progress we have made."

Pierce said the De Lugo trip gave the CNMI instant recognition in the US House as to the real situation and problems in the islands.

He said he is optimistic the Miller visit will provide the first hand information about the industry, especially since the chairman had been critical of it.

"After this there will no longer be reliance on outdated information," said Pierce.

Speaker Benavente, when asked how important the planned visit is, said it is good for Miller and his group to see the island first hand to appreciate local concerns.

"His visit would be very productive with regards to the issues in that it would provide our leaders the chance to deal with him on a one-on-one basis," said Benavente.

Pathologist finds death a very lively business

By ALYSSA GABBAY

PITTSBURGH (AP) - He shot holes in the "official" version of Elvis' Presley's death.

He pummeled the Warren Commission's single-bullet theory about John F. Kennedy's assassination.

And now he's attacking the Los Angeles coroner's office for the quality of its work on the Simpson slayings.

Armed with a medical degree and a law degree and with a book, countless articles and 12,000 autopsies to his name, forensic pathologist Cyril Wecht takes on coroners and investigators around the nation with little tact and much fanfare.

Wecht, 63, has won the respect and friendship of some of the most celebrated personalities of the past few decades, particularly defense attorneys who use him to poke holes in the arguments of prosecutors.

"He's a good medical detective and an excellent witness," says attorney F. Lee Bailey, one of several lawyers on O.J. Simpson's team. "He comes to conclusions quickly, and I haven't seen him make a mistake yet."

He also has made enemies along the way.

"If Cyril Wecht spent half the time in the world of reality that he does in his world of fiction, he'd probably serve the forensic community much better," says Donald F. Cerio Jr., district attorney for Madison County, N.Y., and a longtime foe.

Others call him arrogant and a publicity hound who is interested only in seeing his name in the papers.

Wecht would be the first to tell you to believe only the good.

His 1993 book, "Cause of Death" written with his son, free-lance writer Benjamin Wecht, and Atlanta Constitution reporter Mark Curriden - is filled not only with descriptions of important cases he has handled, but with bits of praise from people who like him.

There's a note from director Oliver Stone, who consulted Wecht for his 1991 movie, "JFK": "Dear Cyril, I admire you enormously. You're the man that has ushered the important evidence that the official medical bodies have - much to their shame - ignored."

And then there's a quote from attorney Alan Dershowitz, another lawyer on Simpson's case, calling Wecht the "Sherlock Holmes of forensic sciences" and praising his ability to interpret and explain complicated medical and forensic evidence.

Wecht says any dislike he has generated probably isn't deserved.

"When you're involved in controversial cases, and you take strong positions, people are bound to disagree with you," he says from his basement office in St. Francis Central Hospital in Pittsburgh, where he is head of pathology.

"What people really don't like is a style, a modus operandi, or a position of a broad nature. It might be Kennedy, it might be something I said years ago about abortion or about marijuana. Or this one might not like me because they think I'm a big-mouth Jew. So who the hell knows?"

On a recent afternoon, four bodies awaited his attention: a crib death, an apparent homicide, a drowning and a probable drug overdose.

That evening, Wecht appeared via satellite on "Rivera Live," telling Geraldo that he believed blood samples in the Simpson slayings should be shared with the defense.

In addition to a hectic work schedule, Wecht takes on free-lance jobs.

One week he's jetting off to Waco, Texas, to perform an autopsy on cult leader David Koresh.

Another he's headed to Pakistan to look into the suspicious death of the former commander in chief of the Pakistani army.

"I don't seek these things out, but I think I enjoy a reputation, and people know my name," he says. "If they call, I am not the least bit hesitant to get involved."

And he doesn't pull any punches when he gets involved.

Wecht - who began looking into the Kennedy assassination in 1965 - has called the Warren Commission report "nonsense," contradicting the findings by saying evidence shows more than one gunman fired more than one shot.

Bailey has called Wecht the "single most important spearhead of challenge" to the report.

In 1968, after reviewing an autopsy report on Bobby Kennedy, Wecht concluded that Sirhan Sirhan could not have fired the bullet that killed the senator because he was standing too far away.

Eleven years later, he announced to the nation on a television news program that Elvis Presley had died of a drug overdose, not heart disease as a coroner had ruled. Wecht cited toxicology reports that showed the presence of about 10 depressants in the singer's blood.

Today, many suspect Wecht's claim is true. In June, Tennessee officials ordered a review of Presley's medical records to establish whether drugs played a role in his death.

In 1980, Wecht appeared as a defense witness in the trial of Jean Harris, the school headmistress accused of murdering "Scarsdale Diet" Dr. Herman Tarnower. He testified that forensic evidence indicated Harris had fired the shots at Tarnower by accident.

The jury convicted Harris of second-degree murder and she served almost 12 years in prison.

These days, he's scolding the L.A. coroner's office for its failure to examine the bodies of Nicole Brown Simpson and Ronald Goldman until the day after the two were murdered - putting in doubt the exact time of death.

To say that Wecht deals only with big-name corpses, though,

Light plane crashes in Paris

PARIS (AP) - A light plane carrying seven people crashed as it landed in central France Wednesday, killing all those on board.

The plane, identified as a Beagle Craff King Air 90, burst into flames after it overshot the runway at the airport of Saumur, 300 kilometers (188 miles) southwest of Paris, rescue officials said.

The victims were burned to death, they said.

Witnesses reported the plane appeared to have problems with a wing as it was landing.

The plane was carrying guests and managers of the Leclerc supermarket chain who were inspecting various store outlets. The plane had left the southwestern outskirts of Paris Wednesday morning and stopped in Nantes and Tours before flying to Saumur.

The passengers were to attend the reopening of a refurbished Leclerc store in Saumur, which went ahead as scheduled.

does not impose punishment. That is the role of the judiciary. When an attorney in the Criminal Division and defense counsel has negotiated a plea, the members of the judiciary often accept a joint recommendation regarding sentence. But the evaluation and imposition of sentence is ultimately the responsibility of judges taking into account the nature of the crime, the prior criminal record of the defendant and the alternative remedies available.

Before you express disgust with the concept of plea negotiation, you should know that it is an integral component of effective and efficient prosecution. Without it, the taxpayers of the Commonwealth would have to double or triple the amount of financial resources committed to the criminal justice system. As it is, the current level of financial commitment barely allows the Criminal Division and the Judiciary to keep up with the current caseload; a caseload able to be managed only by extensive plea negotiations.

In conclusion, Dr. Hill, I can assure you that the AGO is not "full of fools," or "a cruel joke." Rather, the Criminal Division is populated by dedicated, experienced, educated, and responsible attorneys. I don't ask that you applaud them on a daily basis. But I do ask that, before you criticize the Division, you educate yourself as to the challenges faced by the Division and the facts, rather than mere allegations, in criminal cases. If you fail to do so, your criticism is unfair and unjust.

Sincerely,

/s/CHERYL M. GILL
Chief, Criminal Division

Kim Jong Il may have accepted nuclear deal

TOKYO (AP) - North Korean leader Kim Jong Il has personally instructed negotiators in Geneva to accept a U.S.-brokered nuclear agreement, a spokesman for the North's Foreign Ministry said Thursday.

The spokesman also called the agreement, which is to be formally signed in Geneva on Friday, "a milestone" that will "greatly contribute to the removal of hostile relations" between the North and Washington.

The statement was carried by the North's official Korean Central News Agency, which was monitored in Tokyo. The spokesman was not further identified in the KCNA report.

The accord announced by President Clinton on Tuesday commits North Korea to freezing and eventually dismantling its key nuclear facilities. In return, North Korea will receive modern nuclear power reactors and new diplomatic links with Washington.

The North's nuclear program had been the focus of international concern because of suspicions it was being used to develop nuclear weapons. Some U.S. analysts believe the North may already have one or two atomic bombs.

"The basic agreement is a milestone in the solution to the nuclear issue on the Korean Peninsula," the statement said. "When it is smoothly implemented, it will greatly contribute to the removal of the hostile relations and the confidence-building between (North Korea) and the United States and the so-called 'nuclear issue' will finally disappear."

would be wrong.

He also does autopsies on the lesser-known, from the inmate strangled to death in a prison to the woman who died after swallowing a piece of plastic embedded in a loaf of bread.

Many of these bodies come to him by way of families who want a second opinion on autopsies they consider incomplete or just plain wrong.

That was what happened with Jack Davis, a sophomore at Indiana University of Pennsylvania whose body was found at the bottom of a campus stairwell in 1987.

A coroner had ruled that Davis choked on his own vomit after a night of heavy drinking. The student's family, however, felt that there was more to it, partly because toxicology tests showed only traces of alcohol in his stomach and urine and none in his blood.

Wecht found that Davis died of skull fractures and brain hemorrhaging and speculated that foul play led to his death.

"He doesn't miss anything," says Skip Rusiewicz, chief deputy coroner of Westmoreland County, an area that contracts its autopsies to Wecht. Wecht, he says, is brilliant and intuitive - a man whose judgments are nearly always on the mark.

As coroner, Wecht was accused of using county morgue facilities for his private forensic business and he paid $200,000 in restitution after a legal fight.

These days he seems happy in the lab. Wecht, who as a boy used to sneak into the morgue on Saturdays, admits he's fascinated with death. He says everyone else is, too.

"I'm not happy that people die, but they do, and I don't control it," he says. "So I look upon it as a challenge to determine how, when and why they died."

MLSC flexible on CUC payment

Linda Wingenbach

By Rafael I. Santos

THE MICRONESIAN Legal Services Corporation is willing to work out an agreement with the Commonwealth Utilities Corporation on the payment of $100,000 of attorneys fees.

This was announced by MLSC attorney Linda Wingenbach as CUC was about to determine how the fees should be paid.

"We are willing to work out an equitable scheme to get the amount paid off," Wingenbach told the Variety Tuesday. MLSC, she said does not expect payment very soon considering the large amount of fees.

Bruce Napell, CUC legal counsel, said the utility firm is yet to determine how the fees should be settled. But members of the CUC board have already been informed about the court order, CUC public information officer Pamela Matthis said yesterday.

Matthis said board members have been notified about the payment by Napell. A meeting could be held sometime next week to discuss the payment, Matthis added, although she said there has been no notice of meeting yet.

Early this week, the utility firm and former CUC board members were ordered by the federal court to pay more than $100,607.50 in attorney's fees to the legal services corporation.

The order followed a request for attorney's fees from MLSC in connection with the filing of a class action suit against the power company early last year.

The suit was filed on behalf of Francisca Osilek, Rita Tudela and other CUC customers who claimed their power services were wrongly disconnected. A settlement agreement was reached in October of last year with CUC agreeing that customers have the right to adequate notice prior to disconnections.

The agreement, signed by MLSC lawyer Tred R. Eyrely and CUC legal counsel Bruce Napell, stipulated that customers also have the right to dispute the justification for disconnections.

Then in March of this year, both sides agreed to what type of damages to be paid to individuals whose power services were shut off without adequate notice.

In an order issued Monday, former CUC executive director Ray Guerrero and board members John T. Sablan, Frank Rosario, Jose Taitano, Angie S. Iba, Eloy S. Inos, Joseph Apatang, Gabriel F. Boyer and Jeffrey Hofschneider were told to pay a total of $100,607.50.

David M. Sablan, who was represented by Assistant Attorney General Douglas Strand, was ordered to pay $5,407.50.

The total amount represents more than 600 hours worked by MLSC lawyers in preparing the lawsuit and responding to Sablan's motion for summary judgment.

searching the premises for the money, the lawsuit alleged.

Agent Sakau was seen by the complainant opening an attache case and picking through the contents which included De Dumo's passport and business licence. None of the documents were given back to her despite numerous demands for their return, the complaint claimed.

De Dumo was booked into the DPS jail for unspecified charges and compelled to submit to fingerprinting. "Plaintiff was unlawfully imprisoned and detained without bail for five hours, all without warrant, probable cause, or any lawful cause whatever," the civil suit said.

De Dumo was eight days shy of giving birth to her baby and was in pain during the ordeal, according to the complaint filed by attorney Eric Smith on behalf of plaintiff.

As a result of the "wrongful acts," De Dumo said she lost her peace of mind and suffered mental anguish.

The "unlawful" arrest, search and seizure as well as her detention violated plaintiff's civil rights and caused her physical and emotional harm, the suit said.

"This seizure and deprivation of liberty were unreasonable and without due process of law, in violation of the Fourth and Fourteenth Amendments to the United States Constitution."

De Dumo is demanding general damages in the amount of $50,000 as a result of her detention and the alleged unlawful arrest and illegal search and seizure. She is also asking the federal court to order each defendant to pay punitive damages in the amount of $10,000.

Plaintiff is also asking for unspecified compensatory damages.

MATHCOUNTS arrives in the CNMI

THIS year will be the first time that the CNMI 7th and 8th grade students will be participating in the MATHCOUNTS program. Thanks to Efrain F. Camacho Engineers and Architects. Paul Baron, an engineer with the firm, is the person that opened the road for our students to be able to participate in MATHCOUNTS. He wrote to the MATHCOUNTS Foundation and Guam's MATHCOUNTS Coordinator, Elizabeth Gayle, for information on how to start a CNMI MATHCOUNTS. In March of this year the CNMI was officially welcomed into the 1994/95 MATHCOUNTS program. Last school year, Elizabeth Gayle invited several of the CNMI MATHCOUNTS supporters to Guam to observe and learn the logistics of a state competition. Those that went were Paul Baron, Florence Kirby, Nicolas Sablan, Mrs. Evelyn Reyes of Hopwood Jr. High, William Cheng of Grace Christian Academy, and several National Honor Society students.

The CNMI MATHCOUNTS acknowledges the generous support of Efrain Camacho for allowing Baron to hold meetings during working hours, the use of his conference rooms, photocopying, and facsimile expenses. The CNMI MATHCOUNTS also acknowledges the support from the Commissioner of Education and the Office of Instruction for endorsing MATHCOUNTS as a viable program for our junior high students. Since the CNMI MATHCOUNTS is an education partnership program its success will depend on generous local businesses sponsorship.

MATHCOUNTS is a national math coaching and competition program that promotes 7th and 8th-grade mathematics achievement through grass-roots involvement in every U.S. State and Territory. The only program of its kind, MATHCOUNTS is one of the largest and most successful education partnership involving volunteers, educators, business sponsors, and students. It is the first nationwide program to promote math excellence of junior high students. It is a large scale effort targeted at the junior high level to promote math as an exciting, challenging and absorbing experience which leads to rewarding career opportunities.

MATHCOUNTS was founded in 1983 by the National Society of Professional Engineers and the CNA Insurance Companies. Nationally, MATHCOUNTS is sponsored by the National Society of Professional Engineers, the CNA Insurance Companies, the General Motors Foundation, the Intel Foundation, Texas Instruments incorporated, the National Council of Teachers of Mathematics, and NASA.

Participating junior high schools can select several teams of four students to compete as teams and individually in written and oral competitions. Students first compete in chapter meets in February. Winners progress to state contests in March. The top four scores in the State competition and the top coach will team up to represent the CNMI at the national finals in Washington, D.C. in May 1995.

Among other expenses the CNMI MATHCOUNTS program must raise funds for school registration, competition expenses, awards, transportation for students from Rota and Tinian, and transportation to the national competition in Washington D.C. next year. In addition, the local MATHCOUNTS program will need volunteers to help tutor and coach students.

The participating schools include all three public Junior High Schools on Saipan, Rota and Tinian, Grace Christian Academy, Marianas Baptist Academy, Mount Carmel Schools, and Saipan Community School. If you have children that are in the 7th or 8th grade at any of these schools, or if you would just like to volunteer, the local MATHCOUNTS program needs your help.

There will be a coaching workshop for all interested teachers and volunteers on October 26, at the Joeten Kiyu Library from 3:30-5:30 p.m.

MVB to answer RP bad press

Moses Fejeran

By Ferdie de la Torre

MARIANAS Visitors Bureau board member Moses Fejeran expressed the need to end up and answer the negative publicity of the CNMI in the Philippine media regarding alleged abuses against Filipino contract workers committed by their employers.

To answer the allegations in a positive way, Fejeran volunteered himself to lead in conducting a documentary video footages taken from the members of the community.

The footages will be done in random survey to involve different nationalities showing their real observations and feelings primarily about the general plight of the Filipino workers in the commonwealth.

Fejeran expressed alarm after reading the four-part series on labor abuse allegations in the CNMI which appeared recently in the Philippine Daily Inquirer, one of the country's leading newspapers.

The board member likewise cited a story in the Marianas Variety Thursday issue, quoting Philippine Star, another major daily newspaper in the Philippines, that officials at the Philippine Department of Labor and Employment were contemplating of sending a team of investigators to the CNMI to probe labor abuses.

The Star story came after the Inquirer carried series on labor abuses allegedly committed against Filipino contract workers in the commonwealth.

The special report entitled "Terror in the Northern Marianas" was written by Inquirer's top investigative reporter Juliet Labog, who visited CNMI recently. Her stories explicitly described the alleged sexual assault cases.

Labog even mentioned Rota Mayor Joseph Inos as a suspect in a sexual assault case involving a Filipina waitress-dancer.

"Let's get actual documentation. No editing. It's a random pick up of the people to get their true feelings. We're not rebutting the issue but more or less counter act it in a positive way," said Fejeran who himself believes the reports were exaggerated.

He said the video will be given to the CNMI liaison office in Manila.

"This is one way to rebuild and try to improve our image. The survey is not confrontational but in positive way. We realized there's a problem but for one or two cases only not in general," he emphasized.

Board member Rosita Hocog agreed with the plans, adding that the survey should include Rota and Tinian.

Acknowledging the good intention of Fejeran, board members unanimously sanctioned the move.

Post-1997 changes for Hongkong

BEIJING (AP) - Inheritance laws for Hong Kong should be revised when China takes control in 1997, according to a panel's recommendation announced Thursday.

The Legal Affairs Panel, part of the committee overseeing the transition to Chinese rule, met this week in Beijing to review Hong Kong laws and recommend changes, the China Daily reported.

A law about Hong Kong residents' claims to overseas inheritance will be revised so that Chinese consulate officials handle them, the report said.

In addition, all tax exemptions granted to people or organizations connected to the British Commonwealth will be nullified, the official newspaper said, quoting Shao Tianren, director of the legal affairs panel.

Tax privileges would remain if they are reciprocated in Britain and other Commonwealth countries, Shao said.

Discourtesy hurting tourism

By Ferdie de la Torre

THE MARIANAS Visitors Bureau Board of Directors has underscored the importance of retraining airport personnel as they noted some unruly enforcement officers "destroying" CNMI image as friendly and hospitable islands.

Almost all members of the MVB board, including its chairman Antonio S. Guerrero and MVB Managing Director Anicia Tomokane shared their bad observations and experiences with customs and immigration personnel.

In yesterday's meeting, the board agreed to come up with a dialogue between MVB, Department of Labor and Immigration, and Department of Finance where they could discuss their concerns.

Board member Moses Fejeran brought the attention of the board about the unruly behavior of some immigration and customs personnel at the Saipan International Airport.

"Visitors particularly Japanese, Koreans, Taiwanese who could hardly speak English are being intimidated by our very own agencies," Fejeran said.

Fejeran claimed he witnessed how an airport personnel publicly insulted a visitor in vernacular how much money she was hiding in her underwear.

"I cannot tolerate this, my recommendation is to provide some kind of training or workshop for these personnel to educate them that people who are coming here are customers," he said. "We must divert the negative image of CNMI. It's a minor thing but a big issue. We have to do something."

Fejeran narrated that during his first travel in Communist China he was scared but was surprised when he was warmly welcomed by airport personnel.

The intimidating airport personnel affect MVB's goals and tourism industry.

On the other hand, board member Felicitas Abraham said the issue is an old existing problem.

She claimed that at Northern Marianas College they are trying to address that kind of problem by conducting customers service training using NMC's own funds.

"They (airport personnel) are the windows of the commonwealth. We must do to improve the image of CNMI as being hospitable and friendly," Abraham stressed.

Marianas Visitors Bureau board members Isidro Ada and Felicitas Abraham in yesterday's meeting at the CDA conference room.

Capitol Hill neighborhood beautifies surroundings

TO TAKE part in the observance of Arbor Day, some of the residents on Capitol Hill got out their shovels and planted a total of 71 shrubs and trees on Capitol Hill.

This project was made possible with the guidance and assistance of the Arbor Day Committee.

Arbor Day Committee members, Patrick Calvo, Catherine Moncrieff, Mike Brooks, Richard Sana, Mac Chargalauf, Sid Cabrera, and a group of concerned citizens, were able to obtain Flame Trees, Hibiscus Shrubs, Ornamental Betelnut Trees and Texas Sage Shrubs for the residents to plant in a designated area across from the Convention Center.

Marcelo Romolar, Agriculture Extension Agent from NMC, provided his time and equipment to dig the holes; Saipan Mayor's Office provided the water Buffalo for watering; Mike Brooks, landscape architect, gave advice and suggestions on plant types and location for planting; and Catherine Moncrieff instructed the group on the appropriate technique of planting the trees and shrubs.

The Capitol Hill Beautification Committee, headed by Alex Munson and Lynn Lemieux, recruited their friends and neighbors to do the actual planting on October 15th.

The entourage consisted of Alex and Kathy Munson, Lynn and Steve Lemieux, Dick and Nancy Weil, Priscilla Van Tries, Michael and Parker Quinn, Pam Gallager and daughters Kelly, Kirstie and Megan, Tsuneo and Ken Musashi, Fran and Dave Moncrieff and Charles Rotbart.

After the planting was completed the tired workers were treated to a delicious lunch prepared by Ann Stewart.

Check Saudi, others on abuses

Dear Editor:

ON YOUR Marianas Variety News dates 10/20/94, front page, "RP Labor Team Coming." This is to tell the Philippines Department of Labor and Employment that instead of coming to Saipan, better stop over Europe. Like Saudi Arabia, Jordan, Iraq, Kuwait, and also to Japan, Macao, Hong Kong. These are the countries they should check the Labor Abuses and call terror in Europe/Asia.

If Saipan commits more sexual assault like 100 cases, then it's something, but one to three cases, that's nothing compared to those countries mentioned above. They rape and kill them there, then report it to authority as missing persons. Better save the money and give it to the poor or Blue & Red Cross. Thank you.

Sincerely yours,

Pellegrino calls on all employers

Dear Editor:

ON FRIDAY the 14th, the House Committee on Commerce and Tourism, chaired by Cong. Benjamin A. Sablan, conducted a Public Hearing on a new bill intended to change the existing laws governing our labor laws. It is HB 9-272 - To regulate resident and alien labor in the Commonwealth: and for other purposes.

If passed this bill will drastically change the ways we can use alien labor and will greatly increase the cost of hiring them and will undoubtedly further complicate matters even more than they are now. However, the bill also contains a lot of good points that will help. It also shows that the House of Representatives is concerned about what is happening in the labor market and wants to open a dialogue with us on how to best resolve the matter. House Bill 9-272 is a monumental bill and could become a milestone in how we regulate our labor force.

At the hearing the usual Government agencies were present and gave their usual "pleading for more money and for more manpower so that they can do a better job" testimony. However the private sector was very poorly represented.

Of all the companies employing alien laborers only a Garment Industry representative, two Hotel industry representatives and I showed up to speak out about the tremendous problems that we are faced with concerning labor and how this new legislation will further affect us. Without appearing too presumptuous, I want to explain what I suggested to the Committee. There are issues that concern me deeply as well as affect my business. I only wish you had been there also to speak about your concerns.

Here are the suggestions that I made at the hearing. After reading over them, please contact Chairman Benjamin A. Sablan and tell him or other members of the Committee your concerns about the bill also. They will be pleased to listen to you. This is our big opportunity to correct a system gone haywire.

I suggested that we do away with restrictive job classifications. By doing away with job classifications and instituting industry classification, workers will be employed in an industry rather than in a specific job. This archaic law has created a problem of requiring an unnecessary number of alien workers to come here to work by restricting an em-

Treat aliens as equal humans

Dear Editor:

THIS is in reference to the article (Real Federal Compassion) published on the October 12, 1994 issue of the Marianas Variety.

Mr. Charles P. Reyes Jr. is right. Let's hope and pray that this time, U.S. will stop threatening and warning but rather take over control of immigration before another unsuspecting alien falls prey to a parasite that lures her into marriage, gives her more children than she can handle and wait for 2-3 years to file divorce. Then he can go on with his life and find another victim. The ex-wife, on the other hand, may get luckier, she will be elevated to the Immediate Relative Status forever - without the possibility of being granted U.S. citizenship. With so many mouths to feed, she may be allowed to stay and work day and night just to support her innocent children who in turn will also be lucky to be eligible for a $100.00 or $150.00 a month child support, depending on the capability of the estranged father to fulfill. In another scenario, a lucky alien may find herself stuck under the roof of her in-laws, with a mother-in-law who will remind her everyday as long as she lives how lucky she is to be married to her son who uses her as punching bag and treats her worse than a maid to the delight of his own mother. Better still, she may one day find herself in a situation wherein she will be reminded over and over again how lucky she is (in case she keeps forgetting!) as she lay in the hospital bed with bruises and the word "victim" stamped on her forehead. She can only thank the federal government for encouraging and supporting a social organization like Karidat.

The writer had the audacity to mention that alien workers make as much as 600 to 700 per cent more money than they could from where they come from. I can't imagine where in this part of the world did Mr. Reyes study his simple mathematics. From where I came, the minimum wage is $8.00/day for skilled workers. An average worker in the CNMI received $19.60/day or 60% more. I think 600 or 700 per cent is rather exaggerating. If we earn about 600 or 700 per cent more than we earn back home, I think in just 2 years you will find your alien workers in the CNMI heading back home to put up their own businesses. How lucky can we be! Mr. Reyes will on the other hand have to confront the reality that various businesses in the island still need outside help from these lucky alien workers. Or maybe he doesn't, because he's in mainland and he himself must express his deep gratitude for the real federal compassion that brought him there and made him a U.S. citizen.

Furthermore, Mr. Reyes mentioned about alien businessmen coming to this beautiful island to put up a business and prosper from it. Why sour-grape? Foreign investment pays taxes, helps run your government, provide employment, pave the way for progress and civilization and upgrade your standard of living. Without them Saipan wouldn't be a tropical paradise as you call it but just an island of "tangan-tangan." The presence of aliens like us gave you a chance to rub shoulder with different nationalities and learned from their cultures. It brought about changes. I guess you have to come home and see the difference.

I am a contract worker myself. I came here with a knowledge and expertise to offer. My intentions are good and have come to help. To say the least, I have seen it all in Saipan. In my five years as contract worker, I have not earned as much to build myself even just a simple house. I have not even entertained the thought of marrying a local guy to be a U.S. citizen. I have not put up a business and profit from it. I am just a plain decent contract worker who tries to do my share with my own sweat.

AIDS transmission a crime in Marshalls

By GIFF JOHNSON

MAJURO - Knowingly transmitting HIV or AIDS to another person is now a criminal offense in the Marshall Islands, following the Nitijela (parliament) speaker's certification this week of an amendment to the communicable diseases prevention and control act.

A person who knows that they are infected with AIDS or the HIV virus that causes AIDS and allows it to be transmitted to another person can be fined up to $100,000 or "to a life of isolated confinement under the care of the Ministry of Health Services, or both," according to the amendment.

The new law criminalizes purposeful or negligent behavior that allows the deadly disease to be spread to another person.

The measure comes in the wake of the Ministry of Health confirming last month the first locally diagnosed case of a Marshall Islander with AIDS. A young Marshall Islands man died of AIDS symptoms in early 1993, but was originally diagnosed with AIDS in Hawaii, so is not included in Marshall Island AIDS statistics.

Ministry of Health Officials have for the past year been conducting education programs in schools, at businesses and in the community on AIDS. Ministry officials are emphasizing prevention as the only way to halt the spread of the virus.

US funds to boost Marshalls schools

By GIFF JOHNSON

MAJURO - Marshall Islands educators say that island schools will receive a big shot in the arm from a U.S. Congressional decision to reinstate the Marshalls' eligibility for Title I and Title II funding.

A total of $5 million annually is being made available by the Congress to the Marshalls, Federated States of Micronesia and Palau for elementary and high school programs.

"The formulation for funding (distribution) has not yet been ascertained, but the RMI can expect to receive approximately one-third of the $5 million," said an official from the Marshalls Washington, D.C. embassy.

The beginning of the Compact of Free Association in 1986 was the end of the Marshalls' eligibility for the Title I and II funding. The reinstatement of the school funding for the Marshalls, as part of the Improving America's Schools Act of 1994, was accomplished despite strong opposition from the Clinton Administration.

"The Marshalls is fortunate to have been included in such major legislation considering the opposition that existed," the embassy official said. Leslie Turner, an assistant secretary of Interior, wrote to U.S. Senator Claiborne Pell that the Marshalls and other Freely Associated States (FAS) should be removed from the legislation.

She said including the FAS would increase dependency on the U.S. and unfairly take away money for U.S. territories.

"These funds will definitely help elementary and high school programs," said Marshalls Education Secretary Hilda Heine. The funds will be available for text books and schools supplies and materials, two categories in which the Ministry of Education is chronically short, she said.

In the past, Title I and II funds were also available for minor school renovation projects and Heine said she is hopeful this may still be possible, since virtually all public schools are old with leaking roofs.

"In view of the budget cuts, this is a very positive development," she added. "It's good to know that additional money will be available for education." Heine said that Marshalls Ambassador Kendall and the Washington embassy deserve the credit for lobbying with Congress to support the reinstatement of the Marshalls' eligibility - a lobbying effort that has taken more than two years.

In Majuro this week, Kendall said credit for passage of the measure goes to Senator Pell of Rhode Island, who is a long time proponent of educational programs for the Marshalls.

The newly available Title I and II funds will be distributed through the Pacific Regional Educational Laboratory (PREL) board, on which Marshalls Education Minister Evelyn Konou sits, along with representatives from other parts of Micronesia.

Harrison Ford in new thriller

Harrison Ford stars as the CIA's Jack Ryan in "Clear and Present Danger" Produced by Mace Neufeld and Robert Rehme, the Paramount action thriller was directed by Philip Noyce.

HARRISON Ford who has ignited the box office worldwide for such films as "Indiana Jones" and the "Fugitive" has done it again.

"Clear and Present Danger" is the third Tom Clancy novel about CIA analyst Jack Ryan to be adapted to the screen and Ford stars as the CIA's Jack Ryan. Promoted from analyst to deputy director of intelligence for the CIA he finds himself thrust into one of America's most dangerous conflicts - the war on drugs.

The title drives from the section of U.S. law that prohibits the commitment of American military power except in situations where there exists "a clear and present danger to the national security of the United States."

"Clear and Present Danger" is a film for the new era, observes director Philip Noyce. "In the post-Cold War world, the influence of the President has become even greater as the United States is increasingly called upon to act as a police force to the world. This is a film that asks the question, 'When is it appropriate for this powerful nation to act and what form should that action take?' "

As the President calls for decisive action, Mr. Clark, portrayed by Willem Dafoe, employes high technology espionage to conduct his covert business. His mission, however noble its purpose, is nonetheless orchestrated outside of American law, without congressional approval or Jack Ryan's knowledge. When Ryan ultimately discovers what has happened he must decide what action to take.

Phillip Noyce asks, "Does he keep quiet and not injure the Presidency or the institution he has served for so many years? Or does he do something that will endanger his own career and reputation, endanger the Presidency and plunge the whole country into turmoil akin to Watergate or the Iran Contra Affair?"

"Ryan finds himself drawn into this situation that finally only he can resolve," said Harrison Ford. "We all have moral decisions to make in our lives and the nature of them depends on the exact detail of the circumstances."

"I'm interested in action-oriented films with an emotional thread running through them," said Harrison Ford. "The reason that I like to do as much as of the action as possible is because I want to maintain the emotional relationship between the character and the audience.

In reprising his role of Jack Ryan, Ford worked with director Phillip Noyce and the stunt and special effects teams to plan and participate in the film's complex, physically-challenging action sequences.

Harrison Ford was named "Star of the Century" earlier this year by the National Association of Theater Owners but, unlike a lot of actors, Ford doesn't consider himself as an artist. He describes himself as a "worker." "I work for the audiences...I make audience movies. I work for them."

Ford has starred in six of the most successful films of all time, playing Indiana Jones in the trilogy that began with "Raiders of the Lost Ark" and Han Solo in the "Star Wars" saga. His other films include "The Fugitive," "The Mosquito Coast" and "Witness."

"He takes his work very seriously," says producer Mace Neufeld, "but he doesn't take himself seriously as a movie star."

Who is the real Harrison Ford? Is it Harrison Ford A Fugitive From Fame?

There are many tales about Ford's early struggles as an actor. Born and raised in Chicago, Ford attended Ripon College in Wisconsin and began his career performing in summer productions. The truth is he arrived in Hollywood with hardly any experience and was signed almost immediately by first one and then another studio. It is also true that he did not become a star until he was 35, following "Star Wars."

Twelve years ago, to liberate himself from Los Angeles and the "movie machine" after his great success in "Raiders of the Lost Ark," he and his second wife, screenwriter Melissa Mathison looked briefly at Sun Valley, then drove over the Teton Pass and into the almost-empty town of Jackson and purchased an 800-acre Wyoming spread.

Ford insists he was not running away from anything when he abandoned Hollywood. "I was only looking for a 10 to 20 acres. When we couldn't find the kind of place we wanted, we bought a place much larger because it had everything I wanted."

The white house in which Ford, his wife and children - 7-year-old Malcolm and 4-year-old Georgia - live was originally intended to be the caretaker's quarters but when it was finished it fitted the whole family so well that they

Ford recently placed 389 acres in perpetual trust to serve as a wildlife retreat.

He has been in a more or less constant state of retreat since he was a boy.

"I never had an ambition to be a star," he stated, "I always thought I was going to be a character actor."

"I am not interested in playing Jack Kyan for at least two or three years."

Is there a chance that he may reprise his "Star Wars" role? "No, not on your life," Ford says.

He had planned to take a year off from film making so that he could enjoy his ranch. But he will soon start work on Sydney's Pollack's a remake of "Sabrina," the 1954 comedy written and directed by Willy Wilder. Ford will take on the role played by Humphrey Bogard in the original - the Audrey Hepburn role is still not cast.

WASHINGTON (AP) - The independent counsel investigating Mike Espy has subpoenaed documents connected to a White House probe of the agriculture secretary's ethical behavior, the Clinton administration said Wednesday.

The White House said it would comply with the subpoena by Independent Counsel Donald C. Smaltz, who asked for any documents associated with the internal inquiry.

Smaltz was named by a federal court, principally to investigate whether Espy broke the law by receiving sports tickets, lodging and transportation from businesses regulated by the Department of Agriculture. Espy predicted he would be exonerated, but has resigned, effective at year's end.

The Oct. 11 internal report, by White House Counsel Abner Mikva, concluded no further action was warranted against Espy.

Espy has repaid the businesses that provided the gifts and the government for apparent personal use of an Agriculture Department vehicle.

Mikva said in the report that it was imperative for all presidential appointees to follow the administration's ethics standards, and laws governing gifts, travel, political activity and conflicts of interest.

The White House said Mikva's office had received the subpoena four days ago, and would provide the documents by the Nov. 10 deadline.

The report said Espy's Oct. 3 resignation announcement and his decision to make the reimbursements make further corrective action unnecessary at this time.

Espy has written more than $7,600 in personal checks as reimbursements. They include $6,200 for apparent use of the government-leased vehicle, $700 for four Super Bowl tickets and $90 for two pro basketball tickets.

20 killed in crash

BEIJING (AP) - A freight train collided with a jam-packed commuter bus early Thursday morning in a southeastern suburb of Beijing, killing more than 20 people and injuring dozens of others, a local official said.

Only a handful of the 80-100 people on the bus were uninjured after it was hit by the train at an unguarded railway crossing, according to a staffer at the Shibali Village government office, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

The collision slashed the bus in half with the front part in a ditch on one side of the tracks and the mangled back half on the other.

The village official said that more than 20 people were killed in the crash, which occurred during the morning rush hour about 10 kilometers (6 miles) from downtown Beijing.

Poll body rejects first lady's election bid

LIMA, Peru (AP) - The national elections board Wednesday rejected First Lady Susana Higuchi's bid to run for the presidency against her husband.

The board invalidated the majority of the signatures submitted on Higuchi's election petition, along with seven other candidates seeking the presidency.

It ruled that 135,999 signatures were invalid, leaving Higuchi with only 11,851 names, far short of the 100,000 signatures necessary to gain a spot on the ballot for April's presidential election.

In invalidating Higuchi's petition, the board avoided the constitutional issue of whether the first lady could legally run for president. Congress in July passed a law prohibiting the president's family members from running for national office.

In a highly public dispute with her husband, Higuchi claimed the law was unconstitutional. In September she moved out of the government palace and announced she would challenge President Alberto Fujimori for his job.

Earlier this week, Higuchi charged that the National Intelligence Service was involved in an orchestrated effort to erase her campaign from the electoral map.

She said high-tech fraud, including a computer virus, was being used to sabotage her campaign.

She said a blackout earlier in the month had erased many of the petition names in her party's computers. She blamed the intelligence service for the loss of data.

Of the 27 Peruvians who submitted petitions to the national elections board to qualify to be on the presidential ballot, only 14 have cleared the election board's scrutiny.

Among the candidates in the 1995 elections are Fujimori, former U.N. Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuellar, and Lima Mayor Ricardo Belmont.

Witch fined

SUVA, Fiji (AP) - When flogging with a thorny branch failed to drive an "evil spirit" out of a Fijian housewife, the witch doctor reached for a cattle whip.

Nine lashes later, the woman needed hospital treatment and witch doctor Darshan Singh was in trouble with the police, a court in the northern Fiji city of Labasa was told.

Singh, 34, was fined SF60 ($43 U.S.) Wednesday and received a suspended prison sentence after pleading guilty to practicing witchcraft, the Fiji Times newspaper reported.

Singh pleaded for leniency, saying the woman's husband had requested the flogging for his frenzied wife. People forced him to cure them, he added.

Although police disagreed, Singh also claimed his treatment had worked, but Magistrate Moses Fernando told Singh his witchcraft was unnatural and against all religions.

"It does not matter whether she was cured or not - this has to stop," Fernando said.

Perry, Ramos lead RP commemoration

By EILEEN GUERRERO

RED BEACH, Philippines (AP) - With explosives blasting coconut trees and mock Japan Zero fighters swooping overhead, Filipino marines stormed the beach here Thursday to commemorate Gen. Douglas MacArthur's landing at Leyte 50 years ago.

President Fidel Ramos, U.S. Defense Secretary William Perry and dignitaries from more than 12 countries watched the landing, which climaxed four days of celebrations of the landing that led to the liberation of the Philippines from Japanese occupation.

The Philippine government honored 12 people, including three American Medal of Honor winners during the ceremonies. They were Robert Nett of Grand Rapids, Mich., Dirk Vlug of Columbos, Georgia, and Donald Rudolth of South Haven, Minn.

On Oct. 20, 1944, four U.S. army divisions landed at this beach 350 miles (560 kilometers) southeast of Manila fulfilling MacArthur's "I shall return" vow made after the Japanese defeated U.S. and Filipino forces at Bataan and Corregidor two years earlier.

The Leyte operation included the five-day Battle of Leyte Gulf, the largest naval engagement in world history.

During a speech after the landing, Japan's ambassador to the Philippine Yoshifumi Matsuda, said his nation was "fully aware that Japan was directly responsible for the grave consequences of war inflicted on the people of Asia and the Pacific."

"Our nation has learned an important lesson from the war and was reborn out of remorse for such a tragic experience," he said.

The Philippine government had invited President Clinton but he declined. Clinton is to visit Manila next month on his way to Indonesia for the Asia Pacific Economic Cooperation summit.

Perry hailed the contribution of Filipino guerrillas in wearing down the Japanese before the Leyte invasion.

"After U.S. troops landed, Filipinos offered friendship," Perry said. "We, Americans have nothing but admiration."

As 10 landing craft from the USS Belleau Wood maneuvered offshore and approached the beach, American veterans of the landing cheered and recalled the day a half century ago that they stormed the shore as young men.

"It was fascinating," said Edward Johnson of Florida, who was a 17-year-old Navy gunner aboard the cruiser USS Louisville. "You cannot help but be impressed with all those ships and thousands and thousands of troops returning to the Philippines. It was absolutely awe-inspiring, especially to a 17-year-old."

Alva Smith of Capistrano, Calif., muttered, "I've been there, I've been there," as he watched the troops pour out of their landing ships.

As explosives planted on the beach for the show blasted sand into the air, a Filipino woman in the crowd asked: "Was it like this?"

Several of the veterans answered back in unison, "Heavier, much heavier."

"It's a different feeling (when) it's real," said Edmond Keuker of Waterloo, Ill.

At the end of the re-enactment, a landing craft pulled up on shore bearing an actor portraying MacArthur.

The actor, John Metcalf, slipped and fell into the water. He recovered as a taped broadcast played:

Unlike the Germans at Normandy in June 1944, the 80,000 Japanese troops on Leyte offered little resistance on the beaches. They fell back and waged a stiff defense through six months of fighting in which about 4,000 Americans were killed and 12,000 wounded. Most of the Japanese died except for about 800 taken prisoner.

"We didn't have too much resistance," said Mel Coobs, of Boise, Idaho, who was a private in the 96th Infantry Division which landed at Leyte. "The biggest problem was when we headed out from the beach, we hit the swamps and it was terribly tough to move."

From Leyte U.S. troops invaded the main Philippine island, Luzon, and recaptured the capital Manila in February 1945.

The Japanese held out in the northern Philippines and elsewhere until the end of the war in August 1945.

The U.S. Navy had wanted to bypass the Philippines and strike instead at Taiwan. MacArthur convinced President Franklin Roosevelt that America had a moral obligation to rescue the Philippines, then an American commonwealth, because Washington had abandoned it in 1942.

Most of America's resources were directed at defeating the Germans in Europe.

Seoul's opposition wants less dependence on U.S.

By PAUL SHIN

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) - Parliament's opposition leader said Thursday that the "unsatisfactory" U.S.-North Korean nuclear deal should prompt South Korea to become less dependent on the United States in foreign policy.

Lee Ki-taik, chairman of the Democratic Party, welcomed the nuclear accord, reached in Geneva this week, as "epochal," but he also said that it falls short of South Korea's goals.

The government has accepted the accord, but criticized it for giving the North too much time to open its nuclear sites to inspection, while immediately giving it U.S. economic aid.

In his speech in the National Assembly, Lee predicted that the nuclear deal would make South Korea reconsider its dominant reliance on the United States in foreign policy.

"From now on, our foreign policy should shift from a cooperative diplomacy to a self-reliant diplomacy," Lee said.

In return for freezing its nuclear program, the North will have better relations with the United States and receive two modern nuclear reactors to replace outdated Soviet-developed ones that can produce large amounts of bomb-making plutonium.

South Korea is committed to bear a majority of the costs.

From now on, Lee said, South Korea should pursue its own diplomacy, less dependent on the United States, and promote wide-ranging exchanges and trade with its communist rival.

Two-year-old keeps vigil over dead father

By STRAT DOUTHAT

WATERTOWN, Conn. (AP) - For more than a day, little Andrea Scott sat in a pool of blood on her kitchen floor, keeping a vigil over the body of her slain father, a convicted drug dealer who had been shot to death, execution-style.

Day care workers said they found the 2-year-old child caked with blood from head to toe when they went to the apartment Tuesday afternoon.

"She had thrown a blanket over her father's body to keep him warm," said Elizabeth Byrd, a nurse at the Learning Circle Day Care Center.

Friends said Andrew Scott, who was released from prison in 1992 after serving 14 months for selling drugs, was a quiet, reserved man who doted on his daughter. The girl was born addicted to cocaine.

"He was a devoted father who cared deeply for his daughter. I've held that baby in my arms as she suffered the seizures and convulsions of her withdrawal from cocaine. Her father was all she had. ... Now everything's been ripped away from her," said Pegene Watts-Anderson, director of the girl's day care center.

Byrd and co-worker Mary Ann Kellar went to the toddler's home after she failed to show up at the day care center Monday and Tuesday. Nobody had answered their telephone calls to Scott's apartment in this suburb about 75 miles (120 kilometers) north of New York.

The little girl opened the door when she heard Kellar's familiar voice.

The day care workers found Andrew Scott lying face down on the kitchen floor. Andrea was slightly dehydrated and had a bad diaper rash, Watts-Anderson said.

Detective Sgt. Ron Blanchard said Scott, 45, was shot in the back of the head with a small caliber pistol. Authorities found a large quantity of crack cocaine, some packaged for street sales, and a huge wad of cash in the cramped, two-bedroom apartment Scott shared with his daughter.

State officials placed Andrea, who was in good physical condition, in a temporary foster home.

Watts-Anderson said she had been told that Scott's cousin, a day care worker, would eventually get custody.

The child's mother is a transient drug addict who lives in Waterbury, police said.

Authorities said they had no suspects and no murder weapon. They were uncertain when Scott was killed, but it could have been as early as Sunday night.

TOKYO (AP) - Matsushita Electric and Industrial Co. said Wednesday it may hold future meetings with managers of MCA Inc., its U.S. entertainment subsidiary, to decide whether to give them back full control over the entertainment conglomerate.

Matsushita rejected a proposal to take control of MCA. The plan was made by MCA chairman Lew R. Wasserman and president Sidney J. Sheinberg during a 5 1/2-hour meeting with Matsushita president Yoichi Morishita in San Francisco on Tuesday, spokesman Setsuo Mizoguchi said.

"The meeting produced little. ... However, the issue has yet to be resolved, possibly through further meetings in the near future," Mizoguchi said.

There are no immediate plans for such meetings, Mizoguchi said.

In Universal City Wednesday, MCA said Wasserman has not renewed his contract with Matsushita, which expires in December 1995. There was widespread speculation that Wasserman was on the verge of resigning, but an MCA spokeswoman said such a conclusion was inaccurate.

"He doesn't have a new contract, but he has not resigned," spokeswoman Christine Hanson said.

If Wasserman were to leave the company, Sheinberg might also follow and Hollywood's longest-standing management team would be finished.

Sheinberg did not return a telephone call seeking comment.

Mizoguchi would not say whether MCA officials proposed buying back the MCA stake that Matsushita acquired four years ago. The Los Angeles Times, citing unidentified sources, reported Wednesday that the topic was not raised at the meeting.

Wasserman and Sheinberg sold the company - which includes Universal Studios, a recording operation and theme parks - to Matsushita in 1990 for $6.6 billion.

At the time it was seen as a step by the leading consumer electronics maker to ensure a steady stream of creative programming for its televisions, VCRs and audio gear. Matsushita's brands include Panasonic and Technics.

News reports last week said Wasserman and Sheinberg were unhappy about Matsushita's management of MCA and wanted to buy it back.

Matsushita executives have not taken direct roles in the running of MCA, and by many accounts feel ill at ease in Hollywood matters. But the Japanese firm has tried to control MCA's spending in recent years as sales of consumer products have stagnated.

MCA executives have complained privately that they were unable to pursue buying Virgin Records, purchase a share in a television network and expand the theme park operation.

India defers import of toxic wastes

NEW DELHI, India (AP) - India has deferred signing an agreement with Australia for importing industrial waste for recycling after protests from environmentalists.

The Greenpeace had accused Australia of exporting thousands of tons of lead acid batteries, metal wastes and ash residues for recycling in India under dangerous conditions.

If an agreement is signed later the Indian government would ensure environmental safeguards, Times of India newspaper quoted officials as saying on Thursday.

Industrial waste is available from developed countries at one-third of the market price of the raw material. It is recycled and used by industrial units in developing countries.

On Monday, Greenpeace activist Ann Leonard told reporters in New Delhi that Australia was trying to bypass the 1989 Basel Convention that bans the export of hazardous wastes by industrialized nations to poor countries by signing bilateral accords.

Ms. Leonard said many Indian workers strip the batteries without knowing that the chemicals can cause cancer and respiratory problems. The waste chemicals often are dumped into the rivers.

A team of Australian officials, representing the department of foreign affairs and trade, industry, science and technology, held discussions with their Indian counterparts in New Delhi this week.

More official trade unions urged

BEIJING (AP) - Labor disputes and accidents in foreign-funded enterprises indicate a need for more official trade unions, an official report said Thursday.

Government officials met Wednesday to discuss labor problems in foreign-funded enterprises and called for the official All-China Federation of Trade Unions to set up more branches in foreign companies, the China Daily reported.

China does not allow independent trade unions. All union activity is under the government-sponsored union.

Beijing has 2,310 overseas-funded companies that employ 240,000 Chinese workers, and about one-third of them have trade unions, the report said.

The Chinese press recently has said that as overseas investment booms, there have been increasing reports of labor disputes in overseas-funded companies.

Some of these companies force workers to work overtime, neglect safety standards and unfairly find fault with workers as an excuse to cut wages or fine them, the China Daily said.

In November, 84 workers died in a fire at a doll factory funded by a Hong Kong businessman where windows had been locked shut to guard against theft.

In a separate report, the newspaper said a senior trade union official in Jilin province had been sentenced to life imprisonment for embezzlement, bribery and sexual abuses.

Xue Jingwen, former vice president of the Jilin Federation of Trade Unions, embezzled and accepted bribes of 158,000 yuan ($18,500) from 1990 to 1993 when he was the director of a paper mill and a trade union official, the report said. He sexually abused nine women during the same period, it said.

Australia to enforce its first 'Koala speed zone'

BRISBANE, Australia (AP) - Why did the koala cross the road?

Probably because it was seeking a mate. But in the koala breeding season in southeast Queensland, some 350 koalas are killed by cars each year, prompting Australia's first "go-slow zone" to protect the national icon.

Speed limits will be lowered next year from 80 kph (50 mph) to 60 kph (37 mph) between 7 p.m. and 5 a.m. during the breeding season, which runs from August to December, according to Queensland's Environment Ministry.

Highway speed limits of 100 kph (62 mph) may also be reduced to 90 kph (56 mph), the Environment Ministry said Wednesday.

The nocturnal speed limit will be in effect in the Redland Shire, parts of Brisbane and Logan City to protect Australia's largest remaining koala habitat, home to 3,000 to 5,000 of the marsupials.

Koala Council president Frank Karrick said voluntary appeals to drivers to slow down had not worked, and applauded the government initiative.

But environmentalists from the Queensland Conservation Council said this plan wouldn't work either.

"People just don't slow down because they see a sign with a koala on it," council project officer Ian Ayre said.

He said that if the government goes ahead with the speed limits then it should also consider erecting signs listing a koala death toll.

"We need something to prick their consciences, something a bit more than just a sign saying 'slow down,'" Ayre said.

Japan's Mazda to buy cars from Ford

TOKYO (AP) - Japan's Mazda Motor Corp. is in the final stage of negotiations with Ford Motor Co. to purchase Ford cars for sale in Europe under Mazda's brand name, the Japanese automaker said Thursday.

Mazda, which is owned 25 percent by Ford, said the cars would be small-sized passenger vehicles made by Ford at its European plants.

A Mazda official said the details of the purchases, including the amount, timing, and location of the plant where the cars would be made, haven't been decided.

He the two companies also are still negotiating over how much Mazda would be involved in the making of the cars.

Mazda, which doesn't have its own auto production facility in Europe, has been discussing the possibility of jointly producing cars with Ford in Europe over the past five years.

After a brief suspension earlier this year, the two sides resumed negotiations this summer to seek ways of giving Mazda access to locally made cars in Europe.

The Mazda official, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said the company has settled on receiving cars from Ford, rather than building them jointly with the U.S. auto maker, based on a "management decision." He stressed that the company does not see the move as a setback in Mazda's overall strategy in the European market.

Mazda, which has been suffering financially because of slow sales and an excessive expansion of sales channels, accepted three more Ford officials as directors in its management late last year in a move to upgrade global cooperation between the two companies.

Mazda already builds a large volume of cars for Ford at its Japanese plants, and the two companies have agreed to conduct a feasibility study to jointly build a new pickup truck plant in Thailand.

Amid weak domestic demand and the yen's strength, which makes Japanese exports more expensive, Mazda posted a consolidated net loss of 48 billion yen ($480 million) in fiscal 1994, which ended March 31.

On the Tokyo Stock Exchange, Mazda shares rose 1 yen in Thursday morning trading to 561.

Haitians fear return of attaches, bold criminals

By PATRICK McDOWELL

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) - It's a claim that stretches the imagination.

The Haitian cops at the notorious Cafeteria police station say they wouldn't know if one of the attache thugs that used to work for them had been hauled in.

Why? They don't carry pro-military membership cards anymore.

But at Cite Soleil, the fetid slum home to about one million people, residents frightened for their safety and property believe the thugs that terrorized them under military rule are being put back on the streets - by their old friends, the police.

Suspected attaches detained by U.S. soldiers are handed over to Haitian police if it is determined they haven't committed a serious crime or don't pose a threat to the U.S. or multinational forces.

Most of the time, though, turning attaches over to Haitian police is to give them to the people most likely to set them free.

The old police force worked hand-in-glove with attaches and members of the pro-military Front for the Advancement and Progress of Haiti (FRAPH), which together brutalized pro-democracy supporters during military rule.

And while the new Haitian police force is being overseen by international monitors, and efforts have been made to weed out corrupt elements from the old force, it has not been completely dismantled.

"The people that hold them are their friends, so they free them," said Jean-Baptiste Elifaithe, 69, a merchant in Cite Soleil. "Or maybe they bribe their way out."

It's impossible to say how many attaches have been freed. Police claim they don't even know an attache when they detain one.

Police Sgt. Nicolas Garard said no master list exists for attaches or FRAPH members.

"When they arrest people and bring them here, if they don't have the card saying they're a FRAPH, how am I supposed to know?" said Garard.

At the Cafeteria police station downtown, 1st Lt. Herve Filsaine says no verifiable attaches are currently in custody.

Duty office Pierre Herod said two men being held Wednesday were accused of being attaches by a man they beat in a money-stakes game of dominoes. "The guy they beat wanted his money back and shouted they were attaches," Herod said.

A crowd beat them and turned them over to the Americans.

There was no proof that two men were attaches - just as there was no proof they were not - and it's easy to sic a mob on an enemy by saying he is. The two were to be held for 24 hours and quietly released.

From his small shop selling wine and oil on the Cite Soleil waterfront, Elifaithe fears that too many of those released are attaches.

And he thinks they may have a new job now - common thieves - following the exile of the military rulers and the return of elected President Jean-Bertrand Aristide.

Elifaithe expressed fear for the family who guards his shop at night because some suspicious people have see around lately.

"They put dark glasses on, but I recognize them," Elifaithe said. "They're attaches; they carry knives now instead of guns because the guns could get taken away too easy."

Across the garbage-strewn street from Elifaithe's shop, Elita Eliscara, 45, a sugar-cane seller and single mother with four children, was robbed of her meager earnings Monday night by thieves who threatened to cut her throat.

The poor are not the only victims of rising crime. In the affluent hills of the capital's Pacot neighborhood, a maid was slain during a robbery Wednesday at a leafy, two-story house.

Alongside the desire for revenge against such crimes - past and present - exists a pervasive fear of the old power structure.

Tuesday night, a mob in the wealthy hillside suburb of Petionville beat to death a notorious attache known as Lenes.

One of his friends, a police sergeant, turned up later and threatened to blow up the houses of everyone involved in the death. Hundreds of people fled and sought shelter with friends.

Witnesses said U.S. soldiers came an hour later and took the sergeant away, and no one was killed and no property damaged. U.S. military officials would not confirm or deny whether the sergeant was taken into custody.

Malaysia's Mahathir visits Japan

KUALA LUMPUR, Malaysia (AP) - Prime Minister Mahathir Mohamad left Thursday for a five-day visit to Japan, where he will promote trade and economic ties.

Mahathir, who is accompanied by his wife Siti Hasmah, will address a conference in Oita city, meet Japanese businessmen and tour several industrial plants, Foreign Ministry officials said.

ployee to a single job. This forces the employer to hire more employees than he needs because he cannot move his current employees around to do the work that becomes necessary. By allowing employees to do whatever job is necessary in a company, both company and the employee will benefit. The result will be fewer alien employees in the Commonwealth. Let employers use their workforce as they see best.

Thus by doing away with job classifications and instead instituting industry classifications, employers will greatly benefit by greater productivity while employees will be motivated to improve their work skills. Frivolous labor cases will diminish also.

Government must stop hiring away all eligible resident workers, whether they need them or not, out of the private labor market. It is a well known fact that the road to job security is the road to the government workforce. This past February I was requested by the Commissioner of Education, to form a task force comprised of local businessmen to study "the school-to-work transition" situation in the Commonwealth. Basically he wanted to know what can the PSS do to better educate students so that when they enter the labor market they will be better prepared. The report is with the Commissioner and you can get a copy from his office.

As part of the research I spoke to 68 students enrolled in the Distributive Education program at Marianas High School (MHS). I asked them two basic questions: (a) why don't they want to work for the private sector; (b) how many of them had signed up to work for the government agencies as part of their course training. An astounding 80% said they signed-up to work for various government agencies and hoped to continue that employment after graduation. Other answers they gave me were quite revealing about how they view the labor situation in the Commonwealth. They also revealed an unhealthy attitude towards the private sector. We should listen better to what they are telling us.

The bill also has a section that proposes a universal health plan that outdoes what President Clinton tried to do in the U.S. and failed. If left as it is the health plan will force the employer to buy an outrageous amount of health insurance regardless of costs to cover all kinds of illness even alcoholism, drug addiction, psychiatric treatment, total off-island referral and related expenses. This is unmitigated Socialized medicine! And who will pay for this? You the employer will pay 95% of its cost. It is even more comprehensive than our local government has.

The questions to be answered are legion before this plan is allowed to become effective. We better start thinking of the cost we will have to pay for all employees - both resident and alien. A health plan of this gravity will bankrupt many of us. The minimum total amount of coverage shall not be less than $100,000.00 worth of coverage per employee. Do any of us know what the premium will be for such high and extensive coverage? And if we don't provide the prepaid health plan and an employee becomes ill, we will be forced to pay all medical expenses and also be subject to a $2,000.00 fine for each employee who is not provided prepaid health coverage. This plan boggles the mind. We better speak out boldly now or forever hold our complaints.

There is another section concerning the bonding of alien employees. It will require that each employer post a bond for each alien worker. The bond shall be for the cost of one airplane ticket to the alien worker's country of origin plus one month wages for the worker, plus $100.00.

Let's say you have only ten alien workers with an average of $600 wages per month. This means you will have to give the Labor Department $600 times 10 or $6,000 plus 10 times the plane fare or about $3,500 plus $100 for each worker or $1,000 for a grand total of $10,500 to hold as a bond for all your workers. Of course interest and the use of the money is lost until you send home all the alien workers.

Presently the fee for Labor is $200 plus $25 for Immigration or $225 for each new or renewal application. These fees could get even higher if INS raises its fee. Just recently the Labor fee jumped from $100 to $200, and we can expect INS will raise, too. The fee amount could not be substantiated as to how it was arrived at or why such a large amount is needed by any of the government agencies present at the hearing when questioned. Your voice must be heard on this cost.

Try adding the expected cost of a full and comprehensive medical coverage prepaid health plan with the cost of bonding money and the constantly rising cost of processing alien workers and all the other remaining fringe benefits and you will see that alien workers will fast become a rarity in the Commonwealth. My best suggestion is to start looking East towards the U.S. instead of West for employees because unless you voice your concern it will come to pass faster that any of us realize.

I recommended to the Committee that if the fee must be that high then part of this money should be used in the following manner. The Labor Division should take part of this money to fund on-going seminars to teach all present and future employers, regardless of the number of employees they have, the rules and regulations for employing any type of worker. These seminars would teach all employers local and Federal Labor Laws. Attendance should be mandatory. This same idea should be applied to all resident and alien workers and attendance should be mandatory.

At these seminars everybody will learn the same rules of the game. I strongly believe that much of the confusion and problems we have can be honestly related to ignorance or personal interpretation of labor regulations. To cite one example, many employers and employees feel that they can make side agreements beyond what the Labor Contract supplied by the Labor Department mandates. This is incorrect and results in many labor cases arising whenever one of the parties becomes dissatisfied. Also employees cannot waive certain rights such as overtime pay even though the employer asks him to do so. The Federal Labor Laws do not allow a worker at any time to waive this right to overtime pay. There are many more rules

My heart bleeds for my fellowmen who weren't as fortunate as I am in finding the right employers but I also give due respect to local people who have a heart and compassion in the truest sense of the word. I abhor local people who belittles us and I am grateful to those who are educated and civilized enough to treat us like real human beings and who know the importance of our presence here. We do not need federal intervention to live in harmony as a multiracial society. All we need is respect for one another and true compassion for every human being so that we all can live in unity. Afterall, we all eat the same food, speak the same language, and worship the same God. So what difference does it make if you're a local and I'm an alien. Does being an alien make me less a human being? We don't need your citizenship. We're proud to be citizens of our own countries. All we need is the chance to uplift our standard of living and to provide just enough for our own families who are prepared to sacrifice and endure the loneliness of having us away from them. It is not easy for us to be away from our loved ones. A little compassion, not necessarily a federal compassion is all we need. And I guess so does every other alien working here in the CNMI.

Are we asking too much?

Princess Diana arrives in NY

By PAT MILTON

NEW YORK (AP) - Princess Diana fled tell-all books and talk of divorce for an American-style Roman holiday.

The princess landed at New York's Kennedy Airport on Wednesday afternoon and climbed into a limousine with another young woman believed to be her friend Lucia Flecha de Lima, wife of the Brazilian ambassador to the United States.

Diana appeared delighted as she hugged and chatted with her companion.

U.S. State Department and city police cars, lights and sirens on, escorted the car to the Carlyle Hotel in Manhattan.

Diana sped off later in a four-car motorcade, including the bright green sedan she arrived in.

When she returned later in the evening, she smiled at reporters but refused to talk with them.

There was no official schedule for the princess because the trip is considered private. But she was expected to travel to Washington Thursday and stay at the ambassador's residence. The princess's trip will include a private party at the home of Washington Post Co. executive Katharine Graham, the newspaper reported.

A weekend in the United States keeps Diana out of London when the Sunday Times publishes the second installment of the authorized biography of her husband, Prince Charles, 45-year-old heir to the British throne.

Police, protesters clash in London

LONDON (AP) - Riot police and demonstrators protesting a draft law they say infringes civil liberties clashed outside Parliament Wednesday night as legislators discussed it behind locked gates.

About 1,000 police, many on horseback, confronted 2,000 demonstrators, some of whom hurled firecrackers and bottles.

Others rushed toward the gates outside the House of Commons which had been locked. They were confronted by lines of police and seven people were arrested in the ensuing clashes.

Inside the Commons, legislator Sir James Spicer of the governing Conservative Party, protested to the House: "We have a situation now where this House is under siege."

The demonstration began peacefully. It turned violent when riot police on horseback moved in as members of the crowd ignored the advice of demonstration stewards to leave. They said they were being denied the right to lobby legislators on the issue.

It was the second outbreak of violence in London against the Criminal Justice Bill in 10 days. On Oct. 9, 38 people, 19 of them police, were hurt and 39 protesters arrested following a demonstration by 25,000 people against the bill in Hyde Park.

The bill, a mixed parcel of law and order measures, has been written by Prime Minister John Major's Conservative government.

Among other things, it will remove defendants' traditional right to silence at trials. At present, defendants can say nothing in their defense if they wish without the prosecution being able to comment adversely on their silence. When the bill becomes law, prosecutors will have the right to claim to juries that a defendant's silence is a pointer to guilt.

The new measure will also introduce tougher sentences for some categories of young offenders and tighten the law against squatters who set up home in vacant property without consent.

It will also outlaw unlicensed open-air rock festivals and strengthen police powers against New Age Travelers - groups of unemployed young people who roam the country in old vans and buses.

The demonstration proceeded outside the Commons Wednesday night.

and regulations that employers and employees must understand.

By making everyone attend the seminars, all will walk out having the same interpretations of the rules and regulations. Think of it in another way. Are you allowed to drive a car without a driver's license? Of course not. All of us regardless of our status in life must pass a written and driving test before we can obtain a license. Yes, we still have accidents, but all of us know the rules and regulations and assume the responsibilities better for our actions because we passed a test telling us what they are. We agreed to abide by them so now we can drive. Laws about employment of workers are complex and a little education will go a long way in helping us.

I strongly recommended that another portion of the free money be used to train the resident worker on the job by subsidizing the employer who is willing to train the employee. The Job Training Partnership Act Program (JTPA) has been doing this using Federal funds for many years. The way it works is that if an employer agrees to hire an unskilled resident worker who is also classified as having an economic handicap, the JTPA will subsidize the employer during the training period by contributing part of the unskilled employees salary. When the training is completed the subsidy stops. In fact even uniforms are paid for by the JTPA.

When I first started in business here in Saipan, I received JTPA assistance and it helped me and my untrained resident employees greatly. This kind of assistance should be extended to all resident workers and employers who are willing to participate in the new program for training resident workers. In this way the application fee collected for an alien worker will result in a combined effort of job training partnership among the government, the employer and the employee. What a happy combination for strengthening and uplifting our resident labor force.

It is time that we stop hiring "politically qualified resident employees" regardless of job qualifications. Our elected leaders must stop insisting that private employers hire resident workers or even give them preference if the government is not willing to help the employers and the resident workers. The government and the private sectors must work together, and must stop the lip service.

The bill speaks about doing away with mandatory housing. Great! Every employee should find a place to live for himself and be allowed a freedom of choice where and how he wants to live. Employers should not have to worry about this problem. Housing should be left up to the employer and the employee to decide by themselves.

Another matter I suggested though it is not in the bill directly is that we must stop putting labels on people. We constantly stigmatize alien workers by making special niches and concessions for them. An employee is an employee. Either he can or cannot do a job for which he is hired. The fact that he is a resident or alien employee should not be of concern. Years ago in Germany Jews were made to wear a yellow star on their outer garments to show that they were Jews. I somehow cannot help feel that there is a similarity in making such a big fuss over our alien workers. Once we come to that realization most of our fears and problems will vanish. Just as the free market allows companies to succeed or to fail, so must employees. Competency should be the only measuring stick in the labor market.

The above are a few of my own suggestions and musings. I am writing them in the hope I can stimulate you to action. The ideas presented above are not necessarily the best, but they reflect how I feel about a situation of deep concern to me. If alien and resident employees are of concern to you also, I am asking you to speak out now before it is too late to do anything about the situation. The House of Representatives is concerned. The Garment Industry is concerned. The Hotel Association is concerned. I am concerned. Aren't you concerned? None of us has a monopoly on ideas. Share yours with the right people. I only touched on parts of the proposed bill. You should read it and react to it. The rest is up to you.

We must all accept that fact that alien workers are necessary to help us build a strong economy. I do not speak disparagingly about alien workers. Instead I salute the laudatory work they are doing, for without their assistance we would not be as prosperous as we are today. The improved lifestyle that we enjoy can be traced a great deal to their contributions in our community. We must also remember that they came here to earn more money than they can back home. They too want to improve their lifestyle. But somewhere along the way we began to misuse them. Now we must rectify the problems before the problems shackle our prosperity. It is time that alien and resident workers, employers and the government together to seek a better and more harmonious working relationship. We need each other.

I am reminded of a despondent

Owners, players meet with new mediator

By RONALD BLUM

WASHINGTON (AP) - A 40-day break, a lost championship World Series and a new mediator changed nothing in the Major League Baseball talks.

Owners expressed hope. Players were neither optimistic nor pessimistic. And no positions shifted in the first meeting of the two sides since President Clinton named former Labor Secretary W.J. Usery to mediate the dispute.

"There was no substance discussed today at all," union head Donald Fehr said after the sides met for 90 minutes Wednesday.

Usery, who was appointed last Friday, said the next session will be in five to 10 days but he will speak with each side separately before then. Wednesday's meeting, attended by six players and 11 team representatives, was devoted to ground rules.

"He needs to get up to speed," Kansas City Royals pitcher David Cone said. "He seems to think smaller and more concise groups are going to be better."

Usery, 70, was labor secretary under President Ford and mediated the National Football League's 44-day preseason strike in 1974.

Both sides said they hold him in high regard. Fehr said the union recognized Usery is brought in only for the most difficult disputes.

"My optimism is based on common sense," said Richard Ravitch, the owners' chief negotiator. "I don't know any other way we can bring an end to the dispute and reestablish public confidence in baseball."

Ravitch, however, did not back off management's threat to either unilaterally put a freeze on player signings or impose a salary cap. Fehr said either action could make talks even more difficult than they already are.

Wednesday's meeting was just the fourth between players and owners since the strike began Aug. 12. The walkout, baseball's eighth work stoppage since 1972, wiped out the final 52 days and 669 games of the season and led to the first cancellation of the World Series since 1904.

"It's obviously very tough," Usery said. "If it wasn't, the parties already would have resolved it."

Acting commissioner Bud Selig, who attended the previous session on Sept. 9, remained in Milwaukee.

STELLA WILDER

YOUR BIRTHDAY

By Stella Wilder

Born today, you are a natural trail-blazer, eager at all times to forge new paths and go places — both personally and professionally — that others have yet to go. You do not expect others to follow you at all times, for you understand that often your motives and endeavors are difficult to understand in full. Still, you never refuse an offer of companionship along any road you choose to travel. You're likely to start down a long and winding path early in life and follow it with dedication throughout your years; not even those closest to you are able to dissuade you when you feel a strong sense of purpose.

Your self control and discipline are two of your strongest attributes, and they will surely come in handy on a daily basis. Though you are not one to make things hard for yourself intentionally, you nevertheless shy away from doing things the easy way — either consciously or unconsciously.

Also born on this date are: Carrie Fisher, actress; Whitey Ford, baseball player; Dizzy Gillespie, musician; Ursula K. LeGuin, author; Sir Georg Solti, conductor; Samuel Taylor Coleridge, poet.

To see what is in store for you tomorrow, find your birthday and read the corresponding paragraph. Let your birthday star be your daily guide.

SATURDAY, Oct. 22

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) — You are in the mood to be respected and admired today; indeed, you can surely accomplish something now that will warrant both in abundance.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) — You mustn't analyze too closely the compliments others have to offer today. Accept kind words graciously — and live up to them.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) — You have more going for you right now than you are willing to believe, at least on a conscious level. You're moving in the right direction.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) — What appears to be right around the corner may actually be further off — but perception is everything today, and it will keep you striving for your goal.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) — Your creative drive must get some attention today. You needn't dedicate yourself fully to a new project, but you may want to get one started.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) — You'll discover today that you are far more equipped to deal with the unexpected than you had believed in the recent past.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) — Consider granting someone close to you an unusual and perhaps difficult favor. You'll receive more in return eventually than you give initially.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) — It is important today to be sure of what you are doing — and that you are doing it for all the right reasons. Dig deeper for answers.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) — A relaxed atmosphere is more conducive to productive endeavors today; don't make the mistake of trying to force performance or productivity.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) — The physical and the intellectual can be combined with great success today, provided you keep emotional outbursts in check.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) — You'll be on the side of the underdog all day long — and you mustn't be surprised if the underdog turns out to be you! You can win big at this time.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) — A minor personal adjustment can yield great rewards today — in ways you had never expected. You needn't attempt a complete overhaul, however.

man lost in a cave seeking a way out. Instead of sitting down and trying to assess the situation, he plunges deeper and deeper into the cave hoping against hope that there must be a way out if only he keeps going deeper into the cave. Yet had he merely sat down and looked around him he might have found all the clues under his nose resulting in passage out of his dilemma. The answers are all around us but it takes courage and a strong willingness to change.

Let me encourage all of you to go the extra step and suggest meaningful changes that will greatly improve our labor situation. The time is ripe and the opportunity is here to improve the situation. I repeat - please speak out to the Committee about this very important bill. Make your voice heard today! Tomorrow may be too late.

Respectfully,

League body declares SNE/FT as official PABA champion

NO MATTER how rough the sailing was, it was a case of all is well that ends well for the Philipine Amateur Basketball Association"s latest season.

That was how the 5th annual Budweiser Reinforced Conferenc of PABA closed this season when it resolved recently the championship series controversy and declared the SNE/FT quintet the official champion.

In a news release, tournament committee chairman Ric Tayco said the differences among the concerned parties had been resolved "amicably".

Tayco said the tournament committee and the league body had officially declared FT/SNE as the official champion after a meeting on October 18 in Chalan Piao.

The controversy was the appeal of second runner-up RB Electrical-Marpac team coach, Rollie Bigalbal on his protest against referee Alex Castillo. Bigalbal's remark that he doesn't recognize the victorious team as champion, also stirred up the controversy.

In previous years, the tournament committee's task to officially declare the champion was purely ceremonial.

This year, its official declaration serves as a stamp of legitimacy for SNE/FT to wear the crown in the face of strong negative remarks by a rival team coach.

Statistics show that the champion team deserves the crown. It has a 9-0 win-loss credential in the elimination round and 3-0 standing in the championship series. It did not import players and fared well in one crucial game in the championship series despite the absence of one standout player.

Tayco said that Bigalbal stood pat on his complaint against Castillo's faulty calls but is setting aside his appeal in the interest of the league and to allow PABA to concentrate in the invitational games next month.

Tayco said that Bigalbal has conceded that FT/SNE deserves the 1994 crown during the officers' meeting last Tuesday.

PABA disclosed that it is working on an invitational tournament in November with two teams from Guam, a selection from Tinian, runner up-RB Electrical-Marpac and the 1994 PABA crown winner, SNE/FT-Budweiser. (AAPD)

Winsor was hot at the rainbow area with seven jumpers for 21 points He sunked two from the stripe and and 10 two-pointer shots for the 43 total.

Teammate Junior Renguul blasted 26 points while Peter Camacho pumped in 22 points.

The Ol' Aces and the Hawks are tied at the top with 13-1 slate but the Hawks edged the former by 15 points in their two matchups.

The Brothers equalled the 7-6 win-loss card of the Cyclones but the Cyclones edged them by two points in their two outings to finish third place.

The Brothers Lost to the Cyclones by three points, 76-73 last July 25 and won by a hairline over the Cyclones, 89-90 last September 15th.

Playoff series will kick off on Monday, October 24 in the same gym.

Nepaial, Olopai join RGA Ace of Aces tourney

ANDY Nepaial and Tino Olopai complete the 1994 Refalawasch Golf Association (RGA) line up of competitors for the first annual Ace of Aces tournament which will be held before the close of the year.

Nepaial captured the November Ace of the month qualifier while Olopai topped the December Ace of the month honors.

August Ace of the month Tony Rogolofoi said the 12 monthly qualifiers will square off for the "Golfer of the Year" crown in the latter part of December.

Nepaial shot a one under 71 low net to top the field of 15 golfers. Olopai also had a 71, but was beaten by Nepaial on a scorecard playoff and had to settle for second place. October Ace Tony Satur captured 3rd.

In the previous years, RGA members compete only every quarter.

It was only this year that the Ace of Aces started. Trophies and cash will be awarded to the top golfer.

Prior to the tournament at Coral Ocean Point last October 15, the RGA announced that the club will take a break in November to prepare for the 3rd annual Sid K. Peter memorial tournament.

It is scheduled to be held on December 4 and 5 at the COP Golf Resort and the Marianas Country Club in Marpi. Application for the said 2-day tournament will be available next week.

The RGA president is calling on all members to attend a meeting on Tuesday, October 25, at his residence in Chalan Laulau.(AAPD)

Hawks wins SABA pennant

THE TAKAI Hawks flew high last night to win the 1994 Saipan Amateur Basketball Association pennant after clawing the Brothers, 105-93.

Their sights are next set towards the SABA championship crown next month.

The mighty Hawks of Coach Sonny Flores lowered the elimination round curtain at the top of the overall standings with a 13-1 win-loss slate.

The Brothers and the Hawks had a brief 'honeymoon' and were not separable in the first half with a 42 all score at the buzzer.

Shortly after the clock begun to tick in the bottom of the match, the Hawks started to stretch and spread its wings propelling the team to a 22-point advantage, 72-50, 10:18 minutes left in the game.

The Hawks' playing momentum slowed down in the last ten minutes with the Hawks establishing a 10-point advantage at curtain time.

The heft and agility of Rey Lizama provided power for the Hawks under the ring in both sides of the court.

He topped the score charts in the Takai camp with 19 points.

Robert Quitugua, Edwin Bubos and John fired a combined 42 points with a 14-point credit each.

The towering Poland Yamada, chipped in 11 points, while center Allan Magcalas and Edzel Mendoza padded 10 and 9 points, respectively.

Hawks' Youish Gabaldon, Mario Aguon and Tony Susuico combined a modest 12 points.

Jack, Ed and Tony Diazes tried to clip the Hawks' firepower in the first half combining for 32 points.

The three Diazes continued their impressive performance in the second half. Tony scored 30 points.

Ed contributed 29 points while Jack ended the game with six jumpers for 12 points.

In the opener, Tony Rogolofoi's Ol' Aces overwhelmed the peacemakers, 162-79, and finished second second place in the overall.

U.S. World Cup organizer gets $7M

NEW YORK (AP) - Alan Rothenberg, chairman of the U.S. World Cup organizers, will get $7 million for his soccer work, $4 million more than World Cup USA 1994 said Tuesday.

In addition to the $3 million in back pay, Rothenberg will get $800,000 for each year from 1991 through 1995, the soccer official said, The Los Angeles Times reported Wednesday. The figure was confirmed Wednesday to The Associated Press by a soccer official speaking on the condition of anonymity.

Rothenberg refused a $350,000-a-year salary when he became the chief executive officer of the U.S. organizers, saying he would let the board of directors decide after the tournament what he should be paid.

World Cup USA 1994 said Tuesday it will finish with about a $50 million surplus, $40 million in cash and $10 million in property that was given to the U.S. Soccer Federation. The cash will be given to the U.S. Soccer Federation Foundation.
