CONSUMPTION CAN BE EXTERMINATED

Modern study and investigation have thrown much light upon the cause, cure, and, what is still more important, the prevention of consumption. Thirty years ago, scientific knowledge of consumption was very slight. In 1882, Robert Koch identified it with tuberculosis, and established the germ theory. Since then the fight has been, to a large extent, against these germs. Pasteur has said: "It is in the power of man to cause all parasitic diseases to disappear from the earth." It is in the power of man to do many things—but man is stubborn, careless, and heedless. Efforts are now being made to persuade him to guard against consumption. He is responding, in a measure; in fact, some optimists, figuring from what has already been done, predict that the disease will be stamped out within a generation. They are too sanguine, but they have a basis for their cheerful view of a serious matter.

One thing that has rather startled the general public is the discovery that from one fifth to one-third of the street-cleaners of New York contract consumption—irrefutable proof that the germs are in the dust and are inhaled with every breath we draw. We can swallow millions of them in one gasp, and there is danger that some of them will find lodgment. So the first thing to do is to prevent the existence of the germs in the dust and refuse of the streets and sidewalks.

San Francisco is doing somewhat in this direction by spasmodically enforcing its ordinance against expectorating on the sidewalks. It is in that way, more than in any other, that the germs are distributed. Not every person who has incipient, or even fully developed, consumption, knows it; the germ is there, though, and those who unconsciously nurture them make them public property by expectorating in public. The sputum dries, is ground to powder, and is scattered broadcast. Our summer winds are cooling, they carry away the germs from our nose too perfect sewers; but they also disseminate the germs of consumption.

Other cities are taking preventive measures, and San Francisco should follow their good example, especially in view of the fact that the health reports show that the deaths from consumption in this city are increasing. In some places sanitary, self-cleaning cuspidors are placed along the streets, and the avoidance of their use is punished. In other cities no sweeping is done, unless the street has been sprinkled. New York's health commissioner, Dr. Darlington, is convinced that a cheap germicide could be put into the water with which the sprinkling is done. It would cost something, but that is not to be considered in a case of this kind. In the United States, 160,000 people die of consumption every year. Of this number, San Francisco contributes about 1,000 per year. New York's list of fatalities is, thanks to the preventive measures taken, decreasing; ours is increasing. It is time that we begin an educational campaign against the Great White Plague, and emphasize our teachings by stringently enforced laws. Nobody is safe. No matter how careful one is, the carelessness of others is a constant menace. The careful ones should increase their vigilance, and compel the heedless to do likewise.—S. F. Argonaut.

COMING FUND RAISER.

We sincerely hope that Col O P Iaukea, the newly made Democrat, will be able to run the Democratic party his way and make of himself a great man, and that he'll make his saying good that he'll raise all the money necessary to run the party, now that the fall campaign will soon be upon us. When he can do that without going among the rich and the business people, then we'll surely shout for him and yell ourselves hoarse at his capacity of doing things without dependence on the affluent ones in the party. We shall soon see whether he will be as good as his word this coming fall.

Having already made allusion to his remarks on Monday evening last in Convention, which he only gave to his native auditors, wherein he made a general assault upon the wealthy, regardless of party, but strongly buried at Republicans, we will again reassert that he said that it was time for the people to rise and cast aside the yoke of the rich planters and merchants. It was then that he said that if the rich did not care to contribute, he would be perfectly able to raise any needed funds to carry on any work desired. Let us wait and see whether he'll be capable of delivering the goods. This much we know: When he left for Hawaii island on his tour of organizing Democratic clubs, he received $50 from a declared Parker man, but the money was given out of the goodness of the man's heart, not for Parker or Hearst, but for the general good of the Democratic party throughout this Territory. And while on Hawaii, he wrote and got another $50 of the Central Committee. When the outside delegates came down, their passages was paid for by the same man, amounting to over $200, and over one-half has been refunded him by donations to the Central Committee, and the delegations decently housed. It was the same with the Convention hall, but it is stated that Hearst men will pay that. But where was the Colonel and what was he doing all the time?

The above goes to substantiate what we have already said heretofore that he used the Central Committee for furthering his cause, and at the same time we must admit that he did good work towards the organization of precinct clubs in Home Rule places. Not having yet shown his ingenuity to raise funds to meet the expenses incurred by him and for his own personal preference, is it then to be believed that he could do so in the future without depending upon the well-off ones of the party? We very much doubt whether he could succeed without their aid. Let's see whether he will be able to raise the necessary funds towards defraying the expenses of the coming fall campaign. If leading and affluent Democrats are willing to accept him as their possible leader, well and good, then we are badly mistaken in them; and then they may accept being abused into submission to raise a campaign fund for others' uses and benefits and against them and their interests, which Col Iaukea declared was directly against that of the people and that now it was time for the people to rise up in their strength and assert themselves.

Police Methods.

Yesterday afternoon we referred to the tactics of police spies in ferreting out cases for criminal prosecution, and enumerated three instances that showed a violation of the fundamental principles of law and order. The case of A F Franco, a Portuguese owning a saloon on Berotania street, was not mentioned. On Saturday before Franco's arrest three men entered his saloon and began to drink. After a time one of them asked if they might not come back the next day (Sunday) and was told that the saloon would be closed. They insisted, and the proprietor told them that he would not even be in the city, as he spent his Sundays at his country place, three or more miles out. They then asked if they might go out to Franco's house and have a drink, to which the proprietor replied in the affirmative, adding that he usually kept something for his own use, to which they were welcome.

On Sunday the three men took a hack, which could not have cost them less than $3 (three dollars when they could have had a drink anywhere in Punchbowl town for ten cents!) and drove out there. The drinks as promised were forthcoming. A regular police officer arrived on the scene at this juncture and arrested Franco. One of the men declared that he had paid fifty cents and another that he had paid a dollar. This the saloon man denies, declaring that he never received one cent, but merely treated his visitors, as he had promised them.

But that is not the point. The proposition is that a paid emissary of the police department visited Franco's saloon on Saturday and deliberately tried to make him break the law by coming into town and selling liquor to the party of three on Sunday. Failing in that, he followed him to his place in the country and endeavored (whether he succeeded or not makes no difference) to make him break the law there. What sort of a system is one to call that? Are we in the Russia of fifty years ago, when men objectionable to the government were entrapped in a very similar way and sent to Siberia? We consider the spy that made the transaction a worse criminal than his host, even if the latter had sold a ship-load of liquor on Sunday.

Bought A Gold Brick.

The Democrats bought a gold brick in the National committeeman proposition the other night, when Senator Palmer Woods was recommended for the place, and behind it all is an interesting tale. It is related that prior to and during the day Woods passed around the word that he was opposed to an instructed delegation and urged the Hawaii delegation to oppose the measure. Hearing of the fact, Kidd approached the Hawaii leader and told him that HE would give him the office of National committeeman if he (Woods) accepted instruction. Woods consented and subsequently delivered the goods. As a part of the contract, Kidd, in the evening, duly nominated Woods and all of the Democrats belonging to that faction promptly bit.

The situation, as a result of this trickery, is that the Democrats are likely to have a National committeeman who is unfit, in the first place. In the second place, he lives on a ranch far away in Hawaii where he is hard to reach. No matter how important a matter the National Committee might want to communicate to him, or what important advice it might require, it would be several days before the correspondence could be completed. Were the committeeman a resident of Honolulu he could be reached within a few hours from any part of the world. A serious blunder was made in not selecting a Honolulu man for the place. This is a campaign year and the committeeman should be in easy reach of both the National and local central committees.

Even after he had introduced his "instruction" resolution it is said that Palmer Woods sent a note to Col McCarthy, informing him that he (Woods) had fulfilled a promise but that he was still firm for uninstructed delegation.

So Treasurer Campbell has discovered another shortage in the Public Works office. Would it not be a good thing for the Government to employ a set of competent auditors and have them systematically go over the books in every department. These reports of shortages have been coming so swift lately that a serious question arises as to when the stream will end, and we would rather have it all at once than in small doses.

TOPICS OF THE DAY.

It seems to us a rather poor scheme to pay five per cent bonds when the Government is unable to pay its employees. The bonds are held by local parties who do not need and do not want the money. If the bonds were held abroad it would be important to pay them in the interest of a reputation for promptness; but such is not the case. Bonds held locally can wait a great deal better than can Government employees.

From what source were Democrats expected to draw recruits from? Was it from among the Home Rulers, the same source that Republicans are and have been making goo goo eyes at? Democrats as well as Republicans cater for Home Rule votes and there's no need of denying it nor of taking exceptions to the work already done by making Democrats of Home Rulers, which is much more acceptable, as far as we are concerned, than to become Republicans. As both cater to the one and same source, what need is there of saying aught of the other? Both are in the same vote getting canoe.

The Democrats, by naming Mr Hearst for President, would play the Republican game; for with Hearst as an opponent President Roosevelt could carry every northern and western State and break in, as McKinley did, to the phalanx of the South.—Advertiser.

We have no desire to question this statement. But if it is so, and the Republican press is really supporting Mr Roosevelt, why do the papers not whoop for the nomination of Mr Hearst by the Democrats? If with Hearst as the Democratic nominee, Roosevelt can carry every Northern and Western State and break into the solid South, why it stands to reason that Hearst is the man the Republican press should boost. But, no; it does not do that. On the other hand, it assures the Democrats of the country that Hearst cannot possibly win but that Parker's chances are good. Is it possible that they want to see Roosevelt beaten by Parker?

A Good Democrat.

"I am a Democrat", declared the street orator, waving his arms wildly in the air. "I was not until this week, but I have looked into the matter and my eyes are open."

"Are you in favor of Parker?" mildly interposed a bystander.

"Not a bit of it," the orator rejoined in louder tones. "Parker was first a Royalist, then a P.G., and now I don't know what he is. I don't believe he knows himself."

"Are you in favor of Hearst?" the questioner persisted.

The orator hesitated. But the answer came like this: "I am not certain that I know that man; but didn't he utter that a plumbing shop out on King street."

Demurrer Overruled.

The demurrer in the Testa libel case was overruled by Judge De Bolte this morning. T McCants Stewart, attorney for the defendant, then moved to quash on the ground that according to the law defining felony and misdemeanor (the case in point being considered a misdemeanor), proceedings in misdemeanor cases must, according to a ruling by Judge De Bolt himself, come before the lower court (as that court alone can take original jurisdiction). Judge De Bolte took the matter under advisement to 9:30 o'clock tomorrow morning, when it may also be argued.

Resolved, That the President submit to this Board immediately on receipt of the information copies of the correspondence and his conclusions and recommendations in the matter."

for a vacation, as she was to be married. A substitute was obtained for her, who at the last moment announced that she could not come for two weeks. The Swedish girl was asked to postpone her marriage for that length of time, but she objected. She agreed, though, to come back after the wedding, and work until the other girl could come.
Half an hour after the ceremony the girl was performing her customary duties, and her mistress said to her:
"And I suppose your husband has gone back to his work, too, Matilda?"
"Oh, no, indeed, ma'am," replied the girl: "he has gone on his honeymoon."
