KING REVERED BY SOLDIERS.

King George of Saxony died October 15. Concerning this man, a writer in the New York Sun says: "George of Saxony was an old man when he came to the throne, being 70 years old when he succeeded his brother, King Albert, on June 20, 1902. A short time after his accession he nearly succumbed to pneumonia and never fully recovered. George was born at Pillnitz, on Aug 8, 1832. His wife was a Portuguese princess, the Infanta Marie Anne, by whom he had five children, the eldest being Frederick August, who succeeds him on the throne. He is 89 years old. Saxony's late ruler, perhaps above all things else a soldier, was prominent in European military circles as the commander for thirty years of the Twelfth Army Corps, which was Saxony's division of the German imperial army. His name was especially revered by the rank and file as the result of his order that the common soldier should be treated with greater respect and leniency. He had no hesitation in criticising the German military system and spent a good part of his time in attempting to bring about reforms in the service. As a soldier himself he many times showed conspicuous bravery. During the Austrian and French campaigns he served with gallantry and often put himself in positions of the greatest danger."

King George took his place in the Saxon upper house and for forty years was a leader therein. The Sun writer adds: "He was a life-long student of history, deeply interested in music and thoroughly devoted to art and painting. He was a noted pianist. Throughout his whole life hunting was his favorite outdoor recreation. Old and feeble as he was during his later years, he would have himself carried to the preserve and shoot game as it was driven out past him. The health of King George rapidly declined when the scandal of Princess Louise's elopement with Andre Giron, the Belgian tutor of her five boys, became known throughout the world. The crown princess, who was the Archduchess Louise Antoinette of Austria, escaped with Giron from Salzburg in December, 1902. They fled to the Riviera. By the friendly advice of Emperor Francis Joseph of Austria, King George effected her divorce from the crown prince. Giron and the princess separated within a short time, he returning to his old haunts, she retiring to a sanitarium at Lindau, where she gave birth to a daughter, who was named Anne Monique Pie. The princess went to London, but was allowed to return to her native place. She received a new title on July 13, 1903, and is now known as Countess de Montignose. At the time of the scandal King George received much sympathy, although in some quarters he was accused of treating his daughter-in-law with undue harshness, in view of the fact that the crown prince had not been altogether a faultless husband. The king, however, was always regarded as a genial man, who would rather be kidded than not."

A Duct.

The celebrated soprano was in the middle of her solo when little Johnny said to her mother, referring to the conductor of the orchestra:

"Why does that man hit at the woman with his stick?"
"He is not hitting at her," replied his mother. "Keep quiet."
"Well, then, what is she hollerin' for?"

PARTY REORGANIZATIONS.

III.

William Jennings Bryan follows, in a subsequent issue of The Saturday Evening Post, with an article of similar trend under the caption of "The Reorganization of the Reorganized Democracy." In his treatise, he makes the following opening remarks: "Whether the overwhelming victory won by the Republican party in the recent national campaign is to be considered as an indorsement of the President and his policies, or as a rebuke to the Democratic party, is a question which cannot be fully determined until the returns are complete. It is evident, however, at this writing that the falling off in the Democratic vote was much greater than the gain in the Republican vote, and in some places the Democratic loss was even greater than the gain shown by all other parties combined. This would indicate a considerable stay-at-home vote, and the man who stays at home usually does so because neither his own party nor any other party arouses his interest.

ticket, although a very considerable number of those who voted did so with much less enthusiasm than they manifested in former years; but they voted because they felt that Judge Parker's election would bring certain much-needed reforms, whereas President Roosevelt's promised nothing of the sort."

Then follows with regard to "Judge Parker's position on the question of imperialism," which attitude alone, in Mr Bryan's judgment, should have "appealed to those who regarded imperialism as a menace" as "to have given him the full Democratic vote." With reference to "a reduction in the army, the minimum strength of" which "having been more than doubled during the last eight years," "the appropriations" for its maintenance amounting "to more than $50,000,000 a year," "there was every reason why the Democrats in general should protest against this unnecessary addition to the expenses of the Government. There was abundant cause, too, for the laboring men in particular to record themselves against this menace to their interests. Then, too, the President's utterances had made him appear as a military enthusiast, while Judge Parker, both in opinion and in disposition, was the very antithesis of the President. Judge Parker thus stood for a number of things which Democrats regarded as important, and toward the close of the campaign his attacks upon the President for accepting campaign contributions from the trusts encouraged many who felt that his earlier utterances on the trust question had not been sufficiently emphatic."

With regard to the widespread disaffection among Democrats, Mr Bryan has the following to say: "But in spite of the advantages promised by Judge Parker's election it is evident that a great many Democrats were so devoted to economic reform and so disappointed at the party's failure to make a vigorous attack upon the Republican policies all along the line that they refused to support the Democratic ticket. This disaffection was far greater than the Republicans themselves expected, for in almost every instance the Republican plurality was considerably larger than the Republican committees claimed the day before election. Not only did the disaffection surpass the calculations of friend and foe, but it extended to every part of the country. It was as noticeable in the East as in the West, the Republican victory being as sweeping in the States claimed by the Democrats as in the States that were given up as hopeless. It is only fair to say that Mr Roosevelt's personality contributed to some extent to the magnitude of his victory, for opposition to him was lessened by the fact that some thought him a reformer in disguise. There is nothing in his official career to encourage the belief that he will propose any reforms, and yet it is unquestionably true that many voters in his own party and outside of it are expecting that he will 'turn loose' as soon as he is inaugurated as President in his own right. These have a theory that during the unexpired term of his predecessor President Roosevelt feels in duty bound to carry out the policy which President McKinley inaugurated, but that when once commissioned President by the peo-dent career and pose as an avenger of the wrongs which the people have suffered."

CREDIT TO WHOM DUE.

We notice, in an article in the holiday number of the Paradise of the Pacific on "The Honolulu Newsboy," the writer, Wallace R Farrington, editor of the Evening Bulletin, gives the credit for the advent of the newsboy to Ed Towse in 1895. From our own personal knowledge, we beg to differ with our esteemed brother of the quill, for we can go him better by two years. Our recollection is, that it was in 1893, when Abraham Fernandez was manager of the Hawaii Holomus, he it was who made the first attempt to put that paper for sale on our streets. The other papers followed later. If anyone is entitled to credit, Mr Fernandez is, our countryman and fellow townsman, and not to a mali hini who had only come here seeking his fortune in this benighted and then upheaved country. It has always been so, anyway, that Hawaiians are not credited with initiative ideas and mali hini or some Mainland backwoodsman generally get it or all there is to be got out of it.

TOPICS OF THE DAY.

As a real second fiddler, District Attorney Brekons can't be beat; as a trump, a "Jack" can easily lay him out; but as a toady, he is first-class. Still you can't fool him with a wink, he's cock sure of catching on to ye through that fanciful optic of his that is supposed never to have known a wink nor a wauk.

We don't know whether Delegate Kalaniana'ole's latest appointment by Governor Carter, to be one of Hawaii's representatives at the Forestry Congress, is an honor to be proud of. It looks to us to be only a sop thrown at him so as to appease him with regard to Secretary Atkinson's proposed interference with his duties, but we don't think that he is so gullible as to accept it. If he does, then we are badly mistaken, that he is such an easy prey to official and unofficial interference by others from way back here at home. But as he is somewhat of a political protege of both the Governor and his Secretary "Jack," the Delegate may give it second consideration and bite the proffered "sour sop."

At last the Board of Health has held a meeting after many weeks sleeping and its new member has finally been initiated into its mystic cult. The business for which it met last afternoon was the consideration of the various bids tendered for supplies, but instead of delving into the various figures and articles bid, President Pinkham first read his "speech from the throne" on his uninvited, unpatented and unperfected stone block making machine, over which there is some controversy among contractors and the Government, and the Courts may likely take a hand in the scrimmage. Pinkham is all right, all right, you bet. And the Board is right, too, in ignoring this squabble.

Isn't really too bad that Mr Pinkham "spent no end of midnight work and very considerable money to give the Territory some progress

ial. If after accomplishing the result the Government is to be deprived of the advantages because I happened to have been subsequently made President of the Board of Health, it is not up to me. There may be other means of accomplishing the same result." But what has he accomplished and where is the result of his wasting midnight oil and very considerable money? Has he delivered the goods yet, pray? From all accounts so far known, he has not. But he had to relieve his mind and conscience by reading a statement to the Board of Health, as if that body was partly interested in the scheme.

BY AUTHORITY.

PAYMENT OF WATER RATES.

As provided for in Section 1, Chapter XXVI of the Session Laws of 1886:

All persons holding water privileges or those paying water rates are hereby notified that the water rates for the six (6) months ending June 30th, 1905, will be due and payable at the office of the Honolulu Water Works on the first day of January, 1905.

On all such rates remaining unpaid on January 15th, 1905, an additional charge of 10 per cent will be made.

All privileges upon which rates remain unpaid to February 15th, 1905, (30 days after becoming delinquent) are subject to immediate shut off, without further notice. The outside men have been instructed to shut off all delinquent privileges as fast as possible after February 15th, 1905.

Rates are payable at the office of the Honolulu Water Works to the Chief Clerk of the Department of Public Works.

A Great Holiday Souvenir.
The holiday number of the Paradise of the Pacific has been received and is a beautifully illustrated and printed number. It is a big number, containing 84 pages, cover and all. On its front cover page is a beautiful colored reproduction, as near true to nature as can be gotten in its get-up, of lehua sprigs with budding and full-blown blooms. The illustrations, depicting Honolulu residences and various Island sceneries, are of the best imaginable and are brought out, together with the typographical part of the whole, in the best the art preservative can produce. Many of the articles are well written by local writers of known ability on the various subjects treated. On the whole, the issue is alike creditable to its editor and proprietor as well as to Honolulu, and is a number well worth being sent away to friends.

District Court Doings.
There were twenty-eight cases on today's calendar, thirteen being the old standing cases against various Chinese restaurant keepers for running their places without licenses. Another long standing case, since the early part of last August, was that against Leong Chee, one of the Waiialua rioters, and is being held on the charge of assault and battery with a dangerous weapon. This morning the case was put off till moved on.
Kaula alias Kabula was nolle prossed of malicious injury; Take was discharged of common nuisance; Tago, for leaving his horse untied, was fined $5, and for bribery $15; M T Lutz was also fined $5 for leaving his horse untied, and for violating a Board of Health regulation, Ah Wa was fined $10. One Frank Fraser was fined $1 for gambling and one drunk was assessed the regulation charge. All other cases went over.

Question of Facts.
A hearing on the proceedings of the question of facts in the petition of Mrs Mikala Kaipu for a writ of habeas corpus was opened before Judge Dole this forenoon, but it went over to this afternoon.
The writ of habeas corpus was not yesterday denied by Judge Dole, but his decision overruled the demurrer.

So leaving Russia as we came—by Petersburg and Cronstadt—again we gazed on the strange spectacle of Russia's military might, her naval power. For what could be stranger than to possess such power, yet not to use it in time of need? We had seen the Russian flag floating over warships in the Black Sea. There, far to the south, were other scores of warships, and other thousands of fighting men. Here, as we gazed again, the imposing spectacle which met our eyes when we first entered Russia—the fortress of Constadt, with its docks and fleets. From where we were, there rolled and stretched away this mighty empire for five thousand miles to the same ocean that washes the shores of our own distant home—an empire which thus almost one-third girdles the globe—which has thrice the area and twice the population of our own colossal republic—which stretches from the Arctic to the Euxine, from the Baltic to the Caspian, from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

Yet this Colossus of the North is held in check by a race of little men crowded on a little island.

What manner of men are they that rule this empire? Or, rather, what manner of man?—for this vast empire and the destinies of these 150,000,000 are controlled absolutely by the will of one man. What manner of man must be he who out of 150,000,000 of subjects has not yet been able to find A Man?

Gazing on these mighty ships, these thousands of workers at their forges and docks, at all this vast enginery of war, to see these train-loads of battalions and regiments, these warships laden with bluejackets and marines, typifying the many millions of Russian sailors and soldiers, the irresistible thought arises that all they need against such an opponent is a man to lead them. Yet out of all his swarming millions, out of Great and Little Russian, White and Yellow Russian, Cossack and Tartar, Lithuanian and Finn, Czar Nicholas can not find A Man.

One hundred and fifty millions,
yet not a leader.

Six millions of soldiers, yet not a great captain.

Seventy-five thousand subalterns,
yet not a strategist.

"Wanted—A Man."

Alas! How many millions of men there are in the world, and yet, after all, how few!

—Jerome A Hart in The Argonaut.

Not An Accident.

President Roosevelt's worst enemy
—and the result of the recent election does not reveal many—cannot charge him with any lack of the sense of humor.

There is an incidental episode connected with the recent Presidential election that aptly illustrates him "in lighter vein." Being known only to the guests of the President and his wife on election night, it has not heretofore got into print.

After it became certain that the election was his, and he had received the felicitations of the men about him, President Roosevelt crossed over to his wife, and bowing low before her, as he extended his hand,
said:

"My dear, it gives me pleasure to inform you that I am no longer an accident." —The Saturday Evening Post.
