VENTURE.

THIS fast trotting stallion has been withdrawn from training and will now be kept for stock purposes exclusively. He has shown as much speed as ever and had it not been for an accident which befell him a few days before the race, he being dead lame on the 11th, we think that he would have giving the gang a hard tussle for the money.
He is now all right again, and is being regularly jogged at the track, and can show close to a 2:30 clip at any time that he is called upon. This kind of treatment has been found by Torperence to be the right plan to adopt with a stallion, as by it he is not only a surer foal-getter, but also he will transmit a greater amount of speed, energy and vigor to his offspring. This plan is now the rule in all of the large breeding establishments everywhere.
To parties owning good mares this is an opportunity that should not be neglected, for Venture, with his fine breeding and great speed, I consider the most desirable stock horse in the country.
Mr. Campbell tells me that of all of the horses that he has imported to this country, which is probably a dozen or more, he likes his colts by Venture better than any of them, which is surely proof enough of his qualities as a stock-getter.
Mares will be taken to the Park and returned free of charge. For any additional particulars apply to corner of Funchbowl and Queen Streets.

THE PACIFIC MAIL.

Enquiry on board the Zealandia respecting the possibilities of the line being continued, under fresh arrangements, at the close of the contract terminating November 1st, only elicited counter enquiries as to the latest developments of the question in America. It appears, however, that the matter constitutes one of the leading public topics of discussion in New Zealand. According to Auckland papers, public opinion in that city is strongly decided in favor of New Zealand maintaining the service, if unaided by any other Government. Stress is laid upon the growing importance of the trade between that port and America, by the medium of the Pacific Mail steamers. It is represented that it would be a suicidal policy to have the communication cut off. On the other hand Wellington, as represented by its Chamber of Commerce, is opposed to the renewal of the subsidy, and favors giving exclusive support to the direct line of steamers to London. The latter, it is claimed, can make communication but two days and a half behind the time of the San Francisco route. As the Chamber passed a resolution to that effect, by a unanimous vote, which they telegraphed to all the Chambers in the Colony, the Auckland papers urged that the action of Wellington should be offset at once by their own Chamber in a contrary direction. Of course, the attitude of Wellington is attributed to jealousy of Auckland as the entrepot of the American trade under the existing arrangement. Wellington gets, comparatively, a very small share of the trade. At the latest advices the matter largely hinged upon the vicissitudes of a somewhat uncertain political situation. Sir Julius Vogel's Ministry is, in the vernacular of Hawaii, in pitikia. A revised tariff policy, increasing duties, has been rejected almost contemptuously by the Legislature. In the course of the debate one of the Government supporters put the case tersely, when he said that the problem with that side of the house was how to destroy the Government's measures without destroying the Government. It seems the Opposition is not prepared to form a new Cabinet in the event of the overthrow of the present one. There was a rumor afloat that Sir Julius was going to make the insertion of the Pacific Mail subsidy in the supply bill conditional upon its supporters voting through the Government's unpopular measures. Among the latter is a million pound loan bill. The question was expected to come up the week after the steamer sailed, and it is possible there may be telegraphic advices of the result by the next American mail.

The BULLETIN is the first local paper to give Mr. George Augustus Sala's written impressions of Honolulu. They are in his characteristic vein, and will doubtless be highly entertaining to our readers. The article appears on the fourth page of this issue.

General Komaroff:—Sir—I send you this sword and 100,000 rubles as a mark of my most signal displeasure. Should you again transgress the limits of your just authority I shall be very likely to repeat this punishment. Yours in anger, ALECK.

Our Cream will be only of superior quality, made of genuine cream. As we have made arrangements with the Woodlawn Dairy to supply us only with a first-class article from samples we have had of the same, we are able to guarantee satisfaction. The following assortments of Ice Creams and Sherbets we will keep at our opening, and many more kinds if trade will justify it:—

ICE CREAMS:

VANILLA, LEMON, CHOCOLATE, COFFEE, STRAWBERRY, PINEAPPLE and COFFEE GLACE.

SHERBETS:

ORANGE AND STRAWBERRY.

Parties supplied any day except Sundays. Those wishing Ice Cream for Sunday must leave their orders on Saturday before 9 p. m., which will be delivered before 10 a. m. Sunday. The creams will be packed so that they will keep eight hours in a first-class condition. Hoping to get a share of public patronage, and thanking the public for their liberal past favors, we remain, respectfully,

HONOLULU LIBRARY

— AND —

READING ROOM ASSOCIATION.

THIS INSTITUTION is located on the corner of Hotel and Alakea streets, directly opposite the building of the Y. M. C. A., and is open every day and evening, Sundays included.

The Reading Room is supplied with all the local journals, as well as nearly fifty of the leading foreign papers and magazines.

The Circulating Library consists of over 3,000 volumes, and is constantly increasing.

The Reference Library contains a valuable line of encyclopedias, dictionaries, and works of a similar character.

A handsome parlor is provided for conversation and games.

The Circulating Department is closed on Sundays.

Terms of membership: Signing the roll and paying the regular dues, fifty cents a month, quarterly in advance.

Strangers from foreign countries and visitors from other islands are welcome to the rooms at all times, but as the Association has no other regular means of support except the dues of members, it is expected that residents of Honolulu who desire to avail themselves of its privileges, and all who feel an interest in maintaining an institution of this kind in our community, will join the Association and pay the regular dues.

LOCAL & GENERAL NEWS.

Reports of Sunday services are crowded out.

"A FAITHFUL Report," of the swimming club's meeting, and "Who Set Fire to Nihoa?" in the Saturday Press are good. Give us some more.

The trees, blown down by the recent gale, are still lying in all directions around the Park road; and in some places they almost block the right of way.

The Woman's Board of Missions will hold their monthly meeting on Tuesday, Aug. 4th, at half-past two, at the Y. M. C. A. Hall. The Executive Committee will meet at two o'clock.

The cutting of the firemen's monument and its erection in their lot at the cemetery has been awarded to G. D. Lane, he being the lowest bidder. It will be 12 feet 7 inches high and made of Italian marble with a granite base.

The natives here entertain a curious belief as to the cause of the recent blow. They say that the bones of Kamehameha I. were disinterred several weeks ago and the spirit of the deceased chief is displeased: hence the storm.

On Saturday last the hack driver Patterson, with three passengers in his carriage, came along Hotel street, when by some misadventure the horse slipped and snapped both shafts clean off. There was no further result than the loss of time and the cost of a new set of carriage poles.

The Royal Hawaiian Band boys, after pouring forth soul inspiring music upon many joyous occasions, day and night; awaking dormant instincts of patriotism with airs of all nations, or giving time to sad marches to the city of the dead, with solemn strains in sympathy with public and private grief, will play a farewell Aloha nui on the 15th inst., previous to taking a month's vacation.

A TRIAL was had, on Saturday, at the shop of Mr. J. M. Daigle, machinist, of a new Ramie Decorticator. There were present several newspaper representatives, stockholders, and others. The results of the trial were highly satisfactory.

It is claimed for this decorticator that it cleans the bark, without breaking or wasting the fibre, better than any other machine heretofore in use.

Four of our young people have just gone to the States to attend some of the higher institutions of learning in that country. Mr. Arthur Alexander, son of the Surveyor General, has gone to enter the Sheffield Scientific School of Yale, Conn.; Mr. Frederick Whitney, son of the Postmaster-General, to the scientific department of California University; Miss Mary E. Hillebrand, late assistant for two years in the Hilo Boarding School, to Mount Holyoke Seminary, Mass.; and Miss Mary Beckwith, daughter of Mr. George Beckwith, of Haiku, Maui, to Abundant Seminary, Mass. We wish them all a successful career, and hope they may soon return to this Kingdom with academic honors thick upon them.

PRESS CHANGES.

Mr. F. L. Clarke, who has for some time been reporter for the Advertiser, retires from that position. He has started in the business of fern culture, an industry that he has specially studied. Mr. Clarke has won the friendship and esteem of the fraternity, and we wish him every success in his new venture. Mr. Wray Taylor, late of the BULLETIN staff, takes Mr. Clarke's place on the Advertiser. Our reorganized staff is named in the card on first page. The associate editor, Mr. Norman Logan, has had considerable experience as a writer for the press in Nova Scotia. Having reported the work of the Government schools of Honolulu, and also the proceedings of the Hawaiian Evangelical Association, besides contributing frequently to our editorial columns since his arrival three months ago, he does not require further introduction to the readers of the BULLETIN.

A NEW LOCAL INDUSTRY.

A labor-saving soft soap, put up in tins of various sizes, from one pound upwards, manufactured and sold by W. H. Huddy, at the turning shop of W. E. Herrick, Bethel street, is a new local industry. This soap can be used for all ordinary washing purposes for which common soap is employed, as well as for removing grease spots and cleansing painted surfaces, for which common soap is of little service. Not only does it serve all the purposes of common soap, but the manufacturer claims that a less quantity is needed, and that thorough cleansing is effected in less time and with less labor. One pound, which costs 6 1/2c., is said to be sufficient for a week's washing of a family of six or eight persons. Several housewives who have given the article a trial testify that it does all that is claimed for it. One lady says that formerly it took nearly one entire day each week to do the family washing, but now, with the aid of this soap, everything is on the line in less than three hours from the time of starting. Here, then, is a new local industry which appeals to public patronage, and whose merits entitle it to public support.

KAUAI NEWS.

By the steamer Iwalani we have an interesting budget of news from Kauai.

The storm of last Monday destroyed the Hanalei bridge, and damaged the Anahola bridge, one pier being undermined. Waiailua bridge was carried away, not a pier left. Waimea bridge, the largest in the group, had three of eight spans carried away.

Old residents said, when these bridges were building, that they would not stand the tests of weather to which they would be subjected. Mr. Julius H. Smith, superintendent of public works, drove from Nawiliwili to the Waiailua district, and, after viewing the desolate sites of some bridges and the ruins of others, drove back again and left for Honolulu.

Schooner Liholiho, lying in Nawiliwili harbor, was driven on the rocks, where she still lies. Steamers Iwalani and James Makee each tried to tow her off, but the vessel was so high up that they could not get near enough to get an effective pull at her. It was feared she would become a total wreck, but the Iwalani takes down extra gear, by which the captain hopes to get her off.

Schooner Mary Foster was driven on the rocks at Kekaha and lost her rudder and a portion of the shoe, but was taken off and only waits to be towed to Honolulu.

A raving maniac was put on board the steamer Iwalani at Nawiliwili, without a responsible guard. Capt. Freeman put him in charge of a man on board, who, however, had other duties to discharge. The consequence was that, on Saturday night, the unfortunate man jumped overboard and was drowned.

Great quantities of wood have been washed down from the mountains at Kekaha and bullock teams have been carting it away for three days.

FAREWELL RECEPTION.

The Rev. Alex. and Mrs. Mackintosh being about to leave Honolulu on a short visit to England, their native land, the Bishop of Honolulu and Mrs. Willis paid them a graceful and well-deserved compliment by inviting a gathering of St. Andrew's Congregation at his Lordship's residence, last Saturday afternoon, to bid farewell to the voyagers; and the congregation were most happy to avail themselves of the opportunity thus afforded to testify their affectionate regard for Mr. and Mrs. Mackintosh, and to wish them a hearty good-bye, which everybody sincerely hoped would not be for long. At three o'clock the people began to arrive, and for the following three hours continued to come and go, some staying only a few minutes and then departing on account of pressing duties, and others remaining until the final break-up at six o'clock. It was pleasant to see the happy commingling of foreigners and natives, each and all feeling they had an equal interest in the occasion. Some sat and chatted under the verandahs, some found comfortable seats and agreeable converse under the large shade trees, and others strolled around the grounds. Their Majesties the King and Queen honored the occasion by their presence, and made quite a lengthened stay. Many young Hawaiians, who had been educated by Mr. Mackintosh and fitted by him for responsible positions under Government and in business, were also there. All were cordially and pleasantly welcomed by the Bishop and Mrs. Willis, and made to feel at home. Light refreshments of the best quality were provided without stint. The Industrial School Brass Band added to the pleasure of the occasion by playing selections of music at intervals. As the people took their departure—white and native, old and young—by their hearty hand-shaking and their sad expression of face, and in many instances an ill-concealed tear—evidenced the fact that Mr. and Mrs. Mackintosh had gained a strong hold in their hearts. And no wonder, for their lives and deeds have been such that they could not fail to secure this result. Mr. Mackintosh, as a minister of the church and an instructor of the young, has labored earnestly, diligently, and successfully for the good of the community; and Mrs. Mackintosh's works of charity, benevolence, and friendship remain an enduring monument to her praise.

ARRIVAL OF THE ZEALANDIA.

Having made a very good passage the S. S. Zealandia, from the Australasian Colonies, surprised Honolulu by arriving yesterday morning at half-past seven, when she was not expected before the afternoon. In consequence, the curious crowd at the wharf was smaller than usual until the steamer had been in port about two hours.

Among the passengers for this port was Mr. A. H. Kenyon, father of Mr. G. Carson Kenyon, a former editor of this paper and now Government school teacher at Waiahole, Oahu. Mr. Kenyon will stay about a month, enjoying himself in sketching island scenery.

The Rev. Mr. Mackintosh had so many friends to give him a farewell greeting on the wharf, that he did not get on board until almost the last moment. He showed particular anxiety not to miss the warm alohas of natives who came down to bid their good friend farewell. On the ship Mr. and Mrs. Mackintosh and son had a busy time of it until the whistle warned all not passengers ashore, in exchanging goodbyes with members of St. Andrew's congregation and prominent residents, on their departure for England.

The usual curious throng searched the vessel for Australian wonders, and were rewarded with the sight of a small kangaroo, belonging to a passenger bound for England; also a number of parrots of gorgeous plumage, and a cage of ferrets. So many people, also, went into the saloon to see the alleged murderer, Maxwell, that at length access to him was denied by the officers. In conversation with Detective Badger, of St. Louis, whose watch it was while the steamer was in port, it was ascertained that the prisoner bore himself calmly and quietly during the voyage. That officer and his comrade Tracey relieved each other in taking charge of the prisoner at intervals of six hours. Mr. Badger took no stock in the theory that the alleged murder was a put-up job on an insurance company. With the prisoner had been captured portions of the victim Preller's clothing cut off the body, the scissors used in the operation and the key of Maxwell's room in the Palace Hotel, San Francisco. On entering the state room where Maxwell was confined the reporter found him with no fetters on but dressed in easy garments and lying on a lounge in a comfortable posture. He wore a full beard, looked to be about 30 years of age, and bore a resemblance to Bridges serving sentence here for killing Patten. He was very affable in conversation and from all outward signs was easy of mind. He was cordial in receiving his many visitors and stood the scrutiny of their gaze without flinching. He said he did not travel to avoid capture, in short, that he did not know he was sought for and was greatly surprised when made a prisoner. His imprisonment at Auckland was not as pleasant as it might have been, as the jail was a primitive one and the quarters were none too pleasant. He spoke very highly of the jailers at Auckland, and alluded to Messrs. Tracey and Badger as agreeable captors. He would make no confession but intimated a denial of the charge alleged against him. He said he was acting under legal advice and could not speak directly of the tragedy, but when questioned about the report that the corpse found was not Preller's but a medical subject he did not seem to know anything about it, and when hearing the story manifested eagerness to catch every word, afterward falling back to his former position as though he had heard nothing. On the departure of the reporter, Maxwell jauntily expressed the hope that the result of the interview would sell many papers.

Other particulars of the steamer's voyage will be found in our shipping column.

The silk hat is more fashionable than the Derby because there is less tile about the latter.

("Land of the Golden Fleece," in Auckland Weekly News, July 18, 1885.)

A break in a long sea voyage is always a joyful occurrence, and marks the almost inevitable monotonous calendar of your log with the whitest of white stories. To catch sight of a shark even, or of a "school" of porpoises, is a kind of relief; while the descent of a shoal of flying fish reminds you of Voltaire's bitter apothegm, in which he likens unto fish that fly those men of letters who are so foolish as to seek to shine in "society." "The fish that remain in the sea hate them for soaring so high; and when they fall, exhausted, on the deck of the ship, the sailors knock them on the head." The advent, too, of an albatross is a boon, since it enables you to rub up your memories of Coleridge's "Ancient Mariner;" but land—even the limpest, the most transient glimpse of blue—that is the great oasis in the vast waste of the wide desert of Ultramarine, for which you most passionately yearn. Land came at last, on the morning of the seventh day after we left San Francisco. Land, first, in the guise of jutting headlands and promontories, then of low-lying, undulating chains of hills, glorious in purple and gold in the rays of the morning sun. We were among the islands of the Hawaiian group, and shortly after one o'clock the good ship Australia was alongside the wharf in the harbor of Honolulu. Aloha! It is a matter of etiquette to be continually crying "Aloha!" while you are at Honolulu. Not being skilled in the Hawaiian tongue, I am unable to state what may be the exact signification of "Aloha;" but I take it to be a convertible term for the American "Bully for you;" for the French "On dirait du veau;" for the Italian "Viva la bella famiglia;" and for the English "All serene." Honolulu is serene than ever was the "sarrissima" republic of Venice. It is the loveliest spot I have ever seen. I have yet gazed upon a lovelier than Sorrento, lovelier than Ventnor, lovelier than the view of the Thames from the terrace of the Star and Garter at Richmond, lovelier than Jackson Square, New Orleans, by moonlight. Honolulu is a terrestrial Paradise, but with, alas, a fell serpent lurking among its loveliness. Aloha!

I had some business with His Majesty the King of the Sandwich Islands, whom I had already had the honor to meet at dinner at Kelly's Lodge, Highgate, at the time when that intelligent monarch was making his voyage round the world, and for whom I was the bearer of some presents from the Baroness Burdett Coutts. The Saucy Alameda, which had only distanced us by a few hours, had reported the Commissioner of our arrival, and it was an odd and far from unpleasant surprise, so soon as the Australia had come to her moorings, to find her boarded by a number of gentlemen in European dress—as European dress is understood in the vicinity of the tropics—who after violently shaking hands, took me at once into abiding custody. I had never seen any of them before, in all probability I shall never see any one of them again, but they were all exceedingly kind; they all seemed to be thoroughly well acquainted with the object of my mission, and they certainly made my four and a half hours' stay in the Sandwich Islands a very happy one. Four and a half hours. I should have liked to stay a month, and I am sure that I had at least half-a-dozen invitations to "lie over till the next steamer touched, and have a high old time;" but Captain Ghest was necessarily inexorable. I was due at a certain date at Sydney, and it was imperative that I should be "on time," so that it was impossible to entertain the fascinating contingency of lying over and having a high old time. Aloha! So I was amicably jostled into a waggonette in the company—if I remember aright—of an estimable Protestant clergyman, a couple of editors, a sugar-planter, and the Governor-General of the Hawaiian Kingdom. Whither my friends in the waggonette intended to carry me I am sure I do not know; but it was only after a number of piteous appeals on my part, and meek entreaties, that I should be able to liberate my soul from the burden of the presents from the Baroness to the King, that I was temporarily released from custody, or, the rather, handed over to another amicable set of alguazils, who shunted me, so to speak, into a buggy drawn by two high-spirited horses, and driven by a full-bearded gentleman of unmistakably American extraction, in which vehicle I was conveyed to the Royal Palace, an edifice of stone, and of architectural pretensions at least equaling those of a schloss in an average German Grand Duchy. The Hawaiian palace stands in tastefully laid out grounds, rainbow hued with tropical plants and flowers, and surrounded by a high stone wall. There was an armed sentinel in a neat uniform on guard at the entrance gate, and a few more soldiers were lounging about an underground apartment which appeared to be the guard-room of the palace; and I subsequently learned that His Majesty maintains a considerable military establishment, which makes an impressive appearance in the Hawaiian army list. The king, of course, is generalissimo; and His Excellency the Hon. J. O. Dominis, Governor of Oahu, and member of the House of Nobles, is commander-in-chief. Then there is the King's Household Guard, with a captain and three lieutenants, and a military instructor with the rank of major. All these gallant warriors bear European names. One "Hon. C. Uluteon," seems to be a native. There is the Prince's Own Artillery Corps and the Leleiohoku Cavalry Corps, and the Mamalahoa Infantry, the King's own Volunteer Guards, and the Honolulu Rifles, and in particular there is the Royal Hawaiian Band, organized by a very talented military bandmaster, a Prussian named Berger, who, when he arrived at the Sandwich Islands in 1872, found about twelve young natives who had acquired some degree of proficiency in blowing wind instruments. The intrepid Herr took these young Polynesians in hand, and made finished instrumentalists of them, after the manner of the Prussian army. Bandmaster Berger has also composed, for the use of his chocolate-skinned pupils, the Kamehameha hymn, which has become the national anthem under the title of "Hawaii Pono!" The band, now numbering twenty-eight musicians, now give a grand concert once a week in Queen Emma Square, and once or twice a month in front of the Hawaiian Hotel. The King has a serenade once a week at the palace, and on the departure of steamers or the arrival of foreign war vessels, Herr Berger's martial minstrels usually play a welcome of sweet sounds. Noted guests are also frequently treated to complimentary serenades. Aloha!

His Majesty does not habitually reside at the Royal Palace. He usually inhabits a commodious wooden bungalow in the palace grounds, and to this building I was conducted by a brown and courteous Polynesian, who, to judge from his attire, might have been an assistant gardener, and under butler, or a policeman off duty—I mean a policeman in the State of Louisiana, who of all constables with whom I have made acquaintance in different parts of the world is the freest and easiest in his garb. The aide-de-camp in waiting was not, I was informed, "on hand;" but I sent in my card, and a minute or two afterwards the messenger returned with a gracious command from His Majesty that I should attend him. The ground floor of the interior of the bungalow was very dark, but under the guidance of the brown and civil Hawaiian I contrived to grope my way up a steep and tortuous staircase, and passing through an antechamber, I was ushered into the presence of His Majesty, a David Laamea Kalakaua, King of Hawaii. The son of the High Chief, Kahanu Kapaakea, and of the High Chiefess, Analea Keohokalohe, great granddaughter of Keaweheulu, a famous warrior and councillor of Kamehameha I., was sitting at a bureau in a large dimly-lighted apartment, the floor of which was laid with matting. The apartment, so far as my imperfect vision could discern, was simply but elegantly furnished, and behind the royal armchair was a tall bookcase full of well-bound volumes. His Majesty rose when I entered, gave me his hand, bade me be seated, and treated me during a prolonged interview with the greatest kindness, expressing, among other things, a hope that I was going to stop a month in the Hawaiian Islands, under which circumstances I should have an opportunity of visiting the largest volcano in the world. Woe is me, I had barely three more hours to stay in beautiful Honolulu herself. The king is a gentleman of considerable inches, stalwart and well built, very dark, but with a very intelligent expression of countenance. He talked fluently and with ease in really excellent English, and there is nothing astonishing in his doing so, since he has received a capital education, literary, legal, and military; his instructors in the first two branches were Americans of high culture, while his military training, begun at the age of 14, was superintended by an old Prussian officer, Captain Funk. The king is a Freemason, and was inducted to the thirty-third degree by General Pike, of Virginia, in 1874. He is also a member of the Bar. Prior to his election to the sovereignty of the Sandwich Islands, the young prince filled divers posts in the Honolulu civil service, and at the time when he was chosen king by an overwhelming majority of the nobles and the representatives of the Hawaiian people he was a clerk in the Land Office. King Kalakaua is about 40 years of age. With his photographic portrait in full uniform, and with a portentous pair of bullion epaulettes on his shoulders, and with the decorations of all his royal orders glittering on his manly breast, Europeans must be tolerably familiar, but he was attired in much simpler fashion on the morning when I had the honor to be admitted to his presence. He was dressed in a thin suit of alpaca, and wore no ribbon nor star. Not that his realm is destitute of orders of chivalry. He is sovereign of the Royal Orders of Kamehameha, of Kalskaua, of Kapiolani, of the Crown of Hawaii Aloha. A diplomatic corps is likewise accredited to the Court of Honolulu. The United States of America have a Minister resident; Great Britain has a Commissioner and Consul-General; France, Italy, and the other European Powers have also their respective Consuls and Charges d'Affaires. Peru, Mexico, and Japan are also adequately represented at this tiny far-away Polynesian Court. Not without design have I given United States Minister resident priority among the members of the diplomatic body. One can scarcely be half an hour in Honolulu, keeping one's eyes and ears tolerably wide open, without arriving at a full knowledge of the fact that the Hawaiian Kingdom is commercially and socially "bossed" by the United States of America, and by the State of California in particular. An enterprising merchant of German extraction, domiciled in San Francisco, completely controls the important sugar production of the Sandwich Islands; the highest offices of State are filled by Americans, who, in some instances, have formed matrimonial connections with princely Hawaiian families; and an American banking firm at Honolulu have a great deal to say in all matters of Hawaiian finance. The Hawaiian coinage—and a very handsome coinage it is—was struck at the San Francisco Mint; Honolulu is full of American clergymen, journalists, school teachers, lawyers, and storekeepers; and although British mercantile interests are tolerably well represented here, I cannot help fancying that in the Sandwich Islands it is the U. S. A. that rule the roast.

King Kalakaua, after signifying his gracious acceptance of the gifts which I had brought him, and making many kind inquiries touching the health of the Baroness, of Mr. Burdett Coutts, and of his many friends in Europe, dismissed me with fair words, and I went on my way rejoicing, to fall speedily into the hands of my friends in the waggonette, who straightway took me into custody again and proceeded to drive me out of my mind, figuratively speaking, at the fastest pace at which the two spirited horses could go at a tearing gallop along magnificent roads. I should have dearly longed to have had a quiet saunter—an observant prow—through the leafy lanes which form the streets of Honolulu; but my genially imperious friends of the waggonette would not hear of anything of that kind. I must ride. I must be driven by the tall, full-bearded Jehu of transatlantic aspect. The consequence was that I saw Honolulu not as in a glass darkly, but under what I may term kaleidoscopic circumstances. It was a splendid day, and the sun was shining gloriously, although far away in a valley we could see the purple clouds pouring down huge sheets of rain. On the right there was a blue sea—calm to-day, majestic, imperturbable; but in the foreground on either side it was one almost maddening succession of kaleidoscopic panoramas. Now whole groves of cocconut palm; now lofty thickets blazing with the almost indescribably superb scarlet Bouganvillias; then groves of cacti and prickly pear; then hedges bursting forth in brilliant flowers; then trim market gardeners, delightful in their greenery, laid out by Chinese gardeners. Then came a vision of China, the Flowery Land itself, a dream of the dear old Willow Pattern Plate—no longer uniform blue and white, but translated into all manner of radiant hues. There was a little streamlet, crossed by a little elliptical bridge, and upon my word there were three pig-tailed Chinamen crossing that bridge, looking for all the world like the celebrated brothers of the Willow Pattern Plate; and there were the willows themselves, and a boat, and a pagoda painted bright red and with little balls pendant from the leaves, and birds of rare plumage were circling in the sky. The place, they told me, contained a Chinese temple, a tea-house, and the residence of a wealthy Chinese merchant. John Chinaman does well at Honolulu. A large consignment of Japanese had also arrived the day prior to our landing. The "Japs" were under engagement to labor in the sugar plantations. They had been inspected by the King, and assured by His Majesty of considerable and equitable treatment. But speedily more kaleidoscopic fragments of pictures floated across my field of vision. A group of Catholic Sisters of Charity, in their wide-sleeved robes and snowy wingles, and pinners beneath their snowy veils, and with their sweet, smiling, rosy faces. Yes, rosy even beneath this torrid sun. Then knots and groups of native children, their complexions apparently heightened either with Cadbury's essence or with Epp's cocoa—black-pollled, black, shining, bead-like eyedurchins, male and female, with little bare brown legs and feet, and clad uniformly in a single garment—a bedgown of white or colored calico, and nothing else. A most sensible and suitable garment for this climate, as "mighty convenient" as were Mr. Brian O'Lynn's nether garments of sheepskin, of which he turned the woolly side outwards in summer and inwards in winter. The Russian monnik, as you well know, acts in precisely the same manner with his sheepskin gaberdine, or louloupe. Nor is the use of the single linen or calico garment for all attire confined to the native children. In the garden of a handsome country house I saw with admiration a white lady, young, handsome, and elegant—a member possibly of one of the "first families" of the island, bending lovingly over a lace-trimmed mosquito-curtained cot, in which lay a pretty white lady. The lady had diamond drops at her ears, and a diamond cross at her neck, and golden bracelets and flashing rings on her fingers, but her only visible garment was a long white muslin bedgown. Why wear more, at Honolulu at least? Aloha?

Native women, too, their head-gear huge cabbage-tree hats, passed us on horseback, they riding astride as the Turkish and Egyptian women do. And then more children scampering out of school and chattering very harmoniously in a language which to my ears seemed to be nearly all vowels, with just a consonant here and there to keep the weaker vessels of sound in order. And so we came at last to a beautiful bungalow—a fishing villa, I was told, with a landing stage jutting out into the blue sea. And here we found ladies and gentlemen, an elegant collation, Heidsieck's dry monopole—or was it Pommory and Greno?—in "spumifying chalicees." There too we found not only a hearty welcome, but polite conversation—the society small-talk of London and Paris, of New York and Washington and San Francisco. The Lady's Gazette of Fashion was lying on one table. The Girl's Own Paper on another. I rubbed, for a moment, the eyes of my mind, and wondered for a moment where I was. Have you not occasionally fallen into a similar condition of temporary uncertainty—wanderer on the face of the earth? "Society," the whole world over, has grown to be so much alike. Rub the eyes of your mind. Where the deuce are you? Sometimes you see in a splendid saloon a swartly gentleman in a black surtout buttoned to the throat, and with a scarlet fez worn at the back of his head. You are in "society" at Pera, at Constantinople. Again, your neighbor at dinner is a charming lady who speaks French with much more purity than many Parisiennes do, and who is talking enthusiastically about Patti and Nilsson, Sardou and Sarah Bernhardt. But the gentlemen present are mainly in mid-day uniform, and wear large epaulettes of loose bullion. You are dining out in society at St. Petersburg. Again, you are at dinner; the ices and the coffee are of exquisite quality. You are at Vienna. Somebody is smoking a papelito between the courses. You are at Madrid. As you pass from the dining-room to the drawing-room you spy a shovel hat or so on the table in the vestibule; and among the male guests there may be some old gentlemen in red stockings, and some younger gentlemen in purple hose. As I continue to rub the eyes of my mind in the great drawing-room of the bungalow far away, my eye suddenly lights on the oddest lady's boudoir that I have ever yet beheld. It is a room within a room—a dainty little boudoir containing a cabinet piano, a rocking-chair, a work-table, a plentitude of shrubs and flowers, and pretty bric-a-brac; but the walls and the ceiling of this room within a room are seemingly of the finest wire gauze. The dainty boudoir reminds me for an instant of a kind of glorified meatsafe; but then I remember that the translucent walls and ceiling of the dainty boudoir are intended to keep out the mosquitoes, and that I am at Honolulu in the Sandwich Islands. Aloha.
