Insurance.

WHY THE Equitable Life Assurance Society
of the United States is the best company with which to Assure.

I.—Because of its Safety.
Its surplus is larger than that of any other assurance company.
II.—Because of its Promptness.
Of 1,043 death claims paid in 1885,
nearly one-half were paid the very day proofs were received; while of the remainder, the majority were paid within the following three days. No other company can show such a record.
III.—Because of its Liberality and Reforms.
All policies are INCONTESTABLE after three years. All incontestable policies are payable immediately upon receipt of proofs of death. The Society's policy contract is clear and simple, and liberal in its conditions. Its Non-fore-feiting (Tontine or Semi-Tontine) policy affords all the ultimate benefits of the full Tontine, and has during its earlier years the surrender value and other material advantages of ordinary life policies.

IV.—Profit.
No other company is paying on its policies as large profits as are shown under the Equitable's matured Tontine policies with fifteen-year periods. Persons desiring assurance may obtain estimates of the probable results of similar policies, and of policies with twenty-year terms, which are expected to show even larger profits.
V.—Prospective Advantages.
The unexampled progress of the Equitable in the past is the best guarantee of the increasing future value of assurance with Equitable.

A few minutes before the hour above specified, the following named gentlemen of the Honolulu Bar took the seats allotted to them near the Bench, and on the mounds side of the Court room: Messrs. Precisely at half-past 9 o'clock, the newly appointed Police Justice, David Dayton, Esq., followed by the retired Justice, Richard F. Bickerton, Esq., entered the Court room from the doorway and ascended the bench, the audience meanwhile rising.

"Gentlemen of the Bar, as you are already aware Mr. Dayton has received from the Governor of Oahu, his commission as Police Justice of Honolulu, and I now introduce him to you my successor.

"Gentlemen of the Bar, I thank you for your presence here this morning. I was surprised to receive the commission of Police Justice for Honolulu from the Governor of Oahu, knowing that amongst you there are others more able to fill the office.

ARTHUR'S KINDNESS OF HEART. There is no doubt that many of the little things done by Gen. Arthur had more to do with his popularity in Washington than his acts as a public officer.

TRIAL TRIP TO BE.
 Mr. Mark Robinson's banana boat will make her trial trip, probably, to Ewa, in a day or two. The occasion will be one of glee. "Way Down Upon the Swanny River," "Huckleberry Finn" and other popular songs will be sung. A bottle of ginger ale will be broken in the christening, and the party will be regaled with lemonade.

RUGGED SIDEWALK.
 Mr. H. E. McIntyre has improved the sidewalk in front of his residence on King street, with a covering of crushed coral and black sand. There are many places in the city where sidewalks are supposed to be, but after a shower they form nothing short of mud-holes and traps for the unwary. On a dark night, it is always preferable to walk in the middle of the road and take the risk of being run over, than it is to grope along a rugged sidewalk with a chance of breaking your neck. As Major Horsey Cornbin would say, "It is 6 to 4 on a broken neck, a dislocated collar bone, or a sprained ankle."

To-night's Performance.
 The performance at the Opera House commences at 8 o'clock this evening, the doors opening a half hour earlier. Success, as far as attendance is concerned, has been already assured, by nearly all the sitting accommodation having been taken. And there is no doubt that the performance itself will also be a success. Most of the actors and actresses, although amateurs, have had some stage experience. The play has been carefully and thoroughly rehearsed, and the prediction that an evening's amusement, well worth the admission charged, awaits ticket-holders, is confidently ventured.

Band Movements.
 The Hawaiian Band will serenade Her Majesty the Queen at the Palace at 8:30 o'clock to-morrow morning. It will play during the reception at the Palace to-morrow, from 12:30 until 2 o'clock, and in the evening the band will furnish music for an informal dance at the Palace. On Saturday, Bandmaster Berger and his boys will make New Year's calls on the Royal family, the Ministers of the Crown, and the Supreme Judges, and at 2 o'clock in the afternoon will play at the quay at the Palace.

Dr. McKibbin.
 Some 25 or 26 years ago, Dr. Robert McKibbin moved his medical hall from where Bishop & Co.'s bank now stands, to Queen street, next door to Pierce & Co.'s. Within the above number of years and in that same old hall the doctor has made many persons laugh and cry. The old doctor, as his friends would often call him, was a little gruff at times, but he knew what he was about, and would carry out his intentions, if he had to pin his patient against the wall. The Doctor has been a great friend to seamen, who on being hurt, would always make a bee-line for the Doctor's office. At leisure moments, when the Doctor was in good humor, he would tell remarkably funny stories. He is now removed from Queen street to Fort street, near Merchant street. The Doctor's removal has been a surprise to some, particularly to an elderly lady, who, on hearing that he had moved said, after a few moments' thought, "so the Doctor has really moved."

A New Explosive.
 The Home News says: Another New Explosive, rejoicing in the curious name of "silutvaar," has been discovered, this time by a Russian, M. Ruetkchell, an engineer. As compared with ordinary gunpowder, the penetrative power of the new explosive, when used for cartridges, is stated to be ten times greater. The compound of which the explosive consists is still the secret of the inventor. The explosive emits no smoke nor heat, and the discharge is unaccompanied by any report. Since these experiments the Russian war and naval authorities have had the new explosive examined and tested by experts, who are stated to have reported favourably upon it. It is further stated that a motive force may be generated with the explosive by means of an engine constructed by the inventor, for which he claims superiority over steam and gas engines. The inventor has patented both the explosive and the engine in several countries.

VACATION DAYS IN THE TROPICS.

BY REV. T. R. G. PECK.

No. IV.

CRATER OF KILAUEA, Sept. 10, 1886. I am here standing on the edge of the greatest active volcano in the world. Vesuvius, Heckla, Stromboli—even the renowned Etna—are pigmies compared with the monster Kilauea, with its crater of fifteen miles in circumference and its vast lake of liquid fire. The journey up to this point is not as arduous as you might at first suppose. We left Honolulu in the Kinau just four days ago, and since then we have been steaming from port to port among these evergreen isles till we finally brought up at Kealahou, the seaport nearest here. It was a voyage as novel in its attractions as it was varied in its features. There was first of all the island of Molokai, which we passed in the early moonlight, the abode of the poor lepers who are sent here from all parts of the Hawaiian kingdom. Then the bold rocky promontories of Maui rose before us, which hold within them the grim crater of Haleakala, thirty miles in circumference, though now happily extinct. Then through the broadest of the channels that separate these isles one from another, we steamed over to beautiful Hawaii, the loveliest gem of the Pacific, which contains the loftiest mountains, the deepest valleys, the broadest and sunniest fields of perhaps any country of its size in the world.

KAWAIIHAE.

At one of the first stopping places on this island, a place called Kawaihæ, my attention was drawn to an immense platform of heaped-up stones, where in the old barbaric days human sacrifices used to be offered to the heathen gods of the island. Then, passing on, we saw by way of contrast the spires of scores of Christian churches peering above the vast fields of waving cane. Then followed immense angular precipices of rock, intersected by long, deep, narrow valleys running far up into the interior. Almost every one of these valleys contained a small river of its own broken into vast cascades, which glistened in the sunlight like molten silver. For miles and miles we passed these strange formations of rock, shaped like the angular roof of a house in front, while their sloping sides were clothed with the richest emerald verdure. Then succeeded long sunny plains where no hill nor mountain could be seen save the huge forms of Mauna Kea and Mauna Loa in the dim distance. The whole day was one exquisite panorama of hills and valleys and cane-fields, with groves of palm, mango, pandanus, oleander and sandalwood trees interspersed with the tall chimneys of factories and the pretty hamlets where the sugar-makers dwell. The coast is so abrupt all along here that the bags of sugar had to be lowered over the precipices by means of cranes into the small boats which carry them out to the steamer, and men, women and children who intend to take passage have to be lowered in the same way. We passed "beautiful Hilo" at eleven at night, so that I did not see it at that time, and early the next morning we reached Kealahou, the point of land where we were to take horses for the fifteen-mile trip to the volcano. How shall I describe to you that wonderful horseback feat where for miles and miles you dash along through immense beds of lava rock, the remains of a great volcanic flood with which the slope has been inundated! Then when we had attained the table-land above we entered one of those vast fern forests for which this island of Hawaii is distinguished. Ferns covering the way like a carpet; ferns springing up into great bushes; ferns branching out into immense trees; ferns of every kind and variety, of every form and shape and, I was going to say, almost of every color, too. Finally this profuse vegetation began to diminish. The air suddenly became cooler and more bracing. Our horses plodded along with a more agile step. Strange vapors too began to show themselves, and there was a smell of sulphur in the air. We had no idea that the crater was so near, or that we were already passing over ground which was unmined by imprisoned fires. Yet so it was, for of a sudden there was the "Volcano House" right before us and the great crater of Kilauea just below.

Standing on the veranda of the house we could look right down into the yawning chasm; not into what is now an ocean of fire, but what was once so. All that vast area whose circumference, as I have said, is 15 miles, and whose shortest diameter is three, was evidently once a burning, fiery caldron, through whose hardened surface even now vast rivers of lava occasionally burst forth and flow. I wish that I could give you even a faint conception of that vast petrified sea, its great swollen billows of hardened lava, the inlets which it has made for itself in the rocky shore, its windings amid the huge boulders, its sheltered pools beneath the deep caverns, just like any other ocean, sea or lake you may have seen.

It was all very curious and, too, very startling. There was no noise, no sound of bird or chirp of insect, only that vast petrified mass lying in silence below me as if the waves of the Atlantic in the fiercest storm you ever saw had suddenly congealed into hardened rock, each bounding billow preserving its original size and shape, and even the hissing spray turned into a consolidated mist.

But where, then, is the source of Kilauea's present activity, of the fires which often now burst forth, and the vast lava floods which often now inundate the whole adjoining country? Do you see those clouds of smoke and vapor rising yonder and covering the heavens with their gray folds? Do you see that lurid light reddening the sky and reflected from the black hills beyond? That is all that remains of that once vast ocean of fire. But it is enough, as you will presently see. Here is a crater within a crater; a lake of liquid fire in the midst of a petrified sea around; a boiling, tempestuous, seething actively amid a broad expanse of desolation and death.

A SERPENT OF FIRE.

It was already late in the afternoon when we started for the lake. It was to be a tramp of three miles or more, and we were to do it on foot, for no horse or mule could possibly be trusted for the journey. Every man armed himself with a thick stick and a lantern, for the way was slippery and it would be pitch dark ere we returned. First came the long-steeped declivity by which we were to descend. One-fourth the way down we passed a stone cross raised on a mound near by. It marked the spot where, not long since, a young Englishman dropped dead on his return from the burning lake. Poor fellow! The excitement from what he had seen and the ensuing fatigue were too much for him, and just in view of the Volcano House he sank and without a word or sign yielded up his life.

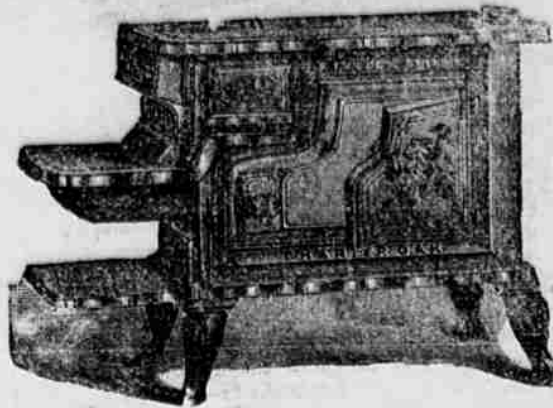

Down, down, down, till it seemed as if the lava plain would never be reached! How the steep precipices began to frown upon us! They looked as if they were at least a thousand feet high. Finally the bottom was reached and we stood on the edge of the petrified sea, which stretched almost illimitably before us. "Be careful now, boys," said the guide; "follow just in my trail," and we did our best to do, staggering along paths so jagged that it seemed as if every particle of shoe leather would be torn from our feet, by jutting masses of lava which threatened to stave in our ribs, down declivities so sudden that our canes were snapped in twain, and then over great yawning crevices through which the heat would pour like the blast of a furnace. The lurid glare in front of us marked our way, but it seemed as if we would never reach it; besides the rain began to pour down, making the path doubly slippery and drenching us to the skin. Finally the guide drew up on a little mound to the leeward of the great volume of steam and smoke, and we were told to look down. We were standing on the very edge of the burning lake, which stretched out below us to the depth of five or six hundred feet. And what a sight! A vast expanse of liquid lava, in some places boiling and sputtering like the contents of a caldron, in others bursting out into lurid jets of flame, in others still yawning in long crevices, red hot through, and presenting a singular net-work of fire like a lace pattern spread over the floor of a house. Great pillars of lava stood here and there amid the molten expanse, like light-houses in a bay, and through orifices at the top they gave forth the most infernal hissing and gurgling sounds that you can imagine. Vast lurid fires, too, gleamed in the distance, sulphurous vapors poured forth from hidden vent holes, and the dark precipices around glared with an unearthly effulgence. It was Dante's "Inferno" over again! I could think of nothing but "the fire that is never quenched," "the bottomless pit whose smoke ascendeth forever and ever."

Let me have a mild CIGAR

THE ABOVE REQUEST IS HEARD daily in cigar stores, saloons and other places where cigars are sold, for it is an undisputed fact that most smokers prefer a mild cigar and that those who have for a long time smoked strong cigars, principally imported Manillas, will, after having thoroughly injured the stomach and impaired the nervous system, sorely want a mild cigar, if they could find the right kind. How many thousands of smokers who suffer from loss of appetite, headache, nerves, irritability, asthma, etc., and who have tried all possible remedies without success, might be cured if they knew that their sufferings were caused by the immoderate use of strong cigars, and that they should only smoke mild and properly prepared ones. It is a fact that all mild cigars agree well with smokers, for in most cases there is a lack of care in the selection of the tobacco, and often the necessary experience for it is wanting, yet there is one brand which suits the most fastidious smoker, and that is ENGELBRECHT'S "Sampler" Health Cigar Which is made from mild, aromatic and particularly selected and prepared tobacco, and combines all the qualities which may be expected from a health cigar. It causes no bad effect of any kind, is agreeable to the taste, burns evenly to the end and possesses a fine aroma. No smoker should fail to give Engelbrecht's "Sampler" Cigar A fair trial, and benefit himself at the same time. For sale Everywhere.
