THE Daily Bulletin

Pledged to neither Sect nor Party, But established for the benefit of all.

FRIDAY, JUNE 6, 1890.

WHICH?

A leaded article in this morning's Advertiser, with the abbreviated form of "communicated" at the foot, has the following in regard to the abolition of sugar duties and the treaty with the United States that was proposed by our Government recently: "Those who know the friendly disposition of the United States towards us will ask with surprise why we have not provided for this contingency. The present Ministry attempted to do so and found the United States cordially willing to enter into negotiations by which we could have revised our treaty into a practical commercial union. Of course advantages were asked and we could have granted the concessions desired with dignity and honor, and an autonomy and independence would have been assured. At this juncture our election intervenes and for the sake of a little political capital, a hue and cry was raised about our independence, it resulted in preventing the negotiation and a final agreement between America and Hawaii. Now, the occasion has gone by and perhaps our great neighbor may not be willing to resume negotiations. The nation will not forget that to the National Reform party we owe this ruinous blow at our commercial life and so at the general prosperity of the country."

We have had so much of this kind of balderdash that it now requires more than ordinary patience to listen to or read it. The writer is either a fool or a knave. Perhaps both. What were the "concessions desired" that we could have granted "with dignity and honor, and an autonomy and independence have been assured?" The "concessions" named in the draft of the proposed treaty as published, were such as to directly destroy our "independence," and we challenge "communicated" to deny it. If that personage has not sense enough to recognise that fact, he is palpably a fool: and if, seeing it, he still denies, he is a knave.

FIRE ON THE BORROWDALE.

At about eight o'clock last evening a fire occured on the British ship Borrowdale, lying at Brewer's wharf. The fire was among some crates of crockery in the lower hold, on the port side forward. How it originated is not positively known, but is surmised to have been from spontaneous combustion. The hatches were all closed at five o'clock in the evening, and no one had been in that part of the ship after that hour.

The fire bells ashore sounded an alarm, and the various fire companies were soon at the wharf. A company of men, under command of officers, from H. B. M. S. Acorn, was also quickly on board to render assistance. The fire engines on the wharf had water on in a few seconds, some of them taking it from the harbor. Of course, the usual crowd of spectators was there, and in the way, as usual. Not content with looking on from the shore, many rushed on to the ship.

The engines poured water into the ship with great energy and in great quantities, but it was badly directed—went to the wrong place—and very little of it reached the right spot. However, the fire was extinguished.

The people on board report no damage to the ship and comparatively little to the cargo by the fire, but much greater damage to the latter by the salt water.

HOUSE AND LOBBY.

Major Wodehouse, British Commissioner, listened in the House to the report of the committee on foreign affairs regarding treaty matters.

Messrs. W. R. Castle, H. Waterhouse, and J. L. Kaulukou, "war horses" of former Legislatures, were spectators of the interesting proceedings of Thursday.

OH, TAKE AWAY YOUR FLOWERS.

Oh, take your timid roses back:
Their soft leaves limp and white
And odorless, too ill accord
With my dark mood to night.

I do not want your tropic flowers,
They're like the love you give—
A something tame and passionless,
That breathes, but does not live.

You take my hand as tho' you feared
Your clasp were overbold,
Your kiss falls light as flake of snow,
And just as calm and cold.

I'd rather have your hatred
Than this lifeless loving claim,
If your heart beat one throb faster
At mention of my name.

Leave me, and bind those soulless leaves
A calmer brow above:
I cannot wear your flowers to-night,
I do not want your love.

MADGE MORRIS.

THE LEGISLATURE.

THIRTEENTH DAY.

FRIDAY, June 6.

The House opened at 10 o'clock.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Noble Muller read the report of the committee on commerce, on petitions (No. 16) that foreign immigration be stopped, (No. 17) that one liquor license be granted for each election district, and (No. 18) that no railroads or canals be allowed to go through private lands without the owners' consent. Committee say enactments will be necessary in granting prayers of Nos. 16 and 17, which they do not consider for the interests of the kingdom, and the matter of No. 18 is now regulated by law. Adopted.

Rep. Cummings presented the report of the committee on public lands, etc., on petitions for roads at Honokaa, the purchase of private rights in landings, bridges at Waikapu, and abolition of road boards. Committee recommend the petitions be laid on the table to be considered with the Appropriation Bill.

Noble Baldwin did not see what abolition of road boards had to do with the Appropriation Bill.

Rep. Kalua moved the report be adopted as regards appropriations, and that the petition for abolition of road boards be laid on the table to be considered with any bill on the subject.

Rep. Kauhi said that is what the committee meant, and moved the report be referred back for correction.

Rep. Brown thought it would do no harm to let the odd petition lie on the table with the rest.

The report was adopted.

Rep. Lucas reported from the printing committee, the Auditor-General's report and five bills printed.

Rep. Cummings reported from the committee on public lands, recommending that petition of Portuguese at Koloa for more holidays be transferred to committee on miscellaneous petitions.

Minister Thurston moved the petition be laid on the table. Carried.

The same committee recommended that petition from Hamakua for assistance to railways be transferred to the special committee on railways. Adopted.

Noble Cummins reported that the special committee to present His Majesty with a reply to his speech opening the session had performed that service.

Rep. Brown moved the committee be thanked and discharged. Carried.

Minister Ashford replied to the request for information regarding opium seizures during the past period. A total of 1286 tins had been seized, 396 tins turned over to the Board of Health, 850 tins to the Collector-General, and 40 tins are on hand. As the Marshal had delivered the bulk of the opium to other officers of the Government, he (the Marshal) was unable to say what disposition had been made of it.

Rep. Brown read a first time his bill to amend the Currency Act of 1886.

Minister Thurston gave a reply to question of Rep. Lucas regarding authority for asking tenders for Government workshops. The statement made in the question was incorrect. Sec. 3 of the Appropriation Act of 1888 provided for the buildings, and Sec. 7 makes the time extend to July 31, 1890. Tenders were asked for because required by law.

PRIVILEGE.

Minister Thurston desired as a matter of privilege to reply to the Attorney-General's statement in answer to the questions of Nobles Crabbe and Muller. As he stated the other day, the answer of the Attorney-General amounted to general charges against the other members of the Cabinet, of interfering with his official duties and, in general, of acting in a manner contrary to the interest of the community. The charges were that the Marshal maintained an armed guard at the Station, that such action was groundless, and that, if there was any ground, the action taken was calculated to precipitate the trouble. On behalf of the members of the Cabinet I admit the first charge, that the Marshal, with the approval of a majority of the Cabinet, maintained an armed guard. I not only admit it, but say we did it distinctly against the Attorney-General's wishes, and that he did everything to prevent it, or that the only thing he did to prevent it was going down to the Station House to see what was going on. Instead of the Marshal deserving censure he deserves the thanks of this community, after the event of July 30, that he had the courage and the independence to take such measures to prevent the recurrence of such events. If I cannot give sufficient reasons for justifying the other members of the Cabinet, in advising and supporting the Marshal, I ask that they be condemned. The defense of the majority of the Cabinet is that V. V. Ashford and R. W. Wilcox contemplated a disturbance at that time, and that the Attorney-General, if not in sympathy with their plan, was conniving at it. I maintain that I am not required to produce such proof as would be necessary before a jury, that these gentlemen were contemplating such a movement, but only to show good reasons for believing that such was the fact. I do not propose to go into any rhetoric here, or use a lot of adjectives. I will only make a plain statement of facts, and allow gentlemen here to draw their own conclusions.

The reasons upon which we acted involved a considerable amount of the history of Hawaii for the last three years. I do not propose to state any facts other than I consider essential. There are a large number of facts which I think do bear upon the subject but I have stricken them out because there are sufficient left for the information of the House. I have arranged the statements not chronologically but point by point.

Why we had reason to suspect R. W. Wilcox to be contemplating a disturbance of the peace of this community. R. W. Wilcox was a ward of the Hawaiian Government and he returned to the country in 1887. A fact not generally known is that while the special session of that year was in progress he organized a conspiracy to dethrone the King—to compel him to abdicate—and to overthrow the Government. One of the men who assisted him in drawing up the Constitution is now in this room. A number of his co-conspirators are now in this room. The Constitution was actually engrossed, and one night Wilcox and others went to the Palace and demanded that the King abdicate, and that his sister replace him on the throne. If it had not been for the faithful services that night of Robert Parker, the affair that came to a head July 30 would have come to a head in the latter part of 1887. The tactics which he pursued that time were almost identical with those adopted in 1889, except that he drew in with him a number of Hawaiian volunteers—making them believe that, with his superior military knowledge, they could bring about a more satisfactory condition of affairs. As soon as I learned of it I sent for the conspirators one after the other, and got sworn statements from them, and I have those written confessions to-day. The object of that movement was simply to compel the King to abdicate. There were no half-way measures about that as in July, but it was a straight-out measure to have him abdicate, and they had the abdication papers made out for him to sign. Within a day or two after the matter came to my knowledge nearly all the conspirators knew that I knew of it. The wife of R. W. Wilcox came to me with tears and begged that I would allow her husband to leave the country, and said they would go back to Italy, and that that would be the last of it. It may be said that the Cabinet should be condemned because they did not bring that matter out then. Perhaps they did right and perhaps they did not. We were just recovering from a season of disquiet, business was just beginning to revive, and many of those implicated in the conspiracy regretted that they had been brought into it. The day after his wife came R. W. Wilcox himself came to me. He said that he had become desperate because the King had not given him an office as he had promised, and if let off he would go back to Italy, and go down where they were fighting the Arabs, and get promotion there. The Cabinet, after mature deliberation, considered that was the best thing to do. The matter was kept secret and Wilcox was allowed to go scot free. He immediately went away, about the latter part of January. Things went along quietly, and continued so until Wilcox returned in the spring of 1889. He had scarcely arrived in the country before I, in common with other members of the Cabinet, received information that he was again trying to bring about the same thing he had tried before. There is no necessity for my bringing July 30 up again, as the matter has all been before the courts. Notwithstanding all that had happened in 1887, notwithstanding the exposures and admissions, we see him come back and do the same thing again, and to-day he has the blood of seven poor kanakas on his head. He was tried and acquitted by a jury of his countrymen. He went out in the country and, instead of expressing contirition for what he had done, he gloried in it and said that if he had a chance he would do it again. Things went on until election time, where there were rumors on the street, and I received direct information that R. W. Wilcox was planing to overturn the Government, and that he was discussing with V. V. Ashford the taking of the Station House. Wilcox stated to several of his friends the substance of what he and V. V. Ashford had been talking about, and persons he told it to were political opponents of mine, and are now, and I have their written statements of the conversations. It is unnecessary for me to say, as he has stated it over his own signature, that one of those persons is Hon. Antone Rosa. I went to Rosa and told him that if there is another disturbance like the 30th July, there is not one thing that will so quickly cause the loss of the country's independence. I said to him, you and I can sink our political differences and do anything we can to prevent such a disturbance. He promised to do anything he could to sift out the matter and he did so. And I think that Mr. Rosa deserves the thanks of this country and of this House, that notwithstanding his political differences he had the independence to act with the Government for the best interests of this country. (Applause.) V. V. Ashford very soon heard the rumors that he was with Wilcox, and he got a written statement from Wilcox that he had made no such statement, and V. V. Ashford has that statement to this day. Then Wilcox gets after Rosa for having said anything of the kind, and Rosa said, "Well, didn't you say so?" "Yes," said Wilcox, "but I told you confidentially and you were not to say anything about it." That kind of put a quietus on Wilcox for a few weeks. Then I again received information, and it was not street rumor but direct statements from friends of Wilcox, to whom he had expressed his intentions. Wilcox after the election felt very jubilant for a while; he was going to be a Minister; he had secured the election of his party and was going to be its leader. The matter went on that way till some respectable members of the party became restive under those statements, and gave their dissent in a very unmistakable manner. Then Wilcox told some of his associates that he suspected the good faith of some of his haole supporters. He accordingly consulted some of those who were with him in 1887 and asked them if they would act with him again if necessity arose. Some of them said they would, others were doubtful, and others said they would not. Then feelers were sent out and people were asked if they would assist in taking the Station. One gentleman while standing in front of the Post Office heard Wilcox asking a man if he would assist in capturing the Station. He refused and came and told me. And to show that it was not from political opposition to Wilcox, several of my informants were then and still are members of the Opposition party. One of them actively expressed himself in the election as opposed to the Government so as to get the Cabinet out. That brings Wilcox up to April 17, which is the date fixed upon by the Attorney General as culminating the guilt of the Government.

(The Minister next gave the reasons for the Ministry's suspicion that V. V. Ashford was trying to create a disturbance. He charged him with complicity in the insurrection of 1889. Col. Ashford had assailed the Ministry with the "vilest denunciation," insomuch that a foreign representative had protested. He charged the same person with saying he would rather see the country in ashes than this Ministry remain in power. Before the election, the Minister asserted, V. V. Ashford had come to him to discuss terms of peace with the Ministry; he was disgusted with the other crowd, and was willing to resign his office and stump for the Ministry on condition that the majority of it would stand by his brother, the Attorney-General, in the Legislature. The statement concluded with charges against the Attorney-General, of ignoring the Cabinet while he was abroad, of assenting to the treaty project that he afterward denounced, of giving revolutionary advice to the King, and of attacking his colleagues and the Marshal, for the Marshal's observance of his own strict orders, never countermanded, of last August. This summary of the close of the Minister's statement is given in advance of the rest of the full report, which is deferred for want of space.)

Minister Ashford moved that his reply to the questions submitted to him, together with the answer of the Minister of the Interior, be referred to the judiciary committee, and that he (Attorney-General) have an opportunity of replying to the charges preferred against him, and that a day be set for that purpose.

Rep. Bush moved in amendment that both Ministerial statements be printed in both languages.

Rep. Brown seconded the amendment. After the statements were returned in printed form they could be referred to a committee, or made an order of the day for committee of the whole. The Attorney-General would then have a full opportunity of making any explanation he saw fit.

The amendment carried.

Rep. Baldwin moved the House adjourn till 10 o'clock Monday morning. Carried.

—THE—

Treaty Matter

Report of the Committee on Foreign Affairs to the Legislature.

To the Honorable President and Members of the Hawaiian Legislature:—

Pursuant to two motions made by Hon. Rep. Brown and Hon. Noble Macfarlane, Your Honorable Body, in the Session of 1890 instant: Resolved, 1st, that the reply made by His Excellency the Minister of Foreign Affairs on the matter of the negotiations for the renewal of our present Treaty with the United States of America, should be referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations; and 2d—"that the Committee be instructed to enquire immediately and report to the House whether the Treaty proposed by the Cabinet, or any officer of the Hawaiian Government was, or is, intended or calculated to, in any wise, prejudice or jeopardize the political or commercial independence of Hawaii," your committee now beg to report that, in view on answering the above query, we have made an exhaustive study of all the facts connected with the said negotiations of the proposed Treaty with the United States, and, in view of ascertaining the nature and intent of those negotiations and their bearing on the political situation of our country, we have endeavored to elucidate the whole history of those proceedings.

To that effect, having found that the documents submitted by His Excellency the Minister of Foreign Affairs to the House were absolutely insufficient, we deemed it advisable to call on each member of the Cabinet, and take their full explanations on the matter.

We found them very courteously disposed to give us all the possible information, and ready to answer our questions with the exception of His Excellency the Minister of Foreign Affairs, who was willing to offer every help and explanation as long as we did not ask him anything that he did not want the committee to know, or that he did not care to explain. In plain words, your committee regret to be obliged to make the following charges against Minister Austin:

1.—Of not obeying the instructions of the House, given in that part of Rep. Kalua's resolution, adopted in Session of May 27 last, wherein he was asked to communicate all of the correspondence on Treaty matters for the whole period starting Jan'y 1, 1889. The documents presented by him begin only on the 24th of September, 1889, and, for motives which will be apparent hereafter, he ignored all previous correspondence and documents.

2.—Of having abstracted or caused to be abstracted one of the most important official documents, viz.: a letter entered as No. 38, from Minister Carter, dated March 19, 1889, which contains, as shown by the notes in the Foreign Office, information and valuable suggestions from Mr. Carter about the Treaty, and also of not having submitted to your committee, his answer of April 5th to that same letter No. 38 of Mr. Carter, if he could find it, but to the present time he has failed to produce it, though it appeared evident to your committee that the officials of the Foreign Office knew where it could be found. This letter would probably have enabled the committee to fix the true responsibilities of the Treaty and its real purposes, and that is why it has been made to disappear. In a like manner, the answer of Minister Austin to the aforesaid letter would have helped us in the discharge of our duty, as the documents of the office show that this answer contains the opinion of the Cabinet on the propositions made by Mr. Carter, and their ideas as to the most promising methods of forwarding the policy there outlined (sic.) The House will now be able to judge why these two documents have been hidden from us.

3. Of refusing to communicate to your Committee the minutes of all the numerous Cabinet meetings bearing on the preliminary discussions of the Treaty held between April and the end of September, 1889. These minutes were generally written out in good shape by the Attorney-General, and copied into a book by the Minister of Foreign Affairs himself and kept in his own custody. This withholding of minutes which could throw the clearest light on the intent and real motives of the proposed Treaty and on the manner in which it was viewed and accepted by the different Ministers would tend again to show that there are compromising matters that must be kept in obscurity.

4. Having acknowledged that the most of the correspondence about the Treaty between himself and Mr. Carter was in the shape not of confidential letters as generally used in diplomatic circles, but of private personal letters, a very singular way for a Minister to treat public and diplomatic matters. Mr. Austin, as shown by the stenographic notes taken for us by Mr. Jones, distinctly refused to allow the Committee to see those letters, which he claims are his private property.

He finally condescended to promise one of our committee an abstract of those letters in what may concern the Treaty, if it was possible for him to do so. But of what value those extracts would be, if we are not able to compare them with the originals, we fail to see, after the showing that Minister Austin made of himself at the time rumors about the Treaty were first circulated in public. You will remember that he positively denied, both to the Press reporters and to the Diplomatic Foreign Representatives, that there was anything in the shape of a proposed modification to our Treaty with the United States; and yet, at the very time he made this denial, the foreign representatives were all in possession of copies of the draft afterwards published by the Government; and a similar denial was made in San Francisco by Mr. Carter. It has been said that diplomacy is the art of hiding and denying the truth, but we find out here that, unless the diplomats are first-class deceivers, which is not given to every man, the best diplomatic policy, as Bismarck said, is to stick to the truth.

However, we cannot dismiss this part of our Report, without emphasizing the fact that we, as Representatives of the Nation, consider it to be a very singular notion, in a public officer, such as the Minister of Foreign Affairs, to hold the opinion that private correspondence on State matters belongs to the individual. Evidently Minister Austin considers his incumbency to be for his own benefit, and the whole country to be a kind of a ranch which he can and has the right to manage to suit himself and friends, and not the Sovereign and people he is supposed to represent. We also further take the liberty of recommending Minister Austin's views to the meditation of all would-be politicians and diplomats: any criminal action, any political or financial misdemeanor, anything they want to keep in the dark and withhold from the knowledge of the People is simply to be labelled "private and personal," and it will then nicely escape all and every investigation!!

These four charges made by your committee against Minister Austin, would in some countries be quite sufficient for a clear case of impeachment, but your committee will limit themselves to say that, at any rate, they consider the Minister of Foreign Affairs in this matter guilty of disrespect towards this House, in trying to conceal documents (whether public or private) bearing on the very questions you had instructed us to investigate, the result of such concealment being that our report cannot be as conclusive as it might otherwise have been.

Now, from the perusal of the explanations offered by the four Ministers, together with that of the official documents placed on the table of this House by the Minister of Foreign Affairs, all of which are annexed to the present report, we shall try to reconstruct the history of the treaty negotiations, although the first conclusion to be drawn from the comparison of the Ministerial utterances is the following, viz.: that it hardly seems possible that four intelligent men who have made a special study of any subject—as these four about the proposed treaty—could ever differ so much in their recollections and statements of many important points. It would take too much of your valuable time to bring forth all the contradictions that exist between those four statements, but as we hope that all the documents will be published by order of this honorable body, every member will be able to judge for himself, and we shall only offer a few remarks on the most important.

It does not seem doubtful that for several months before Mr. Carter's visit to these Islands, the Ministers had made up their minds to ask the United States for a new treaty, whether in the interest of the country or to protect themselves we cannot say. In the absence of the documents abstracted or refused to us by the Minister of Foreign Affairs, we find that Mr. Austin claims for himself the paternity of the idea, whilst the Attorney-General brings it home to Mr. Carter and even to Mr. Blaine, and his idea is supported by what we know of the missing documents and by Mr. Damon's semi-admission. However, what does not admit denial, is that Mr. Carter drew out the draft of the existing proposed treaty, together with the obnoxious clause of the landing of troops, called, "additions to Art. IV." Mr. Austin positively says that those additions only came in much later, as a sequence to the discussion of the other articles, and Mr. Thurston corroborates this, whilst Mr. Damon and Mr. Ashford distinctly state that the clause appeared in appendix, at the very first presentation of the draft. The missing documents alone could decide whether the obnoxious clause was premeditated or not.

The Attorney-General further says, that at first this same clause of landing troops was unanimously agreed to and that some objections against only grew out gradually, in subsequent discussions, the principal being that that clause would give any existing government too much power against the people, and that H. M. the King would certainly object to it and might thereby be induced to refuse the whole treaty; Mr. Carter is then said to have suggested to drop it for the time being, with the understanding of its being revived in the draft in Washington; the other Ministers (and more emphatically Mr. Austin) deny this and the House will have to take all of those conflicting testimonies for what they will consider them worth.

About the real intent of the Treaty, it would have been our duty to direct our investigation in such a way as to bring out proofs to exonerate the Cabinet from certain rumors that had circulated among the people, viz., that some of the Ministers had been instigated—in the first starting of the Treaty negotiations—by the idea and hope of hastening the annexation of this Kingdom to the United States, even of forcing that annexation on the American Government and that suggestions to such an effect had been offered to Minister Carter, so as to obtain through him a more stringent treaty, opening the way which the troop landing clause would easily have consummated, had it not been for the subsequent opposition of the rest of the Cabinet. We are sorry to say that owing to the ill-advised policy of the secrecy of the Minister of Foreign Affairs, we have not been able to elucidate the question, and the House will be reduced to take for what it may seem worth the assurances now given unanimously by the four Ministers, that they never intended anything against the independence of the country; in the same way the real wish of the American Government of preserving our independence would have been better established, if it had been possible to prove who was the originator of the "additional" troop clause. Finally we cannot say whether or not an attempt was made for deluding or intimidating His Majesty the King, outside of the rather brutal remarks made by Minister Thurston in the Cabinet Council held on the 20th of December last, as they are recorded in the copy furnished by the Minister of Foreign Affairs; but our general impression is that a certain duplicity has never been absent from all the transactions of the present Cabinet in respect to the treaty matter, and outside of the testimony of the Attorney-General, it seems very conclusive that if everything had been straightforward, there would have been no reason for obstructing our investigations.

In what concerns the treaty in itself, whilst there can be but one unanimous feeling in this community that a commercial understanding with the United States is a blessing and an indispensable necessity for this country, and that the past favors of America ought to be a guarantee of her constant goodwill for the future, yet it seems indisputable that, outside of the impossible clause of troops landing, the proposed treaty—this pet scheme of the present Cabinet—did contain two objectionable clauses, which every true Hawaiian could not do otherwise than to reject, viz.: the one in Article IV., by which we were to be deprived of the sovereign right of concluding treaties with other nations; and the one in Article VI., by which we were denied the equally sovereign right of terminating the treaty otherwise than by unanimous consent. It was certainly imprudent of binding ourselves perpetually, against the possible contingency of discovering some day, as the result of probable changes of tariffs, that we had given everything away and received nothing in return. And in this the Cabinet are certainly to blame. In fact, such a danger exists even in the present state of our treaty, and we shall call the attention of this House on the following extract of a letter written by an indisputable authority, Minister Carter, and dated May 16, 1890: "In the Congressional Record dated May 11th, page 4629, you will see the speech of Mr. Gear, dealing with our (present) treaty in its relation with the tariff. Mr. Gear does not desire the abrogation of the treaty, but proposes by legislation to abrogate all the advantages of Hawaii while retaining those of the United States."

But there is more yet, even if we did obtain the most favorable treaty, with the perpetuity on our side, there is nothing equally binding with our powerful neighbor, and here we shall again earnestly refer the House to the valuable confession of the same authority. On the same date as above Mr. Carter says: "Treaties do not in this country (U. S.), as with us, prevail over any legislation inconsistent with their provisions. Here (in the United States) they are of no greater force than any Act of Congress, and the latest Act prevails."

Thus, even if we did obtain a Treaty with perfect free trade and equality of treatment, whilst binding on us, it could be annulled in its effects by a simple act of an hostile administration.

One more point we wish to call your attention to before we terminate, and this is the unaccountable anxiety evidenced by the Cabinet to press the negotiations, and their insistance to that effect on His Majesty the King. The Attorney-General himself was surprised at the eagerness of his colleagues for pushing the matter, and yet Mr. Carter, who ought to have known, did not press it; he even wrote on the 26th of December last, that it would be better to wait "until we can judge more correctly the course of Congress in relation to the tariff and to their probable acceptance of the project;" then, on March 26th, he writes that Mr. Blaine had no other object, in pressing the negotiations, than to place it before the Senate during the present session, but that there was no hurry. Finally, Mr. Carter writes on the first of May last: "I told Mr. Blaine that pending the consideration of the tariff legislation, we, of course, could not make any proposition looking to the extension of the existing treaties." Mr. Carter is wiser than the Cabinet, he is afraid of tying up our poor little Hawaii in the present state of things, whilst the Cabinet pretend that we ought to be sorry because the rope is fortunately not yet around our necks.

Before closing we wish to call the attention of the House on a point of veracity. Minister Thurston, in his interview, denied that Minister Carter ever said that the troops clause had been inserted in the treaty to please Mr. Blaine, and further Mr. Thurston denied having ever made any such statement to anyone here. Now your committee are able to say that one of the most prominent citizens of this town is prepared to appear before us if necessary to refresh Mr. Thurston's memory. We even understand that this citizen has already requested Mr. Thurston to rectify his erroneous statement in this matter.

To notice in detail every number and to particularise the peculiar merits of every pupil performing a part would take columns of space that cannot be spared at present. There was no part of the exercises that was weak or defective. Everything was good, very good. The Bugle song, in which gesticulations were suited to the words, and the broom drill, both by the secondary department, and motion songs and calisthenic exercises, by the primary department, excited special enthusiasm in the audience. Little Helen Desha's recitation—the Bothersome Task—was a gem. The chorus singing, conducted by Miss Patch, was really charming.

At the close of the exercises Mr. W. R. Castle addressed the audience in Hawaiian, particularly parents, giving them sound advice in regard to the treatment of their children. He also stated that those who wish to place their children in the school at the next term, beginning Sept. 8th, should make early application, to avoid being rejected on account of there being no room.

Mr. Castle's address was succeeded by a pretty marriage ceremony. While the school was singing very sweetly, "Bring forth the bride," a lady neatly dressed in white, with a wreath of natural lilies and maidenhair fern on her head, and leaning on the arm of a gentleman, entered the church, accompanied by two other ladies and two other gentlemen. The lady was Miss Phoebe Hanuna, a pupil of the school, and the gentleman was Mr. Lyons K. Kakani, of Hana, Maui. These two were united in wedlock by Rev. H. H. Parker, and became man and wife. May they have a long life and an eternity of happiness!

Vote in Favor of Free Sugar.

Hawaiian Treaty Denounced in Congress.

Accident to Steamer Claudine at Cape de Verde.

The American Refinery Still Closed.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 20th.

The first blow has been struck at the sugar interests of the Hawaiian Islands by the Republican House of Representatives, which, in Committee of the Whole, rejected the following amendment to the sugar schedule of the Tariff Bill, moved by Congressman McKenna, of California:

All sugars not above No. 13, Dutch standard in color, syrups or cane or beet juice, melada, concentrated melada, concrete and concentrated molasses, testing by polariscope not above 75 degrees, shall pay a duty of 94-100 of a cent per pound, and for every additional degree, or fraction of a degree 3-100 of a cent per pound additional.

All sugar above No. 13 and not above No. 16, Dutch standard, 1 79-100 cents per pound.

All sugar above No. 16 and not above No. 20, Dutch standard, 99-100 cents per pound.

All sugars above No. 20, Dutch standard, 2 19-100 cents per pound. Molasses testing not above 56 degrees by polariscope, 2 cents a gallon. Molasses testing above 56 degrees, 4 cents a gallon.

This amendment, which would have reduced the duty about 33 per cent, was lost by a vote of 134 to 115, a majority of nineteen thus affirming the principle of free sugar, or rather that sugar should not be protected like other industries. The California delegation voted for the amendment.

Undoubtedly the feeling in favor of free sugar has been greatly strengthened throughout the country for two reasons—first, because of the rascally and iniquitous methods of the Sugar Trust; secondly, because it had been demonstrated that the Hawaiian Islands planters, who enjoyed special treaty advantages, had joined the Sugar Trust which had been formed to plunder and harass the American people. If it had not been for the latter reason it is hardly probable that the majority of the present Congress would have done anything to disturb the Treaty, but it is contended that by joining the Sugar Trust the Islands planters placed themselves outside the plane of moral consideration, and that when they themselves destroyed the sentiment upon which the Treaty rested they have no cause to grumble at the natural result of their own selfishly deliberate act. For this reason especially the majority in the House voted for free sugar, preferring to pay a bounty to American sugar to continuing special tariff advantages to the Hawaiian branch of the Sugar Trust. Congressman Cannon of Illinois made this very clear in his reply to McKenna, when he said: "Because I am a Republican I am in favor of removing the revenue leech from the protective system and placing sugar on the free list." He then denounced the reciprocity treaty with the Hawaiian Islands and declared that a few men in California control the production of sugar in that country. "Put sugar on the free list," he said, "and good-by to five million dollars to four men of California who own sugar plantations on the Hawaiian Islands."

If you can explain this declaration in any other way than as a direct attack upon the Treaty, for the reason already stated, you will please trot out your reason. To people who have followed the course of events closely there is but one explanation possible, and it is the deliberate alliance of Hawaiian planters with that huge swindling combination known as the American Sugar Trust. If the evil could be confined to the principals in this affair it might be viewed with some degree of equanimity, but the innocent suffer with the guilty. There is just one hope, namely, that a consideration of the appropriations may compel Congress to retain at least seventy-five per cent of the sugar duty for revenue puposes. If not, a heavy deficit will be created, inasmuch as the Service Pension Bill calls for an annual expenditure of $50,000,000, which draft upon the Treasury had not been confirmed by legislative action when the Ways and Means Committee reported the Tariff Bill. On the other hand, the House is not in a considering mood, and it will take very strong arguments to convince it of its error in this matter.

There is a boom in sugar trust certificates, the price having been run up in the nineties with heavy transactions. It is understood that the Havemeyer interest is buying up enough certificates to give it control at the approaching annual meeting at which three trustees are to be elected, and at which certificates will be voted for the first time. It is known that Havemeyer had sold out nearly all his certificates at high figures, relying upon his ability to load up at low quotations from weak holders, who had become thoroughly disgusted with his methods; but it is clear, as the time approaches for the annual meeting, that he is forced to buy in certificates at much steeper prices than he had calculated upon when financial support was withdrawn from the "stiffs" in Wall street by his orders.

The unsettled state of affairs at the Islands is injuring your country to this extent, that it is preventing many tourists visiting Honolulu. A statement recently appeared in a city paper to the effect that trouble was anticipated on the Islands, while a Honolulu paper published a story to the effect that a plot to seize the Ministers and subvert the Constitution had been discovered. The truth or falsity of these statements is of course unknown here; the effect, however, is observable, and it is not beneficial to Hawaiian interests. There should be an end to disquieting statements which can benefit no one, but which may very seriously injure many.

A London dispatch of May 14th states that the Hawaiian steamer Claudine, from Scotland for Honolulu, put into Cape Veras with propeller lost. The despatch further states that the Claudine is owned by J. D. Spreckels & Bros., of San Francisco, and is to be used in trading between the Islands. There is no dock or patent slip at Port Veras, Cape de Verde Islands, at which repairs may be done, but as the ship carries duplicates a coffer dam may be built and a new screw put in. This accident will delay the Claudine's arrival at Honolulu longer than was expected.

Hall Bros. of Port Blakely are building a schooner for Capt. Geo. Smith, to carry 1200 tons sugar. She is intended for the Hawaiian trade.

There were eight arrivals on the 18th from Honolulu, viz., S. N. Castle, George H. Douglass, W. H. Dimond, G. N. Wilcox, Calbarien, Ceylon, Medoc and Alden Besse. They all arrived within twenty-four hours of each other. Honolulu trade alone shows signs of activity.

The American Sugar Refinery remains closed, and if current rumors are to be believed there is very little chance of business being resumed by it for the remainder of the season."

The Bulletin of the 21st says: "The proprietors of the California Refinery put up the price 3c all round yesterday, as noted in the market report. This is the first change of which the refinery has advised us in three months, though in the meantime quite irregular rates have been reported among dealers. As there is only one local source of supply, there is no necessity for irregular prices among jobbers. The profit in this line of goods is small at best, and we know of no object for cutting rates."

The Philadelphia refinery of Claus Spreckels has been incorporated and like the California Refinery Company all the stock in it belongs to his own family. The Philadelphia refinery is turning out a large quantity of superior sugar which has secured high standing in the market. To a newspaper interviewer at Philadelphia Mr. Claus Spreckels said his refinery was not for sale and that he had no intention whatever of joining the Sugar Trust.

Trade to the Islands remains active. Without it San Francisco would be a very dull port at the present time.

Free Sugar Passes the House.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 23rd.

In my letter of the 20th details are given of the fight in Committee of the Whole, House of Representatives, against the free sugar of the Tariff Bill. On the 22d the Tariff Bill was reported to the House amidst a disgraceful scene of disorder, the majority refusing to hear argument upon any amendment, and the Bill passed as reported by a vote of 164 yeas against 142 nays.

The California Republican Congressmen who voted for McKenna's amendment in committee, including McKenna himself, voted for the Tariff Bill as a whole in obedience to the party whip. The Democratic representatives from the Coast voted consistently against free sugar although favoring a moderate reduction in the duty. The entire hope of protection against spoliation by law is in the United States Senate. It is generally supposed that the Senate will not consent to free sugar, but of course no one can presume to say for certain what that chamber will do. Its general average of ability is far higher than the House of Representatives, and it is also a more deliberative body which the House has admittedly ceased to be under the Reed regime. Any body of intelligent, representative men who consider the issues and equities involved in the sugar question will have no difficulty in reaching a satisfactory and practically just conclusion, but the House of Representatives did not consider anything except how to trample upon every proposal which the Democratic members offered. It is to this unreasoning impulse that most of the blunders in legislation during the session may be attributed, although opposition to the sugar tariff had its origin in other motives than party intolerance. But inasmuch as reason and prudence guide the Senate in its deliberations the friends of the sugar industry look to it to correct the mistakes of the House in their particular affairs.

The Chronicle to-day says editorially: "Mr. Cannon in his speech on the tariff pointed out the fact that the Hawaiian planters and the men who handle their sugars make over five millions a year by the operations of the reciprocity treaty, which allows the Island sugar to enter free while all other imported sugar pays a duty of about 2½ cents a pound. There are many potent arguments in five millions a year." There are other paragraphs in the same line of thought, as well as the following comment: "The Chronicle during the campaign of 1888 frequently pointed out that the sugar duty was the one which could be best dispensed with by the Government. The conclusion has been justified by the action of the Republican majority in the House, which has decided that the people would derive a positive benefit from the abolition of this particular duty, and that the cause of protection would be benefited by its removal."
