Kona Party Reaches Source Of Outbreak

MAGDOUGALL GOT TO FLOW SOURCE

Lava From Crater On Side of Mauna Loa 7000 Feet

COULD NOT REACH EDGE BECAUSE OF GREAT HEAT

LAVA APPEARS TO HAVE RUN OUT ON ALL SIDES—APPEARANCE OF FLOW, TO DATE.

(Special to the Bulletin.)

Kailua, Kona, Jan. 25.—Sunday morning January 20th Mr. Geo. Macdougall went up the side of Mauna Loa towards the source of the recent flows.

At an elevation of about 7000 feet he found the highest (probable) outlet and approached to within a few hundred feet of it.

The access was difficult, made with a native guide and good mules, but some of the distance had to be traversed afoot.

Here the molten material was coming out, but very shortly disappeared in the earth where it flowed for about 15 miles appearing again.

When Mr. Macdougall returned in the evening the flow was still as active as ever.

Tuesday, however, there seemed to be an abatement on the Kona side, and at the site of the previous exhibition there is little now to be seen except the interesting aftermath.

But no doubt the flow has not ceased, and where it will break out is a question.

A party arrived this morning, January 23, on the Mauna Loa, and those of them fortunate enough to secure the services of Mr. Macdougall will probably see something.

Smoke envelops the Kona and probably the most of this side of Hawaii. One can look at the midday sun without blinking.

Seeing the reputation Kona has for big stories and fakes generally, it is to be hoped that no one will return to Honolulu disappointed, for these have been no exaggeration as to the splendor of the sight.

SAM PARKER BUYS BIG HAWAII TRACT

Pays Baker $32,000 For 1800 Acres Of Land

Another big ranch deal on Hawaii by which Col. Sam Parker buys 1800 acres of land from Col. Baker, has just been completed. Baker also buys 11 acres of land in Hamakua District from Parker.

In the record office the transaction is covered by a deed whereby Baker sells to Sam Parker 1805 acres of the ahupuaas of Waihoehoe and Lalakea, which adjoins the lands of the Pacific Mill Co. and the Parker land. He reserves, however, a strip of land running the full length of the Waimea boundary, containing 175 acres. The land conveyed is guaranteed to be free from all encumbrances, with the exception of a lease of a 30-foot right of way through it to the Hamakua Ditch Co.

The next document recorded is a mortgage by Sam Parker to Baker, whereby he mortgages to him for $32,000 the same premises as described in the deed. The term of the mortgage is one year with interest payable at six per cent. Mrs. Campbell-Parker signs a release of the dower right to the premises.

Finally a deed is recorded by which Parker sells to Baker 11 1/4 acres of land at Haina, Hamakua, for $5000. This land was bought by Parker in 1877 for $300.

As can be seen by these instruments Parker actually buys the 1800 acre tract, the mortgage being in the nature of a deferred payment therefor. It is understood that Parker wants the land to use it in connection with the Honouliuli sheep station. The station is several days' drive from the shipping port, where the sheep are shipped. The idea is to drive the sheep from Honouliuli to the newly acquired land, and to let them stay there for some time before shipping them, in order that they can be in good condition at the time of shipment. The tract was formerly the property of Parker, but he sold it to Baker, who now sells it back again.

MRS. COFER DIED TODAY IN NEW YORK AFTER BRIEF ILLNESS

Dr. Herbert received a cablegram from New York today announcing the death of Mrs. L. E. Cofer from pneumonia. Mrs. Cofer was seriously ill only a week, although she has been an invalid for months. She left here accompanied by her husband about two months ago. Up to the last week her health was steadily improving.

The news will be a sad shock to Mrs. Cofer's many friends here and the most sincere sympathy will go out to Dr. Cofer.

Clothes as a Help In Life

To be correctly clothed will make friends and unlock doors everywhere. The time is past when education was an all-sufficient passport and a guarantee of at least moderate prosperity.

Nowadays a man is measured by his clothes as much as by his knowledge. Society and business life demands of its members the observance of a certain code in clothes.

Good taste counts for more than money in this matter, and good taste is always assured in Correct Clothes for Men, bearing the label of ALFRED BENJAMIN & CO.

Curfew Law To Be Enforced

Sheriff Lauka announced that he has resolved to enforce the curfew law. He has been considering the matter and has come to the conclusion that this law, which is on the statute books, should be enforced.

The Sheriff thinks that if children were prohibited from being on the streets at night, there would be less occasion for the police to be chasing petty thieves and there would be less of the pilfering that is going on so constantly now.

The curfew law has not been enforced for a long time. Its provisions are stringent and affect not only children who are found on the streets after hours, but also their parents who allow them to be out. In fact, the punishment of the parents is greater than that of the children.

Under the provisions of the law, any child under 15 years of age, who, except in case of necessity, shall go or remain upon any public street or highway after 9 o'clock in the evening and before 4 o'clock in the morning, shall be punished by a fine of not more than five dollars or by imprisonment not exceeding fourteen days.

Parents or guardians who shall permit their children to violate this law are subject to a fine of not more than $10 or by imprisonment not exceeding 30 days.

"I intend to enforce the curfew law," said Sheriff Lauka this morning, not only against the children but also against their parents. There is too much rowdiness on the streets at night. I think if the children were kept at home nights, where they belong, there would be less trouble and fewer petty crimes. I am going to see that they are kept off the streets at night."

MANNING HAS NOT FOUND THE LUKA

Revenue Cutter Sighted By Ventura Early This Morning

The Oceanic steamer Ventura arrived this morning from San Francisco bringing two days' mail and a large passenger list. Of those in the first cabin 49 were for Honolulu and there were also 15 second class and seven steerage passengers for this city. There are only 35 through passengers in the first cabin and 25 and four respectively in the second class and steerage.

The Ventura sighted the Manning this morning at 1:30 about 65 miles off port and the officers state that she was cruising slowly around, evidently searching for the Luka without result. No sign of the little schooner was seen by the Ventura as she came in and the officers of the Ventura were unaware of the mission of the Manning till they reached this port and made inquiries.

The Ventura brings about 45 tons of cold storage products for this city and a small amount of general merchandise. She has no potatoes on board but may be persuaded to allow the local dealers to purchase a few from the ship's stores as was done when the Sierra was in port.

That Chief of Detectives Taylor and Officer Joe Leal are working up a reputation among the bad youngsters of this city was proved to a certainty yesterday when they passed a small boy who seemed to have his hands full of something. He looked up as they came past and evidently recognized the officers. His next move was to throw what he was carrying into the yard of a house which he was near, and then to promptly lie down on the sidewalk and commenced to yell: "I no have got, I make find, I no steal."

All this happened before the officer had even left the back or had spoken to the youngster who had recognized the terror-to-evil-doers as they were going past. The stuff which had been thrown away was found to be some brass fittings and a faucet which had been taken from the Hawaiian Hotel. The youngster kept up his shouting and yelling while he was being taken away and is now being charged with larceny in the second degree and will probably get a term in the Reform School when he is brought before Judge Whitney. His name is John Olivera.

A SAD, SAD DAY FOR THE FAMOUS '68

Appeal Of Gamblers Has Disastrous Effect

The next time a bunch of Chinese gamblers is convicted in the police court and sentenced to pay a fine, the chances are that they will think about two or three times before they take an appeal to the Circuit Court. The disastrous result of the appeal of the famous 68 will loom up before them like a hay stack in front of an ant.

For the 68 were handed a package this morning by Judge Robinson that made them feel sick and jarred them out of their usual expression of guileless innocence.

All but two of them got a fine of $25 and costs each, the costs amounting to $2.50 for each Chinik. The other two, who were proved to be the keepers of the game, will improve the shining hours over on the reef for the next six months, laboring for the Territory. And there is no pal kau there. Leave dice behind, all ye who enter there.

The two unfortunates are Ah Wat and Ching Tai. They are thinking now how nice it would be if they had never appealed. For in the District Court Ching Tai got no jail sentence, while that of Ah Wat was only one month. Now they both get six long, pal kauless months. And the worst of it all is that they win away to work.

When court opened this morning, Judge Robinson called the name of each defendant, and as each answered to his name, he was lined up in the jury box or in the seats ordinarily reserved for witnesses and spectators. Some of them stood up because there was no room for them to sit down.

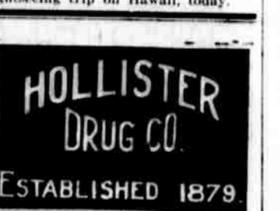

Deputy Attorney General Prosser asked the court that the sentences to be imposed be made severe enough to have a deterrent effect on future gamblers who might be minded to appeal.

JUDGE ROBINSON GIVES THEM SEVERE SENTENCES

Mauna Loa Flow

As Described by Hayselden

Has Many Branches

STORY OF HIS TRIP TO THE FLOW

District Magistrate Walter Hayselden of Kauai has written an interesting account of the lava flows on Hawaii, accompanied by a rough map, which is especially valuable on account of his thorough knowledge of the topography of the country, where these great events are taking place. The description is enclosed in a letter dated January 15, and is as follows:

There would be small explosions, causing some hot rocks to rise 20 or 30 feet in the air. Then the lava would spread sideways from the main flow, but much slower, say at the rate of 100 or 150 feet per hour. This was by semi-molten matter and advanced by the tumbling process, the front of which would sometimes be 15 feet high. This is the way that lava flows cover such an area; the main straightaway flow is narrow, but the side spread or movement on the sides is what causes such a spread, and it made very slowly, the spread in proportion to the duration of flow. When the hot lava would come in contact with the forest there would be a new kind of a blaze, this being yellow, the ordinary fire color, which was quite a contrast to the reddish lava color. The outbreak of lava, immediately followed the ceasing of earthquakes, which were numerous but not heavy. Saturday evening, 5 p. m., when the first warning of a flow in the near vicinity came put a scare and a big guess in a good many minds, the intense reflection was immediately above us and also Watohinu. It was a cloudy and rainy night, which made it worse, but by watching the center of the reflection it was noticed to move out Kona way, which indeed was relieving. Fred (Hayselden) and old man Martin were the only two who saw the flow break over the ridge and run down the side of the mountain toward the road. They were at Col. Norris' house. It reached the road by morning (Sunday); this is the one nearest Kahuku and was the first to reach the road. That is about all I can write on that subject.

ALASKANS ASK FOR HOME RULE

Washington, Dec. 30.—Frank H. Waukey, the first delegate from Alaska, concerning the sort of Americanism that flourishes there, said today: "American spirit, red-blooded and in its most intense form, is manifested by the people of Alaska. They are staunchly patriotic and proud of their country. They take the deepest interest in our elections and to meet their obligations as electors, they do, as a matter of course, what many citizens of the States would never think of doing. One man walked sixty miles over the roughest kind of country to vote in the delegate election. How many persons are there in the States who would walk sixty miles for the privilege of voting in an election? Not many, I imagine. Yet that is the kind of people we have in Alaska. Many made physical and financial sacrifices in order that they might vote in that election. That is the nature of our people.

"Now those persons want a home rule government in the Territory. They are entitled to a regular Territorial form of government as much as the people of New Mexico and Arizona were when they were given their government. I do not believe our claim to a home rule government can be attacked successfully. Our people are Americans, vigorous, honest, capable and trained in politics. They know what they want, and if afforded the opportunity through the establishment of a Territorial government in Alaska they will make that Territory in a few years one of the greatest and most productive that ever blessed the United States.

"Until I was elected as a delegate to Congress 40,000 Americans were absolutely without any representation here in Washington."

MRS. MAYBRICK SPEAKS ON EVIL OF PRISONS

Mrs. Florence Maybrick, who passed many years in prison in England, and who is now trying to reform penitentiaries in America, discussed prison reform before the Young Men's Club in Dr. Parkhurst's church.

"I claim for all men," she said, "human rights, the right to sunshine, to ordinary decency, to labor. At Sing Sing, strong men are shut up in cells six feet by three, without ventilation, sanitary provisions, or water for thirteen hours a day. I know what it means. In England for nine months I had solitary confinement in a cell, seven feet by four, with a log for a seat, and my food passed in through a trap in the door. They do these things for the salvation of souls; they lead to damnation."

She declared the eastern penitentiary of Philadelphia, the worst of the twenty-four prisons she had visited in America. There prisoners are practically buried alive. But at Trenton, N. J., she found strange contradictions.

"They still have underground dungeons, where not even the step of the warder can be heard. As I visited there I heard a poor man call: 'For the love of God let me out. I have been here five days and cannot bear it any longer.' Yet as I came up I heard a sound I had never heard in a prison before.

"Yes," said the warder, "that's our string band practicing."

Mrs. Maybrick declared prisoners must have more sunshine. She said at Sing Sing at high tide, one could write one's name on the wall in the moisture.

In conclusion, she put forward an earnest plea for such an awakening of public sentiment for reform, as had already brought about the reparation of the first offender and the habitual criminal.

SOCIAL NOTES

Mrs. Frederic Klump is still at the Queen's Hospital and will probably remain there for two weeks longer.

Cards have been received as follows: "Mr. and Mrs. Clarence William Macfarlane have the honor of announcing the marriage of their daughter, Miss Helen Gertrude Mabee Kitchen to Mr. Robert William Atkinson on Wednesday, the ninth of January, one thousand nine hundred and seven, Murray Hill, New Jersey."

Mrs. Mary Gunn is giving a dance at Old Fellows' Hall on Monday evening. The Ellis Quintette Club will play, and, joining by the efforts in the past at Progress Hall it ought to bring out a large attendance. Her dancing classes for adults as well as children are always popular and this dance will give everybody a chance for a delightful evening.

For the benefit of the Kanahu Rowing Club, a sale of homemade dainties will occur at the residence of Mrs. Winne on Beretania street on next Saturday morning. The young girls of the club will sell the luscious articles of food and among other dainties will be offered genuine Boston baked beans from a famous old receipt, and only done by one person in town. The opportunity of helping the rowing club, as well as oneself will appeal to everybody fond of good homemade cookery, and Saturday is just the day to purchase articles of food for the Sunday lunch. The energy and perseverance of the Club should be applauded by practical purchasers.

Miss Helen Irwin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William G. Irwin, made her debut Saturday afternoon under pleasant circumstances, at the home of the young woman's parents, Washington and Laguna streets. The Irwin home was made additionally attractive by the decorations of rare flowers and plants. Miss Irwin was presented to society by her mother. The debutante was becomingly attired, and made a most favorable impression as she gracefully assisted in receiving the guests. In the receiving party were the following girl friends of the debutante: Miss Julia Langhorn, Miss Malala Langhorn, Miss Mary Keener, Miss Boyd and Miss Margaret Hyde-Smith. During the afternoon an elaborate luncheon was served and music was rendered by an orchestra.—Examiner, Jan. 14.

Lord and Lady Playfair sailed for the Orient in the Coptic after a sojourn for several weeks at the Moana hotel. They received much social attention and made many friends.

Captain Carter and Captain Humphrey have taken the cottage in the naval grounds formerly occupied by the Niblocks. The young men gave a house warming last evening which was very agreeable to those invited. Many came in after the Burns smoker, and it was a late hour before the guests departed.

Mr. and Mrs. Wadman gave a reception to Bishop Harris at the Methodist parsonage. Bishop Harris is an eloquent speaker and was delighted with his reception.

Dr. M. E. Grossman and his wife returned by the Ventura. They will make their home at the Moana hotel.

Murray Hall, N. Y., Jan. 12.—The wedding of Miss Helen Gertrude Kitchen, sister of Mrs. Walter Schultz, of this place, and former society belle of Honolulu, to Robert Atkinson, brother to the acting Governor of Hawaii, which took place at the Schultz residence, was the climax to a pretty romance. The romance began several years ago when Miss Kitchen, who was living at Honolulu with her mother, attracted considerable attention in society there by her beauty and grace. She met Mr. Atkinson there. A strong friendship which soon ripened into love. They were engaged when Miss Kitchen came to this country about two years ago, and last month Mr. Atkinson came to claim his bride. He will take her back to Honolulu, the scene of their first meeting and there they will live.

The boxes for the Mardi Gras are selling well, and those who wish to engage one can ring up Mrs. Helen Noonan. The meetings of the League are as follows:

Thursday, January 24, 3 p. m.—Meeting of members to vote on new members. All members having names to submit will be supplied with proper blanks at the meeting. This is for the purpose of having a complete list for publication in the Mardi Gras

Mrs. Taylor, of Chicago, Ill., who was a guest at the Moana hotel some time ago, is again to visit Honolulu.

The beautiful mansion of the von Holts was the center of attraction on Wednesday afternoon, for Mrs. H. von Holt and Miss Trevelyan were at home from three-thirty until six-thirty to several hundred of their friends. Judd street was lined with carriages and motor cars and the avenue leading to the house looked like a garden party, for beautiful toilettes and gay paraisols were to be seen everywhere. Miss Marie von Holt received the guests at the door and they were directed to Mrs. von Holt and Miss Trevelyan, who received in the drawing room. Mrs. von Holt was dressed in a lovely frock of pale grey and her young guest, a pretty girl, was charmingly gowned in white. The tea table was set in the dining room and the la France roses which decorated it were beautiful. Mrs. R. de B. Laxard poured tea and Mrs. L. Blackman and Mrs. C. Davies presided over the coffee urn. A bevy of pretty girls, including Misses Violet Cannon, Ella Schaefer, Constance Neumann, Ada Rhodes, Constance Neumann, Bernice Hartwell served as waitresses and the scene was a gay one. The rooms—especially the drawing room—were artistically adorned with ropes of white carnations and malle lols, which formed portieres between the several rooms. Tall pampas grasses and asparagus ferns, were tastefully used in the corners, and a profusion of la France roses made the rooms fragrant with perfume. The guests were coming and going throughout the afternoon and the number of old families were remarked upon. Among others were seen Mrs. B. Dillingham, Mrs. W. F. Frear, Mrs. Philip Frear, Mrs. Erdman, Mrs. Dickey, Mrs. James Dole, Mrs. Sautford B. Dole, Mrs. Witherlee, Miss Witherlee, Mrs. Wallace Farrington, Mrs. Selma Kinney, Mrs. John Usbourne, Mrs. F. H. Mrs. Taylor, of Chicago, Ill., who was a guest at the Moana hotel some time ago, is again to visit Honolulu.

The beautiful mansion of the von Holts was the center of attraction on Wednesday afternoon, for Mrs. H. von Holt and Miss Trevelyan were at home from three-thirty until six-thirty to several hundred of their friends. Judd street was lined with carriages and motor cars and the avenue leading to the house looked like a garden party, for beautiful toilettes and gay paraisols were to be seen everywhere. Miss Marie von Holt received the guests at the door and they were directed to Mrs. von Holt and Miss Trevelyan, who received in the drawing room. Mrs. von Holt was dressed in a lovely frock of pale grey and her young guest, a pretty girl, was charmingly gowned in white. The tea table was set in the dining room and the la France roses which decorated it were beautiful. Mrs. R. de B. Laxard poured tea and Mrs. L. Blackman and Mrs. C. Davies presided over the coffee urn. A bevy of pretty girls, including Misses Violet Cannon, Ella Schaefer, Constance Neumann, Ada Rhodes, Constance Neumann, Bernice Hartwell served as waitresses and the scene was a gay one. The rooms—especially the drawing room—were artistically adorned with ropes of white carnations and malle lols, which formed portieres between the several rooms. Tall pampas grasses and asparagus ferns, were tastefully used in the corners, and a profusion of la France roses made the rooms fragrant with perfume. Judge Robinson evidently has an opinion that to gamble is to sin.

It is not so much the liquor law as it is the enforcement, that tells the story.

Everybody has passed the Naniua dam. Hence the decision to make it a Jack Pot.

Russia's promise to get out of Manchuria is a recall to very unpleasant memories.

Resurrection of the curfew law at this time suggests that some one must want the law repealed.

Admiral Alexieff is said to be again in favor with the Czar. It is to be assumed that all his opponents have been killed off.

According to statements made before the Merchants' Association, Standard Oil promises well. Goods delivered have real value.

Every passing year demonstrates that more people in Honolulu think well of Robbie Burns and glory in staging his praises.

Germany steps into the list of countries shocked at the horrors of colonial aggression, but whose people continue to uphold the expansion policy.

Hilo jaspers are devoting so much time to Honolulu rain stories and extinct volcanoes that no further explanation is needed of an off week in County Supervisor sessions.

Better take the alien business out of the liquor fight, and pass a law that can be enforced among all dealers without regard to race, color and previous condition of servitude.

The San Francisco Chronicle says the Republican party must drop hoodlums. This carries the base insinuation that the Republican party has at some time in its career held fast to them.

Granted that the contractor of the Dam is at fault, the presentation of all correspondence with him for publication would enlighten the public, and perhaps prepare it to understand the investigation.

That Soothsayer who read the signs in sea and sky was sure enough Home Ruler. Repub'can kahunas don't find any premonitory symptoms of a Legislature that goes 'round and 'round but does nothing.

Some one says, investigate the Dam and see who is behind the contractor. What difference does it make who is behind the contractor? Unless it be some one with a sharp stick anxious to have the dam finished.

Representative Long's bill to force the Territory to buy land at its own assessment sounds foolish to the tax men. Can it be any worse than the annual exhibition of taxing property far above a sensible valuation?

Now we know the value of the hundred and one persons claiming to be heirs of the bluest blood. When the kahunas say the signs are right for the death of an all, the large number of claimants makes it easy to satisfy the predictions.

MERCHANTS' ASSOCIATION USEFULNESS.

As often as the annual meeting of the Merchants' Association approaches there is more or less talk, serious and otherwise, on why the Association should consolidate with the Chamber of Commerce.

The idea meets with favor only in certain sections of the Chamber of Commerce and it is well for those doing business in the city that this is so. Falling, however, to make headway with the consolidation plan direct, there seems to be a periodical movement to reach the same thing indirectly by elevating Chamber of Commerce representatives in the Merchants' Association and making these first cousins so much like brothers that it would take an expert in family history to tell them apart.

This consolidation scheme is no doubt well meant but it should not prevail either directly or indirectly.

The Merchants' Association has been a success. It will continue to be a success just as long as it represents in its utterance as well as its membership, the merchants of the city, the retailers, the smaller dealers.

To keep the interests of the merchants can be as well served by the Chamber of Commerce as to display the same wisdom as the man who says that the Piners Association could as satisfactorily fulfill the demands of the wholesaler and larger business interests as the Chamber of Commerce.

Mercantile men certainly do have interests as distinct and individualized as the Chamber of Commerce or the Piners Association. Consolidation or supremacy of Chamber of Commerce men in the merchants' organization on the theory of greater strength in unity would work out practically like the tigers.

Why it should be, that a man doesn't dare to peep in a Chamber of Commerce meeting but will really talk in a Merchants' Association assembly, is hard to explain. It is true.

The practical effect therefore of the Merchants' Association is to increase the number of wide awake promoters of business along progressive lines and in a manner to serve the largest number.

It is an error to destroy independent, progressive thought or squelch mercantile individuality.

The Merchants' Association will carry out the idea for which it was created and grow in its proper sphere of usefulness if the members hold to the plan of putting mercantile men to the front.

THE COURAGE OF NEBOGATOFF

Admiral Nebogatoff has been forgotten. He has furthermore been sentenced to death by a Russian court martial, not because he deserves it, but rather because Russia appears to believe on general principles that a man is better dead than alive.

Nebogatoff is worthy of being recalled to memory on account of the fact that his trial dispelled the popular idea as to his cowardice in the battle of the Japan Sea.

He did the best he could with what he had—an ill-assorted, ignorant crew and a set of gunners who, under the Russian naval regulations, knew a little of marksmanship as children shooting with toy guns at a toy target. As a mariner he displayed his ability in effecting a junction with Rojstevsky's fleet, after a voyage of two months and twenty-four days, in which he overcame almost insuperable obstacles.

Expert opinion was that the loss of his squadron was due to one of two causes—either he took the chance of leaving the brunt of the fighting, or his ships were unseaworthy. The trial established the perfect weakness of his squadron for fighting purposes. In addition to that, he was compelled in reaching the Orient, to sail over the same course as Rojstevsky, who had caused complaints of violations of the neutrality laws by remaining in neutral ports longer than is countenanced under international law. Notwithstanding this, Nebogatoff made the voyage without any complaint having been made against him by any of the powers which protested against the action of his commander-in-chief.

Nebogatoff's surrender, according to the evidence of impartial witnesses, was an act of humanity. He could have gone down with flags flying and bands playing and sacrificed the lives of a thousand men for sentiment, but he preferred to take the practical view and accept the inevitable.

Two of the battleships, the Orel and the Nicholas I, were hopelessly disabled. His ammunition was nearly gone. His crews were exhausted, and even if they had not been they did not know how to fight.

On the day before the battle the Orel was so absolutely worthless that Rojstevsky was asked to grant permission to have her men transferred to another ship and the Orel blown up. This was refused.

She was on the point of sinking the next morning, and when she went into action she had only two heavy guns which could be used against the enemy.

The Nicholas I was leaking. Her crew were mutinous and disorganized. One of her twelve-inch guns was disabled and her boats were shot away.

No commander in any naval battle was placed at such a deplorable disadvantage as was Nebogatoff.

With such ships and such a crew, the only possible excuse for fighting on would have been a desire to kill off the whole outfit as it was good for nothing in the work out for it to do. This would have been thoroughly Russian. Nebogatoff by his surrender therefore showed himself on a somewhat higher level than the average run of his countrymen.

He had the courage to prevent needless slaughter, which among other people should be warrant for more applause than condemnation.

CAUGHT BY THE GRIP.. RELEASED BY PE-RU-NA.

La Grippe is Epidemic Catarrh.

LA GRIPPE spares no class or nationality. The cultured and the ignorant, the aristocrat and the pauper, the masses and the classes are all subject to la grippe. None are exempt—all are liable.

La grippe is well-named. The original term, la grippe, is French, but it has been shortened by the busy American to one word "grip."

Without any intention of doing so, a new word has been coined which describes the disease exactly.

The ailment clings to the patient as tenaciously as if some terrible giant had clutched him in a fatal clasp.

Men, women and children—whole towns and cities are caught in the baneful grip of this terrible monster.

Have you the grip? Or, rather, has the grip caught you? If so, read the following letters.

These testimonials will show you the quickest and best means of ridding yourself of this tenacious disease and its after-effects.

Suffered Twelve Years From After-Effects of La Grippe. Mr. Victor Patneude, 228 Madison St., Topeka, Kas., a well-known carpenter and member of Knights and Ladies of Security, writes:

"Twelve years ago I had a severe attack of la grippe and I never really recovered my health and strength—but grew weaker every year, until I was unable to work.

"Two years ago I began using Peruna and it built up my strength so that in a couple of months I was able to go to work again.

"This winter I had another attack of la grippe, but Peruna soon drove it out of my system.

"My wife and I consider Peruna a household remedy."

Pneumonia Followed La Grippe—Per-na, the Remedy That Brought Relief. Mr. T. Barnicot, West Aylmer, Ontario, Can., writes:

"Last winter I was ill with pneumonia after having la grippe. I took Peruna for two months, when I became quite well, and I can say that any one can be cured by it in a reasonable time and at little expense.

"Every time I take a cold, I take some Peruna, which makes me well again.

"I also advised it for my daughter who was so ill with prostration that she could not follow her trade of dress making.

"A bottle of Peruna made such a change in her that she has been able to follow her trade ever since.

"I also induced a young lady, who was all raked and confined to the house, to take Peruna, and after taking Peruna for three months she is able to follow her trade of tailoring.

For special directions everyone should read "The Life of Life," a copy of which surrounds each bottle. Per-na is for sale by the following druggists and will supply the retail trade in Honolulu, Hawaii: Benson, Smith & Co., Hobron Drug Co., Honolulu, Hawaii.

Most Effective Medicine Ever Tried for La Grippe.

Robt. I. Madison, A. M., Principal of Cullowhee High School, Painter, N. C., is chairman of the Jackson County Board of Education. He has for nearly six years been teaching in Painter.

He is a writer of occasional verse and has contributed to a number of leading papers and magazines—religious, educational and secular.

In speaking of Peruna, Mr. Madison says: "I am hardly ever without Peruna in my home. It is the most effective medicine that I have ever tried for la grippe.

"It also cured my wife of nasal catarrh. Her condition at one time was such that she could not at night breathe through her nostrils.

"In consequence, an inflamed condition of the throat was brought about, getting worse and worse, and yielding to no remedy until Peruna was tried.

THAW'S SISTER WILL HELP.

New York, Jan. 19.—Family forces that will do all in their power in the defense of Harry K. Thaw, were completed today when his sister, the Countess of Yarmouth, arrived on the steamship Kaiserin Augusta Victoria.

The young woman had forgotten the resentment she held toward her brother because of his conduct at the time of her marriage to the Earl and will be constantly at his side during the days of his trial.

Although she had never spoken to the former Evelyn Nesbit, and was outspoken against her brother's course in making her his wife, the two women will bury whatever feeling they bear against each other and suffer with

Solid Mountain Magnetic Ore

A mountain of solid iron, thousands of millions of tons of it, enough to supply the whole world with the base but indispensable metal for anywhere from fifteen to twenty years!

Such is the story reading like a fable which Adolph Artz, formerly of the Bureau of Architecture here and who four years ago cast in his lot with China and is now connected with a big Chinese development syndicate, brings with him on his visit here.

Mr. Artz is well known here. The exact figures of this mighty mass, more valuable than diamond mines of the Rand or the auriferous deposits of the Klondike, are ten thousand and seven hundred and fifty millions of tons. This is the computation as calculated by the rigid and veracious geometrical test employed by modern science in such explorations.

Tremendous as this seems, it falls far below the estimate placed upon it by a member of the Royal Society of Engineers of Great Britain. Striking this mountain a few years ago in one of his prospects, he figured that it had enough of the ore to supply the world for almost a hundred years. So the estimate now placed upon it appears conservative in comparison. Incidentally it may be mentioned that the British engineer tried to secure a concession to work the mountain but failed. It was too good a thing to part with.

The problems of Mr. Artz and other engineers have demonstrated to their satisfaction that the heart of the iron mountain is of the same material as its skin or surface. Within a short time, according to present plans, the work of demolishing the treasure will begin. Good coal is found in abundance in close proximity, while ten miles of railroad will suffice to bring the metal where it can connect with the world. The province in which it is located is Fukien, lying about 400 miles north of Canton. Mr. Artz' headquarters are in Canton.

It is the intention of the Chinese syndicate to keep the mountain all Chinese, in line with the present policy of China for the Chinamen. Even such foreign employees as the syndicate has are not allowed in on a percentage or profit-sharing basis. It is a case of straight salary only.

One peculiarity of the ore is that it resembles that of the fabled mountain of old which wrecked passing ships by drawing from them all the nails and metallic parts, causing the vessels to fall to pieces and sink. It is magnetic. Mr. Artz says that the ore when picked up hangs together and forms a string, showing how strong is the magnetism it contains.

Speaking of the Chinese Mr. Artz praises their enterprise, hospitality and generosity. He says he would want no better persons to work for. Nearly every new employe of consequence is greeted with a reception and banquet and if he be of the first rank he is good for a week's fiesta. He asserts that at the present rate of advancement China will soon be a power to be reckoned with.—Maui American Dec. 1.

MARK TWAIN TELLS OF 'PHONE TROUBLES

Mingled with the Christmas chimes in the laughter created by a new story of Mark Twain, made especially for holiday consumption. Here it is:

BY MARK TWAIN

When I lived up in Hartford I was the very first man in that part of New England, at least, to put in a telephone; but it was constantly getting me into trouble because of the things I said carelessly. And the family were all so thoughtful.

One day when I was in the garden, fifty feet from the house, somebody on the long distance wire, who was publishing a story of mine, wanted to get one title.

Well, that title was the first sentence, "Tell him to go to hell." Before my daughter got it through the wire and through him there was a perfect eruption of profanity in that region. All New England seemed to be listening, and each time my daughter repeated it she did so with rising emphasis. It was awful.

SOCIAL CHATTER AND HOME TALK

The tea which Mrs. Raymond de B. gave on Saturday afternoon from four until seven was a most successful affair. This charming hostess always entertains well, and on Saturday a musical program was offered to the guests, which was thoroughly enjoyed. Mrs. George Macfarlane and Mrs. Murray Scott contributed the vocal numbers. Mrs. F. H. Humphris recited and Mrs. Ernest Ross played the violin. Mrs. Raintey Scott's exquisite voice was heard to advantage and Mrs. George Macfarlane sang magnificently. The dramatic quality of her voice made itself felt. "Don't Cry, Little Girl, Don't Cry" was the selection chosen by Mrs. Humphris, which was done in a finished manner. Mrs. Ernest Ross contributed much to the pleasure of the afternoon by her well chosen numbers. Tea was served from dainty little violet bedecked tables on the lawn and in the drawing room. A large table was set in the dining room, most attractively decorated with violets. Miss Christobel Layard assisted in attending to the wants of the guests in company with Misses Tillie Neumann and Elsa Schaefer. Among those who were present were Mrs. George Carter, Mrs. James B. Castle, Mrs. R. N. Paton, Mrs. Sanford B. Dole, Mrs. Wetherlee, Miss Wetherlee, Mrs. J. O. Carter, Miss Carter, Mrs. Babbitt, Mrs. Lange, Miss May Damon, Mrs. S. M. Damon, Mrs. Wilkinson, Lady Playfair, Mrs. Rodiek, Miss Tillie Neumann, Miss Jessie Kaufman, Miss Nannie Winston, Mrs. James Wilder, Mrs. Charles Wilder, Mrs. Kooko, Mrs. Pike, Mrs. Klump, the Misses Poyard, Mrs. Harvey Murray, Mrs. M. M. Scott, Miss Scott, Mrs. Brooke, Mrs. George Macfarlane, Mrs. Galt, Mrs. Bishop, Mrs. Focke, Mrs. Ross, Mrs. Lane, Mrs. Humphris, Lady Herron, Mrs. A. Fuller, Mrs. Stanley, Miss Dufford, Mrs. W. C. Wilder, Mrs. G. Wilder, Mrs. Charles Cooper, Mrs. Simpson, Mrs. Bottomley, Misses Jordan, Mrs. Mint, Miss Mint, Mrs. Walker, Misses Walker, Mrs. A. G. Hawes, Jr.

Among the dinners at the Moana on Sunday evening was that of Mr. and Mrs. Grinbaum, who entertained for Mr. and Mrs. Holmes, Mrs. Will Avery and ex-Governor Clegborn.

The violin recital which Mr. Rudolf J. Buchy, kindly assisted by Mrs. Bruce McV. Mackall and Mrs. Tenney Peck will give in the Alexander Young Hotel ballroom on the evening of February 6th at 8:15 o'clock will probably bring out a large audience. The program is an unusually interesting one as one can see below, and the Kol Nidrei by Max Bruch is an adaptation by one of the most famous German violin writers of the ancient Hebrew prayer, which is used at the annual service of the Jewish people. This melody is over one thousand years old, and Max Bruch has immortalized it and made it famous by his version. Last of all comes the group of small numbers, the first one, the "Coquette," is a MSS. of which there are but two copies in existence. The unusual and unique program will certainly attract the musical element and those who have heard Mr. Buchy play are most anxious to hear him interpret this difficult music. Mrs. Mackall has some pleasing numbers, and her voice is a favorite one here. The concert has been made possible by the kindness of Mrs. Tenney Peck, who is one of the best amateurs here. The full program is as follows:

PART I.
 1. Sonata for violin and piano—Corelli prelude—Allemanda. Sarabanda.
 Mr. Rudolf J. Buchy and Mrs. L. Tenney Peck.

2. Mrs. Bruce McV. Mackall.
 3. Ballade et Polonaise—Vieuxtemps
 Mr. Rudolf J. Buchy.
 Mrs. Bruce McV. Mackall.

PART II.
 4. Kol Nidrei Max Bruch
 Mr. Rudolf J. Buchy.

5. Mrs. Bruce McV. Mackall.
 6. (a) La Coquette MSS.
 (b) Polish Dance Winiawski
 (c) Hungarian Dance, Jos. Brahms
 Mr. Rudolf J. Buchy.

7. Mrs. Bruce McV. Mackall.

The concert is under the patronage of Mrs. George Carter, Mrs. Sanford B. Dole, Princess Kawananakoa, Mrs. R. de B. Layard, Mrs. F. M. Swamy, Mrs. Alexander Young, Mrs. Campbell-Parker, Mrs. C. W. C. Deering, Mrs. James Wilder, Mrs. A. G. Hawes, Jr., Mrs. W. Pfothauer, Mrs. H. V. Murray, Mrs. Van Vliet, Mrs. Frank Halstead, Mrs. F. H. Humphris, Mrs. James Castle, Mrs. Alex. Lindsay, Mrs. C. J. Hutchins, Mrs. L. C. Ables, Mrs. Margaret Peacock, Mrs. E. D. Tenney, Mrs. George Macfarlane, Mrs. W. D. Westervelt, Mrs. H. Focke, Mrs. L.

Tenney Peck, Mrs. F. A. Schaefer, Mrs. C. Montague Cooke, Mrs. L. Lewton-Brain, Mrs. Charles Cooper, Mrs. Alex. Scott, Mrs. H. von Holt, Mrs. John Uabourne.

Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Swamy, who always entertain delightfully, gave a dinner on Saturday evening last in honor of Mr. and Mrs. A. Robinson of Kauai, who have been making quite a little visit in Honolulu. Among the other guests were Mr. and Mrs. L. Blackman, Mrs. Francis Gay, Mr. David Anderson and Mr. James Cockburn.

Mr. John H. Bliss gave a charming dinner at the Moana Hotel on Sunday evening. Miss Nannie Winston acted as hostess. The table was profusely decorated with red carnations and maiden hair ferns and the place cards were handpainted Chinese figures. Among the guests were Prince and Princess Kawananakoa, Dr. and Mrs. Harvey Murray, Dr. and Mrs. F. H. Humphris and Mr. and Mrs. Alexander G. Hawes, Jr.

Mr. and Mrs. C. Hedemann and Miss Alice Hedemann were passengers in the Sierra for the Coast. Miss Alice Hedemann will become a pupil at Huntington Hall, a fashionable boarding school for girls at Los Angeles.

Mr. Franz Wilczek, the famous violinist, so well known here, has sought release from his matrimonial troubles and has remarried again to a younger girl of Omaha. A prominent paper there has the following clipping, which was of great interest in Honolulu:

L. E. Behymer, impresario and general manager, distinguished himself yesterday and added to his accomplishments by acting as Cupid, and by so doing drew one of his musical protégés from the depths of despair.

The would-be benedict was Franz Wilczek, the noted violinist, and his bride-to-be Miss Lena Newton, a society belle of this city.

Now, it seems the wedding day had been set for next Thursday, and owing to the groom's illness, it was to be a very small and quiet affair. It was to have taken place in the First M. E. Church and already the friends were invited to come.

Yesterday certain friends were suddenly called up and told that the marriage would not take place on Thursday. The bride had changed her mind. That was all. No word as to when the nuptials were to take place.

Dr. Robert McIntyre stood in his study waiting patiently for the bridegroom yesterday afternoon. They did not come. He was engaged for the ceremony, and they were to be there at 1:30, but an hour passed and not a sign of them. Then a frantic telephone message. The marriage license was not forthcoming. Awful calamity! the courthouse was closed!

It seems that Miss Newton and Mr. Wilczek had made up their minds very suddenly as to the marriage. Wilczek has been ill for the last two weeks, and came from a sick bed to be married. A. G. Newton, prominent citizen and realty dealer, father of the bride, knew not a word of the sudden determination of the couple until called up by telephone at noon by a friend who informed him of the wedding to be.

CUPID BEHYMER GETS CUE.

Mr. Newton, though somewhat astounded, invited the couple to his office in the Mason building. From there they started for the courthouse, only to find it closed.

Back they called in their automobile, pictures of distress, to the office. There a hurried consultation was held. Then L. E. Behymer was called in and told of the terrible misfortune.

Could they not wait until Monday? No, indeed! They must have the license immediately.

Then did the ingenious Mr. Behymer set his wits going and pull a few wires. County Clerk Keyes consented to let them into the room where Cupid's records are kept, and the license was at last in the hands of the happy couple.

It was too late to catch Dr. McIntyre as he had other duties, so the couple took the first Ocean Park flyer for the beach, where they went directly to the home of Mrs. Stoeter on Ocean Park, sister of the bride, and here they partook of a hurried dinner, and at 8 o'clock were married there, thus ending a picturesque wedding ceremony.

THEIR MUSICAL ROMANCE.

To many friends of the couple the news of the marriage will come as a surprise, but to intimate friends the pretty romance underlying this marriage has been known for some time.

Miss Newton has lived here for ten years or more with her father, Arthur G. Newton, and she and her sister, Miss Grace Newton, have always been among the most widely feted of belles. She is a beautiful brunette with soft dark eyes and hair and a pleasing personality. She is most talented, too, and for a number of years has made a study of the violin. It was through her violin studies that she met Mr. Wilczek.

She was in Alameda studying the violin under a pupil of Wilczek. She had a picture of the cherished master on her dresser, which was an inspiration to the gifted girl.

Learning that Mr. Wilczek was in Omaha, she went there to study under him. It was during this time, drawn together by common interests, that the virtuous had lost his heart to the liquid eyed California beauty. Shortly after that they plighted their troth, though it was kept a great secret, and not a soul knew of it.

NOT THE CLIMATE.

About three months ago Miss Newton arrived home from her season of Eastern study, and her friends were entertaining her gaily. Scarce a month later Mr. Wilczek arrived in Los Angeles, presumably because he was so charmed and in love with the country, but really because he just couldn't stay away from the dainty charmer any longer.

During the past two weeks, Mr. Wilczek has been seriously ill and yesterday even was in a high fever, over the excitement consequent upon the marriage. Mr. Wilczek was here in 1902 and was soloist with the Symphony Orchestra, at which time he won great praise for his round strong tones and the intelligence of his interpretation.

Wilczek's life is rather an interesting one. He is an Austrian, and has no thought of an artistic career until he was sixteen, though he had studied violin and piano. He made his first appearance at the age of nine.

Complying with the wishes of his parents, he was preparing to enter the military academy at Vienna, when at the annual public contest for the "Euler prize" at the Conservatory of Music in Graz his brilliant and masterly interpretation of numbers created such a sensation that he was awarded the entire prize of honor, money, which had never been awarded to one alone, always divided among a number. The Austrian government offered to educate him musically. He was at last a pupil of Joachim, under whose personal direction he studied for three years.

He made a tour of Austria and later came to America, where he decided to stay, as the Austrian government was holding him to his contract with the army. Ever since his career has been a triumphant one.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilczek contemplate a trip to Honolulu in the near future as soon as Mr. Wilczek improves enough to travel.

Mrs. Francis Gay is a guest at her father's, Judge Hart, during the absence of her mother. The Elston children are with her.

Mr. and Mrs. Raymond de B. Layard were the host and hostess of a beautifully appointed dinner on Monday evening at the Consulate. Roses, white marquerites and violets formed an effective decoration. Among the guests were Lord and Lady Playfair, Mr. and Mrs. R. N. Paton, Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Case Deering, Judge and Mrs. W. Stanley, Lady Herron, ex-Governor Clegborn and Mr. David Anderson. The guests played bridge after dinner.

Mrs. Day and Miss Dorothy Wood are in Manila. After touring the Orient they will return to Honolulu for a short visit and then expect to go to Chicago. Miss Wood will attend school either there or in New York.

Mr. and Mrs. Woods and family are occupying ex-Governor Clegborn's beach villa for a few months. The residence of the late Princess, recently occupied by the Trappans, is still to let—Ainahau.

Mr. and Mrs. James Wilder gave a luncheon on Sunday which was followed by a launch party to Pearl Harbor, Captain Carter being present at the latter event.

An interesting little luncheon was given on Sunday by Mrs. James Castle at Kaimali, in honor of Miss Armstrong, sister of Mrs. Ellen Ward. Among the invited guests were Mrs. B. Dillingham, Mrs. Alex. Scott, Mrs. Philip Dodge, Mrs. Ellen Weaver and Miss Anna Paris.

The hon at the Moana hotel on Wednesday evening for the guests of the Alexander Young and Moana was a great success. There were many pretty women present and among others were notices Mrs. Brooke, Mrs. Deering, Mrs. Humphris, Mrs. Richardson, Mrs. Brooks the bride, who, with the doctor, sailed in the Sierra, Princess Kawananakoa, Mrs. Pike, Mrs. Avery,

Mrs. Harry Macfarlane, Misses Helen, Lady and Alice Macfarlane, Miss Nannie Winston, Miss Dagmar Sorenson. There were many tourists present, noticeably two pretty girls from New Orleans, who were beautifully dressed. The hop went on until very late and a large party were motored to the Sierra which was scheduled to sail at 12.

Misses Irma and Dodie Ballentyne were the hostesses of a pretty card party for Miss Alice Hedemann last week. The winners of the prizes were Miss Violet Atherton, Miss Maude de Bretteville and Miss Hedemann, and they were a sandalwood fan, a vase, and a box of sweets. The young people here have an unusually good time, for there is quite a large set and they are always entertaining. Miss Alice Hedemann will be greatly missed, for she is very popular with everybody.

Mrs. Edward Tenney entertained a few friends at bridge on Wednesday afternoon in honor of Miss Margaret Walker, who has but recently returned from abroad. Hanging baskets of maidenhair ferns made the spacious rooms like a conservatory and asters were in low bowls and jars. A prize was given each table for the highest score and Miss Walker was the successful one at her table, and the prize, a sandalwood fan in box, was much admired. The refreshments were unusually good and most daintily served. Mrs. Tenney looked charming in a beautiful toilette. Among the guests were Mrs. Arthur Wilder, Mrs. Andrew Fuller, Mrs. Fred Macfarlane, Mrs. Harry Macfarlane, Mrs. Faxou Biphop, Mrs. R. de B. Layard, Mrs. C. Holloway, Mrs. Lanz, Mrs. Klebahn, Mrs. R. Ivers, Mrs. Jack Dowsett, Mrs. A. J. Campbell, Mrs. Alice Hastings, Mrs. Foster, Mrs. Clifford Kimball, Mrs. Helen Noonan, Mrs. Mary Gunn and Mrs. George Herbert.

Mr. J. O. Cooke and Dr. and Mrs. Baldwin, who recently returned from New Zealand, thoroughly enjoyed their trip, and are in love with the climate and scenery. Mr. Cooke's health is very much improved.

I believe it has been decided that Miss Dagmar Sorenson and Mr. Walter Dillingham are to lead the cotillion at the University Club ball. There will be only three figures and it will probably be the brilliant event of the season.

Bricktop And The Twins See The City

(By Helen Davis)

Early on the morning following their arrival in New York City, Bricktop and the Twins were up and stirring long before their aunt called them to breakfast. Although Bricktop had sent a telegram home asking his father to send the trunk he had so thoughtlessly left behind, he desired to write a letter to his parents of their safe arrival at their uncle's home, and the more than cordial welcome they received there. Seeing their brother thus engaged, the Twins decided to write to their parents also. Lettie suggested that they divide the news between them, she telling half and Bettle half, thus avoiding repetition of each other's letters.

"I'll tell of the journey, and you tell of our arrival and about Uncle's family," said she. And Bettle agreed. So they set themselves to work, and had their letters completed before breakfast was announced. Bettle's letter ran as follows:

"My Dearest Papa and Mama, Puggie and Tabby: (Puggie was the dog and Tabby the cat belonging to the Perkins family)—We had such a lovely time on the train coming. Bricktop looked after us just splendidly, and we sister and I got his nicest out of the bag and laid out a clean shirt for him to put on in the morning. We all put our shoes very handy, so that the porter could find them to give them a shine. In the morning Bricktop gave the kind old porter a dime. Sister and I thought he should have had a nickel apiece for the shoes, so Brick went after him and gave him the extra money. He said he didn't want to appear stingy. Oh, what a good dinner we had! I ate so much that I dreamed horribly all night. I said the next morning I'd never do like that again. Sister had the same difficulty. It was very naughty of us to eat so much ice-cream and pudding just before going to bed.

"In the morning the nicest old lady shared the dressing-room with us and called us 'little pets.' She tied the ribbons on our hair, and kissed us as we left the train. Sister and I both fell in love with her, she was so much like our own dear Granny. Bricktop talked with several gentlemen on the train. One gave him a late magazine, telling him that maybe the 'little tots' (meaning sister and me) would enjoy the pictures. And we certainly did. Bricktop thanked him very nicely for his kindness.

"Now, as it is most breakfast time I shall stop. We are going out to see the sights today. Uncle, Aunt and Cousin Bert are so nice.

"With heaps of love to Papa, Mama, Grandpapa and Grandmama, and kisses all around BETTIE. Lettie's letter ran as follows: "My own dear papa and mama: oh, yes, and don't forget Puggie and Tabby. We are safe and sound in the nice city home of uncle and aunt. When we got off the train at the station, somehow sister and I got lost from Bricktop, and as the crowds pressed us so we went right along to the ferry, knowing that Bricktop could look out for himself. But we were very anxious indeed, for we knew how he would worry about us. We hoped he might go on the ferry, but he did not. Sister and I looked all about the boat for him, but nowhere was he to be seen. Then we asked a policeman how to reach uncle's home, and he put us in a cab and told the driver to take us there. Auntie was so tickled to see us. It seemed all right about Bricktop. Cousin met him and they phoned to each other, and she was most happy to tell them that we had just ridden up in aansom in very great style."

"Aunt and uncle and Cousin Bert gave us such a warm welcome. Uncle and aunt go away tomorrow, to be gone two weeks. Aunt Minnie remains to look after the house. What a splendid time we'll have when the house is all ours. But we'd not be rude or noisy, dear mama, so don't worry about our conduct after aunt is gone.

"Today aunt and uncle are to take us out to see the city. So good-by this time. I smell the breakfast and must draw this to a close.

"Tell grandpapa and grandmama I send lots of love and kisses to them. I also send an abundance to my papa and mama. A handshaking to Puggie and Tabby. Your little girl, "LETTIE."

After breakfast they started out on a very merry party indeed. Mr. Thomas hustled them onto a street car which would take them to Central Park. As they rode along Bricktop and the Twins were very much entertained by watching the crowds on the streets and looking at the gay shop windows.

All too quickly, so thought the visitors, the ride came to an end, and they were soon going through the gates into Central Park. Once before they had been there with their parents, but their visit that time had been marred by Lettie getting the stomach ache, which caused them to go home before they had seen much of the park and the many wonders it contained.

"We'll go and take a peep at the animals first," suggested Uncle Will, leading them directly to the great Zoological Garden, near the place where they entered. Even before they got there they could hear the roar of the lions and the chattering of the monkeys.

Oh, the wonders the children saw! Elephants, rhinoceroses, hippopotami, lions, tigers, leopards, zebras, camels, giraffes, elk, reindeer, wolves, foxes, bears, monkeys and fowls of every conceivable shape and size. In fact, they wondered how so many kinds of animals and birds could live so harmoniously in that little town called the Zoo.

At noon they went into a restaurant on the grounds for luncheon. They sat and chatted and laughed and listened to merry jokes and funny stories from their uncle, who was as young as the youngest of them, during the meal. Then, quite rested after an hour spent in social intercourse and refreshed by a good meal, they set out to explore the park on foot. By paths leading under archways, past lakes, over bridges, across hillsides, through ravines into valleys did they ramble; tall trees, bare of branch in the crisp winter air, rearing their stately forms about them. Here and there low soft, white patches of snow, not melted from the light fall of the night previous.

And at last, wearied with so much walking—though they had enjoyed every step—Aunt suggested that they return home and save themselves for another day. As they went along they came to a pretty rustic bridge spanning a driveway which ran almost parallel with the path they were following. A sudden desire to play a trick on the party seized Bettle, and, dropping behind unnoticed, she stepped in the shadow of a great tree that grew near the pathway. On went her companions, not missing her. As soon as they had turned a corner and were lost to view Bettle ran down the mossy bank leading to the bridged roadway, intending to join them at the next turn in the path, for she had no idea but what the road continued in company with the path her companions were following.

After a few minutes Lettie missed her sister and gave the alarm. "Oh, where's Bettle?" she cried, stopping and looking behind. Then everyone became anxious. Uncle appointing the boys to go back to look for her, while he would go on toward the gate for the purpose of meeting a policeman, to whom he would report the lost child. Aunt Agnes and Lettie were to remain where they were with the hope of seeing Bettle coming on one of the many paths that led into the main one at this spot. And so the search began.

And while the anxious ones were hunting for Bettle she began to hunt for them, for pretty soon she found herself in a strange part of the park, lonely and wild, with huge boulders shutting her in on one side and a wall on the other. Then she became alarmed, and knew that the road she had taken had led her far from the place where she had anticipated joining her party.

On she walked, not knowing where to go and fearing that every step was carrying her further from the loved and anxious ones whom she knew were now on the lookout for her. Then Bettle thought of something. That "something" wore blue clothes and brass buttons. She would find a policeman, and then all would be well. So she started on a run down the road, expecting to see an officer at every turn. But none came into sight. At last, tears streaming down her cheeks, she paused beside the road, leaning against a tree in her despair. The day was growing late, and Bettle began to wonder where she should spend the night. Suppose after dark some of those great animals should be turned loose to wander about all morning. The thought drove her to her heart. She would be DEVOUR-ED! Oh, how she was being punished for having acted so naughtily. But she really had not meant to wander away from her dear ones. She was just planning a little trick—a joke; for how they all would have laughed had she stepped out from the roadway in front of them and waiting in their path, crying out: "I just flew over you and lighted here."

But now she was being punished for having acted so foolishly. Oh, oh, what would become of— "Ah, there you are Kiddle!" It was Bricktop's dear voice behind her, and Bettle turned and ran into his arms, drying her tears against his topcoat sleeve. And Cousin Bert was laughing, asking her how she happened to get "strayed or stolen."

But Bettle said she couldn't tell them now, but would do so as soon as they joined the others, which they proceeded to do, the now happy little Miss holding tightly to Bricktop's arm lest she be foolish enough to stray away again. And Bricktop reassured her, saying: "You can't lose yourself so that I can't find you, Kiddle. My heart leads me always to you."

And no wonder Bricktop was a hero in the sight of the Twins. It is rumored that the Art League is holding secret meetings. For what purpose could not be learned but if such meetings are being held it is surely for the arranging of some delightful surprise at the coming carnival.

PRECIOUS STONES IN LAVA FLOW

Upon examination of specimens of lava from the recent flows on (Hawaii), particles of olivine have been found. Olivine is classed among precious stones, and when brought up from a great depth is of considerable value. The particles discovered in the local specimens are not large enough to be of commercial value.

Dr. W. T. Brigham in a contribution to the Boston Society of Natural History entitled, "Notes on the Volcanoes of the Hawaiian Islands," (Boston, 1868), says:

"The Hawaiian lavas contain much olivine, a very refractory mineral, and where the stream has issued from a considerable depth, as in the eruption from Kilauea in 1840, it is in large granules and very abundant. Its specific gravity, it will be remembered, is 3.23-3.5. In the ejections from the summit it is in minute particles, as if broken and carried up by the currents in the melted mass."

OAHU COLLEGE COMMEMORATES

The eighty-fifth birthday of Charles R. Bishop was commemorated in a quiet way at Oahu College yesterday. The picture of the "Noblest Work of God," covered with flowers and leis was hung in Punahou hall. Attached to the picture was this legend: "Charles R. Bishop, Punahou's most generous benefactor, born January 25, 1822—his eighty-fifth birthday."

A resume of the generous donations both in time and money, made by Mr. Bishop to institutes of learning throughout the Islands, and of Punahou in particular, was given by President Griffiths.

HUSTED'S DIRECTORY

Husted's Directory for Honolulu and the Territory of Hawaii has been issued for 1907 and as a fund of general information it overtops anything in the same line that has yet been put before the public. It has two or three hundred more pages and contains an amount of general information that will be of great value to anyone who wishes to learn of the Islands.

The edition is well patronized by advertising business houses and the illustration of the ads gives a very good idea of what the men who do the business of the Territory look like. There are more names and they are more accurately compiled. Under the new management of the Husted Directory, it is intended to send the Honolulu book to important business centers all over the world.

EXAMINE THE DAM

James T. Taylor the hydraulic engineer, arrived in the Kinau today from Maui where he is in charge of the construction of the new Wahee canal for the Waiuku Sugar Co. Mr. Taylor will make an examination of the Nuuanu dam while here.

Capt. Lyman, who has had charge of Salvation Army work on Maui for the past two years, returned from Hilo in the Kinau. Capt. Lyman is on his way to the Coast for future work. In the meantime he will assist in the good work going on in this city.

"Every spring, for years, I used to have intolerable headaches and total loss of energy, so that the season which should be welcomed by me was a dread; for, as the warm, pleasant days arrived, they brought to me lassitude and pain. A friend advised me to take

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

I commenced using it and have not had since then the first symptom of headache. My appetite is splendid, and I perform my duties with a cheerfulness and energy that surprise myself. I take pleasure in telling all my friends of the merit of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and the happy results of its use."

There are many imitations Sarsaparillas. Be sure you get "AYER'S."

What Prominent People Say

The Harrison Mutual Burial Ass'n

Messrs. Harrison Mutual Burial Association: Gentlemen:—I cheerfully give my indorsement to the Harrison Mutual Burial plan and believe it a great benefit to the community.

Very truly yours, H. H. PARKER.

Harrison Mutual Burial Association: Gentlemen:—Every man ought to carry some kind of insurance. It seems to me that this should come first, and I have yet to find a plan which seems more practical or more reasonable than yours. Am glad I have been a member from the start.

Very truly yours, HENRY C. BROWN.

Mr. W. W. Hall: I became a member of the association of which you are the president, a little after its start, and am satisfied with what it has fulfilled. The deceased members have received burial respectfully, and had it not been for your association their living ones would undoubtedly feel the funeral expense considerably. I recommend every man and woman and child to join in.

Respectfully yours, WM. W. HALL.

I value highly my own membership in the Harrison Mutual Burial Association and recommend every man, woman and child in Honolulu to join. P. C. JONES.

It's Great To Be Famous, Says Dooley But Buy Up Bi-ographers

BY F. P. DUNNE.

(Copyright, 1906, by H. H. McClure & Co.)

"WELL, Sir," said Mr. Dooley, "Hogan has been in here this afternoon, an' I've heard more scandal talk than I ever thought was in the world."

"Hogan had better keep quiet," said Mr. Hennessy. "If he goes circlatin' any stories about me I'll—"

"Ye needn't worry," said Mr. Dooley. "We didn't condense to talk about annywan iv ye're infeyor station. If ye want to be th' subjick iv our scand'fous discorse ye'd better get out an' make a repytation. No, sir, our talk was entirely about th' g-re-at an' illustrious, an' it ran all th' way fr'm Julius Cayzar to Ulysses Grant."

"Dear, oh dear, but they were th' had lot. Thank th' lord nobody knows about me. Thank th' lord I had th' good sense to retire fr'm pollyticks whin me repytation had spread as far as Halsted Street. If I'd let it go a block farther I'd've been sorry fr' it th' rest iv me life an' souge years after me death."

"I wanted to be famous in thim days, whin I was young an' foolish. 'Twas th' d'ream iv me life to have people say as I want by: 'There goes Dooley, th' g-re-atest statesman iv his age, an' have thim name babies, stajgets, schools, canal boats, an' five-cent seogars after me, an' whin I died to have it put in th' books that 'at this critical peeryod in th' history of America there was need iv a man who combined strength iv character with love iv country. Such a man was found in Martin Dooley, a prominent retail liquor dealer in Ar'chey road.' That's what I wanted, an' I'm glad I didn't get me wish. If I had, his little attention to me character that th' books iv what Hogan calls bi-ography wud pay, but a good deal to me debts. Though they mentioned th' fact that I resked death fr' me adopted fatherland, they'd make th' more inthrestin' story about th' time I almost met it be fallin' down stairs while runnin' away fr'm a policeman. Fr' wan page they'd print about me love iv country, they'd print fifty about me love iv boose."

"Th' things thim g-re-at men done wud givethim a place in Byrnes's book. If Julius Cayzar was alive today he'd be doin' a lock-step down in Joliet. He was a corner loafer in his youth an' a rober in his old age. He busted into churches, fooled around with other men's wives, curled his hair with a poker, an' smelled iv perfumery like a Saturday night car. An' his wife was a suspicious character an' he turned her away. Napoleon Bonypart, impror iv th' Fr-rench, was far too gay aven fr' thim friv'lous people, an' had fits. His first wife was no better than she shud be, an' his second wife didn't car fr' him. Willum Shakespeare is well known as an author of plays that no wan can play, but he was better known as a two-handed dhrinker, a bad actor, an' a thief. His wife was a common seold an' led him th' life he deserved."

"They never leave th' ladies out iv these stories iv th' g-re-at. A woman that marries a janius has a fine chance iv her false hair becomin' more immortal than his g-re-atest deed. It don't make anny difference if all she knew about her marital hero was that he was a consistent feeder, a sleepy husband, an' an indulgent father to his childher an' sometimes to himself, an' that she had to darn his socks. Nearly all th' g-re-at men had something th' matter with their wives. I always thought Mrs. Wash'nton, who was th' wife iv th' father iv our country, though childless herself, was about right. She looks good in th' pitchers, with a shawl around her neck an' a frilled night-cap on her head. But Hogan says she had a tongue sharper than George's sword, she insulted all his frinds, she was much older than him, an' she liked food that they eudden't keep any longer in th' ice-box. As fr' George, he was a case. I wish th' country had got itself a diff'rent father. A g-re-at moral religious country like this deserves a better parent."

"They were all alike. I think iv Bobby Burns as a man that wrote good songs, even if they were in a bar-brons accint, but Hogan thinks iv him as havin' a load all th' time an' bein' th' scandal iv his parish. I raymimber Andrew Jackson as th' man that licked th' British at Noo Orleans be throwin' cotton bales at thim, but Hogan raymimbers him as a man that eudden't spell an' had a wife who smoked a cornesh pipe. I raymimber Abraham Lincoln fr' freein' th' slaves, but Hogan raymimbers how he used to cut loose yarns that made th' bartender shake th' stove harder than it needed. I raymimber Grant fr' what he done around Shiloh whin he was young, but Hogan raymimbers him fr' what he done around New York whin he was old."

"An' so it goes. Whin a lad with nawthin' else to do starts out to write a bi-ography about a g-re-at man, he don't go to th' war departmint or th' public library. No, Sir, he begins to search th' burean drawers, old pigeon holes, th' records iv th' polis court, an' th' recollections iv th' hired girl. He likes letters bethed thin annything else. He don't care much fr' th' kind beginnin': 'Dear wife, I'm settin' in front iv th' camp fire wearin' th' flannel chest protector ye made me, an' dhrreamin' iv ye, but if he can find wan beginnin', 'Little Bright Eyes: 'Th' old woman has gone to th' country,' he's th' happiest bi-ographer ye end see in a month's travel."

"Hogan had wan iv thim looks in here th' other day. 'Twas written by a frind, so ye can see it wasn't prejudiced wan way or another. 'At this time,' says the book, 'an ivint happened that was destined to change th' whole course iv our hero's life. Wan day, whin in a threeet car, where he lay dozin' fr'm dhrink, he awoke to see a beautiful woman thryin' to find a nickel in a powder puff. Th' brutal conductor towered over her, an' it was more than th' Gin'ral could bear. Risin' to his feet, with an oath, he pulled th' rope iv th' fare register an' fell off th' car."

"Th' incident made a deep impression on th' Gin'ral. I have no doubt he often thought iv his beautiful Madonna iv th' throlly, although he never said so. But wan night as he staggered out iv th' dinin' room at th' German Ambassadure's, where he had consumed his custom'ry four bottles iv brandy, who shud he run across but th' fair vision iv th' surface line. She curtsied low an' picked him up, an' there began a frindship so full iv sorrow an' happiness to both iv thim. He seldom mentioned her, but wan night he was heard to mutter: 'Her face is like wan iv Rembrand's saints.' A few historyans contind that what he said was: 'Her face looks like a remnant sale,' but I cannot believe this."

"They exchanged brilliant letters fr' many years, in fact until th' enchantress was locked up. I have not been able to find anny iv his letters, but her's fell into th' hands iv wan iv his faithful servants, who preserved an' published thim. (Love an' Letters iv Gin'ral Dircadnaught an' Alfaretta Agonized; Stolen, Collected an' Edited be James Snodgrass.) * * * Next year was min-able fr' his glorious viethary at Pankheim, all th' more wondherful because at th' time our hero was sufferin' fr'm delecteryum thremens. It shows th' fortitude iv th' Gin'ral an' that he was as g-re-at a liar as I have indicated in th' preedin' pages, that with th' cheers iv his sojers ringin' in his ears an' pink monkey dancin' before his eyes, he cud still write home to his wife: 'O! girl—I can't find annything fit to dhrink down here. Can't ye find me some vider fr'm th' farm.' * * * In 1865 he was accused iv embezzlement, but th' charges never reached his ears or th' public's until eight years after his death. * * * In '67 his foster brother, that he had neglected in Kansas City, slipped on his ballroom flure an' broke his leg. * * * In '70 his wife died after torturin' him fr' fifty years. They were a singularly badly mated couple, with a fam'ly iv fourteen childher, but he did not live long to enjoy his happiness. Fr' some reason he never left his house, but passed away within a month, one of th' g-re-atest men th' cinchry has projosed. For further details iv th' wrong things he done see th' notes at th' end iv th' volume."

"It seems to me, Hinnessy, that this here thing called bi-ography is a kind iv an offset fr' histry. Histry lies on wan side, an' bi-ography comes along an' makes it rowl over an' lie on th' other side. Histry says a man is nearly a Gawd; bi-ography says he's on'y a poor kind iv a man. Th' historyan says, go up; th' bi-ographer says, come down among us. I don't believe ayether iv thim."

"I was talkin' with Father Kelly about it after Hogan went out. 'Were they all so bad, thim min that I've been brought up to think so glorjous?' says I. 'They were men,' says Father Kelly. 'Ye mustn't believe all ye hear about thim, no matter who says it,' says he. 'It's a thrait iv human nature to pull down th' g-re-at an' sthrong. Th' hero shruts through histry with his chin up in th' air, his scrip in his hand an' his crown on his head. But behind him dances a boot-black imitatin' his walk an' makin' faces at him. Fame invites a man out iv his house to be crowned fr' his glorjous deeds, an' serves him with a warrant fr' batin' his wife. 'Tis not in th' nature iv things that it shudden't be so. We'd all perish iv humiliation if th' g-re-at men iv th' wuruld didn't have machal low-down thraits. If they don't happen to possess thim, we make some up fr' thim. We allow no man to tower over us. Wan way or another we level th' wuruld to our own height. If we can't reach th' hero's head we cut off his legs. It always makes me feel asier about me self whin I r-read how bad Julius Cayzar was. An' it stimulates compytition. If g-re-atest an' goodness were hand in hand 'tis small chance anny iv us wud have iv seein' our pitchers in th' papers."

"But," says I, "no wan wud iver thry to be glorjous if he knew that he was on'y openin' up th' way fr' a careful inquiry into his personal habits," says I. 'Ye'd catch me leadin' an' ar-r-ry again' a lot of lo-ads with cannon if I thought that it was goin' to make some fellow begin to call on me deustant to find where I bought me teeth,' says I."

"Ye'd never stop to think," says he. 'No wan iver does. Glory is a chance like th' other thing. It all comes or doesn't come out in th' day's job, an' ye can't stop or help it. An' no wan will talk bad about ye after ye ar're dead unless ye've done somethin' that makes people talk good iv ye. I'd have some trouble gettin' an' aujence fr' a story about Hogan, but lave me whisper: 'Did ye hear that yarn about Grover Cleveland,' an' I can go on an' lie to me heart's content."

"An' so it is that the battles ye win, th' pitchers ye paint, th' people ye free, th' childher that disgrace ye, th' false step iv ye're youth, and the false tooth iv ye're age all go thundherin' down to immortality together. An' after all isn't it a good thing? Th' on'y bi-ography I care about is th' one Mulligan th' stonecutter will chop out fr' me. I like Mulligan's style, fr' he's no flatther, an' he has wan model iv bi-ography that he uses fr' old an' young, rich an' poor. He merely writes something to th' gin'ral effect that th' deceased was a peach, an' lets it go at that. But if anny wan wants to write a bi-ography iv me an' contribute some fun to this weary wuruld, let him do it, says I. 'Nawthin' wud please me better than to know that some day ye will think ye ar're a better man than I am. But not fr' th' prisint,' says he."

"Which wud ye rather be, famous or rich?" asked Mr. Hennessy. "I'd like to be famous," said Mr. Dooley, "an' have money enough to buy off all threatenin' bi-ographers."

IS TOO BEAUTIFUL TO BE DESCRIBED

Rev. E. W. Thwing Tells Of Beauties Of The Kilauea Crater

"The sight of the Kan flow was magnificent but it cannot for a moment compare with that at Kilauea at present. It is something so magnificent that it is impossible to exaggerate it."

The Rev. E. W. Thwing, who came in this morning on the Kinau, is responsible for the declaration above. He and all the other passengers of the Kinau who visited Kilauea in the past week say that the sight there is so beautiful that it passes the bounds of all description and must be seen in order to be appreciated at all.

In telling of his trip to Hawaii the Rev. Thwing said:

"I went to the Kau flow and thought that the sight there was the finest that I had ever seen. We went up as far as the Government road and the moving mountain of lava was a far greater spectacle than I had imagined. Then, when we came back I went up to Kilauea. On and up to Saturday there was only the ordinary disturbance which has been going on for the past two months but on Sunday afternoon it broke out into what was the most magnificent sight that I ever expect to see. It would about up in fountains of fire and form a blanket of fire on one side of the pit and then sweep over to the other side in folds of flame which could be seen just as plain in the day time as at night. The sun test across the bottom became one mass of eddying and blazing lava and it cannot be described in any way except as a sight of superlative grandeur."

"Everyone there says that the sight is by far the finest since the disturbance of 1894 and we estimated that there were at least 15 acres of blazing lava in the pit and that it is rising at the rate of twenty feet a day."

"It seems to be getting more active and I only wish that I could have stayed longer than I did. I spent one entire night at the crater and would not have missed it for anything and besides this I was there for several days and you could hardly have dragged me away from the glorious sight."

The Kinau arriving this morning from Hilo and Hawaii ports, brought the following freight: 23 cases cabbage, 9 cases pines, 29 empty kegs, 26 sacks of potatoes, 43 hogs, 3 dogs, 12 empty wine casks, 6 barrels tallow, 6 crates chickens, 24 barrels empty bottles, 41 bags empty bottles, 16 bags corn, 3 barrels dried fish, 124 packages sundries.

Behind The Scenes In Newspaper Work As Shown By Sketches From a Reporter's Note Book

By Grace Horne Tower.

ALl the world's a stage, and the men and women merely players," said Shakespeare. The majority of people have been wont to look upon themselves as the audience, and the men and women who make the newspapers actors in a great stock company, flitting around upon the stage producing "a new play every night" for the instruction and amusement of all who pay the price of admission.

It is frequently a question, too, as to which part of the house is the most appreciative, and all are given to criticism. The gallery thinks we play too much for the dress circle; and the dress circle would prefer a more exclusive drama, objecting when too much attention is drawn to portraying life on the stage as some of them are wont to live it. The body of the house sometimes thinks it is not quite modest to depict some of the scenes which we put on—that there is too much melodrama, too much realism, too much that is sensational, too much adherence to details; while the bald-headed row down in front finds fault in ways in which the rest of the house never dreamed!

To the gallery I would say: "We are trying to educate you to a higher standard;" to the dress circle I would say: "If you do not like the reflection in the mirror, change the original pose. The mirror is not responsible for what it reflects;" to the main body of the house I answer: "we paint life as we see it, not as we wish it were, or as it should be." With our eyes turned toward you we strive to give back in living pictures what we see going on around us, like that queer contrivance upon which one looks to see the moving forms of people blocks away. If you do not like the piece, stop doing the things you object to seeing in print." And to the bald-headed row what shall I say? I think I shall say this: "Be careful, you of the shiny-rimmed row, lest your eternal vigilance be the price of your common sense. The goblins of second childhood will get you if you don't watch out!"

We are wont to think of the bald-headed row as strictly masculine gender, but I assure you that in the theater of the world, sex is quite evenly divided.

Now I am going to reverse the situation, and let the tired and misunderstood actors come down and be audience while the public takes the stage. I am going to turn the lime lights on you for a little while and we of the profession are going to look at you through the other end of the opera glasses than that which is usually turned toward us. I know just how Robbie Burns, the plowman poet, felt when he wrote the lines:

"O wad sa power the kiffle gie us
To see oursel as thersae see us;
It would frae monie a blunder free us
And foolish notion:

What airs in dress and gait would
Lea'e us,
An' e'en devotion!"

In the eyes of every successful writer are X-rays that search below the artificial coverings of human beings the follies, the little deceptions, both innocent and otherwise, and see people as nearly as it is possible for one human being to see another.

We newspaper people see the house before it is decorated for the wedding; the lights before the shades are adjusted, and we know that it is only a few cents' worth of crepe paper or silk that makes that rosy glow fall so softly. We see the brides in the hands of their hair dressers and manicures, and I assure you they are no prettier than other girls with their hair in the curling tongs. We see madame in the morning, already nervous and tired hurrying to finish the croquettes or the salads that she cannot trust to Bridget; arranging flowers for the afternoon's luncheon. The world sees her a few hours later serene and smiling, and irreproachably gowned, and if she is a clever hostess the world gets no hint of the work it has taken to achieve that charming effect of the dewy roses and delicate ferns growing so naturally from their bed of cool green moss, or the worry occasioned because the florist did not send them till nearly time to dress for the affair or the weary half hours she has spent beating, beating, beating the mayonnaise for the perfect salad, that her guests praise so highly.

The passenger on some great ocean liner walks its spottless decks or lounges in its elegant saloons, knowing nothing of the throbbing, pulsing heat, the straining of muscle and sinew, the toiling that is going on below where the stokers and the engineers keep up the fires and manage the machinery that runs so smoothly.

We of the green room are behind the scenes. You hear the thunder and it stirs you; we know it is but the rolling of cannon balls down a hard surface. You see the beautiful golden halo, the rosy glow, that surrounds some hero, and your artistic souls are stirred; we learn to know when that glow is natural and when it is but calcium effect.

I shall never forget the first time I saw "Macbeth," and watched with fasinated eyes the weirdome witches dancing about the bubbling, seething caldron wherein was steeped the strange concoction, and I can feel now the sudden revulsion of feeling that surged over my childish heart when through an accident the caldron tipped over and disclosed itself to be of flat painted scenery with burning calcium behind it! It was a disillusionment, but fortunately a keen sense of humor or came to my relief then, and fortunately for me that same sense of humor has lingered close by me since and come to my rescue when other more real disillusionments of life have come, and I have seen men and women with all their scenic effects topple over as did that unfortunate caldron. The newspaper office is a good place to learn that "all is not gold that glitters."

We of the craft see the people who are trying to keep up appearances and live beyond their means, straining every nerve to keep neck and neck at least with their neighbors over the way. We see the dignified lawyer lose his temper over some trivial thing; we see the broken-hearted woman an hour after they have brought home her husband, dead. We see the motherless little ones with a drunken father just sent up for thirty days. We see the young fellow so thin and pale, already within the grip of the Great White Death, step from the overland at the station, with a pathetic hope in his unnaturally bright eyes and the deceptive flush upon the cheek that tells to those who know its own fatal story. We see him grow more ill day by day. At first he passed our office every day and we met him in the parks sitting in the sunshine. He grows thinner and the shoulders droop over the poor shrunken chest as though to protect it from the wind. We see him only occasionally now, and by and by we do not see him at all and we know that he will not come again.

We look into the bold eyes of crime and ask it why it did the cruel deed. We are sent to the house of a mother whose only daughter has fled to hide the shame of a broken and ruined life from the eyes of even the one who bore her, and we are brought face to face with an agony that death can never bring. We see the sweet, trusting young wife of a few months whose husband has deserted her for another woman.

And then we see and know other things—things that if they were written would make no-called yellow journalism look pale cream color in comparison. "More stories than the public ever dreams of are denied it for the sake of some one else who would feel the cruel hurt and sting, while the world read and eagerly asked for more. Newspaper workers come across more unburied dead of this kind than one ever knows of and many a story that is good stuff from a newspaper man's viewpoint is given quiet burial in the view of the one who discovered it.

You criticize us harshly sometimes, you blame us for what we tell. But, oh! my friends if you only knew what we didn't tell—even the worst of us sometimes—you would have a warmer, softer spot in your heart than you have for those who earn their bread and butter and cod fish and cream by writing for the journals! Indeed, it might more often be pound cake and porterhouse steak if we wrote of all the things we hear!

In newspaper work as nowhere else you see humanity off its guard—with its masquerade torn off, and sometimes your hearts still in awe at what you see. One day's work on a newspaper may be a thing of tragedy and comedy so closely interwoven that you cannot tell warp from woof thread. The light and the shade are distributed in such dramatic contrast that your emotions are kept in a constant turmoil from morning till night, and at the end of the day your nerves are reduced to the condition of a shredded cocoon.

You see a woman at the climactic pinnacle of her happiness, arrayed for her bridal, her eyes luminous with the joy of giving herself forever into the keeping of the one she loves most on earth. All is mirth, and joy and brightness; the fragrance of flowers and the throbbing of music fill the air and your heart sings in harmony. An hour later you may stand by a black-robed figure in whose eyes all the agony of renunciation and separation lies; and with aching heart you look at the tiny thing lying so white, and still, and little, in its tiny casket. There, too, is the fragrance of flowers, white ones, again, and there is music, too, but it is in a minor key. With your own eyes flitted with tears and your heart wrung with pity for the grief you cannot help, you go out into God's sunshine again and take your place in the court room to listen to the testimony of defendant and plaintiff in a sensational divorce suit. You pick up three or four small things—a church social, a card party or two, and a runaway on your way back to the office, and it is time for your own luncheon. As you sit at your machine in the afternoon in the midst of a column obituary notices because of which an hundred extras have been ordered, you are called to the telephone to take the notes of a domineering of the night before. As you rise from your desk to return to the obituary, a young fellow comes in, bashful and awkward, and with a confidential air informs you that a nine-pound son has just arrived to add to the music of the spheres in his home. You correct three galleys of proof, answer the phone four times, answer a few questions, and then hurry back to your obituary notice. You have got the dead man as far as his second marriage and you must carry him the rest of the way through life when the city editor pokes his head into the door with a "Keep that down; cut it off as soon as you can; kill all the guff, going to be short of space today, and it's almost press time; give me what you've got up." A half hour later the paper is out. You open it to see if the proof corrections were properly made in your best story; the scoop that you worked so hard to get. Not there! "That! Oh, yes, that was crowded out at the last minute. Go over it and fix it up for tomorrow. What? Yes, I know the morning paper will have it, but it can't be helped. Too much stuff today," and the city editor nonchalantly lights a cigar and puts his feet on the desk. And you have a pleasant conversation over the phone in the morning with the woman whose reception to the eastern lion was crowded out, and you are assured in acid tones that this is the last time she will ever save an item exclusively for your paper.

And another day has begun. The daily newspaper is a school for character study. There is no better and sight reading is more important here than in the realm of music. The men who cannot learn to read human nature, and read it quickly and accurately has no place on a daily paper. For the ability to translate what men and women say and do, into terms of what they mean and are is the reporter's star in the north—his compass that will adjust all things to their proper values. But there is another thing that goes hand in hand with character reading and that is something that in woman is called tact, in man, diplomacy.

The Bible admonishes us not to let our left hand know what our right hand doeth; in journalism you must not let your left eye know what your right seeth. It is sometimes unwise to appear as wise as you are. That is why Mrs. Newly Rich in her trailing gowns and befeathered hats and diamonds which she will persist in wearing in the morning to make up for the years she didn't have them, never discovered that you penetrated the thin veil of hypocrisy with which she has striven to conceal her eagerness to push into society. I wanted to use a stronger word, but it is slang, so I will leave it to your own imagination.

"Oh, my dear!" she says with such a patronizing air, "Oh, I shrink so from having my affairs written up for the papers. It seems so—er—vulgar, don't you know. You know, dear, I would much prefer not having this dinner party in at all, but I suppose I must. You reporters won't leave me alone. But if you do say anything about it I wish you would say that I had my frock sent on from New York for the occasion, and that the finger bows were of Tiffany glass. I had the flowers sent down from San Francisco, you know; really one cannot get anything at all down here. Oh, how one misses New York!" Yes? Does one? Or is one posing just a wee bit?

And then there is the type that frowns at you before people but squeezes your hand under the sofa pillows all the time. She telephones to you when you are at your busiest and asks you to come to her home. You are delighted to get the item but you can scarcely spare the time to go to her house, especially as you know that you can get the item just as well over the phone as by going if she will do her part in answering the question you ask. But as she refuses curtly to give it over the phone you mount your wheel, leave Mr. Brown's daughter's funeral notice half written, and betake yourself to a palatial residence on the outskirts of the Best Side. You are given a flowery account of last night's function, playfully scolded for not having reported Madame's last dinner "which never got into the papers at all, although it really was quite the most unique affair of the season," and then you hurry back to the office and set your machine to clicking.

The next afternoon when you are at a reception where you are a guest and not a reporter (your story was written and in type hours before you dressed for the tea) you overhear madame of yesterday say, "There is that reporter again! getting notes I suppose. Oh those reporters. They are getting to be a perfect nuisance. Why, one cannot even turn around without getting her name in the paper! Did you see last night's paper? There was that very simple dinner that I gave for the Mallory-Allens written up till I scarcely recognized it. I was never more surprised in my life. I can't imagine where she got the items. I always make a practice of refusing admittance to all reporters. Newspaper notoriety is always so foreign to my nature."

You feel something wet and salt splash on your hand. You look up with a start. What was it? Oh, only the tear dropped by the Recording Angel as he wrote something in a book. A few moments later when you find yourself in the dressing room alone you hear the rustling of many garments and Madame approaches you effusively, and says with "nods and becks and wretched smiles":

"Oh, my dear, that was a beautiful account you gave of my party in last night's 'Hummer'. Really, you are so clever about things. You must come up and dine with me some evening. I have so much sympathy for young women reporters. And you know I respect you none the less because you have to work. There, I must go; it would never do for me to be seen talking to a reporter, would it?" and Madame sails away.

You hear, no matter how, that Mrs. Rose Madre gave a little dinner last evening for Miss Blue Stocking. Now you might put it that "Mrs. Rose Madre of Lemon Orchard Avenue entertained at dinner last evening in honor of Miss Blue Stocking of Boston, who is her guest." But no, you want to make more of a story out of it, so in the sweet innocence of your heart you lie yourself back to your office and reach frantically for the telephone.

"Give me West 988, please." "Hello, is this Mrs. Rose Madre?" "Hello, yes, who is this, please?" comes back to you. You introduce yourself sweetly, "Oh, I heard that you entertained at dinner last night for Miss Blue Stocking, Mrs. Madre, and would you be so kind as to tell me something about it for the paper?" Could you give me the names of the guests and tell me about the decorations?"

Then she tells you that, "I'm in mourning, positively not going out at all, you know, and it was very informal, not worth mentioning, and I really would prefer not to have it in." Or perhaps she is the cross kind, of which, thank Heaven, there are not so many, who is afraid some left out friends will be angry and she "simply won't have it mentioned under any circumstances." Now you happen to know that among the guests at the dinner was the bosom friend of another reporter, and you know that this reporter will get the report from this guest and that the rival paper will have it in spite of what the post-er says. You suggest this to her and say that as long as one paper is sure to have it what can be the harm to let you have it, too? But she is firm, perhaps she thinks this is but a hoax to get the item and curtly says "that if you make even the briefest mention of the item she will stop her paper. Although you know you will be scooped you realize that the matter is after all too insignificant to make all that commotion over, so you ring off with your whole being permeated with disgust that you did not use what you knew about the dinner without asking the hostess for particulars that lost you the whole. Still you can't help a few wicked little thrills when you think of the account of the party in the other paper, although politeness and tact will forever forbid your saying, "I told you so," to the woman who was so unreasonable.

Then there is the woman that every reporter has encountered, and we are all waiting for the time when she will become an extinct species. In the midst of a busy Saturday morning when you are hurrying to get the week's work well rounded out, going without your luncheon perhaps in order to tell the dear public about Mrs. Nobody's garden party or Mr. Jones' second wife's funeral, you are called to the phone for an important item.

Holding the receiver to your ear you say, "Hello, yes this is Miss Scribbler." "Well, I have an item that I would like to have in tonight's paper sure. I am Mrs. Particular of 14 Madison Terrace. If you will come up right away I will be glad to give you the item." You murmur how glad you are to have the item and will take it down. Oh, but it is something that cannot be given over the phone. You say how busy you are, and that to go to her home will make you sacrifice several other items. "Well, of course if you don't want the item I will give it to the other paper. Goodbye." You know the other woman is unreasonable but you cannot afford to antagonize even one subscriber to the paper. It is a part of your business in life to keep everybody sweet and amiable and so you drop your work reluctantly and listen to the woman's house expecting to get at least enough for a half column story. You take out a handful of copy paper, poised your pencil in midair and are ready to ask questions, when Madame says sweetly that "Mrs. Josiah Hemmingway of Topeka, Kansas, are visiting me and are so pleased with the city that they may permanently locate here."

And it is your cue to smile and say thank you with the same grace that you would take your leave of the noted playwright who had given you an hour's interview!

But of all the types with which the society correspondent has to deal the woman who is entertaining in Lent but is scandalized when it is known is the worst.

"Oh, I would not have it in for anything!" she exclaims in horror. "Why, it's Lent, you know. Oh, mercy!" If it is right to have a party in Lent where is the sin in telling of it you murmur to your inner consciousness and so, no answer cometh. For you are only a humble society scribbler and cannot be expected to know the answers to all the ethical conundrums. And you finally come to the conclusion that the sin is not in breaking the law, but in being found out.

For the woman to whom Lent has the beautiful and sacred meaning that it has for many, you have the deepest respect, but for her who observes it outwardly because it is the mode to do so, including in all of the forbidden gaudies sub rosa, and spending her days designing new frocks in which to burst upon the post Easter world you have a withering contempt that takes delight in writing up every affair this woman gives if it be but a dinner for four.

There is the woman who wants her item in and doesn't want you to know she wants it in; the one that doesn't want it in, but is willing to have it in because you want it in (bless her heart); the one who wants it in and doesn't care who knows she wants it in; the woman who doesn't want it in and won't let you put it in, so there! (and at least she is sincere). And then there are those who will give you a report of their party but won't let the names of their guests be published; there are others who will give you no details but will allow you to use the names; the one is hurt because the report of her gown at the last cotillion was left out while that of her poorer neighbor was in; there is the woman whose gown was reported who doesn't approve of clothes being mentioned in the public prints. Still if you had said "The less said about Mrs. Fussy's gown the better," she would not have liked it either. So with all these things to remember, you must not censure us too harshly if we sometimes do get our "orders" mixed. We do try a great deal harder to do as we would be done by and to please people than many of the grumblers give us credit for. For instance: Some people laugh at us for giving so much space to weddings and in descriptions of the bride's gown and the decorations and the incidental entertaining. Did you ever think for one moment that we wrote all that stuff for the pleasure of writing it; that we lie awake nights trying to think of new and original pretty things to say because we like it? I for one, and I think I can speak for all conscientious women who really love their work and their sister women, always try to describe each wedding for the girl's sake just as though it were the only wedding there is. I try to forget that I have three other weddings to write and that I have written hundreds of other weddings in the past. To each girl there is really only one wedding, and that is her own; it is the only white wedding she can ever have and it is due her to say all the nice things one can. It is very hard for a girl or her mother to sit down and write letters to fifty or a hundred relatives and friends giving the details of Clara's wedding, and enclosing samples of the frocks. But if there is a full account in the paper no letters need be written. If a girl is popular enough to have a dozen parties given for her before her marriage if she is a natural girl she cannot help taking a pardonable pride in it.

So when the orders for "a hundred extras, please," stop coming into the counting room, the editorial room may begin to think of curtailing wedding stories—not before. Newspapers never waste money paying people to write stuff for which there is no demand. So if you do not like a certain department in your paper, you do not have to read it, but remember there are other people in the world beside yourself who may value the paper just for that department.

There is one other type of women which stands out clear and luminous in the reporter's vision as a thing of beauty and a joy forever—the woman of good social position and perfect poise, who will not lose any sleep either way. If you want an account of her reception she will gladly give it to you receiving you cordially, answering your questions graciously and smiling as she does it. And if on the other hand you do not report her party she does not care, she nurses no grievance that it was not in, she feels no slight. Her own social position is too well assured to be strengthened by notoriety or weakened by lack of it. She is a lady by heredity and environment. What higher praise can I give her than that? And when such a hostess wishes something kept out of the paper for some good reason there isn't a reporter living who would not rather be scooped five times over than fail to consider this woman's wishes.

And there are other types we meet and they make life a joy and we number them among our jewels. People, many of us understand the terms that has happened or is going to happen or is likely to happen, telephone to us or come to the office and tell us, friends upon whom we feel that we can always rely. Some of them take the trouble to write the items for us. Supposing the diction is poor, and the words misspelled, and the writing impossible as it so often is; the kind thought is there, and we appreciate it, and the grammar can be changed. There come busy days when you cannot have time to look up more than two-thirds of the events you want to report and what joy fills your soul to find three or four of the events written for you and lying on your desk!

Some people seem to think that a reporter is such a busy, hard-hearted sort of person that he does not need sympathy or appreciation, but let me tell you that there is nowhere in the world that a little of either will go farther than right here. Criticism is looking at both bad and good points. How can we understand the terms that have happened or is going to happen or is likely to happen, telephone to us or come to the office and tell us, friends upon whom we feel that we can always rely. Some of them take the trouble to write the items for us. Supposing the diction is poor, and the words misspelled, and the writing impossible as it so often is; the kind thought is there, and we appreciate it, and the grammar can be changed. There come busy days when you cannot have time to look up more than two-thirds of the events you want to report and what joy fills your soul to find three or four of the events written for you and lying on your desk!

In my newspaper experience I have met all these types, and if I cared I could mention names to fit each, but I am truly glad to say that the reading public is as a whole very appreciative, very fair, and very helpful and the pleasant types I have mentioned are greatly in the majority. It is in this that makes reporting and more especially society reporting endurable, and even delightful at times. And to you of the latter types let me say, Long may you live, and in the words of Tiny Tim, "God bless you, every one."

SHIRTS THAT STAND IN A CLASS BY THEMSELVES

THE SHIRTS we make to order
have a touch, a tone, or an air about them that at once suggests dressiness.

Shirt wearers are beginning to recognize "that little difference" between a shirt that fits perfectly and one that does not. And it's just that difference that adds greatly to your comfort as well as appearance.

We Make Shirts To Order

We make them to fit perfectly; besides they're made stronger and will wear longer than the usual ready-to-wear kind. A large quantity of fresh new samples now on display. It will take only a minute to look them over and leave your order.

WATER FRONT NOTES

Admiral Beckley of the Kinau reports the following sugar on hand in Hawaii: Okaia, 6000; Walaken, 1000; Hawaii Mill, 500; Wainaku, 3500; Onomea, 500; Pepeekeo, 2500; Honomu, 3900; Hakalan, 3000; Laupahoehoe, 5500; Ookala, 2000; Kukulan, 1500; Hanakua, 4000; Paauhau, 5000; Honokaa, 1600; Kukuhale, 250.

President Kennedy of the Inter-Island Steamship Company, announced yesterday afternoon that there would be no excursion to the volcano flow on the Kinau today. The news has come from all points that the flow has stopped and it was not thought that the company would be warranted in taking another excursion to Hawaii.

While the news of the arrival of the Arizona at Salina Cruz has not been received by cable, there is little doubt of the fact. It was hardly to be expected that she would be reported here but the Coast files will probably tell of her arrival on about Jan. 21.

The S. S. Elaine and the S. S. Bucanar are expected here from Newcastle with coal within the next two weeks.

The tug Intrepid and Kaena are on the marine railway having their bottoms cleaned.

WRECK OF CARROLLTON

Victoria, January 16.—Captain Melville and fifteen men of the American Lark Carrollton, wrecked December 26 on Midway Island, were landed here tonight by the cable steamer Restorer of the Pacific Commercial Cable Company, which came from Midway Island for repairs. The shipwrecked men report that the Carrollton left Newcastle with 2200 tons of coal for Honolulu on October 7 and when some days out sprang a leak which made five inches of water an hour. The fresh water aboard finally gave out and it was decided to run for Midway Island for a supply. The Midway Island light was seen Christmas night and Captain Melville tried to tack ship, but the vessel missed stays and struck head-on, embedding her bow in the sand. She pounded heavily, and fearing the yards would come down the crew took to the boats and landed soon after daylight at the cable station. After a stay of ten days they were given passage here enroute to San Francisco by the Restorer. The bark remained intact until New Year's Day, when the foremast came down. Since then she has broken up and her remains are scattered on the beach.

Open Letter From Pacific Department

Royal Insurance Company of Liverpool

Many of the Companies which at the memorable meeting of June 12th voted in favor of a horizontal deduction of "not less than 25%" have, as we predicted, found it impossible to settle their San Francisco losses on that basis and have been forced, though reluctantly, to pay considerable more than an average of 75% of their claims. Some which voted to adjust every claim on its merits and pay the same "Dollar for Dollar," have fallen away from that high and correct standard and have submitted their policy holders to sharp deductions from adjusted claims. Others, while paying in full here, in accordance with Eastern usage, exacted a cash discount in lieu of sixty days' time in which to make payment.

The "ROYAL" has paid every claim as soon as the amount of loss has been agreed upon with the assured, in full, in cash, without a cent of discount. Comparatively few companies have pursued as broad and as liberal a course.

We have refrained from commenting upon the conduct of any individual company, believing it better to extol the virtues of our own. The ROYAL INSURANCE COMPANY of Liverpool has paid to date 2,369 claims, aggregating $5,850,625.88. We have remaining but a few unsettled losses, and these are chiefly awaiting authorization of claimants abroad, probate proceedings, or further investigation as to actual amount of fire loss.

The "ROYAL" continues to be the leading Fire Insurance Company of the world. Its annual income is over $15,000,000. Its San Francisco gross losses were not very much more than one-third of one year's premiums, and its surplus, after all losses are paid, will exceed the surplus of any other Company in the world.

It has been building up its reserves for years against just such a disaster as came to San Francisco and was therefore able to meet its great losses with equality. It will continue to pursue the even tenor of its way and will doubtless be more popular than ever with Insurers.

You are perfectly safe in putting your business in the "ROYAL," knowing that it will under all circumstances be able to fully and promptly meet its contracts and that it will not resort to any quibbles or shifty pretenses to avoid its obligations. Now is the time to make use of your opportunity.

There is no eluding the issue; there are "Dollar for Dollar" Companies; there are "Six-bitters" and there are "Welchers." There are also Companies strong, and Companies weak, financially.

No Company can offer a better policy than the "ROYAL," few as good.

SHOULD BE NEW RECORDS

With the soccer season over and the baseball season not ready to commence there is now a long gap in the athletic sports of the Islands with only the track championships to take up the time. This is rather unsatisfactory because it is rather hard to train for two months for the races of a single afternoon.

The prospects at present are far better than any which have been held in the islands and will see a number of records broken. If the track is in good condition there should be many new marks set.

GOLF AT MALEIWA

Tomorrow the golfers will all be at Maleiwa where the Hotel tournament will be the feature of the day. The hotel tournament is always one of the events of the month and is for a handsome silver cup which is given by the hotel. A large number of entries is expected for tomorrow's event.

BASEBALL AT AALA

The Hanulani and C. A. C.'s II will play tomorrow at Aala Park for the championship of the first series of the Aala League. The Hanulani are prepared to meet the C. A. C.'s II, and in case the latter fail to appear, the former will be declared the champions.

The champions of the first series will have to play the Kilohepa, champions of the second series, a series of games for the championship of the Aala League.

In the first series, the Kilohepa finished at the tail end but in the second they have come out ahead, winning every game played. Their pitcher, Wm. Espinosa, formerly of Maui is cool headed, steady and speedy. He is also good with the stick.

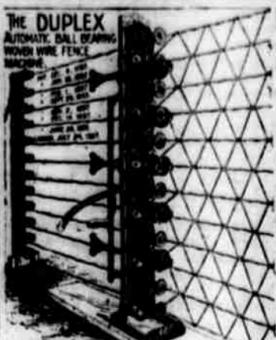

CENTRAL UNION CHURCH.

Rev. J. Walter Sylvester, D.D., will preach both morning and evening. Morning subject, "As a Watered Garden." Evening subject, "Our Search for Happiness." The music will be as follows: A. M.—Anthem by the choir, "I am Alpha and Omega," by Stainer. P. M.—Anthem by the choir, "Tarry With Me Oh My Saviour," by Baldwin. Solo by Mr. F. H. Wichman "Callst Thou Thus O Master," by Metzke. A cordial invitation is extended to the public to attend both of these services.

Mrs. J. M. Whitney will open a Bible class for ladies in connection with the Bible school on Sunday, January 20, at 10 o'clock. The text book will be "Studies in the Life of Christ," by Professor Bosworth. These books may be had at the church. Price 60 cents. It is earnestly requested that each member of the class will provide herself with a book and pursue the daily studies as designated. A cordial invitation is extended to all to join the class.

The trial jurors in Judge De Bolt's court are requested to be in attendance on Monday at 10 a. m.

Now You Need A Lawn Mower

Lawns have grown rapidly after the copious rains. They need trimming. We have the famous Pennsylvania Lawn Mower and cheaper makes. One advantage of buying a lawn mower from us is that we have all the extra parts to replace any that may become broken. We also carry grass catchers, shears for trimming edges, hedge shears, garden trowels and weedeaters, etc.

RELIEF FUNDS ARE STILL COMING IN

The appeal for relief funds for starving Chinese is meeting with unbounded success among the local Chinese. Money is being contributed with a lavish hand.

A relief committee of fifteen was organized yesterday in the Secretary of Hawaii's office. Governor Carter was chosen as custodian of the funds so far collected.

An executive committee was formed, consisting of Chu Gen, president of the United Chinese Society; Pan Lun Mow, president of the Bow On Gok Society, and C. K. Ai, a leading business man. This executive committee will have the power to appoint sub-committees from among the Chinese residents.

Governor Carter gave them advice as to the best method of canvassing the city and county. He also gave promise of aid in other ways.

After the Governor departed further consultation was had with Secretary Atkinson in which details were further perfected. A contribution from the Chinese of Midway was received in the form of a check for $20.

A DOUBTING THOMAS.

Had His Falling Hair Stopped, and Dandruff Cured, Without Faith.

H. B. Fletcher, Butte, Mont., Oct. 20, 1899, says: "Like many other people, I have been troubled for years with dandruff, and within the last few months my hair came out so badly that I was compelled to have what I had left clipped very close. A friend recommended Newbro's Herpicide. I confess that I doubted his story; but I gave Herpicide a trial; now my hair is as thick as ever, and entirely free from dandruff." "Destroy the cause, you remove the effect." Herpicide is a delightful hair dressing for regular use. Sold by leading druggists. Send 10c in stamps for sample to The Herpicide Co., Detroit, Mich. DEATH OF MR. KITTREDGE.

The death of Dr. Charles S. Kittredge is reported from Santa Barbara, Cal. Dr. Kittredge was a graduate of Yale college, and settled in these islands when quite a young man. After a residence here of about fifteen years he moved to Santa Barbara, where he resided a number of years. After a short visit to the east he returned to Santa Barbara, where he resided up to the time of his death. A wife and three married daughters and one son survive him.

"Politics in Hawaii" is the title of an interesting article by Edwin P. Irwin in the January Overland Monthly.

Association Hears TREASURER'S Insurance Report

The Board of Trustees of the Merchants' Association held a meeting yesterday afternoon. The chair stated that the main business was to hear a report on the standing of the various fire insurance companies doing business here. This had been compiled by the Treasurer at the request of a committee of the Association. This report, a resume of which appeared in the Bulletin yesterday, was read by Secretary Paris. A motion conveying thanks to the treasurer for his report was carried.

P. J. Thompson wrote that he had found that the general public knew little about the business houses and the lines they carried. He intended to correct this by holding a merchants' fair sometime about February 22. He asked for no financial aid, but merely for suggestions. W. W. Harris handed in a plan, which Thompson had asked him to submit to the meeting. It was decided that this was to voluminous to read. Harris said that Thompson wanted to use the old Fishmarket for a place and had called attention to the fact that the visitors from Los Angeles would be benefited by such a fair, which should include an agricultural feature. The matter was deferred until later.

The Promotion Committee asked that the Association appoint a committee to act with committees from the Promotion Committee and the Chamber of Commerce, to receive the Los Angeles excursionists.

A letter was read from H. T. Willis of The New York Commercial, asking members of the Association to advertise in its Hawaiian edition.

A. Gartley resigned as a member of the Promotion Committee on account of rush of business.

The committees on Trade and Finance and the secretary reported on the work done during the past year. The chair submitted a report, which had been drawn up for the directors to be submitted to the general meeting of the Association that week. This was adopted with a recommendation that it be printed.

On motion by Harris it was decided to cable Gen. McClellan to find out how the appropriation for fortifications was killed.

GOVERNMENT STORES DESTROYED BY FIRE.

Toulon, Jan. 26.—Fire at the government depots yesterday did damage to the amount of two hundred thousand dollars. Twenty persons were injured.

KAISER WINS OUT AT ELECTION.

Berlin, Jan. 26.—The election returns show a victory for the government by twenty seats. The Socialists will return to the Reichstag with a loss of eighteen members.

The Colonial policy, in which Emperor William was greatly interested, was the main feature of the recent election. Had the election not resulted as he desired the Kaiser would have dissolved the Reichstag. Such an action on his part would have brought on strained relations between himself and the German people.

TERRORISTS KILL POLICE.

Grodno, Russia, Jan. 26.—In a riot here yesterday five policemen and a prison keeper were killed by the terrorists. The riot was finally suppressed by the police.

IRISH REJECT SOCIALISM.

Belfast, Ireland, Jan. 26.—By a vote of 835,000 to 90,000 of the Laborites rejected the amendments to their party constitution embodying in it socialistic doctrines.

Laundry Location

Serial Story No. 3

The linen you wear next to your body absorbs the discharge of the pores of your skin. On the other hand your body is exposed to all the dangers of germs that may be brought home from the laundry in your linen. A laundry should be kept scrupulously clean and managed by persons with intelligence enough to know the necessity of sanitation. One of the evidences of cleanliness is public exposure. With this end in view we have located a laundry in the heart of the city, on the ground floor, where all the washing and ironing is exposed to public view from the street at all times. Visitors are welcome at all times and our wash-room is as public as our office.
