NYE AND THE POETS. HE MEETS THE BARD OF THE PLAINS AND ADMIRES HIM. Speaking of Poetry Reminds Him of Riley, and in a Few Well Chosen Words He Shows the Difference Between Dr. Holmes and the Hoosier Poet.

THE POET AT HOME. mingled with the pathos of the dying grasshopper sufferer, which has even won the approval of English bards...

As a matter of fact, Mr. Peacock has no bark. He admitted that to me. He has a dog and a shotgun, but has no bark and could not steer if he had.

Mr. Peacock is a self made poet and composes better with the window open and his tongue out a little way on the left hand side.

This leads me to refer to James Whitcomb Riley, my old partner and comrade in the above business. I notice that some warm admirer gives Riley the place left vacant by Dr. Holmes.

Mr. Riley has a keen sense of humor, and being that his room communicated with the street, he was not averse to the hotel people about it.

Mr. Irving told a story of the "boots" at a country hotel where he was staying asking to be paid for going to the theater.

and referring whistlers stole up to him and in a wild blast shot this remark into Riley's ear. "Is this Mr. Riley?"

"Yes, yes," said Riley, "so did I," and walked away. Now, Dr. Holmes, while, in fact, quite dead, would have appeared to hear, and, in fact, in that way quite different from Mr. Riley, who is a lover of fried onions and bread humor.

Mr. Peacock has a dog and a shotgun, but has no bark and could not steer if he had. Moreover, his wife told me that if he went into the country and got into a bad way, he would be taken care of by the neighbors.

Mr. Peacock is a self made poet and composes better with the window open and his tongue out a little way on the left hand side. He likes the breeze to blow against his hot temples, and a jug of hot water at his feet, with which he mixes a little reddish liquor from the drug stores of Kansas.

HENRY N. CASTLE.

The curtain of death drops and hides from earthly view one of nature's noblemen. Words are idle in expressing sorrow over the demise of Henry N. Castle.

In public affairs here Mr. Castle was best known as a newspaper writer. His editorial work was always effective. He was a journalist of clear thought, incisive expression, clever discernment and the clearest logic.

Mr. Castle was just upon the threshold of a career. He was ripening into a man who would occupy a proud place in the Councils of his country.

The yawp of the Bulletin—We ain't sayin' nothin' about that there Military Commission. What's tryin' our friends. But it oughter let 'em off and it oughter put that there STAR outfit on the reef.

There is a very little annexation news by this mail. This, with the cable question, will probably go to the next congress. Everywhere the stability of the Republic is announced and remarked with every evidence of satisfaction.

The San Francisco Examiner, the Associated Press and dispatches to Washington from Minister Willis, all mention sentences of persons tried by the Military Commission. Those letters went on before the famous STAR local item on the same subject appeared.

It is only in the columns of one or two American papers that the insurrection is called an "English revolution." These prints are about as capable of correct comment as the Bulletin and Advertiser. The American colony begs to inform the world at large that its ally and co-partner here is the British colony. That's the fact of the matter.

HAWAII LOSES A FRIEND.

John L. Stevens had reached the age where death is not distant. Yet the wish was father to the thought that he might yet return to Hawaii. He was always pictured in the mind as battling abroad or here for the consecrated cause of Americanism in the Islands.

REBUKING ITSELF.

Revolutions in the past have been treated with altogether too lenient a hand. The opportunity is now and here to impress upon the minds of the agitators that the Republic of Hawaii is not a Government lacking in force and dignity.

In dealing out justice to the rebels captured the Government should not forget what the citizens have risked to maintain this Republic—their lives! None could live more. The fact that none of the volunteers were killed in the night at Palolo does not release the rebels from any whit of the responsibility of their crime.

Ranters and extremists always come to the front during days of political turmoil, not because they are needed, but rather owing to the high tension of public sentiment. Those on the fence of conservatism whoop over, and for a time, at least, listen to empty declamations which in the aftermath of careful consideration they look upon in the true light, and finally come back to the ranks of slow, careful and sensible administration.

CHURCH SERVICES.

CENTRAL UNION CHURCH. Dr. Hutchins will preach tomorrow in Central Union church at 11 a. m. and 7:30 p. m.

First Methodist Episcopal Church. Rev. J. W. Peck, pastor. Sunday services Feb 17th, 10 a. m., Sunday school, 11 a. m., sermon, subject, "O Lord Bless." 7:30 p. m., sermon, text, "He Sought To See Jesus, Who He Was." Prayer meeting, Wednesday, 7:30 p. m.

Salvation Army Regular Services For The Week. Barracks on King street, over John Noyes, engineer's office for the week.

Latter-day Saints. Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints; Old Masonic Hall, corner of Fort and Queen streets.

Italian Brigands. Their Relations With The People Are of a Most Friendly Character.

Italy, Tiburti and Pionavari are the names of the brigands actually in the exercise of their calling.

In 1872, at 52 years of age, he had his first differences with the law—a highway robbery, an extortion and a murder.

What the Passengers on a Michigan Road Saw and Heard. Coming over on the Michigan Central a tall, thin appearing man with a handsome face, dressed in a plain suit...

After they had left, "mother" sat looking out of the window and appeared to be deep in thought, not overlooking perhaps, the little woman who had been brought up in the train...

"Mother!" he cried in a delighted voice. "My John; my John!" And the two were clasped in a loving embrace so genuine to cause tears to rise in the eyes of one of the passengers...

A MOUNTAIN BRIGAND. By ALFRED R. CALHOUN.

That night there was another carouse. The supplies just brought in were broken open in the most reckless way, and except for the rations, which were taken charge of by old Kit, the people helped themselves as they pleased.

After dinner, or rather supper, though the gang had the savage habit of disregarding fixed times for meals and eating whenever they were hungry, Molly McGee brought her father his bottle and opened him on the head of a barrel near the fire.

"I felt sick in earnest. She must be his old man in a blanket in one of the tents and said she would bring me some medicine, and she did. It was boiling hot whiskey, sweetened with sorghum molasses. I objected, but she would have her own way. She lifted me up in her lap as if I had been a sick baby and she a drunken giant of a nurse.

"The next day he was a sick man, sure enough, but to avoid Molly's attentions and her medicine he kept on his feet. On Saturday another raid was to start in the direction of the Kentucky line, and Collins, who now felt that he had won the confidence of the gang, insisted on being one of the party.

"Molly and me's dose talked till all over this is a mighty fine girl, is Molly, and that a n' married man in the mountains he couldn't have of so be do'd, say the word. But she's mighty t'iklar, is Molly, and from that she got her eye onto you, so I reckon you was meent to get married. Ned Owen onto preach afo' the wab, and I reckon he remembers enough of the business to make the hitch so he'll hold. And so, my son, I think you unsed be t'rah no' get this trip, for hit wouldn't look decent to get married and then run off."

Collins on his arrival had announced himself as a single man, so he could not well take refuge under the plea of being married. In the circumstances he had no alternative, so he remained, so he determined to get away that Friday night. He still retained the arms he had brought with him, and, like his lawless companions, he carried them about with him as he did his hat or any other article of clothing.

He had made up his mind to kill any picket that he could not get by. He had to move with the greatest caution, so that he does not think he covered more than two miles the first two hours after leaving camp. He thinks it was about 4 o'clock in the morning when directly from the front and not more than ten yards away and to the eastward he heard the challenge: "Hit! Who goes there?"

"A friend of the mountains!" This was the response he had been taught at the time of his initiation. As he replied Collins dropped to the ground and saw between him and the patch of sky where the gray dawn was breaking the silhouette figure of a man. He knew this was one of McFie's pickets, and that if he had himself known he would either be shot at once or taken back a prisoner to be shot afterward. He must think and act within the half second.

"I hated to do it; yet, my God, what else could I do? I had hit, still keeping my eyes on him standing there against that bit of sky; then I threw up my gun and fired! Did I kill him? Well, I didn't stop to see. I only know that he did not raise his hand nor his voice to say when I leaped over his body lying there in the trail, and then I ran for it."

E. O. HALL & SON. KRAJEWSKI'S PATENT CANE CRUSHER.

THE HONOLULU IRON WORKS COMPANY having secured the EXCLUSIVE AGENCY for the Hawaii Islands for the Krajewski Patent Sugar Cane Crusher, are now prepared to receive orders for the same, to be delivered in time for the next crop.

This machine, which has been invented but a few years, has been adopted by a great number of cane sugar manufacturers, especially in Cuba, where it was first put to trial and where it became extremely popular.

Nearly one-third of the whole sugar crop made in Cuba is being made with the assistance of these crushers. These crushers have also proved a great success in other West Indian Islands, and Louisiana, as can be seen by testimonials on hand.

These crushers when attached to any cane mill will increase its capacity by from 50 to 100 per cent; will improve extraction, will regulate feed of the mill. We have three of these machines in the way. For further particulars enquire at the
