The History of Hawaii

This 116 page history of Hawai‘i is called by David Forbes in his Hawaiian National Bibliography (2000), “one of the most important books on Hawaii. This is the first Hawaiian history written and published in Hawaii, and the first from a Hawaiian viewpoint. Sometimes cataloged as the work of David Malo, it is rather the cooperative effort of a select group of Lahainaluna students and their instructor, Sheldon Dibble.”

This reprint of the 1838 Lahainaluna publication is the third in the Society’s Hawaiian Language Reprint Series, Ke Kupu Hou. An introduction in Hawaiian and English is provided by M. Puakea Nogelmeier, Ph.D. The book is available in softcover and clothbound editions (xxviii, 116 pages).

Distributed for the Hawaiian Historical Society by the University of Hawai‘i Press. Publication date: November 2005.
At first, I was afraid of the other leprosy patients. The feeling of fear and sadness exhausts you. One time this lovely lady patient told me, try and cry. Try and cry. I was holding it all in... But finally, I accepted my fate... I became one of them.

CLARENCE EDWARD DUTTON

Foreword and Appendixes by WILLIAM R. HALLIDAY

HAWAIIAN VOLCANOES, written by Clarence Edward Dutton as part of the 1883 Annual Report of the U.S. Geological Survey, is the first comprehensive study of volcanism in Hawai‘i. In addition to being of both scientific and historical interest today, it is a fine example of natural history writing. It takes the form of an entrancing nineteenth-century “roadside geology” of the Big Island and much of Maui, combining Dutton’s clear, elegant writing style with his eye for color and line and meticulously accurate observations of Hawai‘i’s people and landscape, as well as its geological phenomena.

A new foreword to this reprint discusses the importance of Dutton’s ground-breaking report and its influence on subsequent research on Hawai‘i’s volcanoes. Also included is a colorful biographical sketch of Dutton, a discussion of his assignment to Hawai‘i, and a list of his principal writings.

CLARENCE EDWARD DUTTON (1841–1912) was selected to join a U.S. Geological Survey team in the Rocky Mountains after serving in the Union Army. He spent several seasons in and around the Grand Canyon before being assigned to Hawai‘i in 1882.

WILLIAM R. HALLIDAY, M.D., has long had major interests in history and geology in addition to his work in surgery and rehabilitation medicine. His fifty years of field research in Hawai‘i have centered on the caldera and ‘Ailaau flow field of Kīlauea volcano, Moloka‘i’s Kalaupapa Peninsula, the pits and pit craters of Kona’s Hualalai volcano, and O‘ahu’s much-overlooked karstlands. He remains active in groups ranging from the Geological Society of America to the Kona Historical Society to the Washington Group of the Explorers Club, which meets at the famous Cosmos Club, founded by Clarence Dutton.
