THE TEST ON ROOT AND M'GOVERN

PRESIDENT TAFT'S CANDIDATE LEADS FROM THE START

Right Idea Of Cleanup Day Stated

"People must not get the idea that the community in the matter of sani-Cleanup Day means a day on which they can have their housecleaning done by the public. Everybody should take pride in keeping his own place clean, and those who will not do so, should have the fact made known, and if possible be compelled to do so." President B. von Damm, of the Central Improvement Committee, and head of the Cleanup Day campaign, thus defined the duties of citizens to tation. "When we get a free garbage service," he continued, "a general cleanup day may not be needed, if the board of health inspectors do their duty, but in the meantime it is practically the only way that a great deal of trash can be got rid of.

"What we do not intend to do is to go into a man's yard and cut his grass, trim his trees and hedges, gath-

ROOT WINS WITHOUT HELP OF HAWAII

(Associated Press Cable to the Star.)

CHICAGO, JUNE 18.—RESULT OF THE VOTE ON TEMPORARY CHAIRMAN: ROOT 558, McGOVERN 502.

HAWAII VOTED ALL SIX DELEGATES FOR McGOVERN.

ALL OTHER TERRITORIAL DELEGATES WERE FOR ROOT.

THERE WAS A WILD DEMONSRATION.

[The above cablegram is clear in its statements, but as J. P. Cooke says, such an attitude on the part of the Hawaii delegates seems impossible.—Ed. Star.]

CHICAGO, June 18.—The vote to temporary chairman is down to and including North Dakota, Root 387 and McGovern 316. It is believed that the Roosevelt men are supporting McGovern in the hope of reaching an agreement upon him.

La Follette's boomers came, entering at 10:15, the band playing "America." Extraordinary police precautions are being taken.

Senator Borah announced previously to the call to order that Governor McGovern was the Wisconsin candidate for temporary chairman, not Borah himself.

California entered the convention hall at 11:32.

The convention was called to order at 12:02 but fifteen minutes of cheering occurred before quiet ensued and the secretary could read the call. Hadley, the Roosevelt floor-leader, moved that the roll of delegates be amended by the substitution of the Roosevelt roll. Watson raised a point of order and twenty minutes were given each side for debate.

The chair sustained Watson and Hadley appealed from the decision. Watson moved to table both motions and was declared out of order.

Rosewater then presented the name of Root for temporary chairman and Cochems of Wisconsin nominated McGovern.

Job Hedges, colored delegate Hood from Kentucky, and Groner of West Virginia seconded Root; Johnson, Heney, Houser and Governor Vessey of North Carolina seconded McGovern.

Heney started a row by comparing the national committee to Abe Ruef and says he will finish it if it takes all summer.

SECOND REPORT.

The vote began at 3:02 and great nervous tension was apparent. On the opening of the convention, policemen were stationed at every corner and at the doors. In the iron work arching overhead were hidden the national colors. The galleries were draped with mountain laurel. The two Taft delegates were not in evidence when the Taft delegation, all twenty-six Roosevelters were seated. The woman Californians were cheered. Hadley, speaking for the substitution of the Roosevelt roll, cited the convention of 1864, which nominated Lincoln, and made a precedent. Former Governor Fort of New Jersey joined Hadley and said the procedure was established in the convention of 1880. Sereno Payne opposed the motion to appeal from Rosewater's adverse ruling. Hadley's motion caused a tumult.

Regarding the California deelgation Governor Johnson had tickets for Tyron and Meyerfield, Taft delegates who were not admitted to the enclosure but stood outside the railing when California was called on the temporary chairmanship vote. When Tyron and Meyerfield were called Johnson leaped to a chair and said: "There are no such delegates. Their names were put on the roll fraudulently. You will elect no temporary chairman by such votes. There are unavailable. California counted twenty-four, McGovern two and Root the remainder. New York gave seventy-six for Root and thirteen for McGovern; Pennsylvania, McGovern sixty-four, Root twelve; Illinois, Root forty-nine, McGovern nine.

PUNCHBOWL HILL DWELLERS LOOKING AFTER THEIR CLAIMS

Attorney-General Lindsay held an informal "at home" in his office this morning, and from nine o'clock until away past noon the sanctum sanctorum of the attorney general was filled with a swarming, postling mass of Portuguese citizens-residents of Punchbowl Hill

They all wanted their preference rights and wanted them now and the determined effort shown by the majority to state their several cases at one and the same time created a din and a clamor that would have sent the famous builders of the tower of Babel flying for cover.

As it was, the attorney beneral wore quite an appreciable dent in his desk in pounding for order and his voice grated into a whisper as he explained again and again about preference rights, leaseholds and auctions.

Some of the applicants wanted larger lots, others that had large lots wanted lots as large in another location, and those that didn't have any lots wanted any old kind of a lot, and they squirmed and wriggled and fumed and talked to such an extent that Deputy Attorney General Scott fled across the hall into the governor's office where perhaps he is still talking politics to Norman Courtenay, secretary to the governor, deputy grand marshal of the Fourth of July parade, and tennis champion of the Manoa tennis club.

Downstairs in the land commissioner's office were the similar disarray of maps, a crowd of silent Portuguese and a voluble land commissioner, all smiles and dimples, who was busy in a unique mixture of English, Hawaiian and Portuguese. Punchbowl lots were the topic under discussion and, at the time of going to press, Mr. Tucker was just getting his second wind.

MAUI SANITARY CONDITIONS WILL NEXT RECEIVE ATTENTION

Dr. Pratt, president of the board of health, may leave for Maui on Friday evening with Dr. McCoy, sanitary adviser to the governor, where the physicians will complete their sanitary inspection of the islands.

Oahu, Hawaii and Kauai have been inspected as to sanitary conditions, suggestions have been made, and new projects have been inaugurated with the end in view of making sanitary conditions in the Territory of Hawaii second to none.

Maui alone has not been visited and the week's trip of inspection beginning Saturday and ending the following Friday will conclude the sanitary survey. Town, plantation and camp conditions will be noted, and, if there are any changes which should be made in the present sewage system, these will be recommended and pushed through immediately.

Work of inspection will begin at Hana and from thence the board of health representatives will work through the interior of the island to the other side.

"Maui is the only island which we have not as yet visited," said Dr. Pratt while discussing his projected trip this morning, "and we will have completed our sanitary investigation of the Territory the day we leave Maui for Honolulu.

"There is only one thing that may prevent our going right now and that is the amount of routine work in the department here which we must have off our hands before the end of the month which is also the termination of the fiscal year. Reports must be read and made up, there will be a quantity of work resultant on the board meeting tomorrow, and the work of awarding contracts for supplies must be rushed through.

"Right now, we are busy putting the twenty-six tenders into tabulated

SALARY RAISES FOR TEACHERS

Acting Governor Mott-Smith and Treasurer Conkling spent the early part of the afternoon in discussion of the question of approving the resolutions passed by the educational commissioners at their last meeting, recommending a new system of increases in salary.

According to the acting governor, a large quantity of work is involved in deciding this question, as there are many things to be considered and the new system involves a large expenditure of money.

At time of going to press, the question of approving the new salary list was undecided.

RESERVOIR SITE NEARLY SETTLED

Negotiations were made between Acting Governor Mott-Smith, Marston Campbell, superintendent of public works, and W. F. Dillingham, representing Oahu College, whereby arrangements for purchasing a reservoir site upon Rocky Hill from the college have been nearly completed.

According to the acting governor, the question which remains to be settled is appraising the value of the site and agreeing upon a definite price, the college having agreed to sell the site to the Territory.

When the final arrangements have been completed, work of constructing the new 250 foot lift will be commenced, the new pipe system will be installed, when, instead of the Manoa Valley residents being compelled to put up with a weak supply of muddy water, they will have a plentiful supply of clear artesian liquid.

DANGEROUS CARGO INTERCEPTED BY ENTOMOLOGIST EHRHORN

Nobody can say what new, destructive pest might have been introduced to these islands by a recent consignment of sugar cane and soil from Salina Cruz which, through misleading information, almost eluded the vigilance of E. M. Ehrhorn, the Territorial entomologist. It did even get landed at Kahului after passing through the port of Honolulu, but when brought back here was seized and destroyed. Mr. Ehrhorn tells about the narrow escape as follows in his report for May to the board of agriculture and forestry:

"On May 11, the American-Hawaiian S. S. Company's steamer Columbian brought a large case of sugar cane and fifteen cases of soil from Salina Cruz. This was consigned to Theo. H. Davies & Co. of Honolulu. We were unable to locate the shipment and received the report that it was a short shipment and would probably arrive on the next vessel. However, it seems that the shipment was on the vessel and was taken to Kahului, Maui, and unloaded there and then brought back to Honolulu by the Claudine. We were notified about the shipment through the custom house and after entry was made we took possession of the shipment. The agents were notified and told of the law regarding soil and sugar cane, and we then hauled the sixteen boxes to the incinerator and remained there until the last of them was burned. We understand that this shipment was sent here for analysis and that the H. S. P. A. Experiment Station were to be asked to perform the work. I believe that should such be the case it would have been a very dangerous undertaking on account of the possibility of introducing some disease into the station grounds, where material for every plantation in the islands is propagated. However, as the matter now stands, the danger has been removed by the destruction of the sugar cane as well as the soil."

Pests Intercepted.

Mr. Ehrhorn states that "51 packages of vegetables and 47 packages of fruit were confiscated from passengers and immigrants during the month, much of which was infested with pests as well as prohibited by

ALL HONOLULU THOUGHTS CENTERING ON CHICAGO

Honolulu fairly sizzled with politics today. It was national politics. Everyone was wondering what was going on in Chicago, and it was impossible for the ordinary business man to walk a block without being asked if there was any news from the windy city.

There was general expectation that some news would be cabled during the morning, but no news came. George P. Thielen, the livest wire among the local Roosevelt bunch, made earnest inquiries about what was going on, but didn't get any news. He was heard at various times to say something about betting a couple of millions more on Roosevelt, but so far as is known there was nothing doing.

Quite a little money has been placed here during the past few days on the Taft-Roosevelt proposition, most of it being even bets as to which would get the nomination. This morning partisans of both sides confessed themselves so much in the air that they didn't know "where they were at" and there wasn't anybody—except the enthusiastic Thielen—willing to be positive about any predictions.

Kuhio Returning.

Delegate Kuhio is in the Honolulan, which is due tomorrow from San Francisco. He was chosen as one of those who were to sit in the Chicago convention today as a delegate from Hawaii, but, instead of exercising his privilege of doing so, he headed for home. There are two or three reasons assigned for his course. The first is that he wouldn't sit in the convention anyhow with Frear as a fellow delegate, the second is that he has lost a lot of such enthusiasm as he had as a Taft delegate since Taft failed to turn down Frear, and the third is that the time may be ripe just at the day of his arrival here for the birth of a new national party, led by Roosevelt on the mainland and

ODDS AND ENDS IN THE COURTS

The assumpsit suit of C. W. Ashford versus James L. Holt has been discontinuel in the circuit court.

L. Ah Leong has brought another suit to quiet title, this time against Carrie Wilcox Sharratt and others.

The sheriff has returned partially satisfied the execution in the matter of Noi Sato versus Kazaji Sato.

Judge Cooper this morning entered the final decree in the case of Antonio A. Long versus John F. Colburn. The decree is in accordance with the terms of the compromise by which Colburn, to avoid having to bring his books into court, consented to pay his stepson $2500.

In the matter of the estate of S. Odo, Judge Whitney today appointed T. Odo administrator, under bond of $6000.

The trial of C. H. Young, the Korean charged with assault and battery, will take place before Judge Robinson and a jury tomorrow morning.

TWO STEAMERS HERE TOGETHER

Sweeping in from the anchorage two big ocean-going steamers came up one on each side of the Alakea street dock shortly after 1 o'clock this afternoon. The Nippon Maru came in from the Orient and the Zealandia from Sydney.

The Nippon Maru reports a rough passage throughout and the Zealandia a good one. Purser 'Tommy' McCombe describes the trip of the Nippon Maru as "gales from shore to shore."

The Japanese boat brought a few passengers for this port, while the Zealandia brought forty-five. The

There are only six cases left for the Oahu tax appeal board to settle and negotiations are in the wind to have these settled before the board reconvenes next week. All the rest have been settled out of court and the agreed figure in each case has been the Territory's assessed valuation.

D. E. Metzger, chairman of the Hawaii board of tax appeals, is in town and will leave for Hilo tomorrow. Deputy Attorney General Arthur Smith left for Wailuku in the Kilauea this noon to be present at the session of the Maui board.

ISENBERG DECLARED HIS INTENTION OF RESIGNING

"Well, you will have my resignation today so don't worry."

Thus did Paul Isenberg reply to President W. M. Giffard, at a meeting of the board of agriculture and forestry this morning, when the presiding officer had remarked that since he had taken office none of the commissioners had visited the department headquarters at the government nursery.

Whether Mr. Isenberg was joking or not did not appear at the open meeting, although before it concluded most cordial relations were again prevailing between the chair and the members.

Albert Waterhouse was the first to take up the president's remark, smilingly correcting it with the statement that he had visited headquarters once.

"Yes, but I drove you out," the president said.

Mr. Isenberg later asked that an executive session be held after the regular meeting, but did not state the purpose of the closed doors.

All the talk about the attendance of members at the head office arose from a discussion of the expenses of the dog quarantine.

Dr. Norgaard, the Territorial veterinarian, at last month's meeting put in a requisition for certain improvements he deemed necessary at the dog quarantine station. The board was favorable, and the conservation fund commission granted an appropriation of one thousand dollars for the purpose, on condition that expenditures should be only for "necessary" work.

Mr. von Holt read a report of the animal industry committee, signed only by himself as being the sole member of the committee attending to the matter, on the dog quarantine station expenditures. He said he thought Dr. Norgaard should have sent in his account of expenditures. Mr. Isenberg agreed with him.

President Giffard said the members could see the statement of account, which was regularly booked, at department headquarters.

Mr. Isenberg said he had not time to run out to headquarters for every little list of information required.

President Giffard then commented on the lack of personal visitation to headquarters as already reported.

In the course of the discussion Dr. Norgaard was criticized by both the president and members for incurring expenses without the specific authorization of the board. Mr. Giffard said he would not sign any more requisi-

SHIPPING AND WATERFRONT NEWS

CEDAR IMPORTED FOR TUB MAKING

Manufacture of Soy and Sake Tubs Becoming Important Industry---Flaurence Ward Looks Smart. Two Vessels Arrive.

There will be no need to pay a visit to the Japanese stores and beg, borrow or steal soy and sake tubs in the future because they are now being made here. The industry which was started some little time ago is now assuming large dimensions, and the four-masted schooner Mary E. Foster which is discharging a big lumber cargo at the Allen & Robinson wharf this morning started to get on shore a number of pieces of cedar imported especially for the manufacture of the tubs in which ferns are placed after an incidental filling with sake or soy.

The trade in tubs is quite a considerable one and the local Japanese think they can make good money in the business. If they succeed with it, it will mean that there will be another increase in the lumber industry to this port.

The number of vessels coming here with lumber cargoes as was pointed out in the Star recently, is increasing all the time and with the prospects ahead goes to show how necessary it is for more wharf accommodation.

FLAURENCE WARD SMART.

Trim and taut looking, very few people would recognize the schooner lying at the naval wharf today as the crippled Flaurence Ward that hauled into this port some months ago after trying conclusions with a gale.

The story is told of one gentleman on the front who walked over to the wharf this morning to see what naval auxiliary schooner had come in during the night. When he saw that it was the Flaurence Ward he had a good laugh on himself.

A good job has certainly been made of the little craft and when she sets her wings and wafts out of the barbor at the latter part of this week she will be a pretty sight.

NO TRUCK AVAILABLE.

Kicks, real, good, life-sized kicks, were flying about the Railroad wharf this morning and all because the railroad company could not supply enough trucks to the second mate of the E. K. Wood.

The Wood has about eight carloads of lumber left on board and the second mate's job is to hurry this on to the dock. If he does not get it off quickly then the first mate will jump on him, following loud words from the "Old Man."

At present the second mate's ideas as to the efficiency of the local railroad would be worth printing. The good ideas could be easily engraved on a pin head in upper case caps.

SUGAR LIST.

Purser Phillips of the Mauna Kea reports the following sugar waiting shipment on Hawaii:

Hawaii 5500, Waiakea 3000; Hawaii Mill 1700, Hilo Sugar Co. 5000, Onomea 4650, Pepeekeo 3900, Honomu 8500, Hakalau 10,583, Laupahoehoe 17,000, Kaiwiki 7000, Kukaiau 8500, Hamakua Mill 24,300, Paauhau 8050, Honokaa 9200, Kukuihaele 11,700, Punaluu 6350, Honuapo 8774.

SPORTS

Coming Bout Means Much for Both the Principals Engaged

Johnny McCarthy and Jack Cordell, matched to box fifteen rounds at the Athletic Park on the afternoon of June 29, are expected to give Honolulu fight fans as classy an exhibition of the noble art as has ever been witnessed in Honolulu.

Cordell is a high-class boxer who has beaten some of the best fighters in America.

McCarthy has shown excellently against such tough propositions as Matty Baldwin and Willie Ritchie, defeating the latter and securing a twenty-round draw with the former.

It is true that there is considerable difference in the weights of the two men but it must be remembered that McCarthy has been fighting regularly right along and is today bigger and better than ever before.

A match between McCarthy, the lightweight, and Cordell would look like a one-sided proposition but a match between McCarthy the welterweight and Middleweight Jack looms up as a stellar attraction, particularly when it is borne in mind that the latter has turned his attention to a vocation other than boxing during the past several months.

McCarthy gives evidence of developing into a crackerjack welterweight. He has the endurance and the gameness necessary to send him to the front in this class and beside these qualifications he thrives on punishment and can deal it out himself with a masterly hand.

Jack Cordell, who has to make 155 pounds for McCarthy, two hours before entering the ring, is as neat and fast a boxer as ever came to these shores. He showed this in his bouts with Dick Sullivan and Brother Pat.

At least seven out of ten fight-goers incline to the opinion that Cordell can outbox McCarthy.

On the other hand a great many of the said fans are not backward in expressing their views that McCarthy's ruggedness will carry him through the contest and that his aggressiveness will result in him scoring when his opponent is feeling the stress of a contest nearing its closing round.

Contest Promising.

Here then are the necessary elements for a sterling contest. A fighter in the heyday of his form opposing a boxer who, though outweighing him, must, until he proves to the contrary, be, to a certain extent considered a light of other days, although those days are not so far back at that.

YAMOGATA.

He will box four rounds with Kid Cabral n June 29.

It means a good deal to either man to win or lose. Should McCarthy lose he will have the consolation that he was fighting out of his class. On the other hand, however, should he secure the verdict, his performance will attract no little attention in fight circles on the mainland for it will show that he is destined to shine as brightly among the welters as he has been doing until quite recently among the boys of the class below.

Cordell can not afford to be beaten by McCarthy for such a defeat will give him an almost irreparable setback in the world of fisticuffs.

DENNY LEARY,

Fort de Russy middleweight who will box Trooper Bauersock eight rounds on June 29.

It is certain, therefore, that each boxer will do his best to emerge from the ordeal of June 29 with colors flying.

Leary vs. Bauersock.

The eight-round contest between Leary and Bauersock will practically decide the middleweight championship of the local branch of the service. Bauersock, it is true, could only draw with Kilsner last Thursday at Schofield Barracks but he was then meeting an opponent who outweighed him a dozen pounds.

Denny Leary has been boxing for the past seven or eight years and has defeated some really good men. His last bout was with the Black Cyclone at Fort Leavenworth, Kansas, and although entering the ring a shortender he managed to secure a six-round decision against the doughty black.

A match between Kilsner and the winner of the Bauersock-Leary contest may be arranged at a later date.

Other Preliminaries.

The six-round contest between Kid Baker of Seattle and Moriarty of Schofield Barracks promises to be a hummer. The soldier made a host of friends by his fine showing against Young Gans and there are many who incline to the opinion that he did not have to extend himself to beat Gans. In Baker Moriarty will find a boxer who is clever and who can give and take in finished style. Baker has engaged in a number of battles in the north and has won the majority of his bouts. He is a clean, fast fighter and he and Moriarty should put up a go which from the standpoint of science will be a treat to witness.

Kid Cabral has started to get in shape for his four-round go with Yamogata. He will weigh round about 120 pounds whereas the Japanese will strip at about 126 pounds.

Yamogata has become acclimated now and is showing up well in his training. When he boxed Milne he was feeling far from well and was suffering as well from a sprained thumb, sustained during a bout boxed on board ship. He himself states that he did not perform up to his notch on the occasion of his initial appearance and is so confident of his ability that he is willing to box any man of his weight in the islands.

Cabral was an exceedingly promising boxer three years ago. Since then he has been on the shelf as far as fistic work is concerned. He is now working with a local concern and his work is of a nature which keeps him in trim. He says that he feels as good as ever and expects to have no very great difficulty in defeating the son of Nippon. Should Cabral defeat Yamogata he will be matched to box Young Layman at the next show.

Williams and Kradalac who were to have been matched to box on the 29th have had to be sidetracked, neither of them having got in recent touch with the promoter. They will probably be given a match later.

Andrews, late sparring partner for Jim Hoao, expresses a wish to meet any heavyweight in the Territory.

The match between George Ingle and a Maui unknown is still up in the air, the unknown being unable to obtain permission from his employers to box on the date named.

Another opponent for Ingle is being sought for and word is expected from Maui on the subject by the next steamer.

SUMMER CHARMS OF HAWAII.

What is called a commonsense belief is often an uninformed error, but it is hardest to eradicate. To a South Sea islander, burning with the fever of measles, it is plain commonsense to plunge into cool water, but the act kills him. A northlander, with his ears frozen, thinks it is commonsense to go into a warm room or by a fire, but if he does this, his ears will slough off. What he should do instead is to go into a cool room or on a sheltered porch and pack his ears with snow, thus saving them healthy and intact.

A similar "commonsense" error is to assume that if any place of resort is warm in winter, it must be intolerably hot in summer. We have even heard that argument from so careful a paper as the New York Times, which urged that San Francisco, having a mild winter climate, must be too warm in summer for World's Fair purposes, whereas San Francisco has the coolest dog days of any city in North America and never shows a straw hat in August. Even Eastport, Maine, does not have so cool a summer climate as San Diego, Cal. As for Honolulu the fear of great heat is the only reason its tourist season is not so popular as its winter one.

Yet there is no climatic comparison as between Honolulu and the humid cities of the American South, a thousand miles northeast of here. These islands are within the tropics, it is true, but they lie in the midst of the ocean, which tempers and equalizes the heat. Moreover they are subject to the almost continuous trade winds; and if people dress for warm weather here they will be comfortable, while the people of New York city are subject to sunstrokes. These winds subside in winter, but in summer they blow steadiest.

Comfort of climate is not the only offering to summer tourists; it is not the only reason to justify their coming. In summer our seabathing is not only of more inviting temperature, but it is not so subject to inflow of land-streams. Inland tours are less subject to rainfall. Yachting and fishing are at their best. Picnic weather and automobiling are the rule. Summer is particularly the season of al fresco life, of fresh fruits, of sightseeing jaunts, of sketching, of golf and tennis and of camping. No country adapts itself to the mainland vacation time more surely than this one.

But, as we say, the old impressions are hard to eradicate and, singularly, as would seem, it has proved well-nigh impossible to get the Associated Press to post our daily weather bulletins in all the principal cities with the rest. The reason given by General Greely, when he was head of the Weather Bureau, was that such bulletins have no news. There is a similar climatic condition at San Diego and he said: "Find out what the weather was there on July 1, the year One, and you will know what it is today." Except for the small variations in rainfall, the fact is also plain here. Repetition is not news.

But if the Associated Press will not publish our climatic values, there are many other ways of doing it and these methods are being pushed, for all they are worth, by the indefatigable Promotion Committee.

THE VARIOUS SCARES.

Between the theater, the moving pictures, the magazines and the Sunday newspapers, the publicity of the islands has been considerably added to during the year. The only unfortunate feature has been the exaggerated notoriety given to leprosy and the Japanese war scare, the glittering emptiness of which have attracted the superficial and sensational writers. In point of fact the one is as needlessly alarming as the other. A man might live here ten years and never see a leper; and if he saw or met a victim of the vanishing disease, the chances are a thousand to one that he would come to no harm from a malady so feebly contagious. Furthermore, as the European medical record shows, the white race is becoming immune to it. Formerly England, France and Italy knew many lepers, but now they are far and few between. A single case among the 90,000,000 people of the United States mainland gets extraordinary attention. As to the Japanese war the years of army service, it is about as negligible as a German war scare would be in Cincinnati or Milwaukee.

A NEW NATIONAL PARK.

Although our own national park has been given the go-by in Congress, for the present at least, that body has not been oblivious to the value of such reserves, for it has established one in Montana—Glacier national park on the Canadian line. It was authorized by an Act of Congress two years ago. The new park comprises 1400 square miles among the Rocky mountains in northwestern Montana and contains scenery quite comparable to the finest in Europe.

Glacier Park is thus described in print:

> Stepping over the northerly border of the park one finds himself in Canada; at the east of the tract is the Blackfeet Indian reservation, at the west is the northerly fork of the Flathead river, and along the southerly edge runs the Great Northern railway, whose officials co-operated in securing the setting apart of the land for public use and have spent large sums for the service they offer the tourist visiting the park.
> The main range of the Rockies runs through the park from north to south and lakes McDonald, Kennedy and Louise and upper and lower St. Mary's lakes. Two Medicine lake and Avalanche lake, all surrounded by towering cliffs and peaks, provide a variety of scenes most impressive. The Cutbank river, with its deep and rocky canyons, is a wild, rollicking stream which finally reaches the Atlantic ocean through the Missouri river. Trails lead over Cutbank pass to the summit of Triple Divide mountain, where one can see the water flowing down three different sheds toward their different destinations, the Gulf of Mexico, the Pacific ocean and Hudson bay.
> The government already is building roads and trails in many places, erecting buildings and making the wonders of nature accessible to the sightseer, and there are several hotels and camps where travelers are well cared for. There are at present but two entrances to the reservation, one at Belton on the west side of the continental divide, and one at Midvale, on the eastern slope. Both are on the main line of the railroad. The former is 1608 miles and the latter 1150 miles from Chicago.
> Two weeks, it is said, can be spent to advantage in the park, so many things are there well worth seeing. Besides it is a big country and there is a great deal of up and down. At Little St. Mary's lake the water falls 100 feet. If one visits Lincoln peak he can look up 300 feet at Mt. Jackson and down 2000 feet into Lake Louise. It is several days' trip on horseback to Blackfoot glacier, one of the largest in America.

This is a fine park, like the Yellowstone and Yosemite, but inferior to both except in glacial attractions, which, no doubt warrant it in being set apart. But it is not to be spoken of for novelty in the same breath with Kilauea. There is the largest active volcano in the world, yet the tamest; giant ferns not to be found elsewhere in America; tree moulds, the relics of ancient lava flows; views of three gigantic mountains; strange bird and tree life. Here are the elements of an incomparable national park; and we could have it if the subject could get a persistent and intelligent advocacy at Washington.

ARMY APPROPRIATION BILL.

There is time to pass the Army bill over the President's veto unless Congress prefers and is able to pass the measure over again with the Wood removal clause left out. Assuredly Congress will not leave the army without pay, food or forage after July 1, which will be the case unless the usual appropriation is made available before then. We look for very quick action on this matter. Meanwhile if Dr. Wood should manage to get himself put on the retired list it would simplify the trouble.

The item that W. A. Kinney had contracted a moderate form of typhoid in Boston, taken with the death of Aviator Wright from the same disease, caught in Southern travel, and many other instances of the kind, calls notice to the peril that lies in changing drinking water indiscriminately. A traveler over wide reaches of country may drink water from many sources in a week's time. Thus in going from San Francisco to New York, by the Southern route, he takes the successive risks of Spring valley water, Southern California and Texas alkali water, the surface water of Alabama and Mississippi, and so on to the James river and Potomac products to the various waters of Greater New York—that is, he does, unless he makes sure of distilled water all the time, which he cannot always do.. A safer plan, though more expensive, is to stick to some standard bottled water. It is a costly recourse, but less so than doctor's or hospital bills.

Mayor Gaynor of New York city might now be in the forefront of Democratic presidential affairs but for the shot of a half-madman which, at a critical time, quelled his ambition for politics. When he was wounded in the head the State election in New York was only a few months away. Mayor Gaynor was the natural nominee of the Democracy, but he was unstrung by his close call and stood aside for Dix, a much less conspicuous man, who beat Roosevelt's candidate for governor by 60,000 majority. While this success did not elevate the modest Mr. Dix to the rank of Presidential favorite, it would have made Gaynor as conspicuous as a similar victory did Grover Cleveland. Now, however, the Mayor is only groomed as a dark horse.

The Spanish laborers who think it is too hot for them in the fields back of Hilo will find that a change to the California fruit-picking districts will be of no benefit to them. A hotter place than interior California in summer is hard to find, and it is no place to look for work in winter, as an army of idle Portuguese has attested. Here, with a moderate climate, work may be found for twelve months in a year at good pay.

TIMES CHANGE

By WALT MASON.

In days of old, so I've been told, the knight who won success was wont to seek, week after week, for damsels in distress; he giants faced and ogres chased and fought with sword and lance, and felt repaid when rescued maid gave him a grateful glance. In those old days the woodland ways with damsels crowded were, who needed aid, and so his blade sent clouds of flying fur. Those days are gone, so help me John, and knights are on the blink; and helpless maid cries out for aid and succor, I don't think. If modern knight in armor bright went forth to succor dames, he'd find a squad of girls abroad a-playing lawless games; he'd see a mob, with vim athrob, of wild-eyed Crazy Janes, a-throwing bricks, dead cats and sticks through merchants' window panes. The rattled knight in dire affright would chase himself and say: "The rescue scheme is but a dream as girls are built today; I'd seek the lairs of grizzly bears and rescue them, by jings, ere I would walk around a block to help those screeching things!"

LITTLE INTERVIEWS

MORRIS WALTERS—I sometimes wonder if Honolulu is such a dirty city as she is made out to be.

A. F. COOKE—Smoking has been started in the Alexander Young Hotel Cafe. It should be stopped.

JOHN MARCALLINO—I have started clearing my Kuliouou lot and shall proceed with the erection of a small residence there right away. I am more than pleased with my purchase.

SECRETARY VETLESEN — The least that can be said about the boys who went up on the yacht Hawaii is that they were very remiss in keeping us informed as to the doings at the San Pedro end. Publicity is what is needed and what the public wants. The local newspapers are doing their best to give the race all possible prominence but they are greatly handicapped by lack of material on which to work.

CHARLES BARRON ("Soapbox")—Well, I'm going to beat it in the Wilhelmina. I will decide when I get to San Francisco what to do next. I have no idea at present that I shall go to Baltimore, although I could get there in time for the convention if I liked to go. While away I will act as a promotion committee and for one thing I will get thoroughly posted on political conditions. I predict, however, that William Jennings Bryan will be the next Democratic standard bearer.

AT THE THEATERS

Big Vaudeville Bill Tonight
At Liberty Theater.

An entirely new show will "take the boards" at the Liberty Theater commencing tonight, when the theater's policy reverts to vaudeville, for a three weeks season, and if the opinion of Manager McGreer is any criterion tonight's program will include one of the most novel acts in variety, it being the original Chung-Hwa Chinese comedy four, that has recently created somewhat of a furore in mainland theatrical circles by their surprising cleverness in comedy roles of a distinctly European type, while their singing of ragtime melodies, Scotch impersonations, and Irish dancing, is said to be on a par with several specialists in these various forms of entertaining.

The feature of the bill, however, will be Emerson and Baldwin, a comedy juggling act, the equal of which has never been seen in this city, and who, with the Chinese quartet, leave here two weeks hence to open an engagement at Hammerstein's Theater, New York city.

The other features of the bill will be Miss Harris, comedienne, and the Dancing Donnellys' together with the usual four reels of moving pictures.

At The Empire.

The famous Italians Saxophone Quintette, the Recci's will close their engagement at the Bijou tonight and have arranged their best program for tonight. There will no doubt be a big turning out of music lovers as these musicians are the best in their line. Curran, the one legged acrobat is still doing marvelous stunts on the bars, rings and trapeze. The picture is of the class A variety.

Hughes Co. in Second Success.

"Fiddle-dee-dee," the second offering of the Hughes Co.'s return engagement, proved equally as enjoyable as their initial bill though there was not as large a crowd present last night as the show deserved considering the quality of the entertainment and the reasonable prices.

With a very light plot the bulk of the work centers around the comedians who are in Paris trying to dispose of a mechanical doll. The doll is broken in the unpacking and the Hebrew essays the role of the doll much to the amusement of the audience. The plot here disappears and the rest of the show is a musial melange with Madame Lloyd and Miss de Guy as the shining lights.

Miss Flo Sherlock, a member of the chorus, surprised all by her clever rendition of "My Bonnie Highland Lassie," in Scotch costume. Miss Phillips, another member of the clever chorus, scored with Mr. Leonard in the "Texas Tommy" dance. This dance was very gracefully performed by the pair with the tough parts eliminated.

The following musical numbers bombard the play:

Act One.

1—Opening Chorus .....Tourists
2—"Hands Up" .....
Miss de Guy, Mr. Lydston and Chorus
3—"That Rail Road Rag".....
.....Lydston and Chorus
4—Duet—"What Makes the World go Round"...Mdme. Lloyd and Lydston
5—"Oh You Beautiful Doll".....
.....Miss de Guy and Baby Dolls
6—"When Billy Comes Marching Home"....Miss de Guy and Chorus

Act Two.

1—Opening Chorus .....Students
2—Sextette, "Keep on Making Love"
..Miss de Guy, Miss Phillips, Mr. Stanhope and Mr. Le Blanc.
3—Solos "Selected" ....Mdme Lloyd
4—"O Mr. Dream Man" .....
.....Miss de Guy and Ponies
5—"The Texas Tommy Dance"—Albert Leonard and Miss Caroline Phillips.
6—"Bonnie, My Highland Lassie"..
....Miss Flo Sherlock and Lassies
7—Finale ..... The Company

er up his old tin cans and bottles. He is expected to do this himself except under exceptional circumstances. We are going to try to cart all the rubbish away and dispose of it, and that should be about the extent of our work, aside from inspecting and seeing that premises are properly cleaned."

The Cleanup committee hopes to do in one day what last year required a week or more to accomplish. A big part of the efforts of the committee will be expended in getting rubbish removed promptly, and less in doing work that private citizens should perform. The fund for this year is slightly larger than the amount expended last year, but it will be more largely used in hiring carts than in implements and laborers.

Boy Scouts to Front.

Scout Commander J. A. Wilder has notified Wills T. Pope, chairman of the committee on scouts and bicycle messengers, that one patrol of scouts, numbering about twenty boys, will be ready for duty all day on Thursday. They will report to Cleanup Headquarters, corner of Merchant and Alakea streets, at 7 a. m., to Mr. Pope, who will be on duty also during the day. The boys will then be assigned to the different district where they will serve as messengers, or in some instances probably as inspectors. Because the scout master of one of the patrols does not approve of cleanup work, that patrol, it is understood, will not be on hand.

Schools Will Clean Up.

While Thursday will be a legal holiday all over the Territory, Superintendent Pope, of the department of public instruction, states that in most of the schools it is likely that the greater part of the day will be devoted to cleaning up about the school premises. To various inquiries he has made suggestions along this line. "I feel," said Mr. Pope, "that the day should not be considered in the light of a holiday, in the sense that no work should be done. The day was set apart for a definite purpose, and the schools, I believe, should observe the spirit of this object as far as possible. A lesson in civic cleanliness should be impressed upon the children."

form for inspection at the board meeting tomorrow and, after the members have carefully perused all the figures, contracts will be awarded.

"We also have our regular routine work to attend to and this, together with the special projects, will keep us busy alone without counting in the inspection trip to Maui. But if it can possibly be managed, Dr. McCoy and I will be on the Claudine when she pulls out for Maui."

Dr. McCoy this morning made application for a license allowing him to practice medicine in the Territory, as under his present status as a government physician there has been some doubt raised as to the legality of his examning suspects at the station.

Soapbox Is Going.

"Soapbox" Barron is going to the Coast tomorrow, on the Wilhelmina. He says that he is coming back very soon, and that when he comes he will be more talkative than ever. Soapy says that on his arrival on the return trip he will know absolutely all that there is to be known on all subjects, and will proceed to inform his fellowmen to the full extent of their listening powers. He made several speeches from the seat of a bicycle on Fort street this morning, but they were merely practice.

law. In the soil around the roots of plants from Japan we found three large larvae of a Melolontha species as well as a colony of ants. On another shipment of plants from Japan we found the following scale insects: Pseudococcus azaleae, Pseudaonidia duplex, Lepidosaphes curiae, Parlatoria pergandei and Parlatoria proteus. Some rice owned by a Filipino we found infested with Tribolium ferrugeneum, a cosmopolitan pest. From beans and acorns in the baggage of the Harpalion immigrants we found the pea weevil, Bruchus pisorum, and a Curculionid."

During the month there arrived at Honolulu thirty-five vessels of which twenty carried vegetable matter, two building sand and one ballast. Merchandise passed as free from pests consisted of 541 lots and 8709 parcels. There were thirty lots and 166 parcels fumigated, and thirteen lots and 165 parcels burned.

Rice arriving from Japan, amounting to 20,760 bags, was passed as clean and free from pests. Notice has been given to rice importers to notify their agents in Japan regarding the fumigation of rice at the ports of that country, informing them that they must not ship any rice infested with weevil to Hawaii in the future.

Inter-Island and Hilo.

During the month of May sixty-four Inter-Island steamers were attended to and the following shipments were passed on: 447 bags taro, 10 bags taro tops, 2 bags cocoanuts, 1 box sugar cane, 95 boxes plants, a total of 555 packages inspected and passed.

The following packages were refused shipment: 185 packages of various fruits, 20 packages of vegetables, 4 packages of plants, 2 packages of green awa roots, a total of 209 packages inspected and refused shipment.

Brother M. Newell, inspector at Hilo, reports the arrival of seven vessels there, four of which carried vegetable matter consisting of 84 lots and 1508 packages. One lot of palms was fumigated on account of scale insects.

Arthur E. Carter, inspector of Inter-Island traffic, tendered his resignation on May 21, and Mr. Ehrhorn temporarily appointed Robert K. Kanakanui as assistant inspector for the work, pending further arrangements to be made regarding Inter-Island inspection after the end of June.

STEAMSHIP TRAVEL ON THE PACIFIC

In the following brief sketch Mr. Kerrell tells readers some of the opportunities for sightseeing on both sides of the Pacific.

The eyes of the world are on San Francisco. This expression is by no means original. It has been offered hundreds of times, but at no time has it meant so much as it does today. The Panama canal is about to be opened to traffic. The commencement of business through this great waterway—the larger part of which business will go to San Francisco—has influenced a part of this observation toward the city by the Golden Gate. The Panama Pacific International Exposition, to be held in San Francisco in 1915 in commemoration of the opening of the canal, has turned the eyes of countless thousands upon this city.

Is there in America today a native who would not like to see for himself the work of digging the biggest ditch? Who, in all the world, is not intensely interested in the $100,000,000 water route that is being cut across the western hemisphere? The work of cleaving a passage through this part of the globe has today reached its most interesting and spectacular stage. Approximately three quarters of the work is now completed. The great cuts, fills, locks, retaining walls and the immense dams are now at a period of construction where the visitor can easily see the magnitude of this huge work.

To see just what American pluck and energy has accomplished no better time to visit the Panama Canal Zone could be selected than now. Not so very many years ago the trip to the Canal Zone was fraught with hardships and inconveniences. Not so today, however. It is now possible to leave San Francisco on a palatial liner, visit a number of interesting points on the west coast of Central America, or go direct to the Canal Zone by an express steamer if one desires; see the work of the building of this great canal in all of its thousands of interesting phases, and when he has seen enough he may board another splendid steamship on the Atlantic side of the canal and land in New York. All within one month. Central America has so many interesting places to see that one should not take the trip with the idea of inspecting the canal alone.

The Pacific Mail, the pioneer steamship line of the Pacific, operates the largest line of steamers on the western ocean. Embarking from San Francisco on any one of seven liners you are immediately surrounded by all the comforts of the most modern hotel. The traveler is made to feel immediately he or she is aboard the steamer, that they have left no luxuries behind. The spacious dining saloon, social hall, library, large and well ventilated cabins and the broad, white decks remind one of everything that is luxurious. Now let us locate ourselves on one of these giant liners and begin a voyage across the Pacific. Promptly at 1 o'clock in the afternoon, 'mid the screech of whistles of bay craft and the scattering of small boats, your, or perhaps I should say, our, steamer, pulls away from the pier and out into San Francisco bay and turns her nose out toward the Golden Gate. On the way to the ocean as we pass down the bay San Francisco's wonderful waterfront is shown to its best advantage. San Francisco bay is known as the world's greatest natural harbor and to pass through the Golden Gate, in or out, is the best way to see it.

A delightful break in the voyage across is the stop at Honolulu. The peculiar beauties of the Hawaiian coast are the delight of every lover of scenery. The evenness of the temperature and the bracing air from the mountains and the sea make the climate unrivaled. Including the coral islets there are 20 islands, all of volcanic origin, in the Hawaiian group. You do not feel that you are in a strange country, except for the tropical scenery. English is spoken everywhere.

Let us now leave Honolulu with a wealth of delightful memories and take our place on the steamer for Japan. As the ship enters Yokohama bay and the mountains of Japan come into view one is reminded of the scenery on china, embroidered screen and fan and realizes that the beauties of the country have not been exaggerated. The Orient is located just after you land. The native jinrikisha, police and other officials do everything for your comfort. The police and other officials and jinrikisha men all speak English. Three or four months can be spent in Japan without any fear of it becoming tiresome, there are so many places and things to see. There is Tokio, the capital, only 20 miles distant from Yokohama, which is nearly entirely Japanese. Should you reach Tokio in April the cherry blossoms, or in October the chrysanthemums are in bloom. For places of interest Tokio is one of the greatest. The imperial palace, the castle, the Buddhist temples and the Bazaar. Then there are other towns, Nikko, Hakata, Miyanoshita, and Kioto, all within a short distance of Tokio. Then there are Kobe, Osaka and Nagasaki. Really one should be in a position to visit every part of Japan in order to realize what a beautiful country it is.

From Japan we steam for China, the first port of that country to be reached being Shanghai, the great cosmopolitan metropolis of the Far East. China can be seen in a short time or you can spend several weeks going over the country. Although there are, at stated intervals, steamers which proceed from Nagasaki direct to Manila, thus making the voyage short and quick, it is usual for the tourist to travel via Hongkong, especially if he or she can spare the time. There are several lines of steamers sailing from the latter port, a boat leaving every two or three days, and the voyage to Manila is a matter of only 72 hours. There is hardly an American today who has not heard of Manila and the Philippine islands. They are a part of the United States now and there is and should be a desire on the part of every citizen to see our island possessions.

From any of these oriental ports passengers may be booked for trips that if you really have the time and want to see the Far East you should take. There is the Australian trip, the trip through the China sea to Singapore, Calcutta and Bombay, Egypt and the Mediterranean, Africa and then Europe and back to your own United States. A trip around the world may include many interesting side trips or it may take only about three or four months.—Christian Science Monitor.

Madame Jean Abadie of the French laundry has returned and will give her personal attention to the dry cleaning of ladies' garments.

MISS MYLOTT'S SINGING PLEASED

Before a large audience last night Miss Eva Mylott, the Australian contralto, sang through a long program, besides responding to several encores. It would have been better if the singer had secured some assistance, as a program such as the one given is liable to become monotonous.

Miss Mylott has a nice voice although she has not a very big range She has been well trained, however, and her singing is distinctly pleasing. In the "Cry of Rachael," the last number on the program, Miss Mylott undertook a song that was a little too heavy for her, although she managed it well.

She quickly won favor with her audience and was well received throughout. The first part of the program consisted of foreign numbers and although they were received well there was a marked appreciation when she came to the more simple songs written in English.

The program was as follows: Caro Mio Ben, G. Giordana; Recit and Aria che faro, Gluck; Obstination, Fontailles; Dites Moi, Nevin; Printemp qui Commence, Saint-Saens; In the Time of Roses, Richardt; Oh, That We Two Were Maying, Nevin; Still wie die Nacht, Bohm; Wenn ich Frueh in den Garten geh (folksong), Schumann; Der Schmied (the forge), Brahms; Im Herbst, Eugen Haile; Kashmiri Song, Woodforde Findem; Ballad of Kisses, Somervell; Meeting of the Waters, Moore; Will o' the Wisp, Spross; The Cry of Rachael, Psalter.

MAHUKA SITE CASE STILL HANGS FIRE

Contrary to expectations the Mahuka site case did not go to the jury today. Judge Dole has not yet finished his work on the instructions and when the jury appeared in court this morning, they were once more excused, this time until tomorrow morning. By that time it is expected that the judge will have concluded his work and will be ready to instruct the jury as to the law upon which, together with the evidence, they are to base their verdict.

SOCIETY

OVER THE TEACUPS.

Society Editor.
Telephone 2799.

A husband said the other day to a friend, "I have come to the wifeless breakfast."

"And do you know why?" quickly asked his wife.

"No special reason, I suppose," replied the husband blankly. "Just because you didn't want to get up."

"Not at all," she answered pleasantly. "It is because I came first to the newspaper breakfast."

To his credit be it said, he saw the point and the justice of it. But she had to tell him. He thought he had a perfect right to inflict the newspaper breakfast on her. But he was injured, and also oblivious to the cause, when she inflicted the wifeless breakfast on him.

Some time ago a well known man writer said he didn't think women were fit to vote while they wore hatpins that projected several inches beyond the brims of their hats and endangered all those who came near them. Whereat a well known woman writer replied that if this held good, men weren't fit to vote who threw matches around in public places where they were liable to set fire to women's dresses.

Both of these instances go to show that the spirit of the times is changing. What is sauce for the goose is becoming sauce for the gander. Once upon a time a woman would have meekly endured the newspaper breakfast and done nothing,—believing, or at any rate if she didn't really believe, pretending to, that whatever administered to her lord and master's comfort was the proper state of affairs. She would have cut off her hatpins, or tied her hat on, had a law been passed to that effect, and though she might have looked at the lighted match and had her own private thoughts about it, she would never have lifted her voice publicly upon the subject.

Neither the wifeless nor the newspaper breakfast is to be commended, nor the overlong hatpin, nor the lighted match. But the result that is working out of the new condition of things is that all of them will be abolished. Under the new order, the man must reform his unpleasant habits as well as the woman. And surely, to all right-thinking people, this is the better way. It may be very complimentary for women to be legislated into being angels, because perforce they have no voice in the making of the laws which they must obey. But they have come to the time when they think a little legislation for men, by some one other than men, will be good for the masculine side of creation. And the world will certainly be more symmetrical and better managed when this comes to pass.

So if women who wear too long hatpins are not fit to vote, neither are men who recklessly toss about lighted matches. And if laws are passed fining the woman whose hatpin is legally too long, so should laws be passed imposing a fine on the man who throws away a lighted match. And from the spirit that brings a more equable adjustment of these things, will come a better or tied her hat on, had a law been passed to that effect, ad though she

THE FULL GOBLET.

"The heart of a mistress, some boy may estrange; Friendship shifts with the sunbeam. Thou never canst change."
—From Byron's "Fill the Goblet Again."

Your mission on earth today is the same
As the day Byron wrote "Fill the Goblet again."
They will meet, will they not, spectres silent and grim,
If the lip now so ruddily oft touches thy brim.

There is full the same measure of heartaches! and woe
Alurk in thy depths as there were long ago.
I have stood, who has not, by the grave of a youth
From whom you took love, honor, virtue and truth.

I have watched by the side of a wine-sodden soul,
Whose wild maudlin ravings were inspired by the bowl.
We have seen, have we not, the poor mortals slain
Who insisted on filling the goblet again.

I have heard widows wail, orphans cry in despair,
From whom you took husband, father, all they held dear.
We have known, have we not, woman, may our faith e'er abide,
Who drank to your dregs, cast adrift on the tide.

I have seen men, crime-steeped, go down to their doom.
Whom you took as a child and led on to the tomb.
I have hoped, who has not, for the dawn of the day
When thy reign on this earth shall forever lose sway.

Yes, Byron was right, when he sang the refrain
To "Thou Rosy Wine," "thou never canst change."

PUNAHOU ALUMNI ANNUAL MEETING

One of the most interesting events of Commencement Week at Oahu College is the annual meeting of the Punahou Alumni Association. A special effort has been made by the officers of the association to make the annual meeting tomorrow afternoon a very interesting one.

Besides a short report from the president on what has been done by the officers and committees this past year there will be three ten minute addresses. Dr. William C. Hobdy will speak from the physician's and parent's standpoint on what physical instruction and facilities such a school as Punahou should provide for its students. Dr. Hobdy is well known as an able speaker and the subject is one in which he is particularly interested. It should therefore prove most instructive.

President Griffiths will speak on what the school is now doing in the line of athletic work and what it would like to do and is planning to do as soon as it has the equipment.

James A. Wilder will respond for the Alumni with some reminiscences of old Punahou days and what the Alumni have received from the school and what their responsibilities are.

The College Glee Club will be on hand and provide music for the occasion during the afternoon. A general social time with refreshments will follow.

All former students of either the Preparatory or College are invited to be present at this annual gathering which will be held at 4:30 p. m. tomorrow, Wednesday, which time has been set to give the business men an opportunity to be present. It is hoped that there will be a large gathering of alumni and friends at this annual meeting which will be held around the old spring, where cluster so many interesting and varied memories of the school.

The store of Henry May & Co., Ltd., will be closed all day Thursday, June 20th, "Cleanup Day."

MORE DATA OF BALDWIN'S LIFE

After the obituary sketch of the late D. D. Baldwin in yesterday's Star was printed, Professor W. D. Alexander kindly sent in some data from which the following additional items are taken.

Mr. Baldwin attended Punahou school 1844-51, and Yale College 1853-57. His marriage was at Bridgeport, Conn., Oct. 7, 1857, and he returned to the islands in 1858, becoming principal of the Lahaina school from September of that year till 1865. He engaged in the cultivation of cane in Lahaina and was manager of Kohala plantation 1865-72, where he introduced the Lahaina cane to which the plantation owed its success.

He returned to New Haven, Conn., and remained there 1872-74. On his return he was appointed first assistant in Lahainaluna Seminary. In 1877 Mr. Baldwin was appointed inspector general of schools. Under his administration the number of schools in which English was the basis of instruction increased from five to 100. In October, 1885, he retired from this position and was again appointed teacher at Lahainaluna. He remained there until January, 1891, when he removed to Haiku, Maui, and served as principal of the Hamakuapoko school until he retired from the profession, January, 1905.

Mr. Baldwin was an authority on ferns and mosses, and as conchologist had one of the largest private collection of shells in the United States. He may also be regarded as a pioneer in the pineapple industry.

PUNAHOU CLOSING EXERCISES START

The graduating exercises of Punahou really began this morning when the first grade were promoted with formal exercises at 11 o'clock.

The class day exercises which the eighth grade have adopted from their elders were held at one o'clock. A good program with tree planting ceremony made up the exercises.

The graduating exercises of the Preparatory school will be held tomorrow at nine thirty o'clock, one day earlier than usual. Chas. R. Bishop Hall will be the beautifully decorated for the occasion, where parents and friends will gather in numbers to see the diplomas presented to the class of forty-five graduates.

One of the numbers on the program is along the line that has been followed for a number of years of having a student give a talk on some object built by his own hands. In past years Alexander Anderson has talked about wireless telegraphy, demonstrating with one of the first wireless telegraphs in the Islands, the Tuttle brothers built and explained the construction of an aeroplane, and this year David Withington has made a model of a diver which he will use to tell about "Divers and Diving."

A NEW MIDDY BLOUSE FOR THE CANOE GIRL.

Daintier than the regulation Jack Tar blouse with navy blue trimming, is this pretty canoeing blouse of white galatea with facings of pink linen. The model is very girlish and is worn over a short skirt of gray and white cotton whipcord. Through the street the canoeing girl wears neat buttoned boots of white buckskin with her short skirt, but at the boathouse she changes to rubber-soled yachting shoes, which are the only safe sort to wear in a canvas-covered canoe, through which a high heel is likely to put a dangerous hole.

WHERE IGNORANCE IS BLISS.

However wise and good they may be small boys are very often apt to be nuisances especially when they write about things before they find out the facts.

To read an account in the morning paper anent the ohia blocks on the Richards street wharf it would appear that an awful botch had been made of the job. As a matter of fact the blocking has been done in a very satisfactory manner and is giving every satisfaction.

There is a thirty-foot section at the end of the dock which has to be filled in again.

This was news to no one except the youthful scribe for the section was put down purely as an experiment. As a matter of fact there are four different experiments, each strip of blocks being laid with a different mixture.

The section was watched very carefully and when the right mixture had been found and had stood the most severe tests the main section of the wharf was laid. Where ignorance is bliss, however, it is foolish to be wise unless you know the facts.

ARMY APPROPRIATION BILL VETO MAKES HARD LINES

The veto by President Taft of the army appropriation bill has placed the military forces of the United States in a most unenviable position, according to officers stationed here who remember the days in the early eighties when Congress failed to provide for the army and the officers were forced to borrow money from J. Pierpont Morgan to pay their expenses during the six months that the paymasters were idle.

It is said that should Congress fail to provide the money necessary, it will work a great hardship on the enlisted men, particularly those who are married and have families. The officers will be able to borrow but the enlisted men have no such recourse.

Another problem presented is as to whether the contractors who supply the fuel and subsistence to the army are required by contract to deliver the goods without receiving prompt payment. If they are not so required, the army would have to disband, for while it is possible for a soldier to exist without money, he cannot live without food.

Army officers here are not inclined to blame President Taft who they say could not well have acted otherwise, but they do censure a Congress which plays politics with the army in so patent a manner. It is generally believed that there should be a constitutional amendment requiring that the army and navy be paid with such funds as the government possesses despite the pressure of politics, or other debts. The army, it is said, is not particularly interested as to whether Dr. Wood holds his position as chief of staff or not, but it is interested in receiving the appropriation which alone enables it to exist.

The Fourth Maneuvers.

Orders were issued today from department headquarters detailing the detachments of cavalry and field artillery, which under the direction of General Macomb will present a military tournament at Kapiolani Park on July Fourth.

The Fifth Cavalry band with two troops, and the machine gun detachment, together with one battery of field artillery, are ordered to march in from Schofield Barracks on July 2 and go into camp at the park. Major J. M. Jenkins of the Fifth Cavalry will be in command and will be accompanied by a staff.

The army is not inclined to police the exhibition grounds, holding that such duty belongs to the civil authorities of Honolulu. It is believed that with the usual good natured Honolulu crowds three or four policemen will be sufficient. If the police cannot handle the crowds and there is any danger to persons because of such disability the exhibition is likely to be stopped.

CROWD WANTED TO MOB A MAIL DRIVER ON WHARF

A committee of citizens who were on the wharf at the departure of the Mauna Kea at noon today called at the postoffice to make a protest to Postmaster Pratt against the actions of the driver of the wagon carrying mail to the steamer. According to the stories of witnesses the driver in question urged his wagon, at galloping speed, through the crowd, causing women and children to scatter right and left in order to avoid being run over.

One little girl didn't get out of the way in time, and was slightly injured. The driver of the wagon was much criticized by those who witnessed the incident, and he responded with abuse of his critics, in terms that didn't help matters any.

Pratt wasn't at the postoffice when the delegation arrived. Assistant Kubey received the protest and agreed to have an investigation made.

"If it hadn't been for the fact that the man was a Federal employe, driving a mail wagon," said J. C. Cohen, who was one of those to make a protest, "I think the crowd on the wharf would have mobbed the man, for the way he galloped through a crowd largely composed of women and children."

JACK LUCAS IS TOO GOOD A MAN TO LOSE FROM JURY

Claiming that as he is deaf in one ear it would be impossible for him to hear but one side of the case, Jack Lucas made a vain attempt this morning to get himself excused from jury duty in Judge Cooper's court. Panini Jack, together with a lot of other men, was summoned on a special venire. The job didn't look good to him and he protested, but without avail.

"You seem able to hear me," remarked Judge Cooper, smiling.

"Yes, I can hear you all right," returned Lucas, but I couldn't hear both lawyers. I've got a bum ear and the other one's out of commission. I couldn't possibly hear more than one side of the case."

"I think you'd better serve, Mr. Lucas," said the judge, and Panini subsided with the grin he always wears when he has scored one.

The case on trial is an echo of those frantic days of a year and a half ago when the steamer Senator descended upon our defenseless shores and tried to carry away a thousand or so of our expensively obtained Spanish and Portuguese laborers. Among them was Liberato Gomez, who had enlisted for the Alaska canneries. Before the steamer sailed, however, Sheriff Jarrett, acting under th instructions of Judge Whitney, boarded her and arrested Gomez upon some misdemeanor charge. He was held for five days and then, like most of the other arrested in similar manner, turned loose.

Now Gomez is suing Judge Whitney, Sheriff Jarrett, Attorney General Lindsay, E. Faxon Bishop, E. D. Tenney and Richard Ivers for damages for alleged false imprisonment. He is represented by Attorney C. W. Ashford, while City Attorney Cathcart and his deputy, Fred Milverton, are appearing for the defendants. Most of the morning was consumed in an effort to secure a jury.

MUST LOOK SHARP TO VOTE

Those prospective citizens of the United States who have taken out their first papers but who have not yet been naturalized must file their petitions for naturalization very soon if they want to vote at the general election in November.

Clerk A. E. Murphy, of the federal court, says that many of those who have taken out their first papers seem to have the idea that all they need to do is to file their petitions for naturalization and have the matter finished up in a few days. The truth is that their names must be posted for ninety days, and the laws of the United States provide that no petitions for naturalization shall be heard within thirty days preceding any general election.

Election day this year comes on November 5. Consequently petitions can not be heard after thirty days prior to that date. As the names must be posted for ninety days, it means that those not yet full-fledged citizens who want to vote at the election must file their petitions four months prior to election day, or by July 6.

SPANISH WOMAN WANTS SITUATION

One lone Spanish woman, whose husband is in the Japanese hospital a sufferer from trachoma, is the only dweller in the great shed of the Territorial immigrant station. She does not want to be parted from her husband so declines to go to a plantation, but she does want to go to work in some household.

She says she is young and strong and that while she only knows how to cook Spanish dishes she will be glad to learn the American way of preparing meals and, while doing so, is ready to wash and sweep and perform other household labors to the best of her ability.

The woman does not like to be alone at night in the deserted rooms of the big station and so wishes to find a place where she can work and live at the same time. Her husband is likely to be confined to the hospital for some time to come.

tions that had not been regularly passed upon by the board or some committee.

The board agreed that the keeper of the dog quarantine station was not sufficiently paid at $40 a month, and referred a requisition to make his salary $65 a month to the ways and means committee with power to act.

Fruitfly Control.

President Giffard, who had presented his seventh monthly report as director of the fruitfly control, submitted an amendment to the regulations on that subject, with reference from shipments of produce from Honolulu and way ports to Maui and Hawaii. He had communicated with the Hilo board of trade and the Maui chamber of commerce on the matter. The conditions were now such that the regulations should be modified. It is proposed in the amendment to except from the prohibition of shipments pineapples, bananas, cabbage, onions, potatoes and other root crops.

There was no prohibition against anything coming into Oahu. When the regulation was made it was not known in what products the fly was bred. Now they knew that the fly did not attack any of the articles now proposed to be excepted.

It was voted to refer the amendment to the attorney general for approval with such revision as he might see fit to make.

President Giffard read a communication from the Hilo board of trade, from which it appeared that the Hilo people are not disposed to continue the quarantine against the fruitfly, on the ground that it is only a matter of time when the pest will enter from Hamakua.

Mr. von Holt wanted the board to give an expression of opinion on the matter, and after some discussion he moved that the president be authorized to reply to the Hilo board of trade, stating that in view of the fact that Hilo, Puna and Kau districts are still uninfested with the fruitfly the precautions to keep it out of those districts should be continued.

Mr. Dowsett said the board had power to keep up the quarantine.

The president assented to this but said they could not take the responsibility for inspection on the other islands. This inspection on Hawaii, he had previously stated, cost only $50 or $60 a month.

President Giffard also submitted an amendment to Rule 11, relating to pests in general, which took the same course as the other. It provides for the shipment of imported fruits, etc., that have passed inspection by local dealers to customers without further inspection.

Mr. von Holt reported that nothing had been done regarding the Kahoolawe reclamation matter, as the committee on animal industry had yet to visit the island.

Besides the report on fruitfly control already mentioned—a lengthy document—the routine report for May of Forester Hosmer, Veterinarian Norgaard and Entomologist Ehrhorn were read by title and filed. Those of the forester and the veterinarian are lenghthy. That of the entomologist is summarized elsewhere.

DEATH OF FAMOUS WHALEMAN SUGGESTS SOME WHALING HISTORY

The following obituary notice of Captain Manter is from the Republican Standard, New Bedford, May 16. It makes the error of mentioning Father Damien as publisher of the Friend, instead of Rev. S. C. Damon, who was pastor of the old Seamen's Bethel and familiarly called "Father" Damon:

Captain Cyrus Manter, one of the most highly respected citizens of West Tisbury, died May 6 at the advanced age of 87 years. He was the son of the late Captain Granville Manter of Chilmark, and it was there he spent his boyhood days. At an early age he went to sea, soon rising to the position of captain, and for many years he spent nearly all his life on the water. Success attended his efforts and he has been retired for many years. He married Miss Amy Chase of Edgartown, who survives him. He also leaves a son, W. G. Manter, the well known contractor of Vineyard Haven.

The first Manter, surnamed John, came to the Vineyard about 1639 and for every generation there were Manters who followed the sea for a livelihood. Captain Manter's father was a captain and so it was natural that a son should follow in his footsteps.

Cyrus Manter shipped before the mast on the ship York, Captain Coffin, sailing from Edgartown in 1844 on a voyage that lasted 35 months and 16 days. The captain gave him a recommendation that was sufficient to land him a second mate's berth and he sailed from Vineyard Haven in the fall of 1847 in the Ocmulgee, the ship that was destined to visit the Arctic before her return. The ship rounded the Cape of Good Hope in the course of a whaling voyage to the south and eventually rounded into the Pacific ocean whaling on the well known grounds in the northern part of that ocean.

Previous to 1848 the cold, northern ocean was unknown to white men, and it was the adventurous whaling captains, fired with ambition to find new whaling grounds, who dared to steer their ships into the unknown north. It was in the year 1849 that the first Arctic voyage was made, and Captain Manter was one of the men on the voyage. Captain Joseph Dias, also of Marthas Vineyard, was also with Captain Manter on this voyage. At the time they made their first Arctic voyage Captain Dias was first mate and Captain Manter second mate of the ship Ocmulgee of Vineyard Haven, Captain Frederick Manter, master, the first whaling master to venture his craft past Bering strait.

American whalemen have always enjoyed fame as fearless navigators and previous to venturing into the Arctic they had sailed in every sea on the globe. But the Arctic held little terror for them once they knew that whales were to be found there. That there were whales in the Arctic ocean was discovered accidentally. In the year 1848, Captain Royce, master of the bark Superior of Sag Harbor, had ventured so far into Bering strait that his ship was carried through to the northern ocean. On the way through the strait whales were sighted going rapidly to the north. They were huge monsters and more numerous than had been met with in other waters, but they passed the ship so rapidly there was no chance to get any of them, though some were taken later. Captain Royce found himself in the strange ocean, uncharted and holding unknown terrors. It was not intended that the ship should get into the ocean and Captain Royce, at the first opportunity took his ship south through the strait. Safely out and proceeding south to the rendezvous of the whalers at the Sandwich Islands, Captain Royce had a wonderful story to tell of the strange ocean. His story was printed in the Friend, a paper published by Father Damien and having a considerable circulation among the whalemen. It became the talk of the islands and every whaleman there became interested in this discovery of a new whaling ground. It was the bowhead species of whale that Captain Royce had seen and at that period the whales became known as Royce whales in honor of the man who had first seen them. Among the whaling vessels in port was the ship Ocmulgee and Captain Manter was determined to venture his vessel into the Arctic ocean. It was the first voyage in which a whaling master intentionally steered his ship into the unknown sea.

In the fall of 1850 Cyrus Manter went out as first mate of the Ocmulgee under the command of Captain Cottle, another voyage to the North Pacific ocean lasting for three years.

In the winter of 1853 Captain Manter shipped as first mate in the full rigged ship Eliza F. Mason from New Bedford. While cruising around the Kings Mill islands the crew mutinied and set fire to the vessel. It was only through the heroic efforts of Captain Manter that the vessel was saved. After refitting at the Ladrone islands the Eliza F. Mason made a remarkable run south, covering 648 miles in 48 hours.

In the fall of 1857 Captain Manter sailed his first voyage as master, going out in command of the Edgartown ship Europa. This was a voyage to the North Pacific ocean, and lasted for nearly five years. Captain Manter finished his voyage in the Europa in 1862.

Captain Manter remained at home for three years after his first voyage as master. He married in 1863. In 1865 he sailed as first mate in the ship Thomas Dickason, commanded by Captain Nathaniel Jernegan. This was a four years' voyage to the North Pacific, and after two years as master Captain Jernegan left her and Captain Manter finished the voyage as master. He returned in 1869, the last of his actual whaling voyages, though he continued to be connected with that industry. After a number of years at home he took command of the Roman, taking her from the shipyards at Bath, Me., to San Francisco.

His next voyage was as master of the bark Legal Tender, carrying provisions to the Sandwich Islands and loading there with oil to go to San Francisco. From San Francisco he went in command of the Jenny Pitts, going to St. Lawrence island, in Bering strait, after a cargo of bone and oil. He returned to San Francisco and there took on an additional cargo to come to the Atlantic coast. Heavy weather was encountered and when the Sandwich Islands were reached the vessel was in such shape that a survey was ordered. The vessel was declared unseaworthy and she was stripped and sold after her cargo had been transferred to the Martha Davis, a Boston ship, bound to New Bedford. Captain Manter returned to San Francisco and there took command of the Siren to go to St. Lawrence island for another cargo of oil and bone. He went thence to the Sandwich islands and reshipping the bone aboard a sugar laden vessel bound for San Francisco, he continued the voyage to New Bedford. On the trip the vessel lost her rudder head in the gulf stream and the Siren was taken to Bermuda for repairs.

Captain Manter then went to Dundee, Scotland, for the Bartletts of New Bedford, to look into the merits of the steam whalers built there. As a result of his report the Belvedere, the first steam whaler, was built in Bath. Captain Manter took the Belvedere to San Francisco in 1880. It is a matter of interest that those on board with him during this trip were Captain H. Bodfish and Captain Benjamin Tilton, two men who shortly afterwards made their mark as Arctic whalemen. A few years later Captain Manter took out the steam whaler William Lewis taking the steamer through the Straits of Magellan. On previous voyages around South America he had gone around Cape Horn, making fourteen voyages around that dangerous point.

Captain Manter made his last trip to sea over twenty years ago, since which time he had been content to remain at home. His voyages had brought him a modest competence that had served to maintain him and his wife in a comfortable home in the charming old town of West Tisbury. Captain Manter spent nearly forty years in following the sea. During the first eighteen years of his going to sea he never spent a winter at his island home.

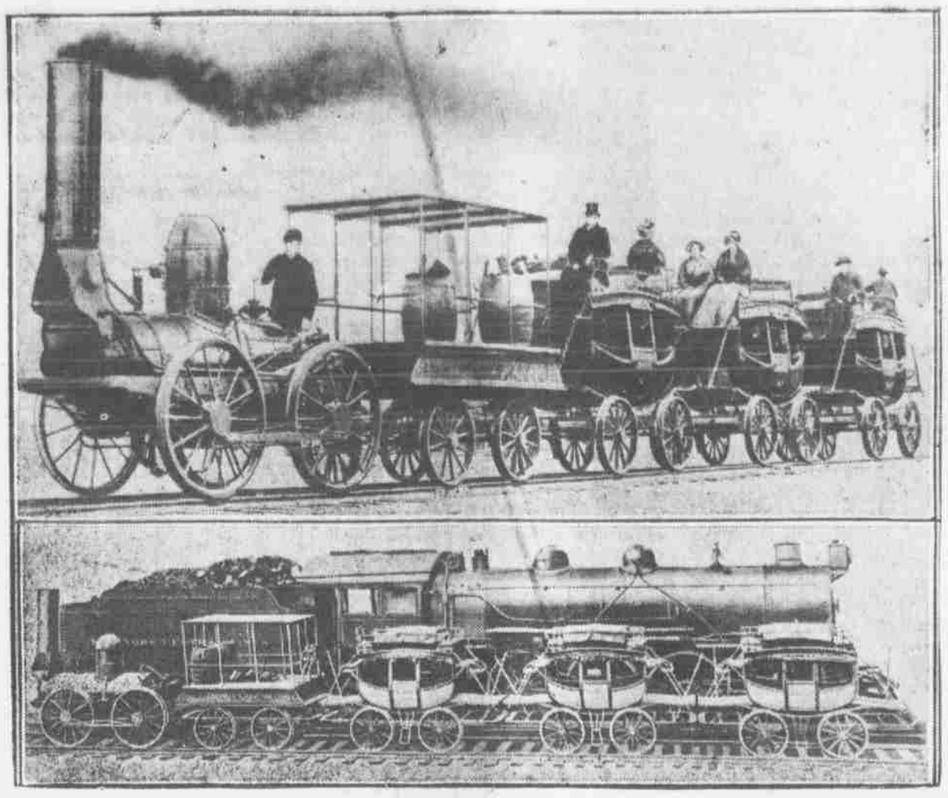
WILL SHOW OUR PROGRESS IN DISSOLVING DISTANCE



Upper—One of America's earliest railroad trains. Lower—Same train compared with present day locomotive.

How far man has progressed in the furtherance of his desire to cover the greatest amount of distance in the least possible time is to be demonstrated at a "travel and vacation exhibition" in New York. It is a long way from the rowboat to the ocean liner, from the ox cart to the compound locomotive, but the distance will be bridged at the show. In addition, the intermediate steps will be traced, and the exposition, the first of its kind to be held in America, will be interesting to the "never homes," to those who travel occasionally and to those who remain at home.

The exposition will have numerous features, but it is expected that the historical section will draw the largest number of visitors. All sorts of sources have been drawn upon for original exhibits, for models of those which it is impossible or inconvenient to move and for photographs and plans of others. Among those agencies which have cooperated to furnish interesting material are the Smithsonian institution, the United States government's scientific museum in Washington; the navy department, railroad and steamship companies and traffic clubs.

The Smithsonian will send models of early steamboats, including Fulton's Clermont, Stevens' Phoenix, John Fitch's boat and the Savannah, the first steam vessel to cross the Atlantic ocean. In addition the government will send a large model of the Panama canal. Admiral Peary will exhibit some of his sledges, and there will be a model of the Gjoa, in which Amundsen discovered the Northwest passage.

Motorboat devotees will find much to interest them in the first naphtha launch ever built, with its engine. They were constructed twenty-seven years ago and were the forerunners of the speedy motorboats, with the internal combustion engines which have now superseded those of the old type.

The progress of land transportation will claim a large share of space in the show. John Brown's old stage coach, used by the man of Osawatamie in his campaign trip through Iowa, and the original Deadwood state coach will arouse memories among the old timers.

One of the pictorial exhibits is a series of photographs and diagrams showing every locomotive constructed for the Georgia Central railroad from the beginning to the present day. The first is a tiny engine erected in 1882-3. It weighed about five tons and was called the Chinkapin.

But the gem of the collection, no doubt, to the minds of most of the visitors will be the old De Witt Clinton train, the first ever run in the state of New York, with its quaint, old time coaches, modeled after the horse-drawn vehicles of the time, its huge stack wood burning locomotive and the other features which have disappeared in the development of railroading. There are few relics of olden times more interesting than this train.

The illustration sets forth the relative sizes of the De Witt Clinton train and a giant passenger locomotive of today.

What the sailing vessels of olden days were as compared with the present great ocean liners the De Witt Clinton, the first steam railroad locomotive run in the states of New York is to the giant Pacific type of passenger locomotive now in service on the New York Central lines. The De Witt Clinton, with its original pioneer train of three coaches, made its first regular trip between Albany and Schenectady on August 9, 1831, attaining a maximum speed of fifteen miles an hour. The Clinton was built at the West Point foundry, foot of Beach street, New York. Its four driving wheels were four feet six inches in diameter, the cylinders five and one-half inches in diameter and sixteen inch stroke. The weight of the engine and tender was about six tons. The boiler had thirty copper tubes two and one-half inches in diameter. The engineer mounted a small seat attached to the rear of the tender and gave the signal for starting by blowing a tin horn. The fuel used on this trip was dry pitch pine, coal having been tried previously but found not to work satisfactorily.

As there was no spark arrester on the stack the smoke and sparks poured back on the passengers in such a volume that they raised their umbrellas as shields. The covers were soon burned off these, and each man whipped his neighbor's clothes to put out the fire started by the hot cinders. When a stop was made at the water station an attempt was made to remedy the disagreeable jerks, resulting from the slack between the coaches, by wedging rails from a neighboring fence between the cars and tying them fast by packing yarn. This plan succeeded and the train arrived at the inclined plane at Schenectady without accident. After the party had partaken of refreshments in Schenectady they returned to Albany and thus completed the first regular trip of a steam locomotive and train in New York state.

GOODALE SPEAKS GOOD WORD FOR PORTUGUESE AND SPANISH

Following is the statement of W. W. Goodale, manager of Waialua Agricultural Company, before the Home committee on immigration and naturalization relative to the excepting of Hawaii from the educational test for immigrants.

The Chairman.—Do you appear for any organization, society, or interest, Mr. Goodale?

Mr. Goodale.—None at all; I appear here merely as a citizen of Hawaii.

I want to say that I have had a great deal to do with the class of immigrants that are brought to Hawaii, particularly the Portuguese and Spanish people, and I desire to speak a good word for them as a people and as citizens of the Territory of Hawaii. It is true that the adults who come to Hawaii, or at least a very large proportion of them, are illiterate, in the sense that they can not read and write either their own language or ours. But they are people who make the very best of citizens; they are steady, industrious, law-abiding and intelligent; it is almost an unheard of thing that they figure in the police courts; a charge of stealing or crimes of violence or anything of that kind against any of these Portuguese people is almost unheard of; and even though they can not read and write it does not seem to us that this should outweigh and offset all the good qualities they have. We consider that they make the very best of citizens—that is the second and third generations. Education of children is compulsory in Hawaii; they are obliged to go to school up to the age of 15, and the more ambitious ones rise to high positions. Many of them become overseers, foremen, and mechanics. There is a civil engineer on the plantation that I am on who is the son of one of these original Portuguese immigrants. They are not only taking those high positions on the sugar plantations, but also in all the mechanical trades in the larger towns, and they are becoming a very important factor in the life there. The Spanish people have not had any such large opportunities as the Portuguese, and I think that the proportion of illiteracy among them is greater than among the Portuguese but we have not near as many of them and they do not cut so big a figure as the Portuguese.

Mr. Helgesen.—Are they as good workers as the Portuguese?

Mr. Goodale. Oh, yes. Most of them come from the Azores, which, as you know, are some small islands in the Atlantic, very rocky and hilly, and where agriculture is carried on with great difficulty. That and their poverty has resulted in making them a frugal, industrious, steady people.

I think there can not be too much said of them as being desirable immigrants and as a class to whom the test of literacy should not really apply to the extent of keeping them out of the country.

The Chairman.—In your experience, have you found any great difference between those who are literate and those who are illiterate as to their conduct and their citizenship?

Mr. Goodale.—We have possibly received some people whom the country from which they came was glad to get rid of, but I believe all of those have been of the more intelligent class; they have been better educated and brighter, perhaps—not smart enough to keep straight, but just smart enough to go wrong.

The Chairman.—Anything else you wish to say?

Mr. Goodale.—That is all, thank you.

ENGLISH AUTHOR'S ADVENTURES WITH THE TURKS IN TRIPOLI

(The Daily Chronicle, London.)

Mr. G. F. Abbott, a well known British author and journalist, who has been with the Turkish headquarters in the Tripolitan Hinterland since December last, has reached London. He left the Turks on March 18, and after an adventurous journey on foot, in the course of which he was lost in the desert, was robbed by Arabs, and finally imprisoned by an Arab garrison, reached London by way of Tunis.

Speaking to Reuter's representative of his experiences, Mr. Abbott said:

"I have spent about four months with the main Turkish and Arab forces in the desert round the town of Tripoli with a view to writing a book on the war.

"In London I had been warned that the Arabs themselves would cut my throat, or that the Italians would shoot me at sight if they caught me. Well, the Arabs, so far from cutting my throat, as soon as they made sure that I was not an Italian, treated me as a friend, while the Italians never had a chance of catching and shooting me, for the very simple reason that they dared not come out of their trenches. The only real difficulties I encountered were those unavoidable in desert travel—long marches on foot, on horse or on camel back, and, at the beginning, scarcity of provisions.

"The English Red Cross arrived most opportunely to assist the Turkish and German doctors already in the field—for fever really proved a much more formidable enemy than the Italian fire. Had the Italians followed up their occupation of the town of Tripoli by a vigorous advance along the coast and into the interior I have no doubt they would have been able to possess themselves, within a month, of all the territory as far south as the Djebal Mountains. The Turks had lost their prestige among the natives by evacuating the capital. The Arab recruits had deserted them en masse.

"The Arab population was ready to submit to the invader without striking a blow. Indeed, in several places like Azizia and Zanzur, which now are Turkish camps, they had hastened to hoist the white flag.

Missed Their Opportunity.

"For a few weeks the small Italophile party of influential natives in the town of Tripoli had it all their own way. No resistance seemed possible.

"Unfortunately for themselves, the Italians missed the psychological moment. As is clear from their subsequent behavior, they had come to Tripoli prepared to annex and not to conquer, and they wasted their time in changing the status of the country on paper instead of occupying it with garrisons.

"Their blunder gave the Turks and the Arab patriots time to rally. Fervid appeals were made to the population to rise in defence of their country and faith. The population responded with admirable spirit. The white flags were hauled down, and the first contingents of Arab volunteers began to arrive from the interior.

"Then came the massacres at Tripoli to fan the Arab spirit into fierce flames. From that moment submission became as impossible as resistance had at first seemed to be. From that moment, too, the position of the Italians has been growing weaker, and more volunteers—some on horseback, most on foot—are daily flocking up from the south to fight under the Sultan's flag, and week after week I saw these warriors, who at first had little besides bravery to qualify them as soldiers, learning the rudiments of discipline and tactics and the use of modern rifles.

"The attitude of those men can be summed up in one sentence, which is constantly on their lips: 'We shall go on fighting as long as there is one drop of blood left in our veins.' That this is not an empty piece of rhetoric I am convinced by repeated personal experience. I have seen Arabs wounded two, three, four, or five times, and each time, immediately the wound was healed, returning to fight again.

From the material point of view also the position of the Turks has been steadily improving, and that of the Italians as steadily deteriorating since the beginning of the war. At first the Turks had neither money nor provisions—a piece of bread or a handful of stale dates was about all they could find to eat, and a packet of 20 cigarettes that normally cost two pence had to be bought for two shillings.

"Gradually contributions from all over the Mohammedan world—Turkey in Europe and Asia, Egypt, Tunis, Algeria and so forth—began to come in and caravans of all sorts began to cross the frontier. Even volunteers from Tunis, Algeria, and the desert beyond Chadames came to join us, shouting 'Allah yansur es Sultan'—God save the Sultan. The French authorities cannot arrest this stream without running the risk of a rebellion of their own subjects, so profound is the enthusiasm aroused by this last attack of the Cross on the Crescent. As a very responsible French official in Tunis said to me: 'Even apart from political considerations, it is utterly impossible for us to guard such an extensive frontier. If the Italians wish to stop the inflow of men, money and food they must land an army and guard the frontier themselves.'

Prime Mutton in The Desert.

"Besides help from outside, this year's rains, after four years of drought, have been of immense benefit to the fighting Arabs. I saw the desert rapidly transforming itself into a beautiful meadow under my eyes and for some months past the flocks of sheep and goats that abound on Tripolitania have been fattening on luscious grass, with the result that I ate better mutton in the hinterland of Tripoli than I had ever tasted in the best restaurants of London. And that is not all. The Italians have given time to the Arabs of the various oases to till and sow their fields, and when the crops are harvested in June they will afford a supply of food that will make the forces of the Crescent independent of provisions from outside.

"On the other hand, the Italians, penned up in the town and its immediate environs, have, since all communication with the interior is cut off, been all this time obliged to rely entirely on supplies imported from Europe. From the point of view of health also, to one sick Arab you will probably find ten Italians for while the former are in the open desert, the pure air of which counteracts in a large measure the causes that make for disease, the latter are doomed to breathe the polluted atmosphere of an insanitary and congested Oriental town. All these conditions will be accentuated as the months creep in, and the summer, with its terrible heat and the suffocating sirocco, succeeds to the comparative coolness of the spring.

"Had the Italians advanced during the winter, when the climatic conditions were in their favor, and when owing to the calls of agriculture most of the Arab volunteers were obliged to stay at home, they might have been masters of the situation. But the fact that they have not quitted their fortified trenches has not only made advance now impossible, but has induced the Arabs to believe that the Italians are lacking in courage.

"Lastly, a word as to finance. The war costs Italy several million francs a day. It costs Turkey about £30,000 a month—and most of that money is raised by private contributions.

Arab Bravery.

"In the circumstances the struggle, so far as the Arabs are concerned, can continue indefinitely. Even if the Porte is compelled by troubles nearer home to conclude peace, they declare that this will make no difference to them. 'We will never submit to this invader,' was said to me a few days ago by a venerable old sheikh of 67, and he concluded his passionate speech with a solemn appeal to 'Allah, up there,' pointing to the blue heavens above. Personally, I have seen enough of Arab valour—a gil-

FUSEL OIL FROM SUGAR WASTE

A recent trade circular of the Department of Commerce and Labor contains some interesting discussions of the possibilities of production of fusel oil from sugar waste. The circular says:

Inquiry is made regarding the production of fusel oil in Cuba. After careful inquiry it is evident that no attempt is made to save this valuable by-product by the distilleries of Cuba, which run on the large supply of molasses coming from the sugar mills. As far as I can ascertain this is more the result of lack of knowledge in the matter of the production of fusel oil rather than any intention to sacrifice value.

Among the distilling interests to which this matter has been submitted one company is very anxious to open correspondence with a view to securing the technical advice and assistance which would be necessary in developing this new feature of their industry.

The price of molasses in Cuba fluctuates from year to year, but it can be averaged safely at about three and a half cents per gallon. All the available supply finds a ready market in Cuba, as it is used in local distilleries and is also shipped abroad in large quantities. In 1910 (the latest statistics available) the exportation of molasses from Cuba was in value $1,477,756, of which over sixty per cent went to the United States and very nearly all the remainder to England.

Roughly estimated, the present-day distillation of alcohol of all grades in Cuba would be about 1,000,000 gallons annually. There are no accurate statistics available.

Fusel oil is a by-product produced in the distillation of alcohol from various substances, including grain, beet and cane molasses, and wood. Its chief use in the United States is in connection with the manufacture of explosives. It is also used in making artificial fruit essences. The total output of this oil in the United States was 110,792 gallons during 1910, the last year for which figures have been compiled by the United States Internal-Revenue officials. This figure was exceeded only by the record year, 1907, when 124,709 gallons was produced. As the production of spirits distilled from other materials than fruit increased from 163,893,690 gallons in the fiscal year ended June 30, 1910, to 175,402,396 gallons in the fiscal year 1911, it is probable that the 1911 output of fusel oil showed a gain. Illinois ranks first in the production of proof spirits and fusel oil, Ohio second, and Louisiana third. In the first two States, alcohol is produced chiefly from grain, while in Louisiana molasses is the sole source.

The imports of fusel oil into the United States amounted to 4,953,252 pounds, valued at $598,199 during the fiscal year 1910, and 5,231,252 pounds, valued at $842,916, in 1911. European Russia ranked first as a source of supply, with Germany second, these countries supplying, respectively, 1,342,282 and 1,573,902 pounds in 1911.

It is estimated that the maximum amount of fusel oil obtained in the distillation of proof spirits is about two-tenths of one per cent. During the fiscal year 1911, the production of spirits from molasses amounted to 21,634,257 gallons, produced from 41,014,190 gallons of molasses. There were seventeen molasses distilleries in operation during that period, six in Massachusetts, three each in California and Louisiana, and one each in Hawaii, Kentucky, Michigan, New York, and South Carolina. Louisiana led in the production of spirits from molasses, followed by Michigan, New York, and South Carolina, in the order named.

THE MORNING CABLE REPORT

CHICAGO, June 18.—The Roosevelt leaders last night made confident assertions that they would nominate their man by a safe margin. On the other hand it was learned that they had caucused after midnight and had decided upon a plan of action which leaves them free to declare the convention called by the national committee irregular, and so call a convention of their own at which the Colonel could be nomniated without difficulty.

At the caucus it was decided that it was the sense of the meeting that no number less than 540 uncontested delegates should be regarded as a majority binding upon the Rough Riders. This plan was adopted and arrangements were made to bolt at the given cue.

One of the developments of the day was the publication of a telegram from President Taft in which he disavows the action of the national committee in handling the contested delegations.

Tremendous crowds gathered hours before the time set for the mass meeting in the Auditorium and by seven o'clock the streets in the vicinity of the building were congested for blocks with a shouting, cheering mass of humanity that struggled to get inside and hear what the Colonel had to say. Mr. Roosevelt appeared to be in a fighting mood when he finally appeared upon the platform and began his address. He went for the members of the national committee hammer and tongs, sparing them not at all. In one place he defined the committee as "twenty honest people and the remainder surething men." The crowd received his denunciations of the committee with yells of applause. There were times when he could not be heard for minutes, and stood frantically waving for silence, which was refused until the crowd tired itself out.

Mr. McKinley states that the President's chances are not menaced by the Roosevelt plans as announced, but the outcome is rendered more uncertain.

It was learned, however, that at the close of the caucus Mr. Roosevelt advised that the fight be made along parliamentary lines as long as possible.

Charlie Rice of Hawaii has been named as a member of the credentials committee of the incoming national committee which will meet for the first time at noon today.

Congressman Watson has been named as the floor leader for Mr. Taft.

SPRINGFIELD, Illinois, June 18.—In a fall from her aeroplane yesterday afternoon, Julia Clarke, an aviatrix, was instantly killed.

lant disdain of death such as I do not expect ever to see among Europeans—to disbelieve in the absolute sincerity of this declaration.

"A similar spirit prevails among the Turkish officers. Many among them have assured me that, in the event of peace between their own Government and Italy, they will simply throw up their commissions and go on fighting.

"But whatever the Turks do or fail to do matters little. The war is an Arab rather than a Turkish war. The Arabs call it jehad (Holy War), and themselves mudjahedoin (Holy Warriors). The appellation seems to me a little premature. If it were a real jehad, not one of us Christians would have remained alive in the Turkish camp. If my own observation, confirmed by many personal experiences, is not in error, the animosity so far is confined to the Italians, and does not touch any other European nation.

"At the same time, I believe that, as the war goes on, and the Arabs lose what faith still remains to them in Europe's justice and sense of fair play, the hatred may easily spread and the real jehad break out. Already we have had premonitions of such an event in the riots which Egypt on one side of Tripolitania and Tunis on the other have witnessed.

"What part the Senussi sect are playing in this drama it is easier to surmise than to state. But I made the acquaintance of one of these independent enthusiasts who have devoted their lives to preaching a general rising of Islam against Christendom in Northern Africa. He came out of the desert one day with a rifle over one shoulder (an Italian rifle taken in battle at Homs) and over the other a flag bearing the motto, 'Victory is from God, and conquest near.' He assured me that the time is approaching when all the Mussulmans of Northern Africa will rise as one man and drive the infidels into the sea.

"Even if this prediction is not fulfilled literally, I am persuaded that the Italians have worked serious prejudice both to themselves and to the French. The latter have already begun to prepare against this pan-Islamic agitation."

CULLOM'S RETIREMENT BREAKS LINK IN AMERICAN HISTORICAL CHAIN

"Cullom, when I die and you die and Frye dies and one or two others this senate will not amount to much, will it?" said Senator George Graham Vest of Missouri a few days before his death, is quoted in Senator Cullom's book of reminiscences. Vest is dead; Frye is dead, the "one or two others" whom the Missourian had in mind are dead or retired. Cullom has lost his seat. But the senate lives. There are other, younger men in it on whom the heat and burden of the day have fallen. How much they amount to is a matter of individual opinion. Vest was weighted down with years and illness when he spoke to Cullom.

But Cullom is going. Illinois Republicans have rejected him at the polls. Next March Lawrence Y. Sherman will take his place among the legislators under the big dome. So politics writes "finis" to the public career of the man who has held office longer than any other man in American history.

Almost thirty years long has been the term of Uncle Shelby M. Cullom in the United States senate—five full terms of six years each. Before he entered the senate wing of the capitol he served in the other section as a member of the house of representatives. Between times he was governor of Illinois, and before his service in the national legislature he learned the ins and outs of lawmaking as a member of the Illinois legislature. He was speaker of the lower house in his state for two terms.

It is a record that stretches beyond the days before the great war. In one sense Senator Cullom is a link with the earliest years of United States history, for he was born when Andrew Jackson was president, in 1829, and Jackson fought in the Revolutionary war.

Since the time of Lincoln, whom Cullom knew well and whom he resembles, the Illinois senator has been acquainted with every president. Some of them he knew intimately, and they urged him to enter their cabinets. But he refused consistently, preferring his seat in the senate to a seat at the council table over which he might have presided had the plans of his friends succeeded. It is recorded that at least twice he came within reach of the Republican nomination. But others proved more powerful than the tall, spare man from Illinois who knows politics intimately, has the qualifications of a statesman, but is not self assertive when there is a question of his own advancement.

There is in Senator Cullom's retirement an element to refute those men who hold that personal honor is an extinct quality in American politics. He retires from his senate seat with less money than he had when he entered it thirty years ago. He has busied himself with the affairs of his state and his country, but not with his own, outside of drawing his salary. He has lived on the salary and on little else. But on this point he ought to be quoted again, for his own words tell the story better than any one else could:

"I have been getting a little poorer financially every year I have been in office. I have less property today than I had when I left Springfield, nearly thirty years ago, to take my seat in the senate. Perhaps that is my fault. Some men think of investments and have good business sense. I never thought of things of that kind."

But it must not be inferred from Mr. Cullom's simple thoughts on the subject of amassing cash that he is equally simple in other things. No, indeed. In politics he knows the game from the time the cards are shuffled until the last jack pot is won. Many men in Illinois and elsewhere have been deceived by Uncle Shelby's simple, kindly manner into thinking that they could snatch away his senatorial toga and leave the old man bare to the winds of adversity. But it was not to be. It is an old story, but worth repeating, that Governor Tanner once, when cozied by his friends to try for Senator Cullom's seat pointed out a graveyard and said, "That place is full of men who thought they could oust Cullom."

Among the high places in Senator Cullom's senatorial career are his authorship of the interstate commerce law and the chairmanship of the foreign affairs committee, which he still holds. He has always been a conservative Republican in politics.

PIERCE B. DAVIDSON.

SENATOR SHELBY M. CULLOM.

That Little Hacking Cough

Hard coughs are bad enough, to be sure. But it's often the little, hacking, tickling, persistent cough that means the most, especially when there is a history of weak lungs in the family. What should be done? Ask your doctor. He knows. Ask him about the formula on the label of every bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. Ask him if this medicine has his full approval for throat and lung troubles. Then do as he says.

THE AMERICAN RECORD OF IMPEACHMENTS

Impeachment—A calling to account; arraignment especially of a public officer for maladministration. A calling in question as to purity of motives, rectitude of conduct, credibility, etc.; accusation, reproach; as an impeachment of motives. In England it is the privilege or right of the house of commons to impeach and the right of the house of lords to try and determine impeachments. In the United States it is the right of the house of representatives to impeach and of the senate to try and determine impeachments.—Webster.

For the ninth time in the history of the United States the country has been called upon to witness the spectacle of a man in high office facing impeachment on the charge of committing "high crimes and misdemeanors." Judge Robert W. Archbald of the court of commerce, accused of having improper business relations with railroad companies while sitting on the federal bench which is called upon to deal with questions affecting such companies, is the sixth member of the federal judiciary whose conduct while in office has been called into question.

The other three men impeached have been President Andrew Johnson, in 1868; William Blount, senator from Tennessee, in 1797-8, and William W. Belknap, secretary of war, in 1876. The judges have been John Pickering, United States district judge for New Hampshire, in 1803; Samuel Chase, associate justice of the United States supreme court, in 1804; James H. Peck, district judge for Missouri, in 1830; West H. Humphreys, district judge for Tennessee, in 1862, and Judge Charles Swayne of the district court for the northern district of Florida, in 1904-5.

Only two of the eight cases preceding Judge Archbald's resulted in convictions. They were those of Judge Pickering, guilty of rendering decisions contrary to law and of drunkenness and profanity on the bench, and of Judge Humphreys, convicted of treason in engaging in active rebellion against the Washington government. Judge Humphreys made a secession speech in 1860 while still a member of the federal judiciary and did not resign his office even after he had accepted a place on the bench of the Confederate states.

Senator Blount was accused of conspiring with the British to transfer New Orleans and adjacent territory from Spain to Great Britain through the medium of a British fleet and a land force to be furnished by Blount. When the senate received notice from the house that impeachment was intended the senate first put Blount under heavy bond and then expelled him. Later he was elected to the senate of his state. He was acquitted by the federal senate on the ground that, as a senator, he was not a "civil officer."

Judge Chase was pulled not guilty of charges of official misconduct, although it was shown he made before a Maryland grand jury intemperate criticisms of the federal administration of his day. The senate said that his conduct was "rather a violation of the principles of politeness than of the principles of law." Judge Peck punished an attorney for contempt of court after the latter had published a criticism of Judge Peck's opinion in a civil case, but the senate held the offense did not warrant conviction.

Secretary of War Belknap was accused of accepting a bribe. The senate decided that he, having resigned office, was not amenable to impeachment by the house, as he had ceased to be a civil servant of the United States. The latest case before that of Judge Archbald was Judge Charles Swayne's in 1905. The house arraigned Judge Swayne on charges of corruption and maladministration of his office, but he was acquitted by the senate. Judge Swayne retained office and died in 1907.

The most famous of American impeachment cases, and one of the great cases of the world, was that of President Andrew Johnson, accused of misusing the powers of his office in removing Secretary of War Stanton, of violating the tenure of office act and of denouncing congress as an unlawfully constituted body.

In accordance with the terms of the federal constitution, which provide that in the case of the impeachment of a president the chief justice of the United States shall preside over the senate sitting as a court (it being held that the vice president, who is president of the senate, has a personal interest in the removal of a president) Chief Justice Salmon P. Chase presided. It takes a two-thirds vote to convict in impeachment proceedings, and this the opponents of President Johnson could not obtain. The president was acquitted.

The president has no power to pardon in case of impeachment, and the senate is the final tribunal. Impeachment of state officers is provided for in the constitutions of the states.

ARTHUR J. BRINTON.

OUT OF THE MOUTHS OF BABES.

Teacher—"Who discovered America?"

Bright Boy—"Columbus."

Teacher—"That's right. Now, how did he come to do it?"

Bright Boy—"He came by water."

Train Boy (going through car)—"Pecans? Filberts? English walnuts?"

Gruff Passenger—"Don't want 'em. Haven't any teeth."

Train Boy—"All right, sir. Here's some nice gum drops."

Small Edgar was playing with some boys in the street when his mother called him and said: "Edgar, don't you know those are bad boys for you to play with?"

"Yes, mamma," he replied, "but I am a good boy for them to play with."

GOLF, TENNIS, BATHING.

Nothing is more invigorating than a game of tennis or golf and nothing more refreshing at the close than a dip in the ocean where the beach is free from coral like that at Haleiwa. Visitors pronounce it the best in the islands and the management of the Haleiwa Hotel are confident that the judgment passed by tourists is correct. At a cost of six dollars and fifty cents one may journey to Haleiwa on the limited Saturday afternoon and return by the same fast train Sunday night and that covers all expenses at the hotel and for transportation. It is a cheap trip and many persons are taking advantage of the low rate.
