The Ka Wana series, part of the Pihana Nā Mamo Native Hawaiian education program, offers new insights into the Hawaiian philosophy, culture, and way of life. Those raised in these traditions will find memorable recollections, while those unfamiliar with Native Hawaiian values and practices will find insights and guidance. Author Malcolm Nāea Chun uses traditional and historical examples to show behavior, thoughts, and values, then analyzes events in both traditional and contemporary contexts.

Native Hawaiians arrived in the Pacific Northwest as early as 1787. Some went out of curiosity; many others were recruited as seamen or as workers in the fur trade. By the end of the nineteenth century more than a thousand men and women had journeyed across the Pacific, but the stories of these extraordinary individuals have gone largely unrecorded in Hawaiian or Western sources. Through painstaking archival work in British Columbia, Oregon, California, and Hawaii, Jean Barman and Bruce Watson pieced together what is known about these sailors, laborers, and settlers from 1787 to 1898, the year the Hawaiian Islands were annexed to the United States. In addition, the authors include descriptive biographical entries on some eight hundred Native Hawaiians, a remarkable and invaluable complement to their narrative history.

Scholars and others interested in a number of fields—Hawaiian history, Pacific Islander studies, Western U.S. and Western Canadian history, diaspora studies—will find Leaving Paradise an indispensable work.

JEAN BARMAN, a fellow of the Royal Society of Canada, is the author of several books, including The West beyond the West: A History of British Columbia. BRUCE WATSON is currently completing a biographical dictionary of the Pacific Northwest fur trade. In 2000, the authors, both of whom live in Vancouver, received the Washington State Historical Society’s Charles Gates Memorial Award.
