LAHAINA SURF NEARLY CLAIMS NEW VICTIMS

and brought ashore. There were two boats from the ship already at the landing, and only 150 or 200 yards away, but they did not go to the rescue. It is stated by persons on the landing at the time, that it was between half and three-quarters of an hour after the accident before the victims of the accident were finally landed.

Paia And Wailuku Play Great Game

Every Man A Star In Almost Errorless Game--Plenty Of Excitement For Fans--Stars Down Cubs In Junior Game

The story of the game between Paia and Wailuku needs no words to tell it. It can best be read in the box score. Up to the end of the eighth inning not a run had been scored by Paia, nor had they even made a hit, and except in the second when Bal walked two men, no one safely reached the initial sack. Wailuku played errorless baseball.

Whether Maui will go dry on July 1, or whether the agony will be drawn out for six weeks or so longer, may be left for the liquor men themselves to decide. There is now a likelihood that the liquor commissioners may recind their previous intention of refusing to issue any licenses to sell liquor on Maui after June 30, and may renew the permits of the present dealers if any of them care to have them.

now in effect except that of the Kauaiakalua Wine & Liquor Company which made no application.

But in case the board does grant the renewals they will cost the recipients from $500 to $600 or more and would be good only until the new federal law went into effect. This would be the combined cost of territorial and federal licenses, the license board not being empowered to accept less than a half year's payment, or to refund any portion once paid even though the licensee discontinued business.

For this reason it is generally believed that all of the petitioners will withdraw their applications within the next few days.

It is reported that the dealers may pool their interests and apply for a single license, and thus dispose of their stock at small individual outlay by selling all through one concern.

It is probable that the mandamus action brought by the Maui liquor dealers, and now before the supreme court on reserved questions, will be discontinued.

Fine Dahlia Display For Big Flower Show

Honolulu, May 22—Harry Hupal, of Hilo, whose exhibit of home industries at the Hawaii County Fair two years ago was one of the best features of that demonstration, will endeavor to present a rare display of dahlias in the flower show at the Territorial Fair next month.

He had 400 varieties of this flower last year and this year has imported the George L. Stillman, a $5 bulb, and the Millionaire, a $10 bulb. The latter, by constant attention and a little forcing, he believes can be encouraged to bloom in the time for the Fair. Among the specimens which he hopes to show are the Incurved Cactus, Straight Petaled Cactus, Show Dahlia, Peony Flowered, Pompon, Single Dahlia and a number of the Indian Family collection.

He is conducting experiments now to determine whether his show specimens can be kept fresh through the journey to Honolulu. In case he exhibits, Hupal says he does not intend entering the competitions for prizes, but will make a special display.

Robinson, who left here a few weeks ago for Red Cross field service in France, were sailing May 8 for the scene of their work. Olaf So-nson, who left here in company with Prosser and Robinson expecting to go into the same work, has been held in Washington because of the great need for men in the supply department.

Lane To Bring McCarthy's Commission

Honolulu, May 21—Failure of Governor McCarthy's commission to arrive in yesterday's mail can be taken to mean that it is being brought to Honolulu by Secretary of the Interior Franklin K. Lane, who will arrive here with a party from Washington June 8. It is assumed therefore that Governor McCarthy will qualify and take office the following Monday, June 10.

New Department Commander Arrives

Honolulu, May 22—Brig. Gen. A. P. Blockson, U. S. A., arrived yesterday from the mainland on the steamship Tenyo Maru to assume command of the Hawaiian department, relieving Brig. Gen. John P. Wissner, who has been again returned to private life after a long career in the army during which time he was twice commander of this department.

General Blockson is a cavalry officer, having left West Point in 1877 to enter that branch of the service, serving for twenty-six years in the Sixth Cavalry and afterwards in the Second and finally in the Ninth Most of his service was spent in the West and Middle West. He participated in many of the Indian campaigns and was near Wounded Knee at the time of the final Sioux uprising but not in the main battle. He also had service in Arizona and New Mexico and was often in pursuit of Geronimo the Apache renegade, but was not present or in the final pursuit which ended in the wily old chieftain's capture. In 1898 he went to Cuba and was wounded at Santiago.

General Blockson is bearded and bronzed and typically of the old school of hard-riding cavalrymen, and is also typical of the old frontier genial type of soldier.

Wailuku hit almost at will, and showed her usual speed and head-work on the bases, pilfering a total of 6 sacks. But they were not able to score again until the 5th, when F. Bal made a neat single, followed with a sacrifice by Sylvia, then Akion made a double which sent Bal home. Rodrigues came up next with a hit and attempted to stretch it into a double a throw was made to second to catch him, but went wild, and Akion came home. Thus ended the scoring for the day.

From the first inning to the end of eighth, Paia followed the monotonous order of three up and three down, except in the second when there were five up, two drawing passes. Then in the ninth they broke through the defense of Wailuku and spoiled a perfect game for them. Luke came to the bat and made a single over second, which even the speedy Silva could not prevent. He then stole second and tried to do the same with third, but Cockett had his eye on him and whipped the ball to Rodrigues who made a star-one hand catch, saved Cockett from an error, tagged poor Luke, and nipped in the bud Paia's first and last hope of making a tally. On the next play Wailuku scored her lonely error. A throw to first which was just a little bit too short did the work. Bal struck out the next and last man up, ending the game with the score 4 to 0.

Stars Beat Cubs

As for the first game, the race was not to the swift nor to the strong, but to the one which accumulated the least number of errors. The Stars are charged with 9, and therefore won over the Cubs who gathered 11. The Cubs made 13 hits which they stretched into 7 runs only, leaving a total of 13 men on bases, while the Stars made 8 runs from 8 hits, with 5 left on bases. The Stars took the lead in the second inning when with three hits, assisted by three errors, they made three runs. They kept adding to this in every other inning, and when the Cubs did finally manage to score, the Stars were just beyond their reach. The Cubs made their first score in the sixth, and with a few more innings or a few less errors, might easily have won, but—the score stands 8-7 against them.

William Jennings Bryan is said to have likened a business man who does not advertise to a young man in the dark kissing his hand to a girl—he knows what he is doing, but no one else does.

FAULT-FINDING

About the easiest thing in the world is to find fault. Anybody can do it. And about 99 percent of fault-finders find nothing that is not generally known or to be accepted as a matter of course. As long as to err is human there will be mistakes.

Delegate Kuhio is one of the latest to get into the fault-finding class. He finds fault with the administration over many things. He says our aircraft program has been a failure. He declares that our shipbuilding effort has been a fizzle. He states that the ordinance department has fallen down. He assures us that we have a woefully small force in France at the present time.

Now, no sane person believes all of this. Nor does any one doubt that it is partly true. It may be that some of us have been unduly optimistic, but optimism is better than pessimism any day.

The United States has been at war for a little over a year. In that time there has been a tremendous amount accomplished, as even the worst fault-finder must admit. Much—indeed almost all—of this has been preparatory work. It has not made a great deal of showing. But it has been absolutely necessary. When a great building is to be erected, the designing and building of the foundation not uncommonly takes as much time as all the rest of the work.

The problem of getting an army to France involved many things, and each of these many factors involved many others. We first had to get the army. Good progress has been made in this direction. Then we had to have ships. We had to first build the shipyards, dig the materials from mines and forests, decide upon designs. And we had to make provision for coping with the submarine menace.

And now we are beginning to see the results of this vast and complicated preparation. We have reduced the submarine danger to a minimum. But it hasn't been child's play. Our shipyards are beginning to turn out ships in rapidly increasing numbers. And we are getting soldiers into France in greater and greater numbers.

No one doubts the spirit of the American people. No one of us doubts the ultimate outcome of our undertaking. Nobody fears that we shall stop until we have accomplished what we set out to do. We are a big nation. We tackled a big job. It required tremendous machinery to carry it out. And it also required time to get a full head of steam up and to get this machine under way. But that has been accomplished. We are under way and gaining momentum every hour. The man who does not see all this is either looking so closely for flaws that he cannot see the gigantic whole, or else is an incurable grouch.

This is your fight and my fight as well as the nation's. You will see things you don't like, and I will see things done that I would have done differently, but we can't afford to halt the procession to quarrel with the captain.

LAHAINA LANDING—DEATH TRAP

How many more human lives must be sacrificed or put in deadly peril before something tangible will be done towards making the landing at Lahaina safe?

The near-tragedy at that treacherous port last Saturday night brings this question home to every Maui resident. Three years ago two passengers were drowned at this point while coming ashore from the Mauna Kea. That this was not duplicated in Saturday night's accident is due to pure luck.

The storm of public indignation and protest, and the furor of official inquiry that followed the 1915 calamity gave promise of bearing some tangible results. The steamship company was censured for not having its shore boats commanded by responsible officers. The agitation for a ships' wharf at Lahaina had a short-lived flurry. And then the matter began to be forgotten. Nothing was done. It is true that a loan fund appropriation was made for a wharf by the last legislature, but the bonds have remained unsold.

It was hoped that this fresh evidence of the crying need of Maui for a safe landing place on the leeward side of the island might get some action from the legislature now in special session. But this seems doomed to be disappointed.

It is more than likely that the Inter-Island will, for a while at least, exercise its threat of refusing to land passengers at Lahaina at all except under the very best of conditions. Such a course is of course better than jeopardizing the lives of passengers, but it is unfair to Maui that the most important port for passengers in the island should be thus discriminated against.

It isn't right. The thing is too important to be thrust to one side and forgotten. It is but nine months until the legislature will be in session again. Maui must then be ready with some concrete plan and be prepared to DEMAND that it be acted upon. It is not too soon to get that plan ready. It is up to the Chamber of Commerce. It is up to the Supervisors. It is up to every man on Maui to make himself heard on the matter. Let's get together!

It is to be hoped that the Inter-Island Company sticks to its demand for an increase of nearly 100 percent for carrying the mails between island ports. The postoffice department has offered about a 20 percent increase over the present contract rate, but this the steamship company has refused. The matter at present is a deadlock. If the company refuses to take what the government believes to be reasonable it is not unlikely that we may get our airplane mail service all the sooner, or possibly a government controlled steamship line. Either of these expedients would be something new and serve to break the monotony of the war-in-Europe mental diet even though we might not like them after we got them.

ALIEN ENEMIES

Such part of the German press in America as has not been entirely suppressed by the government is naturally obeying pretty strictly the injunction of Attorney-General Gregory to alien enemies to "keep their mouths shut." But there is a difference between the sullen silence of the German alien enemies and our other "alien enemies," their Hungarian allies. Probably without exception the Magyar press in the United States is enthusiastically loyal to the country of its adoption—a significant reflection on the boasted unity of the Central Powers.

The following is a translation of resolutions printed in one of the leading Hungarian language papers of the United States, and is said to represent the sentiment of almost all Hungarians in this country:

"The Verhovay Aid Association, representing 27,000 Hungarian-born citizens and residents of the United States, assembled at Hazleton, Pennsylvania this day, desires to express to the President and Government of the United States their loyalty; their united appreciation of the attitude of the Government towards them since war was declared upon Austria-Hungary; their unreserved condemnation of, and antagonism to, the German Emperor, the German militarists, and all those German peoples who support the German autocracy in its objects in the present war; their confidence, not only in the righteousness of America's cause in the war, but also in the ultimate victory of American principles over the moral turpitude of its enemies and the triumph of America in the great cause of freedom and democracy; and their solemn promise, throughout this war, unswervingly to support the United States of America in its forward fight to that splendid victory.

"The Verhovay Society, realizing that the triumph of the United States in this war will the more quickly secure that Independence of Hungary of which all Hungarians for centuries have dreamed, desire also to record their contempt for the Habsburg rulers of Austria-Hungary who, in the past have failed to keep their sworn oaths to the Hungarian people, and who, at the present time, are giving proof to the world of their traditional mendacity and their hereditary lack of the sense of honor. The members of the Verhovay Society, while expressing their full feeling of loyalty to the United States, would implore the President to aid the Magyar peoples to break away from the unhappy rule of the Habsburgs, and to bring about that realization of an independent Hungary which place the Hungarian peoples among the progressive leaders of the world's democracies.

"The members of the Verhovay Association transmitting these sentiments to the President, desire to express their approval of the American-Hungarian Loyalty League which, in its present loyal labors amongst the Hungarians of the United States, recognizes that whatever is done to bring about an American victory in this war will also bring about the full independence of the Hungarian peoples."

A QUESTION OF SHIPS—NOT MEN

The American Defense Society is at present taking a postcard vote among its members to find out whether or not a majority favors sending an American army of 5,000,000 to France. President Wilson has doubtless expressed the unanimous public opinion on this question when in a recent speech he asks—"Why limit it that number? Let every ship over on every voyage take every man and all the materials she can carry. This is a war that will save the world."

The general impression is that this policy is being carried out to the limit of the nation's ability to supply the necessary ships, and the President's words bear out this impression. If it shall require 10,000,000 men from America to bring this war to a successful end there will be no hesitation in supplying them. It isn't a question of men at all—it is almost solely a question of transportation and the outlook in this direction grows daily brighter.

"G. B." of Paia is still another person who has not learned that a newspaper cannot publish articles unless it knows who is responsible for them. It should not be hard for anyone to see how dangerous any other policy would be. Names of those who furnish news items are not usually published, but the editor must in every case know exactly the source of his information.

It's a mighty good thing Governor Pinkham is about pau with his job. There are other criminals whose loving children might also appreciate the pen that signed their father's pardon. We can afford to lose the Governor but the community cannot risk losing some of the birds we now have safely caged or frightened from the territory.

If Link McCandless can show that he would not be making a fair profit in selling rice at $8 per bag he will have general public sympathy on account of his persecution by the food board. The price of rice in California, Timbuctoo, or any other place has nothing to do with the morality of the case. Let's have some cost figures.

Any how the Maui liquor men will have had the fun of a fight and shouldn't mind the $1500. The lawyers need the money.

The Pardon Of Bartlett

Governor Pinkham draws near the close of his four years in office with the most surprising act of his administration—the pardon of Charles G. Bartlett.

It is more than surprising—it is astounding.

Bartlett left Honolulu under a cloud of frenzied finance with brewery money—a cloud that deepened into an ineffaceable blot when the territorial grand jury found six indictments against him for embezzlement and forgery.

Since then he has been a fugitive of justice, reported now in Mexico, now in Central America, now in Chile, the object of police search. Branded by the grand jury and in public opinion as a coldblooded and conscienceless crook who double-crossed his associates and looted the firm of which he was the executive head, he never returned to face the charges. His guilt, never established by trial, was tacitly admitted in his failure to demand a hearing on the ugly accusations.

Three years he has been a fugitive from the law. Now the governor wipes out the indictment and Bartlett goes scot-free.

The governor's reasons are simple and his act is perfectly understandable. He has been appealed to on the basis that Bartlett's three children and Bartlett's aged mother may be left destitute, that the fugitive should be allowed to return and support them.

The governor was confronted with an issue between justice and sentiment, and sentiment won the day.

The governor's act, however astounding, is understandable in this plan evidence of the triumph of emotionalism over judgment. Anyone who reads the governor's message of last Tuesday will have no difficulty in picturing the man who wrote that message as the man who listened to appeals to pardon Bartlett, and yielded to them.

Perhaps it sounds harsh, perhaps, it sounds cold and cruel, to speak thus when there is a question of an aged mother and three destitute children, but there is more at stake than permission for Bartlett to return and support these dependents. Behind the indictment of Bartlett there was a whole mass of unexplained activities in questionable financial deals and in politics.

So long as these indictments stood, there remained the chance that some day the rumors and half-whispered accusations might be run to earth, and, if Bartlett was not alone in these questionable deals and sub-rosa politics, his associates in wrong-doing might be run to earth also.

The pardon closes his mouth. It is a good bargain for him to keep it closed. That act of the governor's has a far wider effect than to allow Bartlett to return to the United States. It ends forever, in all likelihood, the possibility of clearing up the "brewery scandal."

And there is yet more in the governor's act. It adds to the number of embezzlers of influential connections here in Hawaii who have not been put behind the bars, who have "got off easy." For Bartlett, looter of brewery funds, dabbler in unexplained deals of booze and politics, has undoubtedly "got off easy."—Star Bulletin.

Exception Proves The Rule

After all, the Robinson case on Kauai has its redeeming feature. It has not been an unmitigated evil, even for the Garden Island—I should say, particularly for the Garden Island. It has been the one thing necessary to furnish the sordid backgrounds for the otherwise bright record made on Kauai, the "Feudal Island," the so-called Geman-corner in Hawaii.

The fact that on that island there lives a kamaaina family of vast wealth, social prestige and—theretofore—wide influence, which is today looked down upon and scorned by the humblest bare-footed Filipino in the road, demonstrates the soundness of the Kauai heart. The fact of the Robinsons has spurred Kauai on to outdo herself in the Liberty Loan, to strive for a new record in the Red Cross drive, to develop her manifestations of patriotism to the utmost. The shame of the Robinsons has been Kauai's great incentive.

The frankness with which Kauaians acknowledge the chagrin they all experience in the desperate efforts of the Robinson boys to escape military service is the best evidence of the fact that the evil of sanctimony which had been drawn between the hoi polloi and the "first families" of the Tight Little Island has been rent and swept away and that Democracy has made a new conquest. When the "common people" of Kauai decorate the Robinson premises with "Slacker" signs it indicates that the divine right of kings has been given another solar plexus.

Good for Kauai! It has shown that it is not afraid to tackle its own failures and show them up, and that's the test today of real Americanism.—P. C. Advertiser.

Our "Yellow Peril"

We have now on record four court decisions favorable to the contention of the Filipinos that they are eligible for naturalization as citizens of the United States, with one court decision to the contrary. The contrary decision was rendered in the federal court here by Judge Vaughan and in the same court Former Judge Clemons rendered a prior decision in favor of a Filipino applicant. Backing up Judge Clemons, a recent decision was rendered by Judge Morrow of the Ninth Appeal Court, sitting as a judge of the federal circuit court in California. Circuit Judge Edings, on the Maui bench, decided in favor of the Filipinos. The latest decision, rendered in connection with an application of a Filipino for a license to practise before the territorial courts, was handed down yesterday by Circuit Judges Ashford, Heen and Edings, sitting as an appellate court.

The matter of the eligibility of Filipinos for naturalization is something directly and vitally affecting Hawaii, and the sooner the matter is taken to the Supreme Court of the United States and definitely decided the better. There are today well over twenty thousand Filipinos in this Territory, the statistics of 1916 of the board of health, the latest official figures available, giving the number then at 19,100. Easily fifty percent of the resident Filipinos could qualify as voters if naturalized. Such a voting unit could radically change our whole political conditions, and it seems almost a certainty that the Filipino vote would be swung with much more unity than that of any other section of our mixed population.

If it is to be definitely settled that the Filipinos are eligible to become citizens and voters, the sooner we know it the better. We ought to have it definitely settled before enough more such prospective voters are brought here to outvote all the rest of us and turn us politically into a back alley of the City of Manila. We cannot overlook the fact that the great bulk of the Filipinos being brought here do not even represent the average of the Filipino race and that we are very seriously risking our political birthright for a mess of cane sugar postage.—P. C. Advertiser.

From The New Governor

Col. McCarthy's address to the students of the College of Hawaii yesterday may be called an ante-inaugural message, since he gave a forecast of plans and policies for the new gubernatorial administration.

In a few words and quite informally, yet with significant emphasis on leading points, Col. McCarthy told the students and faculty that the independent voter and thinker is an increasing power in the land. He pointed out that the extreme partisan type of politics is dying out; and in its place is coming a broader, deeper, more useful type, that which aims at serving country first and party as a secondary consideration.

Turning more definitely to his ideas of governing Hawaii, he said that the chief executive of the territory should outline the general policies to be followed, and that the details of these policies should be worked out by the heads of departments, the governor holding the department heads strictly responsible for results.

The new governor's theory of administration appeals to all that is progressive, sound and hopeful in territorial affairs. Extreme partisanship is certainly on the decline; in a few years more it will be discredited as a political tenet. The new governor has already made it plain to those who have talked with him that blind partisanship will have no place in his scheme of operating the territorial government, and further, that he is not to be cajoled or bulldozed into appointing men to office simply because they are Democrats.

Of course, his plan to leave details of departments to the department heads and hold them responsible for results depends on the men he appoints to office. Up to date, his proposed "cabinet" has given quite general satisfaction, though Hawaii would not be Hawaii were there not some differences of opinion on personalities!—Star-Bulletin.

Way To Allot Hackfeld Stock

The secretary of the treasury having cancelled the charter of a national bank because it was discovered that the directors had made only nominal subscriptions to the Liberty Loan and had pinched their giving to the Red Cross, we hope the precedent will be followed when the business of Hackfeld & Co., is Americanized on the plan of the custodian of enemy alien property. We suggest that the subscribers to the stock of the reorganization be allotted stock on the basis of their Liberty Bond and Red Cross totals. According to what we have heard, some who howled the loudest about the "camouflaging" of the last organization were the ones who dodged the quickest when the Red Cross canvassers were in sight.—P. C. Advertiser.

Fencing In And Fencing Out

An amendment to the laws of the Territory of immediate and direct importance to farmers would be to make it necessary for stockmen to fence in their cattle. As the law now stands the boot is on the other foot. The farmer has to fence out his neighbor's livestock.

To be specific, the political influence of the graziers has hitherto prevented the enactment of a law that would protect the cultivators, so that the only basic law governing in the premises is the old Common Law. That, as we know, is based on the customs of English farmers of a thousand years ago when the tillers of the soil lived together in villages. The lands beyond the village boundaries was subject to use in common, and as most of their personal property was livestock, the villagers of those ancient times agreed among themselves that any man who wanted to use a part of the "commons" for cultivation must fence his growing crops.

What was right and just in the old days of communal occupancy of the public domain is neither just nor righteous in these times of individual and ownership. The majority of the mainland States have recognized the equity of the farmers' position, as regards the ancient usages of the cattle owner, and have passed laws compelling cattle owners to fence in, releasing the farmer from his obligation to fence out.

The law, or lack of laws, now permits any man who has a 5-acre homestead in the middle of a thickly settled agricultural community to keep a hundred head of cattle, grazing them on the public roads and in his neighbors' fields as long as he can "get away with it." This has been one of the main drawbacks to the establishment of a wide range of diversified farming in districts like the two Konas on this Island.—Hilo Tribune.

King Alexander Of Greece Visiting The Sector In Macedonia Held By The British

This is the first photograph to arrive in this country showing King Alexander of Greece—in center—visiting the British sector on the Macedonian front. He is shown arriving on the parade ground accompanied by the commander in chief of the British Saloniki forces and his staff. This British official photograph is thought to be the first of the king to arrive in this country since his accession to the throne after Constantine was forced to abdicate.

CASSAVA PROMISES MUCH FOR ISLANDS

Experiments At Haiku Show It To Be Valuable Food For Man And Beast--Starch Making Attractive Proposition

By Dr. W. D. BALDWIN

(The following extremely interesting paper was prepared by Dr. Baldwin in connection with the Haiku community fair, which is to be held tomorrow afternoon and evening at the Kuiaha Schoolhouse.)

PLANTING AND CULTIVATION:

Plant from cuttings about 6 inches long. Probably the best size is that of about one's thumb. Cuttings will remain fresh and fit for planting for some time, and may be cut from plants several weeks after harvesting.

Ordinarily plant 4' by 4' in check row, so that horse-cultivation may be carried on in two directions and thus save much hand labor. Furrow out the land and plant at the intersections of the furrows, laying the cuttings flat as with sugar cane, and covering the cuttings to a depth of from 2 to 4 inches. It is important to keep some cuttings in reserve for the replanting which should be done about two weeks after the first planting. Replant as early as possible for late replants may be over-shadowed and ultimately crowded out by the older plants. Planting may be carried out in almost any sort of weather: cuttings that were planted in the midst of the record drought of 1917 at Haiku grew and did well. It is advisable, however, to have the soil fairly moist at planting time.

Horse-cultivation, with a certain amount of handhoeing, has to continue for 5 or 6 months, when the ground is then pretty well shaded over and weeds are consequently suppressed. It is dangerous to continue any form of cultivation after a few months for the reason that any injury to the tubers results in rotting.

SOILS AND CLIMATE:

Cassava does best on light, well drained soils. Although our Haiku soils are apt to be heavy cassava seems to do very well here. It does better near the sea-coast than inland. If the drainage is fairly good the roots will keep perfectly in the soil for many months after they are ready for harvesting. One can thus count on stretching the harvesting period for at least one year which is a great advantage, this being true, at least, of the "red" variety common at Haiku. Cassava must have warmth for proper growing; in cold weather it marks time.

WIND:

Cassava will stand high winds, but does much better where it is sheltered.

DISEASES:

No known serious diseases or pests in Hawaii.

HARVESTING:

There are quick maturing varieties that are said to mature in 6 months, with a corresponding low weight in root-yield, and it is said that the roots of these varieties do not keep well in the soil. With our "red" variety harvesting should begin from 12 to 16 months after planting. The roots will continue to grow for a long time thereafter, but after a certain period of growth the amount of starch (the principal ingredient of cassava) in a given weight of roots, decreases, and finally the roots become woody. No exact rule can be laid down as to the proper time for harvesting, but probably the most economical time, that is the time which will give the largest yield of starch or edible foods, should be determined by chemical analysis by a trained chemist. So far as I know this work is in its infancy.

Harvesting should be done with a pick. If cassava should be cultivated on a large scale probably some labor-saving implement could be devised which would enable rapid and cheap harvesting, but with our heavy soils this will not be an easy problem. With a pick one man can dig about 1 ton of roots per day. Roots should be harvested every two or three days as they do not keep long after being dug.

INTERPLANTING:

This may often be advisable, planting the cassava in rows say 7 ft. apart (instead of the usual 4' by 4') and about 2 1/2 ft. apart in each row. Any short-growing crop that has not a trailing habit can be interplanted. Thus, one can interplant with corn, or cow-peas (a bush variety), or mangel-wurzels. If, in the harvesting of such catch-crop, the branches of the cassava are broken to a certain extent, no material damage is done, for when the branches are pruned or broken new shoots quickly grow.

USES:

(1) Fresh roots, cut up with a cane knife, or better still sliced with a power slicing machine, are readily eaten by most all animals, especially horses, cattle, pigs, and poultry. As the analyses will show, cassava is comparable to sweet-potatoes in chemical analysis and is therefore far from being a balanced food, and therefore should always be balanced with some other food-stuff rich in nitrogen, such as tankage, alfalfa, cow-peas, or velvet beans, etc. As almost any food grown needs to be balanced this is no argument against cassava, except that cassava is more carbonaceous than most other foods. In the case of pig-feeding, the fresh roots are readily eaten, but when boiled with a little salt they are much more appetizing, and in fact when thus cooked pigs often prefer cassava to corn. When cassava is used for fattening pigs the only satisfactory way is to cook it; if fed raw they will not eat enough of it to fatten them.

(2) Dried Cassava: Mr. Wm. Searly dried and ground to a meal some cassava for me at the Pūnēne Mill. The product was very satisfactory and was eagerly eaten by pigs, horses, and cattle. With the help of Prof. F. G. Krauss I prepared the following mixture, and fed it to four of my work horses for about two months, and with excellent results:

Cassava meal .....	5 lbs.	} Nutritive ratio 1:6.
Alfalfa meal .....	5 lbs.
Molascuit (80% molasses) .....	5 lbs.
Oil cake meal, (old process).....	2 lbs.

Total .. 17 lbs. with about 20 lbs., Para grass.

(3) Cassava Flour: Cassava dried and ground to a meal or flour, under strictly cleanly conditions, makes an excellent partial substitute for white flour. It can replace from 25 to 30% of white flour in bread and yet the bread is practically the same as ordinary white bread except that it is somewhat heavier, the color remaining white. The making of cassava flour would seem to have attractive future possibilities.

(4) Tapioca is a long established commercial product from cassava.

(5) Starch: A high grade starch is made from cassava, and the residue left over after extracting the starch, is still rich in food value and can be dried and fed to pigs or other animals. The making of cassava starch at Haiku is an attractive possibility, and some one should give the matter a thorough investigation. The manufacture of starch requires considerable pure water, but I think this would be available in the Haiku district.

CHEMICAL COMPOSITION:

Quoting from a report from Mr. V. A. Verret of Honolulu, as sent by Mr. H. P. Agee: "U. S. Government publications report the following analysis:

Cassava—after removal of starch
Fat .. .. .	.30%
Protein .. .. .	1.02
Starch .. .. .	64.64
Fiber .. .. .	10.68
Ash .. .. .	1.42
Undetermined .. .. .	21.94

The composition of fresh root follows:

Ash .. .. .	1.94%
Fat, etc. .. .. .	2.01
Alcohol extract (amids, sugar, etc.) .. .. .	17.43
Crude Fiber .. .. .	4.03
Starch .. .. .	71.85
Protein .. .. .	3.47

These analyses are based on the dry matter: The percent water in fresh roots average about 65 to 67%, the starch 28 to 30%. Potatoes contain about 17% of starch; sweet-potatoes contain about 26% of starch and sugars. Shelled corn has 70%. "Bailey's Cyclopaedia of Agriculture—Crops" considers cassava residue equivalent to corn meal pound for pound.

The cassava meal made at Pūnēne was analyzed for me, at the request of Dr. A. L. Dean, by Miss Cowdray of the College of Hawaii, as follows:

Moisture .. .. .	7.00
Ash .. .. .	4.00
Fiber .. .. .	5.00
Starch .. .. .	71.00
Protein .. .. .	3.90

YIELDS:

In the Southern States yields are obtained of from 4 to 7 tons per acre. Here in Hawaii we can expect much larger yields for the reason that our growing season is much longer, not being halted by a cold winter.

I have obtained the following yields:

(1) From a 1 1/2 acre field the yield was at the rate of about 18 tons to the acre. Began harvesting when the cassava was 16 months old and continued for 4 months.

(2) From a field of 3.13 acres: yield at the rate of 10.80 tons to the acre. Began when 11 1/2 months old, and continued for 7 1/2 months.

In the case of both of the above fields there was rather a poor stand due to replanting too late; and no fertilizer was used in either case. Better yields should be obtained with the use of fertilizer, and early replanting.

ADVANTAGES OF CASSAVA RAISING AS AGAINST CORN AND OTHER CROPS:

- (1) A sure cropper, no pests or diseases.
- (2) Probably a larger yield of food value per unit of time.
- (3) The harvesting time can await proper labor conditions, and can be prolonged for several months if necessary.
- (3) Planting can be done in any weather except extremely wet weather.

DISADVANTAGES:

- (1) It is a long growing crop, comparable to sugar cane.
- (2) After harvesting, the roots soon (within two or three days) begin to darken, and then to sour, and when sour they are unfit for consumption. However, if sliced and dried by sun or artificial heat the material has good keeping qualities.

DISTRIBUTION:

Cassava belongs to the milkweed family (Euphorbiaceae) and is closely related to the Ceara rubber. It grows extensively in tropical South America, Malaya, and many other tropical countries. In Brazil cassava is to the poorer classes as taro is to the Hawaiians.

VARIETIES:

There are a large number of varieties, but all are generally classified into two main divisions, namely the "sweet" and the "bitter" cassavas, the "bitter" varieties being those that contain enough prussic acid to render them toxic to animals, and the "sweet" varieties not containing sufficient poison to render them toxic. All varieties contain, in the fresh state, a certain amount of prussic acid. This classification is not altogether satisfactory, as there are all gradations between the two, and a variety that is considered "bitter" in a tropical country may change to a "sweet" variety if raised in a subtropical country. Thus all varieties in Southern States are "sweet." The variety most common in Haiku is supposed to be a "bitter" sort, but we have had on Maui no instance of poisoning from it.

AT THE THEATERS

Douglas Fairbanks in His Latest Success, "Reaching For The Moon"

"Reaching for the Moon"—this is the latest as offered by Douglas Fairbanks, the prize winner of the screen drama and the one whose performance before the camera have done more toward making an evening at the theater "the end of perfect day" than any other person whose aim in this life is to provide entertainment for the public. You may make one exception—Charlie Chaplin—but Charlie is in another line of comedy, usually referred to as slapstick. Doug never resorts to the slapstick. He deals straight from the shoulder and with very few exception delivers the knock-out with every punch. He will be seen on the screen of the Maui theaters next week in his latest,

"Reaching for the Moon," written by Anita Loos in collaboration with John Emerson and produced for Arctcraft Pictures under the direction of Mr. Emerson. In the supporting cast are Richard Cummings, Millard Webb, Eugene Ormonde, Frank Campeau and Eileen Percy, the charming feminine character who has been seen opposite Mr. Fairbanks in most of his Arctcraft pictures. Doug impersonates Alexis Caesar Napoleon Brown, chief clerk in a button factory, who is thoroughly convinced that he is wasting his time in such menial business when he can rule as king. His best listener is Elsie who believes in the powers of concentration, but who devotes her concentrative energies to more plausible and practical ends than Alexis Caesar. Alexis Caesar is discharged in order that he may carry out his plan of revolutionizing the affairs of state, and takes an extended trip to Bulgaria where he is crowned king. He wakes from all this of a sudden and finds himself on the floor of his room. He hurries to the office and gets his job back, sees Elsie and they concentrate and decide that it is cheaper to live in Jersey than New York.

At the Maui Theaters next week, Douglas Fairbanks in "Reaching for the Moon."

Sheriff's Bride Leads Posse To Save Husband

An Eastern girl, bride of the sheriff of Wolfville, forms an attachment for the new postmaster, a polished, dapper Easterner, and in his distress at not being able to hold the affection of his wife, the brave sheriff deliberately seeks death that she may be free to wed the postmaster.

He passes the lie to a gambler and refuses to draw his gun, but friends detecting his purpose prevent a killing. Then single-handed he engages an outlaw leader and falls over a cliff to seeming certain death as the posse he is leading is routed.

Filled with remorse and her latent love for the brave officer fully awakened when the remnants of the posse returns with word of his death and that he died to free her, the girl upbraids the men for fleeing and leads them back into the fight. The outlaws this time are defeated and Dead Shot Baker, her sheriff husband, is found wounded in a cabin at the foot of the cliff holding off an attacking party. She nurses him back to life and happiness.

"Dead Shot Baker," the Greater Vitagraph Blue Ribbon Feature, which will be the attraction in the Wailuku Orpheum theater on Sunday, is an adaptation of the famous Wolfville Tale by that name and is the first of a series of such picturizations by Vitagraph. The picture lose none of their Western realism by screening and are giving by Vitagraph screen favorites who have made their reputations in pictures of rugged, wild Western life.

"The Rise Of Jennie Cushing"

Following her sensational motion picture debut in "Barbary Sheep," Elsie Ferguson, the most talented beauty of the spoken drama, again appears on the screen in a famous story by a prominent author, "The Rise of Jennie Cushing" by Mary S. Watts, author of "Nathan Burke," "Van Cleve" and many other well known works, is Miss Ferguson's second motion picture vehicle under the Arctcraft banner.

As Jennie Cushing, a street walf who is thrown upon her own resources early in life, Miss Ferguson presents a direct contrast to her appearance in her previous film characterization and displays a remarkable picturization even for the artistic Ferguson. The story is one of deep heart interest, developing into a stirring romance that will linger long in the memory of everyone who sees it.

Staged under the direction of that French producing genius, Maurice Tourneur, who also produced "Barbary Sheep," Miss Ferguson's newest cinema offers another photodrama of modern technique, a film that will accent the marked advance in the photoplay of to-day over the motion picture of yesterday.

Never either on the stage or screen has Miss Ferguson been accorded a greater chance to disclose her wonderful artistry and never before has she responded more effectively to a great opportunity. Supported by an exceptional cast and produced by a master-director, this newest adaptation of a popular book should establish a new standard for the highest in motion picture quality.

Dorothy Dalton Is Fascinating Widow in New Triangle Play

The latest Triangle play, "Wild Winship's Widow," by John Lynch, in which Thomas H. Ince will present Dorothy Dalton as star, is a comedy of manners and of good clothes. The story is enacted in a fashionable southern resort where a few old mansions of the first families of Virginia stand in the background and lend dignity and tone to the functions at the great hotel of the place.

Miss Dalton's part is that of a young and beautiful widow, who has placed the memory of an unworthy spouse upon a pedestal, made an idol of it and extracted an immense amount of enjoyment out of her misery. But she discovers her mistake and becomes almost reckless in her attempts to prove that she is still young and attractive enough to get real zest out of life and to win the admiration of the masculine sex. The result is that she gets more devotion than she really cares for and has to resort to certain very feminine wiles to extricate herself from the demands of her suitors.—Adv't.

Oahu Women Fear Valley Island Cooks

Agitation To Organize Oahu To Work Harder For Cooking Prizes At Territorial Fair—Size Maui Women Up Right

In the name of Honolulu's reputation as a city of good cooks, an appeal to housewives of the community was issued yesterday by a committee of local women who held a council of war at the Y. W. C. A.

The city's reputation as the abode of most of the finest cooks in the Islands, is seriously menaced. It has just been discovered that women of Maui, already thoroughly prepared, will send to Honolulu more than two hundred exhibits of their cookery to compete for honors in the food conservation section at the Territorial Fair next month, and that they fully expect to take the lion's share of the premiums.

This is proved by records in the hands of the food conservation committee. Unless the women of this city look well to their laurels their sisters of the Valley Island will achieve the community triumph which they are anticipating with so much confidence.

Local members of the food conservation committee have just awakened to the fact that a thorough and very compact organization of committees has been perfected by the Maui women, and that they have been quietly at work on a regular plan of campaign for several weeks. It is believed that almost every one of the two hundred or more women there knows exactly what she is to exhibit, as her part in the campaign to win the community laurels for Maui, and in preparing her exhibition viands now. These would include such things as jams, jellies and non-perishable foods.

To meet this situation and thwart Maui's design the women's war food council at the Y. W. C. A. yesterday selected a committee to conduct a popular campaign among Honolulu women and to see that this city has at least a representative part in the food show.—P. C. Advertiser.

Noted Speakers From Front Coming

from Hilo tonight and will be escorted to the Maui Hotel by members of the Vigilance Corps. Tomorrow afternoon they will be taken through the Haiku pineapples district and will visit the Haiku Community Fair where a short meeting will be held at 5 o'clock.

The big meeting of the series will be held at the Kahului Theater tomorrow night at 8 o'clock. At this meeting there will be "mob singing" something new on Maui besides the thrilling addresses of the two magnetic speakers.

On Sunday addresses will be made in the morning at the Makawao Union Church, and in the evening at the Wailuku Union Church.

On Monday the party will be taken to visit some of the schools by Supervising Principal Geo. S. Raymond, and in the afternoon to Lahaina where talks will be made at the Lahainaluna School and in the evening at the courthouse or theater at Lahaina before taking the boat for Honolulu.

RED CROSS ITEMS

The treasurer of the Maui Branch has received the following sums from three "benefits" which were given during the past two weeks:

Wailuku Gymnasium, $50.00; Wailuku School, Entertainment at Orpheum $190.00; Kahului Theater, Opening night, $100.00.

DELINQUENT EMPLOYERS MAKE EXCUSES TO ACCIDENT BOARD

More than a dozen employers of labor who had neglected to take out compensation insurance for their employees, were before the industrial accident board on Tuesday on summaries issued through the county attorney. Most of these had excuses and it is probable that, with a few exceptions the board will ask that the cases against them be dropped. Fifteen or twenty others who failed to appear before the board, will have their cases settled at the June term of circuit court which sits at Lahaina.

SERG. WETZEL IS CALLED TO HONOLULU

Sergt. G. A. Wetzel, U. S. A., instructor of the Maui companies of the national guard, has been relieved of his assignment here, and called to Honolulu. He left for the capital on Wednesday afternoon but will probably be back in a few days to close up his business here before leaving permanently. It is possible that he will soon be ordered to the mainland or to France.

MEMORIAL DAY EXERCISES

Memorial day exercises will be held next Thursday morning in Wailuku, and will possibly be somewhat more elaborate than usual. The national guard companies of Wailuku, the fire department, and Boy Scouts will parade to the cemetery, where Judge Burr and others will make short addresses.

Pertinent Paragraphs

A few good second hand pianos for sale. In excellent condition. See Jack Bergstrom, of the Honolulu Music Co., Ltd., at the Wailuku Ware-rooms opposite the Maui Hotel.—Advt.

The summer school for teachers will begin this year on July 8, in Honolulu, and will be in session for 4 weeks.

The school board at its meeting next week will pass upon the appointment of teachers for the public schools of the islands for next year. This is the principal work of this meeting.

The new issue of Liberty Bonds was received from San Francisco this week, and are being delivered to those who have completed their payments on them. Application should be made to the bank through which the subscription was made.

Aloha Lodge, No. 3 Knights of Pythias, will hold an important meeting at their castle hall this evening at 8 p. m.

A Japanese from Puunene named T. Kamada, forfeited $100 bail in the Wailuku district court, yesterday by not appearing. He was charged with practicing dentistry without a license.

The Haiku Fruit & Packing Company is harvesting this week an experimental planting of several acres of cane in the Haiku pineapple district. The result of the experiment is being watched with considerable interest. The cane is being ground at the Palm mill.

War Stamp Drive Indications Good

The War Savings Stamp and Thrift Stamp drive which started on Maui last Tuesday is declared to have been a big success but up to the present but few figures have been submitted. According to Chairman R. A. Wadsworth most of the big corps of workers in different parts of the county have made no reports, or have simply reported good progress. Mr. Wadsworth is optimistic that the final reports will show that Maui has lived up to the reputation she has already won in the Red Cross and Liberty Bond drives.

The first report to be turned in was from Principal Herbert Wade, of Haiku school, announcing that the school had signed pledge cards to the last pupil, and that already the school holds over $1000 in War Savings Stamps, Thrift Stamps, and Liberty Bonds.

In Wailuku over $1000 worth stamps were sold on the first day of the drive, and pledges amounting to some $10,000 taken.

Experiment Station Wants Castor Beans

A new opportunity for earning money is that of collecting castor beans. J. M. Westgate of the Federal Experiment Station, will pay five cents a pound for shelled beans and in lots of four pounds and under will furnish franks for postage. If there are larger quantities, they should be sent by freight. There is no deterioration and the beans may be held until a large bag is collected.

Mr. Westgate requires, however, that the following conditions be observed: The beans gathered in each locality shall be kept separate, and a tag attached, telling where the beans were collected, what kind of soil they were grown in; that is, whether rocky, heavy or light soil.

The value of the work of the experiment station is to test the beans of different localities, in order to find out whether or not there is a difference in oil content and which localities offer a field for producing the beans commercially.

It is of value to locate the places where castor beans are now growing and to get an idea of the quantity of beans now available. The schools will be doing a useful service by getting this information and will also be able to make some money.

If the oil production proves to be profitable, the price may be increased.—P. C. Advertiser.

A NEW SONG OF HATE

My Tuesdays are meatless,
My Wednesdays are wheatless,
I'm getting more eatless
Each Day.

My home it is heatless,
My bed it is sheetless—
They're all sent to the Y. M. C. A.

The bar rooms are treatless,
My coffee is sweetless,
Each day I get poorer
And wiser.

My stockings are feetless,
My trousers are gentless,
By gee—but I do hate
The Kaiser!

COURT OFFICIALS GO FISHING

The mills of justice have paused in their grinding, this week, to permit the judges to go fishing. Dave Fleming is the official director of the party which is made up of Judge James L. Coke, and Judge Kemp, of the supreme bench, Judge Burr, of the second circuit court, County Attorney E. R. Bevins, and John L. Fleming, of Honolulu.

The party started out yesterday morning and the local members of it returned this morning. They report good sport and a large number of fish, but no very large specimens were taken.

Signs Of Spring

I feel an elemental urge
To break my shell
And outward surge
Beyond the sun,
Beyond the star,
Where all the unknown forces are.
I want to dodge
This life complex,
This hedge and podge
Of "soul" and "sex."
The troubled thought
Strives to be free
From this distraught,
Delusive "Me."
What is the thing,
This stirring force?
Can it be spring?
Of course!

This Is Joke

In these days of the high cost of living the following story has a decided point:
The teacher of a primary class was trying to show the children the difference between the natural and man-made wonders and was finding it hard.
"What," she asked, "do you think is the most wonderful thing man ever made?"
A little girl whose parents were obviously harassed by the question of ways and means, replied as solemnly as the proverbial judge:
"A living for a family."—Pittsburg Chronicle-Telegraph.

Too Big To Miss

The average foreigner can rarely comprehend the geographical area of the United States, as was quite fully illustrated by the Englishman and his valet who had been traveling due west from Boston for five days. At the end of the fifth day master and servant were seated in the smoking-car, and it was observed that the man was gazing steadily and thoughtfully out of the window. Finally his companion became curious.
"William," said he, "of what are you thinking?"
"I was thinking, sir, about the discovery of America," replied the valet. "Columbus didn't do such a wonderful thing, after all, when he found this country, did he, now, sir? Hafter all's said a' done, 'ow could 'e 'elp it?—Everybody's Magazine.
