SATURDAY, MAY 26, 1883.

An Interesting Exhibition.

The Massachusetts Charitable Association will hold an Exhibition consisting exclusively of Foreign Arts, Products and Manufactures in the City of Boston, to open September 1st, 1883, and continue open not less than three months.

The selection of the City of Boston as the place in which to hold this exhibition is a happy one. It is the Metropolis of New England, the centre of a population of over three millions, and is an important commercial port...

According to the plans sent forward, the space set apart for Hawaii is the same as that apporportioned to Norway, Sweden, Denmark and Holland, and is very advantageously located on the right of the grand Promenade reached through the Great Hall.

By an Act of the Congress of the United States, all goods intended for this Exhibition will be admitted to remain in bond free of duty while on exhibition. At its close they may be sold upon payment of the duty, under the approval of the Government of the Association.

The Exhibition will open September 1st, and the exhibits will be confined entirely to Foreign products and manufactures. The space set apart for exhibitors will be enclosed in each package a list of all objects it contains, and to bear in mind that the Directors have the right to reject any proposed exhibit, and that the introduction of dangerous, combustible or offensive substances is strictly prohibited.

and kukui-nut necklaces, should be included, as well as mats, hats, straw and other braided work, in short everything that would exemplify the skill and industry of the Hawaiian people.

The Planters' Labor and Supply Company has been requested to co-operate with the Hawaiian Commission in the matter of making the exhibit from Hawaii a full and interesting one, and we do not doubt but that the result will be satisfactory to the exhibitors and pleasing and instructive to all.

As will be seen by reference to our "By Authority" column, this Government has organized a Commission who are prepared to give all needed information, furnish circulars and otherwise facilitate the collection and forwarding of articles intended to be exhibited.

EDITORIALS.

(From the Daily.)

Queen Victoria's Birthday.

Thursday being the Birthday of Her Majesty Queen Victoria, the British residents here met, as is their wont, to her honor. No other Sovereign of England has better deserved the love and loyalty of the people. This year's festivities were marked by a ball, in place of the customary dinner, and was a brilliant affair.

The Portuguese.

Though Portugal is one of the smallest of the European States, yet in respect to the enterprise she exhibited in times past she left a marked impression upon the Asiatic world than any other nation. Her colonists in China, India, Malaysia and Africa have left an indelible impression upon those countries, and in the physical and social life an element of vigor that has shown itself full of enterprise.

The portion of the race we receive from the Azores, and which may be traced to a parent stock, retain in a marked degree the vigor and virtues that may have declined in the main root. In Portugal, however, luxury and sloth have prevailed.

What has injured California has been the influence of people covetous of gain, and who have sought to obtain such by disturbing values, and by floating speculation schemes into which they have induced the people to insert their small fortunes, and in the process have ruined the fortunes of many.

It has cost a little money—a few hundreds of thousands of dollars—to feed these people here, but it is the best investment money this government has to pay. It is only to be regretted that it has not a round million to spend in the same manner.

A Nuisance.

We have called attention more than once to the long and narrow and other sweeping front yards as being public nuisances, and a source of danger to property. There is no law to prevent a man from building his house up to the line of his yard, our law-makers undoubtedly supposing that considerations of prudence, and an ordinary regard for the comfort of the neighborhood would restrain people from thus disposing of the debris of fallen leaves, seeds, animal exuvia and refuse matter.

Our Harbor Facilities.

The harbor of Honolulu has been gradually improved from day to day, when it was first visited by whalers whose boats were hauled up on a smooth sandy beach, to the present time when its wharves measure more than fifteen miles in length along the front. Until within the last four years this wharfrage front has been sufficient to accommodate the vessels that have sought its port, but now the demand is for more room.

From Emme's wharf to the "Cattle Pen" is about a thousand feet in a straight line, and by throwing a bridge about our feet of red fuel long, built on piles, over the creek that empties into the harbor close to Emme's wharf, this line of reef, as well as the thousand feet lying between the Cattle Pen and the "Summer House" can be reached. All along this two thousand feet (and, in fact, out to the light-house) there is the best foundation on which to build wharves and ware-houses.

Our critical contemporary, the Press, of last Saturday depicted the best part of a column to a diatribe upon a little article which appeared in the DAILY P. C. ADVISER, in which it was stated that the Government had vacated that Manana Island, off Waimanalo, might be made available as a quarantine station.

The article that has acted on the susceptible nerves of the opposition writer like a red rag waved in sight of a turkeycock, was written with any ulterior designs upon the public purse; nor, we may add, do we believe that ideocy as hinted in a prevalent theory, has any other result than to produce results which need careful attention.

Of all the forms of money current in this country the most acceptable to the public and the most useful is the Hawaiian Treasury note. Those slips of paper, representing heavy coin, are in constant demand from hand to hand without any of that inevitable loss by wear and tear which is the fate of all other forms of money.

Memorial Day. May 30, falling this year upon Wednesday—is set apart throughout the United States as the day when Americans publicly meet and at appropriate times decorate the graves of their former comrades.

Now, seriously, all this violent expression of indignation is put forth by a disinterested editor, who is trying to create a strife without any occasion for one, and to raise a question about issues which do not exist.

Freedom of Thought. A contemporary gets off a declaration on the subject of Freedom of Thought. We agree with him that it is an inalienable and inassailable right of human nature.

As a rule climatic conditions regulate the style of dress worn and choice of material by the large class who cannot or will not care to be out of the fashion.

A New Political Alliance. The Bulletin of yesterday, under the head of "Foreign News" speaks of the alliance between Italy, Australia and Germany.

The latest news thing in the way of a treacherous move is called the "Hop Waltz" which is being introduced by some society little too nice in fact, from the alleged closeness of attitude which some of the figures require.

Coronation of the Czar. It is said that in Russia, a Czar is not a Czar, until he is crowned. Until this has been done, he is only a pretender, or a usurper, or a rebel.

It is said that in Russia, a Czar is not a Czar, until he is crowned. Until this has been done, he is only a pretender, or a usurper, or a rebel. The Russian princes, however, and all other Russian subjects receive commands to attend the ceremony, and not invitations. The preparations at Moscow are at the scale of magnitude State and are on such a scale, however rich they may have been, could ever have borne the expense.

We are informed that the publisher of one of our weekly contemporaries has addressed a letter to the Premier, informing him that the public mind is strongly in opposition to the Government in regard to the coronation of the Czar.

Half way between the entrance the Bishops of Moscow, Kazan and St. Petersburg leave the Cathedral of the Archangel and join the procession. They are immediately followed by the deacon Gons from the various Russian districts, at the head of whom they proceed to the lawn in front of the palace where the Czar is.

At the termination of the first lesson the Czar is conducted to a raised dais, which is heavily draped with gold and purple, and by the double-headed Russian eagle. Upon the dais stands the famous throne of the Czar Vladimir Monomach, beside which is an antique throne of the Emperor.

A Test: "What would you do," said the fireman black. Of the grim engineer.

"If suddenly upon the track A woman should appear? And suppose you were running a little behind. With your gauge check up to 'L'.

"Do!" cried the grim engineer. With a look of cold disdain; "I'd get out there and leave you here. To tighten out on that pilot plate. And that woman I would snatch. Before she knew whether we were freight. Express, wild, or despatch!"

"That," cried the fireman. "I call game!" And he averted in the coal. And wondered if he'd do the same. In a similar kind of a hole. And the headlight cast a long thin beam Through the night of dismal black. So suddenly there came the scream Of a woman on the track!

"Jump!" shrieked the fireman. "There she goes!" But the engine was at still. As a woman's sorrows, joys and woes Were taken like a pill. "Why didn't you get on the pilot plate? That was the place for you! Why didn't you try to avert her fate, As you boasted you would do?"

"My friend," said the grim engineer, "With an apologetic cough, "That woman's back would trouble here. And now she's better off. Besides, by grinding her to hash, A good fat thing I draw. The road will pay five thousand cash. And she was my mother-in-law!"

The Hermit of K.uai. In the recesses of the highest mountain on Kauai an old hermit dwelt, it is said, all alone in his cave, when cannot be approached without difficulty and even considerable danger during the rainy season. He is supposed to subsist on roots, wild taro and fruits, which grow in his cave, and he is said to be a great collector of the interior mountains of the island still unexplored.

There was a time when this old recluse frequented the houses of men, and some of the old residents distinctly recollect when he was in the prime of early manhood and considered one of the most enterprising and bold fellows in the island. His name, it is said, was Carleton, but he took the name of Carleton, which was known by the nickname of "Old Carl," by which title he chose to designate him. When his singular change of life from the associations of friends and an agreeable society to a lonely cave is related, one naturally seeks to find an explanatory cause, and after careful inquiry among those best acquainted with his habits, it is thought that the cause was a woman.

It would appear that a great misfortune befalling three men into a melancholy half-tempered state of mind, in which condition the plan of separating him off from society and placing him in the mountains to lead a life of solitude and to be forthwith proceeded to put it into execution. Although he has at times been seen by his native who have been visiting the mountains in search of fruits, no white man has ever been able to catch more than a glimpse of his wild clad form since the day he disappeared from his cave and his home.

As we have said old Carl was then young and jolly and strong. He came to this country during the reign of Kamehameha III, and after starting about Honolulu for a time, he went to Kauai and lived in a little piece of land where he erected a small but comfortable dwelling for those times, out of the rock which had composed the walls of an ancient Hawaiian temple. He took with him a few articles, a fine boat and fishing tackle, together with some necessary household utensils and furniture, and he was most important of all a young wife who came with him to his new home.

Soon as he got fairly settled down he began to fix up and embellish his romantic environment, and ere long his household assumed a comfortable and pleasant aspect, entirely in harmony with his taste and character. His wife seemed to enjoy herself in her isolated, new home extremely well, and she had no neighbors were near her, so she could gossip or retail scandal. She found ample employment in attending to the affairs of her small household, and delighted in the domestic duties which were her lot.

Like lovers, they would converse together for hours and seemed to forget the flight of time, and a number of times they would stroll arm and arm along the sea shore apparently enraptured with a kind of rapturous little sort of divine ecstacy. On these occasions they seemed to have become true children of nature, and mingled with the subtle spirit which often appears to animate the universe when the heavens put on their starry crown. On these occasions they seemed to have become true children of nature, and mingled with the subtle spirit which often appears to animate the universe when the heavens put on their starry crown.

One day, however, when he was out on the mountains to gather fruit, or when he sailed out in his small boat when the sea was calm to enjoy the sport of catching fish, which was also his favorite pastime, he was one day returning home, and as he was about to enter his cave, he was met by a woman who was entirely unknown to him.
