SATURDAY NIGHT.

When all our week-day toil is o'er,
And evening softly glideth in,
And hushed is labor's busy hum,
The Sabbath doth begin.
It matters not what laws decree,
Or how the doctors wish to decide;
We feel that Sabbath is begun,
Our work is laid aside.
All other evenings bring their cares,
Our restless thoughts keep laboring on,
Tomorrow's dawn will wake to toll,
Our rest will soon be gone.
But now, the business of the week
Is finished. And the sweet repose
Of coming Sabbath rest begins,
And time serenely flows.
We lay our dusty garments by,
Recline ourselves to balmy sleep;
No visions of tomorrow's cares
Among our slumbers creep.
Or if a thought of morrow comes,
While floating toward the land of dreams,
It is a soothing thought, and one
Of Sabbath's golden gleams.
What quiet raptures thrill the soul,
When, like a whisper soft and clear,
Some strain of distant music falls
Upon the listening ear.
So sweetly float among our thoughts
The Sabbath scenes that soon shall rise
To cheer the pilgrim hastening on
His journey to the skies.

The Jugglers of India.

From the first of a series of interesting articles entitled, "Sketches of India," published in the Crayon, we extract the following:—
One morning after I had passed some days at Madras, I went to the "Garden House" of one of my English friends, to see an exhibition by some jugglers, who had been sent for the night before to come up from the Black Town. The jugglers of Madras are famous as the best in India. They form a caste by themselves. Their skill is the result of the practice of successive generations, and their art is hereditary. It was about six o'clock in a clear September morning, and our party consisted of five or six spectators. Coffee having been served, we took our seats on the verandah on the shady side of the house, while the jugglers, of whom there were fifteen or twenty, men, women, and children, ranged themselves before us on the grass at the farther side of the avenue, ten or twelve feet wide, that ran between us and them. Behind them was a green field, on which at some distance grew a few trees and flowering shrubs. There was nothing near them that could afford hiding-place or shelter. The men wore nothing but a tight cloth about their loins, and their women were very old, with white beads lying upon their dark skins. The women were clothed in the common bright, loose dress of the lower classes, and the little children were quite naked. The implements of the art, their musical instruments, and the flat, circular baskets in which were their snakes, for the jugglers are also snake charmers by profession, lay around upon the grass.
One of the young men began the exhibition, with some common tricks of sleight of hand, remarkable only from the fact that his dress and the ground afforded him no aids. Then another came forward, and throwing four brass balls into the air, kept them in constant motion, now making them circle round his head, now throwing them in opposite directions under his arms and over his shoulders, now chasing with one another, never missing the instantaneous chance, with incredible quickness of eye and quickness of hand, with incomprehensible delicacy making them wheel about him as if they were the obedient servants of his will. Such exquisite skill, in one's own hands, seems utterly clumsy and inefficient. All the while that this juggler was playing so beautifully with the glittering brass balls, one of his companions beat upon a dull drum, while the others looked on, and now and then, at some peculiarly successful or long sustained flight, broke out with a murmur of encouraging applause. Then followed in quick succession other not less remarkable feats of strength, agility, and skill—feats on poles, with swords, with ribbons—indeed, of all sorts, and all done with an apparent ease that made them not less pleasant than wonderful to see. The jugglers seemed subtle and lithe as spirits.
"Not tied or manacled with joint or limb,
Nor founded on the little strength of bones,
But the most wonderful performance that we saw this morning, was a feat of pure juggling, of which I have never been able to find any solution. One of the old men came forward upon the gravelled and hard-trodden avenue, leading with him a woman. He made her kneel down, tied her arms behind her, and blind-folded her eyes. Then bringing a great bag net made with open meshes of rope, he put it over the woman, and laid up the mouth, fastening it with knotted enterprising cords in such a way that it seemed an impossibility for her to extricate herself from it. The man then took a closely woven wicker basket that narrowed toward the top, lifted the woman in the net from the ground, and placed her in it, though it was not without the exertion of some force that he could crowd her through the narrow mouth. Having succeeded in getting her into the basket, in which, from its small size, she was necessarily in a most cramped position, he put the cover upon it, and threw over it a wide strip of cloth, hiding it completely. In a moment, placing his hand under the cloth, he drew out the net quite untied and disentangled. He then took a long, straight, sharp sword, muttered some words to himself while he sprinkled the dust upon the cloth, and put some upon his forehead, then pulled off and threw aside the covering, and plucked the sword suddenly into the basket. Prepared as in some degree we were for this, and knowing that it was only a deception, it was yet impossible to see it without a cold creeping of horror. The quiet and energy with which he repeated his strokes, driving the sword through and through the basket, while the other jugglers looked on, apparently as much interested as ourselves, were very dramatic and effective. Stopping after he had rattled the basket, he again scattered dust upon its top, lifted the lid, took up the basket from the ground, showed it to us empty, and threw it away. At the same moment we saw the woman approaching us from a clump of trees at a distance of at least fifty or sixty feet.
Throughout the whole of this inexplicable feat, the old man and the woman were quite removed from the rest of their party. The basket stood by itself on the hard earth, and so much beneath the verandah on which we were sitting, that we could easily see all around it. By what means the woman invisibly escaped, was an entire mystery, and remains unsolved. The feat is not a very uncommon one, but no one who had seen it ever gave me a clue to the manner in which it was performed.

VARIETY.

History is full of illustrious villains, but there never was an illustrious miser.
Never employ yourself to discover the faults of others; look to your own.
More perish through too much confidence than by too much fear; where one despairs, there are many that presume.
Passion is a sort of fear in the mind, which always leaves us weaker than it found us.
It is not treasure or power that lays either the head or the heart at rest; but a quiet conscience, and the candid simplicity of a tender mind.
Zeal, of all virtues, made choice of silence, for thereby he saw others' imperfections, and concealed his own.
Love is the fever of the soul; passion is the delirium of that fever.
Confused thought is a cheap commodity, but some writers parade it as if it were a priceless jewel.
Fashion is the race of the rich to get away from the poor, who follow as fast as they can.
A slattern always makes a poor cook. The woman who don't dress herself, has never yet succeeded in dressing a beefsteak properly.
Why is a pretty young woman like corn in a time of scarcity? Because she ought to be husbanded.
Procrastination.—It is with our good intentions as with our dishes—to-morrow is but too often the lash of to-day.
If you would have a thing kept secret, never tell it to any one; and if you would not have a thing known of you, never do it.
What men want, is not talent, but purpose; in other words, not the power to achieve, but the will to labor.
It has been decided by a Western court that a clergyman may marry himself. This is a fee-saving process at all events.
If hit in a child is at first like a spider's web; if neglected, it becomes a thread of twine, next a cord of rope, and finally a cable; and then, who can break it?
Let your expenses be such as to leave a balance in your pocket. Ready money is a friend in need.
Don't lounge in a printing office, or talk where men are setting type. You have no business to be in a printing office unless you have business; if you have, transact it in as short a time and for few as possible and leave.
It is not high crimes, such as robbery and murder, which destroy the peace of society. The village gossip, family jealousies, and bickerings between neighbors, meddlesomeness and tattling are the worms that eat into all social happiness.
A GREAT TRUTH.—Some men are like cats. You may stroke the fur the right way for years, and hear nothing but purring; but accidentally tread on the tail, and all memory of former kindness is obliterated.
How to Know a Fool.—A fool, says the Arab proverb, may be known by six things: anger without cause, speech without profit, change without motive, inquiry without object, putting trust in a stranger, and not knowing his friends from his foes.
GOOD GROUND FOR BACHELORS.—According to the Nantucket Inquirer, "it is an absolute marvel that an old bachelor can be found on the Island, for we cannot imagine how it is possible to resist the matrimonial temptations that continually meet the eye."
"Mr. Filkins, you say you know the defendant—what is his character?" "For what sir—speaking or integrity?" "For integrity, sir." "Well, all I can say about Jones is that if he's honest he's got a queer way of showing it, that's all." "What do you mean by that?" "Just this—that the night before he dined on turkey, somebody's poultry coop is always broken open." "That will do, Mr. Filkins."

THE TYPE-REVOLVING AMERICAN PRINTING MACHINE, MANUFACTURED BY R. HOE & CO., NEW YORK.—We have great pleasure in announcing that we have made arrangements with Mr. Robert Hoe, of the above firm, who is now in London, to deliver in as short a time as possible, one of the above machines, with all the latest improvements. This will enable us to meet our increasing circulation, and improve the printing of the Illustrated London News, which we fear, has often suffered from the rapidity with which we have been compelled to work off our very large impression.—198 Strand, July 3, 1856.
PROVERS FOR PLANTERS.—Farmers and others will heed the following, whatever they may think of book for fancy farming generally. They will direct the attention of their sons to these Universal Rules, and commend every one to follow them. We are indebted for most of them to that excellent manual, the Illustrated Register of Rural Affairs, every line of which is a text in itself for a mere elaborate article.
Never keep animals on short allowance—if you starve them, they will surely starve you.
Although, in draining land too roughly, your purse may be drained, yet the full crops that follow will soon fill it again.
Trying to farm without capital is like trying to run a locomotive without fuel. Money and wood must both be consumed, if they are to move the machine of the farm or of the rail.
Always give the soil the first meal. If this is well fed with manure, it will feed all else—plants, animals and man.
If you wish to give an energetic movement to all your farm machinery, and keep its hundred wheels in rotation, be sure not to be without a good rotation of crops.
If you allow your animals to shiver, your fortune will be shivered in consequence; that is, the farmer who leaves his cattle to the winds, will find his profits also given to the winds.
Heavy carter crops for cattle will soon return carats of gold.
Did you ever hear the musical notes of a starving herd of hogs? Extincting by food those notes speedily, if you would avoid even more annoying notes after pay-day has passed.
Many a farmer, by too sparingly seeding his new meadows, has had to cede his whole farm.
Every farmer should see daily every animal he has, and inspect its condition. Weekly visits, with some, soon result in weakly animals.
IMPORTANT, IF TRUE.—We clip the following from Galvani's Messenger:—"Professor Giovanni Caselli, of Florence, has just made a discovery which promises to cast all previous contrivances in electro-telegraph into the shade. He has invented an apparatus by which the telegraphic wire will transmit to any distance an exact fac simile of any writing or design, when made to communicate with a similar apparatus at the other station. If the account of this extraordinary invention which is given by the Corriere Mercantile of Genoa, be true, the transmission of telegraphic dispatches by single letters will be entirely superseded; and the original writing, put into the apparatus, will be reproduced in an instant, with the signature of the correspondent as if written by himself."
