SATURDAY, JULY 9.

"Our country, 'tis of thee, Land of the noble free, Thy name we praise thee, Land where our fathers died, Land of the pilgrim's pride, From every mountain side, Let freedom ring!"

The 88th anniversary of American Independence, which occurred on Monday last, was observed in Honolulu with more than usual demonstration, famous as our city is for its celebration of "the 4th."

Long before the break of day, with fire-crackers, pistols and guns, young Hawaii was stirred up and seemed to vie with young America in making such an incessant noise as to forbid sleep to the older part of the community.

The place selected for the day's festivities, was the Hooper or American Club premises in Hotel street, now occupied by Capt. Babcock, who kindly threw them open to the public for the occasion.

Two tents were erected for the occasion, one for the oration and accompanying exercises, and the other for the dinner. These tents, as also the entire premises were lavishly decorated with flags, evergreens, pictures and mottoes, making such a display as has probably never been seen on any similar occasion at the islands.

About 10 o'clock the guests began to arrive, and at 11 assembled in the audience tent, seats having been provided for all. His Excellency the American Minister, Dr. J. McBride, presided, and prayer was offered by Rev. Mr. Damon. H. A. P. Carter, Esq., then read the Declaration of Independence, and was followed by Hon. James W. Austin, who delivered the following oration:

"Icelanders, far away from our native land, the memories of the anxious day cluster around us. How dear to us all is this birth-day of our country's freedom. Our country, the dear mother of us all, in her prosperity we rejoice in the loving-bands that she throws around us, but in adversity, we cling to her with more than filial affection. Time and distance can take away the love the patriot has for his country. It clings to him in all the varied relations of life, and although to the true man, the whole world is his country, still his native land has a myriad of welcomes and kindly voices that other lands can never utter."

And now, while the memories of this day are cheering the hearts of our countrymen in other parts of the world, while the halcyon associations wake the enthusiasm of the hour, we would welcome you to the participation of this glorious occasion. We welcome you to join with us in congratulations for the past progress and prosperity of our country, and we welcome you to join with us in cherishing fresh hopes and aspirations for the future; for I declare to you, and it requires not the skill of a prophet to declare it, that the Union of our country is a triumph, and it shall remain so, and its glory endure to its end.

The Union of the States, one country and one destiny, that shall be our theme, and it is the theme that on this day stirring the true soldier of freedom, who feels that in behalf of his country, the battle is fought for the down-trodden and oppressed. And I rejoice that from these islands there have gone some natives of the soil to swell the numbers of those who determine it is that the Union shall be preserved inviolate. Many of us have heard of a brave soldier, a native of this soil, who has written home to us words that have sent a thrill of enthusiasm to our steps in the path of duty—'keep time to the music of the Union.'

and the Gentile of every nation. During the terrible contest that is now raging in our land, if there had been any other form of government than Republican, I believe our government would have presented to the world as the most melancholy form of a despotic government. No—Republican institutions have not been a failure. They have survived and they shall survive the shock of secession and slavery; and although the garments of our government have been stained by the blood of rebellion, she will yet stand forth arrayed in the garments of freedom and liberty. The body of the slave shall become the soul of the man.

And whatever may have been heretofore our individual opinions concerning the institution of slavery, as it has existed in the United States, I say that we can now have no doubt that that, and that alone, has served as the cause of revolt on the part of the traitors of the South. Let every Free State answer, that it clings to the American Union. Let Western Virginia, East Tennessee answer; and everywhere throughout the land, where the scourge of slavery has not existed, there you will find a loyal population. And when peace again shall hold its sway over our country, the chain of every slave shall be loosened, and stronger hands than ever will unite the people of every section of the Republic.

And when peace again shall hold its sway over our country, the chain of every slave shall be loosened, and stronger hands than ever will unite the people of every section of the Republic. And when peace again shall hold its sway over our country, the chain of every slave shall be loosened, and stronger hands than ever will unite the people of every section of the Republic.

In reference to our country, I have spoken of our hopes and aspirations for the future. In crushing the great rebellion constant progress has been made from its inception. The Union again has been wrested from the traitors of the South, and the territory that they claimed three years ago, and even now their Capital awaits the coming of the Deliverer, who shall free her and her beautiful State from the bonds of secession, and place them once more beneath the folds of our glorious flag.

With a voice that shook the land the words of Luther were more than a mere utterance, but they were a truth that has and shall abide the world. Let us brightly ever the leading day shall Freedom's holy war. Peace cannot cure the sickly time. All hail the leader, Star! And wherever the summons came, there rose an angry din, as when upon a rocky coast a stormy tide comes in.

Peacemakers had her victories. From her lofty seat Science and Art, Commerce and Manufactures, Civilization and Refinement, follow in her path. But war, notwithstanding the horror and desolation that she brings, has her bright side, and her noble character. History, recording the experience of nations, shows that out of war many a nation has emerged from the darkness of slavery and despotism, to the light of Liberty and Freedom.

Some of the addresses made in response were well-prepared and well-delivered, and all breathed the spirit of Union and devotion to the mother country. We much regret our space forbids their insertion.

Several volunteer toasts and addresses were among which was one by Mr. J. Bartlett, to a subject which had barely been alluded to by any of the speakers—SLAVERY, and which had been received by the Emancipation Proclamation. His remarks were those of a Republican, earnest and warm, and evinced in full sympathy with the feelings of the assemblage. They were followed by three hearty cheers for the Emancipation Proclamation.

It was nearly 4 o'clock, when the guests began to retire from the table, and the Chairman rose and announced that a gentleman had offered the framed Proclamation of Freedom to the slaves, which hung near by, to be sold for the benefit of the Sanitary Fund. Mr. Severance was soon at his post and commenced the sale, the earlier bids running up to $50. The purchasers, in each instance, had the picture resold for the same object, the whole average amounting to $453. The last purchaser, Capt. Waterman, presented the Proclamation to the American Minister.

The portrait of Washington, before referred to, was then presented and sold for the same object, the total receipts from it amounting to $90. These sums will be forwarded to the U. S. Sanitary Commission, and including the premium on exchange, will probably make a gift of One Thousand Dollars, as a Fourth of July donation from Americans in Honolulu, for the relief of their countrymen, wounded and disabled in the civil war.

After the auction, the balloting for President was announced, with the following result, which met three hearty cheers: For Mr. Lincoln, 281 votes. For John C. Fremont, 11 votes. And may it prove, as one remarked, "as goes Honolulu, so goes the Union."

There must have been nearly one thousand persons present on this occasion. Besides Americans, we observed English, French and German families, who enjoyed the festivities as heartily as did the former. All who came were welcome, though no special invitations were sent out. All the officers of the Russian war steamer in port honored the occasion, with their presence. There were several flattering allusions to Russia and the Russians, which were sufficient to show them that American and Russian hearts were united by the same bond of universal freedom. Among the guests we also noticed several of the consular corps.

and blue" as old America ever was. Boys, would we not like to celebrate the Fourth in company with the "Glad save the King," "Hail Columbia," "The Flag of our Union," "The red, white and blue," &c., &c.

After the dinner was over, and indeed while it was in progress, the younger portion of the assemblage, under the leadership of Dr. Hoffmann, engaged in the dance, and it was a beautiful sight to see the children, with their white dresses and long flowing sashes of white, red and blue, moving so gracefully and happily around the hall, which had been tastefully prepared for them, and hung with banners, and to which the motto "Young America" hanging in evergreens on one side of the hall, invited them.
