THE PACIFIC Commercial Advertiser.

A Tale of the Sea.

A mariner by temperate
Lay struggling with the wave;
His one sole hope—all else was lost—
His boarder's gold to save.

Slung from his neck—a weary weight—
His previous charge he bore;
His falling strength, at war with fate,
Could bear no further more.

But not against his life alone
Uprose the breakers wild;
A woman, on the billows thrown,
Held up her drowning child.

"Save her!" she cried, "in mercy save!"
As through the surf she rolled;
He heard: and cast beneath the wave
His prize of Indian gold.

Fearless he braved the tropic storm
With limbs by love new strung;
While round his neck all soft and warm,
Two infant arms were slung.

He bailed the land—the blessed land!
He drank its spicy breeze;
He strove to reach his coral strand,
He greets it with a prayer.

Vainly the angry tempest roared,
His feet have touched the goal;
And, with his living burden saved,
He stands a rescued soul!

The child has lived, bloomed, loved, and died,
Above the old man lies;
Another sea, of stiffer tide,
Steals o'er his closing eyes.

Gleams now for him no tropic light,
But, where life's waters flow,
The glory of the Polar night—
The calm of Arctic seas!

His hard-earned gold beneath the deep
Lies hid—but where is he,
His God-gift whom the star-worshiper,
His daughter of the sea?

Where cloud-waves from the rippled skies,
Touched by the golden day,
A beautiful form in angel guise
Floats up the liquid way.

He follows, hushed in rapt delight,
Of dread and death beset,
She, swimming slow with plumes bright,
He, clinging like a child.

The dross of earth is cast away;
She leads him by the hand,
Through heaven's blue sea her white wings play;
He hears the happy land!

She parts the wave that beats him back;
He breast the surge no more;
His foot, upon an angel's track,
Have touched the immortal shore.

VARIETY.

Few men are oppressed by their weight of character.
Let it never be said that when a man jumps for joy,
"his delight of a bad smell about the post-office, and asked Brown what it could be. Brown said he didn't know, but suggested that it might be caused by 'the dead letters.'"

A flag was stolen from a recruiting office in Providence a few days since, and was afterwards found made up into a skirt by an Irish girl. She meant to have a patriotic balmoral.

An affidavit taken at Cairo declares that a quarter-master belonging to the Thirteenth Tennessee cavalry was, while living, nailed to a board by the rebels, and thrown into the flames of a burning building at Fort Fisher.

The proprietor of a firm, not remarkable for correctness of language, but who by honest industry realized a comfortable independence, being called upon at a social meeting for a toast, gave "Success to forgery."

A soldier in one of the late battles, sitting very coolly behind one of his guns, where the shot was falling fast, being asked by the chaplain whether he was supported by Divine Providence, replied, "No, sir; I am supported by the Ninth New Jersey."

The following stanza, on the marriage of Reuben Wise with Matilda Cheever, is exceedingly well told and witty:

At length she believed the proffer'd prize,
(Oh happy one, believe us)
That she was wedded to a man who was
Before she was Miss Cheever.

The following is the verdict of a Saratoga county coroner's jury, empaneled to inquire into the cause of the death of Nathaniel Denton, while driving across the railroad track at Simon's Crossing, about a mile and a half north of Ballston, was struck by the engine of a train which he did not see, and which from deafness he did not hear.

"Nathaniel Denton came to his death by a collision with the engine near Simon's Crossing, of which we exonerate the engineer from all blame. But further, we think the deceased and the engineer might have seen each other, and perhaps, yes, very likely, have saved his life, if the wood-pile sworn to had not been there."

DISAPPOINTED.—A man applied to Dr. Jackson, a celebrated chemist of Boston, with a box of specimens.

"Can you tell me what that is, sir?"

"Certainly I can, sir; that is iron pyrites."

"What sir?" in a voice of thunder.

"Iron pyrites."

"Iron pyrites! And what's that?"

"That's what it is," said the chemist, putting a lot on a shovel over the hot coals, where it disappeared.

"Dross?"

"And what's iron pyrites worth?"

"Nothing."

"Nothing! Why there's a woman in our town owns a whole hill of that—and I've married her!"

Sydney Smith said, never give way to melancholy; resist it steadily, for the habit will encroach. I once gave a lady two and twenty recipes against melancholy—one was a bright fire; another to remember all the pleasant things said to her; another to keep a box of sugar-plums on the hob. I thought this mere trifling at the moment, but have in after-life discovered how true it is that these little pleasures often banish melancholy better than higher and more exalted objects; and that no means ought to be thought too trifling which can oppose it either in ourselves or others.
