Letter from New York.
(524 Broadway, N. York.)
March 28th, 1865.

Mr. Editor—A few days since I left Troy in the beautiful steamer Francis Skiddy. I chose this boat in preference to the cars, because of the greater comfort and finer view of the Hudson River scenery, to say nothing of the satisfaction of knowing that I was in no danger of one of those railroad "smash-ups" which have become so fearfully common within the last month or two. The boat was heavily laden with merchandise and the spacious saloons full of passengers. When about ten miles below Albany we heard a sudden crash of timbers accompanied by a heavy jar. The boat began to tip and soon the decks stood at an angle of forty-five degrees to the horizon. Men shouted, women shrieked and fainted, and children cried, while the steam-whistle screamed shrill and clear above them all. For a few minutes the scene of wild confusion and dismay was indescribable. Just at this crisis something about the engine gave way and a volley of steam rushed into the main saloon filling it in a few moments. Strange to say no one was badly hurt. We had struck a rock, tearing a large hole in the bottom of our craft. She was rapidly sinking, slowly rising as she sank. It was less than ten minutes the dining-saloon was full of water. Tables, chairs, dishes, and burning lamps were floating about. There was great danger that the lamps would set the boat afire, but no one dared venture in to get them. In five minutes more the water was a foot deep on the next deck. The baggage-master was not to be found, so we had to take the baggage room with us, got out our carpet-bags and retreated to the upper deck, where we were rejoiced to see that a steam-tug, which was going down the river with a number of canal-boats, had just come to our rescue. By the time we had landed, the ladies, children and personal baggage over to these, the Skiddy had sunk seven or eight feet more and grounded. After waiting there half an hour, the Henrick Hudson, on her way from Albany to New York, picked us up. We were happy to have escaped without the loss of a single life, and concluded that it was not reasonable to expect entire freedom from accidents either by land or water. The dangers encountered in trusting your life in your little inter-island coasters, (to say nothing of the Kilauea), are perhaps no greater than the perils of travel in this most civilized and christian land.

New York.
This great Babylon is the American "gathering place of woe." The little Massachusetts luminary pales her intellectual fires in the presence of this splendid orb. In its light, the world is "Hub of the Universe"—glowing with reflected radiance—is not visible to the naked eye. This reminds me that yesterday noon, while standing in Broadway, I saw a young man, without the aid of any glass, see an island which never clear enough for that? London smoke and fog would not permit of such a sight once in a century.

The city is constantly and rapidly extending her bounds—I can plainly see the growth from month to month, and yet she is unable to afford shelter to all her children. Those who daily do business on her streets, live anywhere within a radius of thirty or forty miles, in Orange, Newark, Elizabeth, Rahway, New Brunswick, Jamaica, Hempstead, Yonkers, Irvington, Tarrytown, Rye, Stamford, Norwalk, &c., and infinitesimally. These are the tiny satellites, closely connected with their primary, and deriving all their light from it. Some business men come in daily even from Bridgeport and New Haven. They are now purposing to lay an under-ground railroad the whole length of Broadway. The sooner it is done the better—it is greatly needed.

Every night a vast multitude that remain in the city, seek recreation at innumerable lecture-rooms, theatres, billiard-saloons, circuses, concert halls and operas. As an illustration of the demand in this direction, Edwin Booth has just finished playing "Hamlet" for one hundred successive nights, and every night to a full house. Those who interest themselves in such matters call it the greatest triumph of the histrionic art ever known in the old or new world.

While here I have been peculiarly fortunate in hearing the famous speakers of the country. Within eight days I have listened to J. B. Gough, Fred Douglass, Wendell Phillips, Geo. W. Curtis, Dr. Henry Scudder, (the returned missionary,) H. Beecher, and last, but not least, Miss Ann Lee Lockman. I wish I had time and space to describe each one.

Phillips is the Demosthenes of America. He combines the classic elegance of the orator with the sanctified energy of the radical reformer. He approaches nearer my ideal of a perfect orator than any other speaker I have yet heard. Beecher, when in England, pronounced him "the most eloquent man living." Today he is rejecting in the highest terms of his twenty years' argument; yet he does not stop to count the spoils of conquest, but presses eagerly in the van to new battles and new victories. He believes that the instructors of the people should always be ahead of them. The day is not far distant when he will reach his doctrines in Richmond and Charleston. Sumner and Phillips steadily rise to honor as Calhoun and Davis descend to infamy.

Miss Dickinson perhaps excites more interest than any other lecturer at present before the public. Her melodious voice, her expressive countenance, her youth, her earnestness, her womanly grace and her lovely character, lend to her appeals an indescribable charm. Beside these she has the true orator's power of "magnetizing" an audience. Her voice is something wonderful. I heard her in the large hall of the Cooper Institute when crowded to its utmost capacity, many hundreds standing. Without apparent effort she made all hear, while at the same time she moved them to laughter or tears. In her style of delivery she is as far removed from the unmelodious gestures and mannerisms of Lucy Stone as she is from the namby-pambyisms of Grace Greenwood. The good which she has done in stimulating a pure patriotism all over the North cannot easily be estimated. She seems to speak, not like many fine orators, for the sake of "speaking," but only to convince and convert. She appears to entirely forget herself in her zeal for her subject. When warmed with her theme, she frequently in unconscious abstraction twists her watch-chain with great energy, as Dr. Duff was accustomed to twist his gown into a knot, and as Beecher frequently wrings his pocket handkerchief. Like Mr. Beecher, (who by the way first introduced her to a New York audience,) she has great powers of wit and sarcasm, which she is tempted to use more frequently than her best friends would wish. Her "Woman's Work and Wages" is opening the eyes and hearts of the people to a subject which has received too little thought. I cited, when in Philadelphia, the U. S. Mint, where a short time since she was a common day laborer. She knows from experience that whereof she affirms. From the Mint her love of country took her to the hospitals of Washington and Alexandria, where, like Florence Nightingale, her untiring devotion won the gratitude of our wounded soldiers. Since then, the young Quakeress has won the hearts of the whole people. It will be a sorrowful day for her nine hundred and ninety-nine distracted lovers when she rejects them to accept the thousandth!

Russia and the United States. That for which Americans hold Alexander II. in peculiar honor is his great act of emancipation.

But the Emperor of Russia has excited in the American bosom a warmer feeling yet by his staunch friendship for the United States.

Refusing in the beginning to join England and France in recognizing the so-called Confederacy as a belligerent power, he has ever observed the obligations of international comity with perfect faith.

But yet again the approach of the time when the two great nations will be brought into the closest proximity by the great Siberian telegraph is calculated to generate new ties.

The London Morning Star says: "The fall of Charleston is not an inappropriate time to glance at the course of English opinion with regard to the war which the capture of Fort Sumter inaugurated."

But the result has emphatically shown the irresistible power of a Government sustained by consistent efforts of a free people.

Teaching the Letters.

I have always found my ABC classes, if at all large, rather dull to both scholars and teacher.

There was once a father who gave up everything to his children—his house, his fields, and goods—and expected that for this his children would support him.

After he had been some time with his second son, he also grew tired of him, and said: "Father, don't you like to have my head?"

Do not neglect. Why that stich that is broken in the heel of your stocking; that seam that has started in your husband's coat; that little rent in your child's frock; that peep-hole in the rib of your boy's spencer; that stich that is broken, wherever it is found.
