THE PACIFIC Commercial Advertiser.

SATURDAY, AUGUST 12. The arrivals of the American clipper ship Reynard from San Francisco and the American whaling bark Joseph Maxwell from the Arctic Ocean on Thursday morning, brought us intelligence of the destruction of fourteen whaling ships by the pirate Shenandoah and of the probable destruction of a larger portion of the Arctic and Ochotsk fleets.

which there are small chances of escape, the Congress, Congress 2d, Corinthian, C. Howland, Elizabeth Swift, Europa, Florida, Favorite, Geo. Howland, Helen Snow, Martha, Martha 2d, Mercury and Sunbeam. The Gen. Pike, Crowell, we learn had also been bonded. Captain Gray of the James Maury, had died of inflammation of the bowels, his wife being with him at the time. Captain Waddell refused to burn the ship as was a lady on board.

This wholesale destruction of ships and the scattering of the few who may escape must seriously affect those in these islands who do business directly with the fleet, while it will doubtless damage every branch of business on the islands to a greater or less extent.

The Pearl, destroyed at Ascension was owned by parties in this city. The Harvest was also owned in this city, by Messrs. Pfleger, Dowsett and Molteno, neither of whom are Americans, and the vessel was also under the Hawaiian flag. We are told the H., was insured in Europe.

LATER. Since the above was written, the American bark Richmond and American ship James Maury have arrived. From them we glean the following particulars: The Shenandoah had burnt the American whaling ship Catherine, Phillips; bark Nimrod, Clark; Wm. C. Nye, Cooley; brig Susan Abigail, Redfield; ship Hillman, Macomber; ship Nassau, Green; bark Martha 2d, Macomber; bark Favorite, Young; bark Waverly, Holley; bark Congress 2d, Wood; Isaac Howland, Ludlow, and bark Covington, Jenks, making total of 25 burned and four bonded.

The Richmond spoke the Gen'l Pike on the first of July with two hundred and fifty-two persons on board bound for San Francisco, and at the earnest request of captains of vessels destroyed, consented to take on board and bring to this port fifty seamen, mostly Hawaiians. The men were all well supplied with clothing, as Captain Waddell is said to be rather partial to Hawaiians, several of them having shipped on his vessel, notwithstanding the neutrality proclamation of H. M.'s Minister of Foreign Affairs.

The Nile before reported burned had been bonded and sent to San Francisco with one hundred and fifty men, and the James Maury was bonded and brought one hundred and fifty men into this harbor. The James Maury reports having seen four more vessels burning the day they left. The Brunswick, Potter, had been stove by ice. A survey was held, and the vessel condemned, when the pirate took possession and set fire to her.

A semi-occasional, under date of June 1st, Oran, Algeria, writes as follows: The Emperor Napoleon arrived at Algiers on the 2d May, in grand state, accompanied with about all the frontals of the French Navy, and he felt that he was safe, no doubt.

Obviously he came here in search of health, but his personal appearance would lead a Yankee to guess something else the motive. However that may be, the programme read that he was in pursuit of health, (and Napoleon believes in progress, vivas, bouquets, flags and flappings, he proceeded to les Bains Thermaux de Dieppe—Hammam-Meskoutin, "Bains du Maudit," as the Colons call them. These baths are situated in the arrondissement of Guelma, Department of Constantine, and about eight kilometers (five miles) east of the village of Guelma, reached by a wagonable road, and the latter is connected with Port Bone by an excellent government road. These baths are in the valley of Oued Zanati, and in getting to them the shallow river has to be forded several times. There is no village, it is simply an establishment, and presided over by Doctor Moreau, Medicin en Chef of the civil hospital of Bone. These baths happen to be located in a vast and beautiful park, surrounded by picturesque scenery, game plenty and wild, inhabitants scarce and tame and the water in the "devil's bath" stands at 80° centigrade, (170° Fahr.) good for rheumatism and hot as "2d December," one would think. Napoleon bathed once and emigrated, whether it was the temperature, the "devils" or Eugenie annulling the "avertissements" that started him off so suddenly, no mortal will ever know. An eye-witness describes to me that bath substantially as follows: It is a wild, weird, savage place at best, with grotesque stalactites and stalagmites in abundance, but, expecting the Emperor, his seragery had been taken down wonderfully, combed, brushed and dressed in the latest Parisian fashion, to receive him. The Emperor did not know half as much about the art of war as he pretends, but is thoroughly acquainted with the art of dress, is the prince of dandies, in fact, and expects every great man to be a dandy as well as himself, and if from his dandified pinnace he should deign to notice a poor devil in house, it is evidence of his fitness to rule France and all the world must hear of it. This being known, Hamman-Meskoutin was dressed as near Parisian style on gala-day as possible. The yawning grotesque were turned into arches of triumph, the jagged, scabby stalactites were dressed and wreathed into such beautiful columns of victory, that the memory of smoking the poor Arabs out of a like hole was completely obliterated. The whole establishment was repaired and paroled, the magnificent bathroom re-varnished, polished and tapestried for the occasion, and the lofty windows frosted and tinted in order to mellow down the glaring Africa light into decent fellowship with the head of civilization, and at the same time agreeable to over-tasked eyes just from the herculean labors on Vie de Cesar. Tout le Monde was there to give welcome, cheered enthusiastically but politely as only Frenchmen and licked Kabyles know how. Napoleon gracefully acknowledged the warm reception as another "evidence of devotion to Napoleonic dynasty," limped so naturally that the people were coaxed into believing him a martyr to rheumatism and the women went in sympathy; squinted, or rather set his eyes into a dead wriggle after the fashion of the student, and the people recalled his literary labors and wondered that the Neveu of Austerlitz could condescend to such drudgery for the glory of France; stepped into the bathroom, into the solemn mysteries of the Bains du Maudit, and disappeared from all mortal eyes at Hammam-Meskoutin forever, save one pair (our witness) not in the list of attendants submitted to Empress Eugenie for her approval. Once inside, the author of Cesar ceased to limp, opened wide his eyes and scrutinized the place closely, peeped out through a hole in order to see if the secret detectives, disguised in Zouave uniforms, were on duty, felt the water, scalded his fingers, sacre-damnie a little, called for ice from the "mountains of the moon," and then proceeded leisurely to denude himself for a bath. Napoleon III is given to the bad habit of soliloquizing, and was heard to say: "Le grand Empereur was fond of a warm bath, he bathed in Africa and I must do likewise—Cesar, too, liked a warm bath." Hence he ceased matter-ing, scanned himself in a grand bain de toilette sent from Paris, and scratched softly his exquisitely combed head with his little finger. After the water was brought to the right temper, he took a paper in imitation of his uncle, and stepped into it. Evidently he had been reading an account of the assassination of President Lincoln, for he tossed the paper aside and resumed his musing: "What a lullaby-bull over that rail-splitting, rail-steering booby from Illinois! This is a little mysterious, the Americans are intelligent, most intelligent than the French of 1789, yet they love him—their heads are bowed in grief, and they come up sharp words, as if in earnest, which bodes no good to us very dear Ally across the channel and that promising protégé of mine in the halls of the Montezumas. Ugh! had it been, instead of Lincoln, there would be now a jubilee in France—Booth apostrophized and his statue elevated to the niche of Brutus—Julius Faure exclaiming me at the grave, and Te Deums sung! Democracy! Democracy! I have talked too much democracy than ever! Lincoln did, yet the French people will not believe one word of it—must be a little different from American democracy! Then the standard bearer there of aristocratic Europe, and champion of its elegance and chivalry, Jeff. Davis, found skulking in the last ditch arrayed in a woman's petticoat and crowned with a wench's hood! too truly, the representative of the ruling class by divine right. Well, the battle of life is fought in America, and how it ended, we know—the end, in Europe, is not yet!"

Here he heard sounds not of earth—he was not frightened, for Melusine Hume, or Home, has initiated him into the mysteries of unearthly noises, and turning his eyes towards a small grotto located within the apartment and fancifully enlarged at the entrance—though it leads to unknown depths into the bowels of Africa—he described a parti-colored vapor emerging from it. He saw or fancied he saw moving battalions, banners, horses and pomp of war figured on the face of the wreathing vapor, and heard from its depths sound of tramp, regular tramp of feet and rumbling of passing artillery, but all soon passed away and in its place stood the inevitable "Chaqueun and Surtout." "Qui estes vous?" said brusquely the pale visitor. "I am Emperor of France and nephew of Napoleon le Grand."

"You!" said the shadow, with a frown on its brow and lip curling with contempt. "France grew tired of me and welcomed the Allies to Paris—now I'm avenged! Events are thickening. I sought you at the Tuileries but found there only a woman inditing a proclamation annulling decrees of 'avertissement'—she did right, observed due forms. I declared the press free, that became my policy on returning from Elba, it ought not to have been forgotten, you aped my mistake in that too far. The Empress saw and has heeded my wishes, she is worthy the imperial legacy I bequeathed France—and what have you done?" "Been faithful to 'les Idees Napoléoniennes.'"

"Been faithful to the letter but not to the spirit. Ideas progress, what was right in 1815 is wrong in 1865. That was the wrong of the Empire, you have failed to comprehend the Empire, you are not a Napoleon! You blundered through a coup d'etat in imitation of me, deluged Paris in the blood of its murdered citizens that you might set your seal on France. PACIFIC Commercial Advertiser.

A Spicy Correspondence.

The following correspondence has taken place between John A. Wise, brother of Henry A. Wise, ex-Governor of Virginia, and Brig-Gen. Gordon, commanding the Norfolk district.

MR. WISE'S LETTER.

NORFOLK, May 30, 1865.

Gen. Gordon—I feel it my duty to inquire of you as the only officer of the Government in reach to inform me of the nature of the relations existing between the Government and myself. Am I to consider myself a citizen of the United States, entitled to the privileges and franchises of such, or am I excluded from their enjoyment? Three years ago the Government troops found me confined to my bed as I had been for more than a half a century of years. Without a shadow of justification they seized the greater part of my estate and rendered unavailable the balance. I mean to make no complaint or any statement that I cannot prove beyond all possibility of doubt. For more than three years my large family has been entirely unprotected, and means for subsistence, without any laborers' assistance, and this family has been increased by an addition of four members since the surrender. Dedicating means, I appeal to the magnanimity and humanity of the United States to enable me, not as a mendicant, but because they owe it to themselves, to procure implements, teams, seeds, &c., for such farming crops as may be cultivated during the coming summer and fall. I will not elaborate; but it is almost incredible how my family has subsisted for more than three years. It is impossible for us to provide longer. My sons have no clothes, while they are ordered to pull off their uniforms.

Very respectfully, JOHN A. WISE.

REPLY OF GEN. GORDON.

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF EASTERN VIRGINIA, Norfolk, Va., May 31, 1865.

Mr. John A. Wise, Norfolk, Va.—Sir—I am directed to acknowledge the reception of your letter of the 30th ultimo, in which you address to the General Commanding certain statements, draw certain conclusions, make certain inquiries, and prefer certain requests as follows: First—You assert that "without a shadow of justification, (the Government troops) seized the greater part of my (your) estate, and rendered unavailable the balance." Second—"That for more than three years your large family has been entirely unprotected with the means of subsistence." Third—"That you have no laborers' assistance." Fourth—"That your family has been increased by the addition of four members since the surrender." Fifth—"That it is almost incredible how my (your) family has subsisted for more than three years." Sixth—"That it is impossible for us (your) to provide longer." Seventh—"That you have no clothes, while they are ordered to pull off their uniforms." Eighth—"That the Government cannot and will not taint me (you) with even a suspicion of a charge of disloyalty." And you inquire: First—"Am I to consider myself a citizen of the United States, entitled to the privileges and franchises of such, or am I excluded from their enjoyment?" Second—"Will the Government drive my innocent family to the extremity of starvation?" Third—"May my sons keep a boat?" Fourth—"May they (my sons) enjoy citizens' privileges?" And, stating that you are "desistate of means," you appeal to the "magnanimity and humanity of the United States to enable me, (you), not as a mendicant, but because they owe it to themselves, to procure implements, teams, seeds, &c., for such farming crops as may be cultivated during the coming summer and fall."

Now, sir, stripped of all disguise, your letter amounts to this: My sons (probably four of them) have been for four years engaged with traitors in a most damnable and devilish effort to destroy their common country. They and their co-conspirators have reduced me to beggary and want. Can you inform me whether the Government, which my sons and others could not destroy, hardly disturb, will find me and them in loving arms, or pay me for all my losses, give them (my "innocent family") the rights of patriots? In fine, whether the benevolent men do not cling for safety to the sides, and climb upon the deck of the noble old frigate they have tried in vain to scuttle? You are informed, sir, that your Government will protect you, and in its own good time give rights of citizenship even to those sons of yours, who have nothing to fear but the misgivings of treason; but, for the manner of its protection, and the time when full rights of citizenship will be conferred, you will await until the deeds of your sons and relatives can be counteracted.

In the meantime you will be governed as follows: First—Make your claim against the Government for remuneration for property taken and destroyed, through such agent as you may elect, and when you choose. If you or yours are suffering for food make your wishes known to the "Commissioner of Charities," who takes charge, in the inaction of the civil authorities of the public press.

Your sons cannot wear their uniforms. They may keep a boat. You cannot be supplied from the United States Treasury with "implements, teams, seeds, &c., for farming purposes."

I am, sir, very truly, A. A. G.

S. R. MORGAN, Lieut. A. D. C., A. A. G.

A Parson and a Poor Laborer.

While a parson was standing at his door, smoking his pipe, in a country village, he was accosted by a poor laboring man. The parson told him he made it a rule not to encourage idleness, but if the man would get into his garden and root up the weeds, he would pay him for it. "That's all I wish," said the poor fellow. "Well, then, come along with me, and I'll show you what is to be done."

When they were in the garden, the reverend gentleman agreed to give him a shilling for his trouble; however, when the job was done, he thought that six pence had been enough for the time the laborer had been employed. The poor man, half starved, and wishing to get himself some bread, finding the other would give him no more, agreed to take the sixpence, on condition the parson would teach him the Lord's prayer, which he consented to do, beginning: "Our Father—"

"What?" said the laborer, "both our fathers?"

"Yes, yes; come say after me—Our Father—"

"What? your father and mine, too?" he again asked.

"To be sure," replied the parson, "you must be a confounded rogue to cheat your brother out of a sixpence."

Miss Mitford's Lottery Ticket.

The following strange incident in the life of Mary Russell Mitford, related by herself, may not have been before brought to the notice of our readers.

What my father's plans were I do not exactly know; probably to gather together what disposable money still remained after paying all debts from the sale of books, plate, and furniture at Lyme, and thence to proceed (backed by his greatly lessened income) to practice in some distant town. At all events London was the best starting place, and he could consult his old fellow-pupil and life-long friend, Dr. Babington, then one of the physicians to Guy's Hospital, and refresh his medical studies with experiments and lectures, while determining in what place to bestow himself.

In the meanwhile his spirits returned as buoyant as ever, and so, now that fear had changed into certainty, did mine. In the interval of his professional pursuits he walked about London with his little girl in his hand; and one day (it was my birth-day, and I was ten years old) he took me into a not very tempting-looking place, which was, as I speedily found, a lottery-office. An Irish lottery was upon the point of being drawn, and desired me to choose one out of several bits of printed paper (I did not then know their significance) that lay upon the counter.

"Choose which number you like best," said the dear papa, "and that shall be your birth-day present."

"Here is the most numerous," interposed the lottery-office keeper, "and put it into his hand—No. 2,224."

"Ah," said my father, examining it, "you must choose again; I want to buy a white ticket, and this is only a quarter. Choose again, my pet."

"No, dear papa, I like this one best."

"Here is the most numerous," interposed the lottery-office keeper, "and put it into his hand—No. 2,224."
