OFFICIAL RANK IN CHINA

Civil Officers.

ties and Duties of the Multitude o

The French find that in the war with hina they have to contend with an army that is well officered, if deficient in every other respect. Civil and military officials are never wanting in the Celestial kingdom, and are more numerous than in any other country. In any province or town the stranger is surprised to meet every now and then a dignitary wearing a ball or globule on his hat. These balls are called spheres" properly, and are about an inch in diameter, They serve the same purpose as our "stars, buttons, and bars, in marking the rank of the officer wearing them, and may be seen in countless numbers at the seat of war to-day. We shall have to hear of the wearers of these spheres frequently before the war is concluded, and a statement of the order of official procedence will be instructive in aiding us to understand the war news. Collectively these men are known as "the two nine ranks," and in a generic sense as "our twenty-nine classes of the able

Everything is so differently constituted that it is quite impossible to translate the military titles so as to give a comparative idea of Chinese rank. This is made the more difficult from the fact that the military officials are generally held in contempt, and precedence in command is given in time of war to talented civilians. Indeed, the civil officials are of the first consideration, and are mentionable before the officials of the army.

In the first class of the civil rank are the six shang shu, or presidents of the six great boards (the sin-tu), who wear a carbuncle sphere at court and a coral in ordinary dress. In the second class of the first civil rank are the tsung-tu, or governors general of the provinces. They are the direct re-presentatives of the emperor, with the power of life and death in their hands.

They are commonly members of the war In the first class of the second civil rank are the fu-t'ai, or vice governors, standing lieutenants to the tsung-tu. They also reside at the capitals of the provinces, and may be called into the war board. They wear a red sphere. The second class of the second rank are the fan-tail, the provincial secretaries of finance. They wear

In the first class of the third civil rank are the nich tai, provincial judges. They wear a light blue sphere. The second class of the third rank are the len-luu-ssu, or provincial sub commissioners. They wear a dark blue sphere. In the first class of the fourth civil rank are the liang-tai, provincial grain (tax) collectors, wearing an opaque blue sphere. The officer of the same rank and class is the tao-tai, of whom we often hear. He is district lord of three towns, and wears a dark opaque sphere. The second class of the fourth rank are the fu, department The chih-si-chin-chire are the first class of the fifth rank, and correspondend to sub-prefects. They wear a clear-glass sphere. Their officer is the chih-si tungchih, who wears a like sphere. The tung-chi is the second class of the fifth rank, and the chih chou is the third class. These are district judges, and wear a small crystal sphere,

The sixth rank are the tung-pan, deputy sub-prefects of department, wearing a porcelain sphere. The seventh rank are the chih-hsien, magistrates, with gilt sphere. The eighth rank are the hsiencheng assistant to the chig-hsien. They wear a carved gilt sphere. The first class of the ninth rank are the chu-pu, village mayors. They wear a small gilt sphere, as also do their assistants, hsien-chien, who comprise the second class of the ninth

Thus in the nine ranks are presidents, governors, vice governors, financial secre-taries, provincial judges, sub-commissioners, collectors, department prefects, and sub-prefects, deputies, district judges, magistrates, and assistant magistrates, and mayors and vice mayors.

He Needed a New Watch.

"Mary," remarked old man Crosseam to his wife at breakfast one morning, "was Will Trimble here to see Katie last

"Yes, my dear."
"What time did he leave?" "I heard him say it was 11 o'clock by his watch as he went out. "What kind of a watch does he carry?"

"A patent lever, he told Katie." "A patent lever, he told Ratic.

"A patent lever, eh? Well, you tell him, with my compliments, that if he wants to remain healthy, he had better change that patent to a 10 o'clock leave her. I was young once myself, and know what time of night 11 is by those patent lever watches.

Politics in Pompeii.

Recent researches show that electioneering was carried on in ancient Pompeil very much as at the present day. Inscriptions have been found informing the public that "a vote for Lentulis is a vote for honest government," and asking all patriotic citizens to vote for "Balbus, the true friend of the people.

THE NICARAGUA CANAL

To the people of this country it cannot but be a matter of regret that delay has occurred in the arrangements made by the present Administration of the United States for the construction of a ship canal through Nicaraguan territory. However good or bad the reasons may be that have led the United States Senate to refuse to ratify the Treaty which had been negotiated with the Nicaraguan Government, none of them have any interest for us, except in so far as they have been influential to delay the tween the Atlantic and the Pacific. which the Treaty promised to give us. In an able and reasonable article which we reprint to-day from a New York paper, one of these reasons is considered. For our own part, however, we take little account of the oband have to be changed to suit cir- under his control. cumstances, as all who have watched After the companies had been the history of the past quarter of a the end of the day's parade, the members century are compelled to recognize. met in their houses, and had a good time. That there would have been any great difficulty in arranging matters | prepared under the direction of caterer Hart, with England in regard to the Nicaraguan canal we do not believe. The proposed work would advantage no one so much as British shipowners and British merchants, and all of which were appropriately responded that the canal should be the absolute property of the United States Govunlikely of realization. Mr. Editor:-I have passed a few most delightful weeks here in Honolulu, and must say that I am charmed with your surroundings. I find you enjoying a most superb climate, and a degree of social culture that at first surprised me. But when I came to reflect upon the advantages that the islands have possessed in their contiguity to the United States on the one hand, and the influences that have been exercised by the missionaries on the other, I was at no loss to account for the refinement and good taste that I have met on every hand. .

It would be entirely out of place for me to criticize matters beyond the ken of the ordinary tourist, even if I felt disposed to do so. But I know that you will have patience to hear what I, as well as the rest of those who feel that they have something to say and think, can tell about a few matters that we, as tourists, know are of importance to you as well as ourselves.

And the first thing I would mention is that in the matter of displaying your island fruits you are not up to the times. I know that with you it may seem a small matter; but if we who visit these shores to enjoy here what we cannot find elsewhere could see and taste, as well as hear of, fresh guavas, green cocoanuts, the alligator pear, and other island fruits, we would feel that there was something distinctive on the islands besides the volcano, the Pali, and other lions whom we have to visit in their

The Hawaiian Hotel is an admirably conducted institution, and one in which the tourist feels that he is treated more as an invited guest than as a transient traveller. Its table is provided with all the market affords; but what is needed to make it thoroughly Hawaiian is the presence, daily, as they are in season, of fresh fruits that are novelties to the average traveller.

I hear that within the limits of your capital city (in fact I have seen) an abundance of cocoanuts whose rich milk, if drank while the fruit is still immature, makes a beverage fit for the gods. You, possibly, may not care for the guava. You have it as a common fruit; but we who have been told that its fresh, cool tartness is delicious, would fain try it for ourselves. It must be borne in mind that when we return to our homes it is the remembrance of things new and strange that we love to recall for the amusement of our friends; and that while our geography and natural history may be rather shaky, still what we have to relate concerning things we have eat in foreign lands, cannot be disputed or void of interest. I hope that I shall not be accused of irreverence if I say in conclusion of you, and your islands, "by your fruits shall ye be A. TRAVELLER.

Lot 11-100 feet by 150 feet, Young Street.

Upset price, $900. The upper lots were purchased by Mr. Macfarlane for a residence, and for the purpose of improvement, it has had great care and cultivation, so that at present it is well covered by a large variety of trees, as well as a choice collection of plants and flowers,

Among the fruit and shade trees will be ound the Traveler's Tree, the Royal Palm, the Wine Palm, the Lemon Tree, the Fan Palm, the Cocoanut, the Japanese Orange, the Ponciana Regia, the Mandarin Orange. the Fig Tree, the Alligator Pear, the Algerba and others. In Roses and Flowers there are a great variety, which must be seen to be appreciated. Water pipes are laid on in each of Lots Nos. 1 to 7, inclusive, and 50 feet of hose will reach any part of them. These lots are situated just in the centre of the Kalaokahua Plains, on the principal street leading from Honolulu, and are within twenty minutes' walk from town, as well as being upon the mnibus route to Punahou.

I shall offer them on very favorable terms or purchasers, namely:

One-Fourth Cash, and balance in equal payments of one, two, three and four years, with interest at 7 per cent, secured by mortgage.

This division of payments, and low rates of interest, allows one for a comparatively small sum annually paid for four years, to ecome the owner of a beautiful homestead

Parties desiring lots must make early application, as we shall sell at private sale to hose who first apply.

condition to offer successful resistance to any other Power which should attempt the work. The essence of the Clayton-

Bulwer Treaty consisted in its provisions

a sort of international partnership, conditioned that if ever such a canal was built through the efforts of either party,

both parties should jointly protect and Thirty-four years have passed away

since then-a full generation; and now with the Government of Nicaragua, the terms of which we gave last week, and shall have the exclusive right to fertify

reported as maintaining that the new treaty with Nicaragua is not in technical violation of the provisions of the old treaty with Great Britain; we do not know on what grounds, but any reader

can easily judge for himself, by comparing the terms of the two treaties,

whether the two are in substantial accord or not. A good way to determine such a question is to "put yourself in his place."

Suppose we had discovered that Great Britain had negotiated a secret treaty with

Nicaragua, agreeing to construct such a canal, and receiving power to erect the necessary forts at the termini for its protection without saying anything to us, should we feel aggrieved? Any American Administration which allowed such a treaty to pass without a vigorous protest

shall we consider the other question,

whether it is wise to maintain it now that we are rich enough to build the canal if we want to, and perhaps strong enough to defend it against all assailants, without the aid of our late partner. Honor before

When a nation has made a contract

which changed circumstances make it no

carry out, it is clear that mutual consent

should be invoked to annul what mutual consent was necessary to create. Whether the proposed treaty with Nicaragua is for

for the interest of the United States is a secondary question. The first question is, What does national honor require of us? For national honor is always worth more, in the estimation of all honorable perfectly clear that national honor requires that we should open negotiations with Great Britain for the abrogation of the Clayton-Bulwer Treaty, and if these fail, then give timely notice that we refuse to be longer bound by its stipulations

before negotiating a new treaty with another Power in violation of its provisions.

It may be that, if Great Britain had considered herself free to do so, she would have been ready to enter herself into negotiations with Nicaragua to construct

France for the construction of the rival canal of Panama: and, however we might object to her undertaking such a work, it is clear that we cannot, with honor, prevent her by a contract which we at the same time repudiate as obsolete. If it

GEN. R. E. LEE'S FAMILY

BRIEF SKETCHES OF THE CONFED-ERATE COMMANDER'S CHILDREN

Mrs. Lee and Her Daughters During the War-Privations of the Dark Days -Arlington-A Youthful Confederate's Last Message.

At the recent opening of the Metropoiltan museum of art I saw among the many notable people there Miss Mary Lee, the second daughter of Gen. Robert E. Lee. She is a plain-looking lady of 35, and, like her father, is altogether unpretentious. She wore a heavy cashmere wrap, and was in company with a lady similarly attired. Miss Mary Lee resembles her mother in appearance more than her father. It is a remarkable fact that the only one of Gen. Lee's children who at all resemble him is his oldest son, Gen. G. W. Custis Lee, now the president of Washington and Lee university, at Lexington, Va.

Weshington and Lee university, at Lexington, Va.

There are five of the Lee children—three sons and two daughters. They were all born at Arlington, the old Custis homestead near Washington, where Mrs. Lee continued to reside after her marriage. The eldest daughter, Mildred, has traveled a great deal since the war, spending much of her time in Europe, but when here makes her home with her brother Custis at Lexington. Miss Mary, the next sister, also lives with him. Agnes, the youngest sister, died during the war at a health resort in North Carolina. None of the daughters married and Custis Lee is also single, but Runey Lee and Robert E., Jr., are both married and are both Virginia farmers. One of them only has children, and the probabilities are that it is through him alone that the Lee family and the Custis family are to be perpetuated.

Mrs. Robert E. Lee was the only child of George Washington Park Curtis, who was the only son and heir of Martha Washington. It was from George Washington and Martha Washington that Custis obtained Arlington, which, at the opening of the war, was one of the finest pieces of country property of the south. It was the ideal southern homestead. The Union forces took possession of it at the very opening of the hostilities in 1861, and during the war it was converted into a national cemetery. According to the proviso of the will of verted into a national cemetery. According to the proviso of the will of George Washington Park Custis the en-George Washington Park Custis the entire property was to go to the eldest son of Mrs. Lee. That eidest son was the present Gen. G. W. C. Lee, and he obtained $125,000 from the government in payment for Arlington last winter, there having been a long contest at law about it. That money represents the bulk of the property now in possession of the Lee family, and is but a trifling remnant of the magnificent estates they owned in Virginia before the war, not to speak of the hundreds of slaves that belonged to these estates. But the family has fared better than many others of the south that were equally wealthy before the war.

Gen. Curtis Lee, though the legal possessor of the $125,000 he received for Arlington, has a big heart, and makes the most liberal provision for his two maiden sisters. Though, as stated at the opening of this paragraph, Mary Lee is a plain-looking lady, with no pretentions to beauty, she is gifted in intellect, and is a most charming person. During the war plain-looking lady, with no pretentions to beauty, she is gifted in intellect, and is a most charming person. During the war she was most of the time in Richmond with her mother and sisters, and with them endured many privations. I have seen a little account book in which there was a record of expenditures made on account of the little party the Mrs. Lee and her daughters messed with. It was seldom they had meat or coffee, and the most exorbitant prices had to be paid for chicken or even green corn. The bulk of the diet was made up of rice, bread and such light articles. Mrs. Lee was one of the most patient and self-abnegating of women, and though a confirmed invalid during the entire war in which her husband was such a prominent actor, never complained, but was in the face of constant misfortunes and threatened dangers, always resigned and serene. She maintained this character up to the very hour of her death.

A touching story of which Miss Mary Lee is the heroine is that after one of the terrible battles near Richmond, just previous to the close of the war, she and some of the ladies went on the field to render whatever assistance they could in the care of the wounded and dying soldiers of her father's army. One among those to whom she went to offer relief was a youth of not over 16, who had been fatally shot and was ready to expire. She saw the poor fellow was going to die immediately, and being struck by his youth and neat attire asked him if he had any message to leave behind. "Yes," said he; "my home is—, and my mother lives at—; tell her, if you please, that I have just seen our splendid commander, Gen. Lee, ride by, and that I am centent to die," That was all. He never knew it was his splendid commander's daughter to whom he was confiding that final message.

The Bridegroom Ignored.

"Did you ever notice," queried our society young man, "how utterly no good a groom is at a wedding? Of course the affair couldn't come off without him, but he is never noticed. Every lady cranes her neck to see what the bride has on, but the groom might as well wear a pair of pajamas and a polo cap for all the notice he attracts. In congratulating the bride the guests are always careful to address her as 'Miss So-and-So,' because they seldom know the groom's name. And if the poor groom makes any blunder in trying to force his words by the heart in his throat he is snickered at, while the faltering of the bride is attributed to maidenly modesty, and she is tributed to maidenly modesty, and she is buoyed up by the muttered 'so sweets' and 'how lovelys' of the softer sex."

The Sly Old Duke.

The late duke of Wellington got a letter once from a lady saying she was soliciting subscriptions for a certain church in which she was much interested, and had taken the liberty to put his name down for 200 pounds sterling, and hoped he would promptly send her a check for that amount. He forthwith replied that he was glad she thought so well of him; certainly he would respond to the call; but he, too, was interested in a certain church which needed subscriptions, and counting upon his correspondent's well-known libpounds sterling; "and so," he concluded, no money need pass between us,"

"Dolphin Meat."

Porpoise meat is sold in Philadelphia as a substitute for beef. It is red, juicy, tender and of fine grain, very pleasant and word, and in Brazil a saving of vitality, savory to the taste. It is known to the however small, is not despised. trade as "dolphin meat."

Eye-Glasses. Pearl-rimmed eye-glasses of violet color are now used extensively by fashionables of both sexes in New York. The originator was a Vassar school girl.

THE HOME OF THE MAORIS The Sanatorium of the Southern Ocean-

A Delightful Existence.

The little brown buts of the Maoris are dotted along the lake shores and up the hillsides, in the very midst of innumerable boiling springs of every sort, which send up ceaseless steam clouds, so that the houses are only seen fitfully through the yells of white vapor. So thin is the crust houses are only seen fitfully through the veils of white vapor. So thin is the crust of soil on which this strange village is established that you shave only to thrust a walking stick into the ground and up comes a puff of hot air. Even here, as at Roto Mahans, each step requires caution, as any deviation from the narrow beaten tracks which lead from house to house would most likely plunge the careless foot into some very literal phase of hot water. There is a pleasing variety in the possible forms of danger, but not much to choose between them as regards the certainty of pain! And yet, although a good many terrible accidents do occur, little children by the score are safely reared in this strange, steaming nursery, where nature does all the household washing and all the cooking in natural steampots, finding her own soap into the baring and all the cooking in natural steampots, finding her own soap into the bargain, in the form of chloride of potassium and of sodium, and sulphate of soda. A very sad accident had occurred before my visit; when a little, toddling child had tumbled into the village "laundry pool," where its mother was boiling her clothes; but after all, such things, grievous though they be, do happen from time to time in British cottages and wash tubs.

In point of fact, the chapter of accidents at Ohinemutb is really wonderfully short, all things considered, and the inhabitants have wonderful advantages in the lightening of all domestic labor consequent on the self-supplying, self-consequent on the self-supplying, self-kindling furnaces which boil the natural cooking pots, so that no care is required beyond depositing food in a flax bag and leaving it floating in the nearest pool till dinner-time. Of course it is necessary to see that the pool is not too strongly flavored with alum or any other trifle of that sort, but long experience has taught the people the characteristics of the near pools, and which are safe for culinary purposes.

So the human beings whose domestic cares are made easy spend the greater part of their lives floating about in mud pools or immersed in mud baths, or swimming joyously in the beautiful blue lake, for they are well nigh amphibious, and fain would emulate the fame of their beautiful ancestress, Hinemoa, who on a dark, moonless night swam four miles to Mokola isle, in the middle of Lake Rotorua, there -a legend much appreciated by her descendants. When not in the water they scendants. When not in the water they delight to lounge about on a rude pavement of large flat stones, which, being laid above boiling springs are always pleasantly heated; so here the grave old chiefs and their followers love to recline in their flax cloaks or blankets, discussing the affairs of the village and smoking (alas, how unromantic) common short clay pipes! They have a real council house, however, and a very curious place it is, being all covered with most grotesque carving of true Maori type—hideous figures, with elaborately-tattooed faces, and oblique eyes formed of pearl shell.

Grant at Fort Donelson, [Gen. Lew Wallace in The Century.] Just then Gen. Grant rode up to where Gen. McClernand and I were in conversation. He was almost unattended. In his hand there were some papers, which looked like telegrams. Wholly unexcited, he saluted and received the salutions of his subordinates. Proceeding at once to business, he directed them to retire their commands to the heights out of cannon range, and throw up works. Re-enforcements were en route, he said, and it was advisable to await their coming. He was then informed of the mishap to the First division, and that the road to Charlotte was open to the enemy was open to the enemy In every great man's career there is a crisis exactly similar to that which now overtook Gen. Grant, and it cannot be better described than as a crucial test of his nature. A mediocre person would have accepted the news as an argument for persistence in his resolution to enter upon a siege. Had Gen. Grant done so, it is very siege. Had Gen. Grant done so, it is very probable his history would have been then and there concluded. His admirers and detractors are alike invited to study him at this precise juncture. It cannot be doubted that he saw with painful distinctness the effect of the disaster to his right wing. His face flushed slightly. With a sudden grip he crushed the papers in his hand. But in an instant these signs of disappointment or hesitation—as the reader pleases—cleared away. In his ordinary quiet voice he said, addressing himself to both officers, "Gentlemen, the position on the right must be retaken." With that he turned and galloped off.

A Bone in the Throat.

There is a curious instrument in the armamentarium of the surgeon called a probang, employed for removing foreign bodies which have become fixed in the esophagus or gullet. It consists of a flexible, stem, at one end of which is an arrangement of catgut fibres, and at the other end a small handle. By moving the handle slightly, these threads of catgut—which are stretched all round and parallel to the stem at its lower end—can be bent outwards in a radiating manner, which gives the instrument the appearance of a chimney-sweep's broom in miniature.

When a person is so unfortunate as to get a piece of bone stuck in his throat beyond the reach of the surgeon's hand, the probang is sometimes found very useful. It can be passed down the gullet, in a closed condition, beyond the obstruction, then opened somewhat like an umbrella, and drawn upwards, carrying with it—if all goes well—the foreign body.

The passing of such an instrument is far from being pleasant to the patient: but if it be done with ordinary care and judgment, it will not be attended with any harm. Every one who has known the misery attendant upon getting a good-any harm. Every one who has known the misery attendant upon getting a good-sized piece of bone impacted in the food passage, will understand that when the operation has proved successful, the patient is likely to consider the pleasure of seeing the offending fragment caught in the meshes of the probang cheaply purchased by the discomfort attendant upon the passage of the instrument.

The Brazillan's Hiss.

The Brazilian expresses half his ideas by means of a hiss. If he wishes to call the attention of a waiter he does it with a hiss; if he finds it necessary to curse the lagging gait of his mule, it is a hiss that conveys the imprecation. The sibilant sound is softened somewhat in its utterances by the lips, and it is remarkable how far it may be transmitted through a din. It requires less expenditure of vi-tality to utter a hiss than an articulate

Speaking of Margaret Fuller's first conversation class in Boston in 1839, subject, "Greek Mythology," Julia Ward Howe says: "These old gods of Olympus came down from their sublimities and snook hands with the descendants of the Mathers and other outlandish folk,"

ROYAL HAWAIIAN HOTEL.

The Royal Hawaiian Hetel is one of the leading architectural structures of Honolulu. The grounds upon which it stands comprise an entire square of about four acres, fronting on Hotel Street. This large area affords ample room for a lawn and beautiful walks, which are laid out most artistically with flowering plants and tropical trees There are twelve pretty cottages within this charming enclosure. all under the Hotel management. The Hotel and cottages afford accommodations for 200 guests. The basement of the Hotel contains the finest billiard hall in the city; also, a first-class bar, well stocked with fine wines and liquors.

The main entrance is on the second floor, to the right of which ar the elegantly furnished parlors. A broad passage way leads from the main hall to the dining-room. These apartments open on to broad verandas, where a magnificent view of the Nuuanu Mountains may be seen through the wealth of tropical foliage that surrounds the balconies.

The fare dispensed is the best the market affords, and is first-class in all respects. Hotel and cottages are supplied with pure water from an artesian well on the premises. The Clerk's office is furnished with the Telephone, by which communication is had with the leading business firms of the city.
