THE CHANCE MEETING.

[Arthur W. Eaton in Youth's Companion.]
A stranger in the moving throng
To whom I said some careless word
About the weather, and a song
Or singer he and I had heard.

His answer I have wholly lost,
In separate ways we left the place,
But I keep what I value most,
The memory of a pleasant face.

And I keep still within my heart
The thrill his touch awakened there,
As clasping hands, we moved apart,
Each ignorant of the other's sphere.

We are not strangers, you and I,
Who touch but once each other's hands,
Look once into each other's eyes,
And then drift off to different lands.

It is our heritage to grasp
Each friendly hand from far or near,
And in the quick responsive clasp
To feel the common life we bear.

It is our duty, if we can,
To leave to every narrow man
The memory of a pleasant face.

The Cuisine of Sweden.

[Lippincott's Magazine.]
The habit of lunching in the very presence of dinner, of going to a side-table and eating your fill of anchovies, raw herrings, smoked beef and cold cod pie while dinner is on the very table, still prevails, and is hardly conducive to health. It is said that the habit of taking "a sup," as the Swedes call it, arose from the scarcity of delicacies. It was hard to get enough of any one nice thing to make a meal, so you were first delicately innuendod off to the handy table as it is called, and then allowed to sit down to dinner.

The practice is universal in Sweden. Private houses, boarding-houses all feed you on preliminary scraps, and you go to you if you innocently turn away from the proffered luncheon. You fare like an ascetic, and feed yourself on dainties to the Scandinavian palate. Much of the soup is nauseously sweet, flavored with cherries, macerated and gooseberries, often with raspberry cakes and spikes of cinnamon, floating about in it. This is eaten as a sort of dessert, and is cold and often beautifully clear.

If Hingie bitterly reviled the English for bringing vegetables on the table as nature, there is no such complaint to be made here. Heaven, earth, and hell are eaten with sauces red, white, and blue, green, yellow, and black—sauces celestial and sauces infernal. Strange combinations of ice-cream heaped over delicious apple tarts, or strange dishes of heavy juice boiled down and mixed up with farina, sugar, and almonds, then cooled, molded, and turned out into basins of cream, to be eaten with crushed sugar and wine, appear at every dinner. The Swedes share with the Danes and Arabs a passionate fondness for sweet-meats. Everything is slightly sweet; even green peas are sugared, as well as the innumerable tea and coffee cakes, so that long before the unhappy tourist has finished his tour he is a hopeless dyspeptic or a raging Swedenphobe.

Condition of the Blood in Fever Countries.
[New Orleans Times-Democrat.]
The last number of the New Orleans Medical Journal contains a valuable article by Dr. Rudolph Matas on long-continued fevers that resist quinine. Dr. Matas has had a very considerable experience with this class of fevers not only here but in Mexico and in Cuba; and his paper possesses a good deal of novel information. It would appear that the nearer we approach the tropics the more intense become the conditions which beget febrile disease; there would seem, in short, to be a sort of well-defined pyrogenic belt which, as we move toward the equator, changes take place in the blood.

In tropical countries the general complexion of the people is that of convalescing from fever; the swarthy pallor or olivaceous colorlessness of the people is really that of one whose blood has been so modified by febrile conditions as to be no longer susceptible to their influence. The number of red corpuscles which warm and thick northern blood and often gives to the faces of those dwelling in temperate climates a beautiful rosy flush, becomes more and more diminished toward the equator. The acclimated Louisiana, although not actually suffering from, and not even particularly liable to attacks of malaria, are nevertheless living in the physiological condition of persons habituated to long-continued fever, and compared, for example, with Canadians, we are decidedly anemic.

This fact accounts for the rapid loss of high color which northern men or women undergo after having settled in New Orleans or Louisiana, our state like Florida, being a peculiarly pyrogenic region. It must not be supposed, however, that as a rule we are in anywise a less healthy or a less long-lived people than our northern kindred, but healthy existence in any pyrogenic region would be out of the question were our blood constituted precisely like that of the inhabitants of cold countries.

To Be Cured Patient.

In a recent issue of a well-known French journal appeared the following advertisement: "Wanted, a distinguished and healthy-looking man, to be cured patient in a doctor's waiting-room. Address, etc."

THE Pacific Commercial Advertiser is now for sale daily at the following places: J. M. OAT & CO., Merchant street

SATURDAY April 10th. HAWAIIAN SHIPPING.

The vast concourse of people at the Oceanic Company's wharf yesterday, to witness the departure of the Zealandia on her first voyage from Honolulu under the Hawaiian flag, was calculated to impress onlookers with the significance of the event.

DEEPEN THE HARBOR. The work of dredging should be prosecuted without intermission for various reasons, chief of which is the necessity that exists for providing ample water space for handling large vessels in the inner harbor.

nel across the bar to any needed depth, but the work at the inner harbor demands foremost attention, the process of shoaling owing to the deposit of soil carried down by the streams and occasional storms being more rapid than most people would suppose who have not given the subject some study.

Death of Editor Webb. The Unionville, Mo., "Republican," March 18th, is in mourning for the death of Herbert N. Webb, its editor and proprietor, in the 34th year of his age, from an attack of typhoid fever.

The Station House Robbery. Deputy Marshal Dayton investigated the matter of the opium stolen from the Station House as stated by us in Friday's issue, and found that one of the prisoners, Koli, by name, who has been employed around the Station House, hired an express at the corner of Nuuanu and King streets early on Thursday morning, and sent the opium, which was carefully packed in a box, to the store of a Chinaman on Queen street.

Party at the Japanese Consulate. On Thursday evening an elegant party was given at the Japanese Consulate, Nuuanu Valley, by Mr. and Mrs. Taro Ando. The decorations in the interior of the house were very fine, and the front of the building was illuminated with colored lanterns.

Fort-Street Church. Mr. William Noble will deliver a lecture on "Woman's Influence," at the musical and gospel service on Sunday evening at the Fort-street Church.

An Interesting Pamphlet. Messrs. J. M. Oat, Jr., & Co., have a specimen copy of a pamphlet, "Victorian Jubilee," which contains a record of all matters of interest during the reign of Queen Victoria.

No book ever published contains so much reliable and valuable information regarding the Hawaiian Islands as this small compass as the HONOLULU ALMANAC AND DIRECTORY, 1886. Price, 50 cents.

LOCAL AND GENERAL. Farewell performance by Millis to-night. Mr. Peter Dalton publishes a card in today's issue.

A large cargo of domestic produce awaits the arrival of the Alameda.

The book of the season. THE HONOLULU ALMANAC AND DIRECTORY FOR 1886. Price, 50 cents.

Everyone will be glad that the Royal Hawaiian Band returns from Hawaii tomorrow.

High Mass at 10 a. m. and Vespers at 4:30 p. m. at the Roman Catholic Cathedral to-morrow.

The Royal Mail steamer Alameda is due any time today from the Colonies, en route to San Francisco.

The presence of the Royal Hawaiian Band was much missed at the departure of the Zealandia yesterday.

Mr. R. W. Irwin, Consul General and Charge d'Affaires at Tokio, Japan, left by the Zealandia yesterday.

At the matinee this afternoon no one will be admitted except at the front entrance of the Hawaiian Opera House.

Wells, Fargo & Co. shipped by the Zealandia one bag of gold coin, valued at $1,900, and one of silver, valued at $650.

The People's Ice and Refrigerating Company paid a monthly dividend of one dollar per share yesterday to the stockholders.

Miss Eva Neumann, daughter of His Excellency the Attorney General, left by the Zealandia for San Francisco yesterday.

Let your children attend the matinee performance by Mr. Millis, the ventriloquist, this afternoon at the Hawaiian Opera House.

Mr. J. F. Hackfeld will act as Consul for Norway and Sweden during the temporary absence of Mr. H. H. Schmidt, who left on the Zealandia yesterday.

The baseball match this afternoon at the Makiki grounds will be between the Hawaii's and Honolulu's. The umpire will call the game at half-past 3 o'clock.

All Government schools throughout the Kingdom closed yesterday for the regular vacation at the close of the first school session of the year. They reopen Monday, the 26th.

Mr. William Noble, the temperance evangelist, will lecture at the Kawaiahao Church on Sunday morning at 11 o'clock. The congregation of the Kaunakapili Church will join in the service.

Yesterday morning Police Justice Bickerton committed an insane man, Thomas K. Norton, to the Insane Asylum. Dr. E. C. Webb stated the man was insane and violent, and unsafe to be at large.

Mr. J. Welch, proprietor of the Commercial Hotel, offers Boca beer on draught and iced at 12 1/2 cents, a fine cold lunch at any hour, and on Saturday evenings hot lunch with the best of liquors. Give him a trial.

Thomas McGiffin, the detective, was dressed in prison garb yesterday, as Police Justice Bickerton in the morning sentenced him to twenty-four hours imprisonment at hard labor for disorderly conduct.

Mr. William Noble will speak in front of the Honolulu Iron Works at 12:30 o'clock noon to-day, and in the evening at 7:30 o'clock he will deliver a lecture in the Y. M. C. A. hall for men only. Subject: "East Life."

Last Monday, while the steamer W. G. Hall was at Honolulu, Hawaii, one of the lady passengers, a Mrs. Buck, in attempting to get into the steamer's boat, fell into the sea. She was promptly rescued by Purser Simonson.

The Kinai is due Sunday morning from Hawaii. The various volunteer companies will meet at their armory at 5 o'clock, and march to the Wilder Steamship Company's wharf, to meet His Majesty the King, who is expected by the steamer.

Police Court. BEFORE POLICE JUSTICE BICKERTON. FRIDAY, April 9th.

He pleaded guilty and was fined $25 and sentenced to two years' imprisonment at hard labor.

The Bethel Union Church. At the Bethel Union Church Mr. William Noble will address the Sunday-school to-morrow morning at 9:45 o'clock. Service, with preaching by Rev. E. C. Ogel, the pastor, at 11 a. m. and 7:30 p. m. Strangers and all others are cordially invited to these services.

In the "Messenger," a small pamphlet published monthly by the Bishop of Honolulu, we notice that Mr. T. C. Morris has been appointed an Assistant Master at Iolani College, to take charge more particularly of the domestic department.

Ignorance of the Hop-Vine. (Belfast (Me.) Journal.) These hops are a curious vine, by the way. I always supposed that a hop vine and a baby knew how to creep without being taught. The baby may, but the hop-vine does not. It can't shin a pole any more than a codfish, unless it takes lessons. It is like a kitten, it don't get its eyes open for some time. It comes up out of the hill and lies sprawling on the ground till it is taken by the nape of the neck, so as to speak, and wound around the pole a few times, and then tied there. After that it will seem to catch on, and learn why it was put into the world, and will then shin up the pole like a little man. It is not half as intelligent as a bean.

Income from Chinese Sources. (San Francisco Letter.) In the late official report at San Francisco it was shown that in the Chinese Laundry association of that city there are 300 laundries, which paid in water and gas taxes $180,000 yearly, a total yearly rental of $50,000, and owned property and goods valued at $350,000, and gave employment to 3,000 heathen.

Prayer Cures Indorsed. The prayer cures are indorsed by The London Society, high medical authority, which looks upon them not as miracles, but as purely the effect of the mind upon the body, it being the faith that heals, and not the outside source or object of the faith.

A Younger Spurgeon. A son of Spurgeon, the famous preacher, has a church in Auckland, New Zealand, where he delivers sermons almost as sensational as those of his father.

Birds as Builders. It is now claimed that birds as nearly as possible imitate the nests in which they were reared, and bring to the work a sort of rudimentary education.

IN A HACIENDA.

AN IMMENSE STRUCTURE OF STONE OR PLASTERED ADOBE.

Interior of the Fort-Like Houses—The Private Secretary—Few Books or Newspapers—A Visitor Hailed as a Boon from Heaven.

[Fannie B. Ward's Mexico Letter.]

All Mexican haciendas are much alike as to general features. The main building is always an immense structure of stone, or of equally durable plastered adobe—neither farm nor country house according to our ideas, but with a character peculiar to itself. It resembles a fort more than anything else to be found at the north, with bastions and ramparts like the domain of a baron of old, its corner towers and loopholes for guns having been built with an eye to revolutionary sieges and the frequent raids of the Indians. The wealthy proprietor seldom lives upon his estate, but gives it over to the care of an administrator, who in turn lets it to sub-administrators, who each have their clerks and secretaries to superintend the overseers, and so on down through the social gamut of the peons who "superintend" the pigs. As may be imagined, there is not much thrift in this complex system, for when every ear of corn and gallon of pulque must pass through so many hands it naturally follows that most of the profits are absorbed before those of the owner are reached.

Most of these fort-like houses have the appearance of barracks, being curtainless and carpetless, with brick floors, whitewashed inner walls, and numberless empty rooms, scantily furnished with wooden benches, pine tables, and iron bedsteads, put up only when wanted; while the adjacent kitchens, servants' quarters, bakery, out-houses, granaries, barns, and stables, and the outlying huts of the peasantry form a village within the ramparts.

Every hacienda, whether rich or poor, has its own church of more or less magnificence, which to the curiously-hunting tourist is a perfect treasure trove of charming ugliness, each private sanctuary possessing its many organs, its gilded cathedral in the City of Mexico, while candles are constantly burning upon its altars, and votive offerings of fruits and grains are piled upon the tables, and for a blessing upon the crops for the peons are universally devotedly pious and so persistent to a degree. In those exceptional instances where the millionaire owns a live upon their estates, their immediate families are sometimes numbered by scores. This is partially due to the prevalence of an old Spanish custom, which virtually obliges gentlemen to provide for all their debtful female relatives and to send them and their offspring from contact with the world.

Most of the haciendas have few books, never any daily mails or frequent newspapers, and no manner of amusement except such as they can create within themselves. Their life is like that of voyagers at sea, there being no escape from the ship till the harbor is gained—the principal difference being that the commander of the land army must end only at the tygion river. Happily they are an exceedingly gentle, affable, and even-tempered race, for a family quarrel in such a situation would be unbearable—almost even the advantages possessed by the ancient cities of Tenochtitlan, who built their early homes upon the floating gardens of the great salt lake, Texcoco, and whose neighborhood was not to their liking could pad le away with their entire estate.

It is easy to understand that in these circumstances, a visitor to the hacienda is hailed as a boon from heaven, and kept as long as he or she can be prevailed upon to remain. In former times there were few mans in Mexico, and now they are almost unknown outside the great cities, hence, persons traveling from place to place, with the retinue of armed attendants which personal safety requires, are obliged to depend upon the hospitality of the haciendas, where the night is spent in the most comfortable and agreeable places. So generally is this expected that the proprietors always set apart a generous sum in the provision for annual expenditures to be used by their administrators in the entertainment of chance guests, whether they be rich or poor, friends or strangers. Many are the delightful acquaintanceships formed by these accidental meetings, and sometimes the halt-intended for a single night—lengthens into weeks and paves the way for future returns for the sole purpose of visiting. The romances begun in the manner between wandering knights and imprisoned maidens are legion, and the end is matrimony with the usual sequel: "They lived happily forever afterward."

Subduing a Safe-Burglar. [French Paper.]

It is well known that the Americans are a very practical people, even in their religion. One of them has just invented a burglar-proof safe, which when tampered with, suddenly extends a powerful pair of tongs, or grippers, which seize the mafeactor and hold him in a firm embrace. There is nothing extraordinarily new in all this, but there is something further. Nearly always, safes that are likely to be visited by burglars are in buildings unoccupied during the night, and it is only the next morning that the captured robber is carefully released from the trap to be duly imprisoned. This is, of course, the best which the religious inventor desires to utilize.

He has, therefore, had prepared by an eloquent preacher a very long and remarkably forcible sermon, in which the rights of property, the disgrace of stealing, and the dangers attendant on it, both in this world and the next are set forth in the most touching language. This sermon, stored in a phonograph, is set off at the same moment that the pinners operate, and the homily is rolled out in the ears of the "patient." The monotonous nasal tones and the phonic graph renders the illusion perfect: the unfortunate robber believes he hears the voice of the preacher himself, and in the morning when the police arrive they find him thoroughly subdued and repentant.

The Secret of Exercising. [Philadelphia Ledger.]

The secret of muscular recuperation is in stopping when fatigue begins. He or she who is not the fresher in body and mind for the exercise taken has had an overdose of what in proper measure would have been a benefit. The gain in strength is shown and felt in the increasing ability to do more and more without exhaustion. The measure of success is not in the greatness of the feat accomplished, but in the ease with which the exercise is indulged in, and in the absence of exhaustion after it. There are occasions when the feat which people in the struggle of life are forced beyond their powers of endurance, and there is no need to carry into the pursuit of recreation the fatigue which exacting work imposes.

What Sign is Made Of. [The Argonaut.]

The saga of commerce is almost wholly made of potato starch, shaped into small balls, of which the surfaces are then gelatinized by passing over them hot air saturated with steam. There is scarcely any apparent difference between saga so made and the genuine article manufactured from certain tropical plants. Neither should be used at all by fat people.

SOME INTERESTING FIGURES.

Union Deaths During the War—The Number and Causes.

[Washington Cor. New York Sun.]

In the statistical exhibit of deaths of Union soldiers during the civil war, summarized recently from the record made up in Gen. Drum's office, there are some details worth notice. The tables seem to bear testimony to the good conduct of the Union soldiers as a whole. No fewer than 6,365 of them were killed in action or died of wounds. Among the enlisted men, including, of course, non-commissioned officers, only 30 per cent of the total deaths were of those killed by the enemy, while among the officers this percentage was 66, or two thirds out of every three deaths occurred among them. On the other hand, a far greater proportion of the deaths of enlisted men occurred from disease. Sixty-three per cent of all their deaths are ascribed to this cause, and another illustration is thus furnished of the familiar truth that in an ordinary war, especially when carried on by an army in a climate to which the troops are not accustomed, many more die of sickness than of the wounds received on the battle-field. Among the Union enlisted men, as has been said, this ratio of deaths from disease to deaths from all other causes was nearly two to one; but only about 29 per cent of the deaths of officers was due to disease, or about one in three. It is probable that the greater proportionate mortality from sickness among enlisted men was partly owing to their having fewer provisions for care and comfort, and oftener harder physical work, with less opportunities to leave themselves and to guard against exposure.

Of the total deaths 40,089 were from the New England states; 85,531 from New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania; 142,459 from the western states; 38,609 from the border states, or Missouri, Delaware, District of Columbia, Kentucky, Maryland, Tennessee and West Virginia; 27,771 from the Pacific states and territories, including California, Nevada, Oregon, Washington territory, Dakota, New Mexico and Colorado; 3,854 from states included in the Confederacy. It will be noted, also, that 38,847 deaths occurred among the colored troops, 5,798 in the regular army, 1,018 among Indian nations and 3,044 among miscellaneous organizations, the great majority of credit under the specific heads already given.

Among miscellaneous causes of deaths worth mentioning are drowning, which caused more than 4,944 in the armies alone, to say nothing of the navy; sunstroke, to which only 318 are directly attributed, whereas one might suppose those figures of drowning and sunstroke to be interchanged by mistake; suicide, which caused 391; murder, which is credited with 550. Then 104 officers and men were set down as killed after capture, besides 64 regularly executed by the enemy. The Union authorities executed 207 of their soldiers, 140 of these for desertion, 70 for murder, 23 for mutiny, and the remaining 34 for various offenses.

The Taking of Schwartz's Battery. [New York Tribune.]

Two of the younger members of the Grant family were playing ball on the lawn at Long Branch last summer, while the general sat on the porch, smoking his pipe and watching them. The youngsters disagreed and had a rough-and-tumble contest for possession of the ball. Out of it, the victor, rushed and excited, came up to where the general sat and said: "He took my ball." "Well, what did you do?" "I took it back again." The general smiled at his triumphant descendant, and turned to a friend who sat by him, said, laughingly: "Schwartz's battery is took."

The Story to which he alluded is one of the oldest of the jokes told at campfires and soldier regatta, and is a reported incident of Shiloh. During the battle an officer furiously up to Gen. Grant, touched his cap and said with German accent: "Sienerral, I want to make you report; Schwartz's battery is took." "Ah! that's bad," said Grant; "how did it happen?" "Why, seneral, de sheshenists came oop in front of us, and dey came oop in de rear of us, und dey came oop in der flank of us, und, vell, Schwartz's battery vas took." "You spiked the guns, of course?" said the general. "Vell, seneral," screamed the Dutchman, in excited astonishment. "Schpikede dem guns, schpikede dem new guns! Tunter und blitzen, no! It would have schpikede dem." "Well, sir," said the general sharply, "what did you do?" "Do, seneral! Vhy, we took-dem dem back again!"

The Song of the Shirt. [Chicago News.]

"Shirt-making is a great industry which grows with the increase of population," remarked a Washash avenue manufacturer. "In all its branches, including coarse work, such as the making of woollen and heavy shirts, it probably affords employment to 3,000 or 4,000 women in Chicago alone. There are about 800 girls and women employed in making fine shirts. They are all skilled workers. Their wages range from $7 to $15 per week. The system employed by the best factories here and in the east is piece-work. In that way no one girl finishes a shirt. She simply does some special part. One of our girls who makes the highest wages does nothing but turn wrists and neck bands. She never sews one stitch. Others stitch the bands. Some put the garments together, and are called body joiners. Others make the button-holes. In our establishment button-holes for shirts made to order are all cut by one girl and worked by others. In stock shirts the button-holes are worked by machines, and we pay a certain sum per 100 for them. Every part of a shirt is made by a different person. They are cut out by men. It requires about three yards of muslin for an ordinary sized shirt."

"How much linen is used?"

"That is a secret of the manufacturer. Each usually has his own particular style of cutting, and to tell the amount of linen used would be to give his figures to competitors."

Annihilators That Didn't Annihilate. [Milting World.]

An agent for the sale of hand grenades visited Glen Falls recently and advertised an exhibition of his fire annihilators. A match having been applied to a pile of inflammable material, Mr. Agent made a speech extolling his wares, and, reaching for a grenade, threw it on the pile. Instantly the flames leaped upwards, and with consternation he threw another and another, until the supply was exhausted. Then it transpired that the practical jokers of the town had drawn the contents of each bottle, and filled it with kerosene. It cost the agent six bottles of champagne to make himself solid with the boys, and the next exhibition met better success.

An Improvised Distillery. [Chicago Tribune.]

I have seen in a Florida Cracker-cabin an improvised distillery consisting of an iron tea-kettle with a wooden cover, pierced to admit the end of the barrel of a shot gun from which the nipples had been removed running a colorless fiery liquor much resembling rum at the rate of a gallon every three hours. The ferment was a mass of sugar-cane pomace and water obtained from a neighboring sugar-mill.
