foreign relations were in a critical confield would be adhered to in dealing plate moved on the table. with the Eastern question so far as subsequent developments would admit of it. Lord Randolph Churchill was among the formost of his colleagues in giving adhesion to their expressed intention in this direction. Lord Beaconsfield's foreign policy during the trying period of 1876, the particular period alluded to, was comprehensively described as a "spirited" one, which of necessity this particular branch. Both have done involved on ample expenditure for armaments. It is therefore somewhat remarkable that the very point on which the Cabinet has become divided, and to which Lord Churchill has been the one to take exception, should be the army and navy estimates, which the other members almost to a man do not deem excessive. Persistent rumors are afloat, and are as persistently repudiated, that the real reasons of the rupture have not transpired, and it is broadly hinted that the noble lord's democratic tendencies are at the root of the matter. As we briefly indicated two days since, there is probably an element of truth in both theories, and a significant item which was not before us at the time of writing tends to confirm this impression. A recent dispatch suggests that the system of perpetual pensions is the real bone of contention, and it is even stated that serious irregularities have been discovered in the Departments of War and Admiralty. If these suspicions are confirmed, Lord Churchill's resignation will prove to be less a matter of party politics than was at first believed. So far, however, the matter remains in doubt. But whatever is the precise nature of the causes which have operated to bring about this result, its importance at so critical a moment as the present both in the course of foreign and Irish politics cannot be overestimated, for the continued existence of a Coalition Ministry

The regular monthly meeting of the Queen's own was held last Friday evening, and was attended by seventy members. The company was re-organized in accordance with the new regulations governing the forces of the Kingdom. The officers of the past year expressed themselves as much satisfied with discipline of the men during their term of office. The election of officers for the ensuing year then took place. A. S. Mahaulu was elected Captain, after a close run with L. J. Nahora Hipa. The latter was afterwards elected First Lieutenant, and J. M. Bright Second Lieutenant. The election of the other officers stands over until the next meeting.

Fruit Pilferers.

When the barkentine George C. Perkins docked at Union street yesterday to discharge her cargo from Honolulu the dock was immediately crowded with the usual array of boatmen and water-front idlers, who, when an island trader is discharging, always hover round like flies round a molasses from the lamp room. Rushing quickly hogshead, trying to pilfer some of the to the spot he found the inside of the tropical fruit as it is being unloaded. An Italian, from one of the commission houses, who was cutting off the banana bunches, detected a young man named John Donahue getting away with a few bananas, and slashed him over the back | alarm was sounded. The boat was built by Mr. J. A. Dower in the most thorough manner, while the machinery was placed in position by Mr. Thomas Hughes, a man of large experience in first-class work in every respect. The Ewa is suitably adapted for excursion parties, and has a carrying capacity for 700 bunches of bananas. The engines are about ten-horse power, and the average speed is between eight and nine knots. Some slight alterations will be made before the steamer makes regular trips to Ewa in the banana trade.

New Map of Polynesia.

The San Francisco "Bulletin," in an article on the changes to be made in the map of the world as a consequence of recent events, says: "The map-maker will have to keep his eye closely on the blue books when he comes to make his new map of Polynesia. The changes which in a few years may be made in this map concern the United States above all other nations, as they will relate to the Hawaiian Islands. These productive isles have been regarded in the light of outposts of the United States toward the West, and the predominance of American interests therein have undoubtedly thus far saved them from the grasp of foreign nations. But Honolulu is in the direct line between the British possessions in North America and her island continent of Australia, and the great advantages to accrue from its possession have been realized more fully than ever since the completion of the Canadian Pacific Railroad. The 92 per cent of the entire export trade of the Islands, which now comes to the United States, would, according to English papers, be transferred to Canada, should our treaty with Hawaii be abrogated and a similar treaty be made by Canada. Indeed, negotiations have been entered into through the Colonial Office, and a reciprocity treaty has been favorably considered by both the Colonial Office and the Dominion Government. This anxiety to secure the trade of the Hawaiian Islands does not promise well for American interests. The alacrity with which the $2,000,000 loan was taken up in England gives rise to a suspi- for amounts with costs, etc. cion that the same game is about to be played in the Pacific as was successfully played on the southern shores of the Mediterranean, and that the financial interests of British subjects who have invested in Hawaiian bonds may cause map-makers within a few years to num-

The Hawaiian Treasury.

A statement of the receipts and expenditures of the Hawaiian Treasury for the last three months of 1886 appears in our "By Authority" column. The balance from September was $49,132 51, the receipts to December 31st $808,429 05, the expenditures $775,485 04, leaving a balance in hand of $82,076 52.

LOADED FOR BEAR.

Farmer McCue Shoots Thirty-seven Buckshot at Once from his Trusty Gun. WALTON, Oct. 23 .- Joseph McCue of Sul livan county is a little set in his opinions, but owns up like a man when he finds that he is wrong. The other day he was working in his turnip patch, which is right across the road from his house. There are not many neighbors in the part of Sullivan county where Mr. McCue's farm is, which is the Beaverkill country, near the Ulster county line. Mr. McCue had heard a quail whistling in his turnip patch, and had taken his shotgun with him, thinking that maybe he might get the quail for his supper. As the farmer worked he was finally brought with his face toward the road, and he caught a glimpse of something passing along. Farmer McCue raised himself up. As he looked toward the road his eyes opened very wide. As they opened Mr. McCue exclaimed:

What the farmer saw was a bear, and it was slouching deliberately along in the road, past the house. There was nothing but bird shot in Farmer McCue's gun, but he felt that he must get that bear. He seized the gun and fired both barrels at bruin. The bear stopped, looked in a deprecatory manner at the farmer, and then passed on. The farmer watched it until it disappeared in a bend of the road. Then he examined the hammers of his gun and blew into the barrels. Satisfied that the gun had gone off, he exclaimed: "Missed him, by jee!"

Farmer McCue finished his work in the turnip field and went to the house. "If I had gone out loaded for bear," said he to his wife, "I couldn't have seen my way, the quails would have been so thick. But there I was laying for quail, and what do I flush but a bear as big as a yearling colt! If that bear bothers me to-morrow, though, I'll be sorry for him, and I'll load the old gun now. Mother, count me out thirty-seven buckshot for each barrel!"

"You mean nine, Joseph," said Mrs. Mc-"Thirty-seven, mother, for each barrel." "Nine buckshot, Joseph, is a big load for any gun, and will kill an elephant!" "Nine-buckshot won't hurt a coon, mother, and I'm after bear. Thirty-seven is what I want, but it isn't enough. I've a notion to put in forty-seven, to make sure. No, I'll take thirty-seven; but thirty-seven ain't enough." So Farmer McCue put in a double charge of powder and thirty-seven buckshot in each barrel. Mr. McCue is a good farmer, but his early education as a hunter was sadly neg-

"Now let that bear trespass on me again, by jee!" said Farmer McCue. The next day he went to work again in his with him. He had no idea of seeing the bear, so that when in making a turn in the field he came almost face to face with it, evidently enjoying itself among the turnips, from the way it was pulling them up and munching them, the farmer was obliged to open his eyes wide again and exclaim, with more vigor than before: "By jee!"

Farmer McCue was bound to get the bear, however, and, backing off a few feet to where his gun lay, he picked it up, took good aim at the bear, and fired.

Mrs. McCue heard the report at the house. It made the windows rattle, and reverberated among the hills like a Fourth of July salute. The farmer's wife ran to the door and looked over into the turnip field. There was a thick cloud of smoke over by the stone wall, where she had last seen her husband at work. "Joseph must have killed the bear," she

But there was no bear and no Joseph to be seen. Mrs. McCue ran down into the field. She had not gone far before she saw the body of the bear stretched out among the turnips. Looking further, she saw Farmer McCue also stretched out among the turnips, as stiff as the bear. Just then Farmer Rose and his son, neighbors, happened to be driving by. Mrs. McCue hailed them. They carried Mr. McCue into the house. One side of his face was as black as his hat, and swollen three times its natural size. His right shoulder was dislocated, and his arm was black and blue from the shoulder to the elbow. It was a good while before he could be brought to. Then he opened his left eye, and, looking at his wife, said, firmly, but feebly: "Mother, thirty-seven's enough!"

There was a hole through the bear, amidships, big enough to run a stovepipe in. Farmer McCue, a little set in his opinion as he is, but willing to own up like a man when he finds he is wrong, is doing as well as could be expected.-New York Sun.

"That is true," answered the judge, "but hog is never bacon till it is hung, and therefore, until you are hung, you can be no relative of mine. George I, while on a journey to Hanover,

Chun Hook, the escapee, was brought before the Police Court vesterday morning, charged with escaping from the will be given beforehand to managers by the prison gang while at work on the Nuu-Tax Collector, or by his order, what day he anu Valley road, on December 7th, contrary to section 3, chapter 29, of the Penal Code. On the charge being interpreted to him he pleaded guilty, and prayed in accents of contrition that the Court would deal leniently with him, considering the long cumulative sentences which yet remained unexpired.

> Police Justice Dayton answered that he had had some private conversation with the prisoner, and had learned from him the reasons which he said had induced him to attempt the escape. These circumstances caused him to entertain some sympathy for the prisoner, and considering the long term of the sentences he had to serve, it was not surprising that he took the chance to escape. They dated from June 21, 1884, and extended over a period of eleven years and five months, his fines aggregating $225 65. It was necessary under the law to impose some penalty, and he would sentence him to an additional one month's hard labor, to commence at the expiration of his former sentences.

Following is a list of the sentences that the prisoner has to work out, together with the dates of their commencement and the crimes for which they were imposed.

June 21, 1884, Opium in posses-July 31, 1884, House breaking. 2 years January 5, 1885, Larceny, 1st de-from prison gang ...... .. 6 months March 11, 1886, Escaping from tol and knife ...... 2 years April 5, 1886, Burglary.....l year January 13, 1887, Escaping from prison gang...... 1 month

The circumstances which influenced the Justice in taking a lenient view of the case are somewhat interesting as illustrating the perfidious side of Chinese character, and from which it would appear that the proverb, "Honor among thieves," is a factor entirely unknown, at least among those of his countrymen in whom Chun Hook put his trust. As is well known, a recently pardoned comrade induced him to "slip" the gang under pretense of assisting him to secure a passage back to China on board the J. H. Bowers, then loading for Hongkong. But the reward proffered offered by the Government proved too tempting a bait for this wily Celestial, and while his attitude towards his less fortunate chum remained apparently unchanged, he was in reality making overtures to the police. From the information imparted by him it was known to the authorities some two weeks before the recapture that the object of their search was somewhere in the vicinity of Moiliili, near Honolulu, but owing to the difficult nature of the country it was thought inadvisable to make a raid upon him there lest it should be unsuccessful and put more on the alert. The arrangements which Chun Hook's false friend made were that the two should meet the night before the ship was expected to sail, and an express had been engaged to convey them at 2 a. m. to the wharf. The runaway was then to be stowed away on board the J. H. Bowers, and as some 170 Chinese had taken passage by that vessel, he had hopes of passing unnoticed. Two police officers were in waiting on board, ready to pounce upon him directly he made his appearance, but as it happened matters did not advance this far, owing to the intervention of other false friends. Before the appointed time, one of these was deputed to meet Chun Hook at his hiding-place, give the preconcerted signal in vogue among the members of the secret society, to which all belonged (although Chun Hook was not a member of the Honolulu branch), and represent to him that the first mentioned Chinaman was playing him false (which was a fact) and undertake to look after him and provide him with food, the escape by sea being abandoned for the time being as impracticable. These representations had the desired effect, and the doubly deluded livered to the Sheriff or Deputy Sheriff of such | cargo in transit from Boston for the Phillippine | convict was being escorted along the Waikiki road by this second friend, in accordance with arrangements previously made with Deputy Marshal Dayton, when he was captured, as already described. It will thus be seen that two distinct plots were in existence to recapture Chun Hook, both of which

A CALIFORNIA PRODUCTION.

The Fine Exhibit Made at the Fair by the Fredericksburg Brewing Co.

One of the most novel and unique exhibits of the Mechanics' Fair was that of the Fredericksburg Lager Brewing Co. It was in the form of a bower, the roof being formed of hop vines, while around the sides were arranged the various packages of the famous Fredericksburg beer. This company was the pioneer in the manufacture of lager on the Coast. After overcoming many obstacles they have succeeded in producing an export

Lager Not Surpassed

By any other made in the United States. A proof of this is seen in the fact that their goods are sold as far East as Chicago, despite Eastern competition. How can they do this after paying freight over 3,000 miles of railroad, it may be asked. In the first place hops are better and cheaper here than in the East; again, California barley is the best grown in the United States; but the chief reason is the superior quality of the brew. As they use only the finest artesian water and the very best material, and have all the best and latest machinery, they are able to produce an article that

DEFIES COMPETITION.

Their Export Lager is so perfect that it will keep any number of years in any climate, and is sold largely in Mexico, Australia, the Islands, South America, and in short throughout the Western Hemisphere. In three years their output has quadrupled; last year it amounted to 33,000 barrels, and this year will exceed that amount Since writing the above we learn that the Fredericksburg Brewing Co. was awarded the first prize, a silver medal, "for the best Export Lager," also the first prize, another silver medal, for the " best Keg Lager Beer."- Journal of Commerce, San Francisco.

BETTER THAN MANURE. A Prominent Farmer's Experience With

Clover as a Fertilizer. I have for ten years taken a crop of grain or potatoes every year from one field of my best land, and have grown, once in two years, a clover crop for fertilizing alone, and the longer I follow this plan the more I am pleased with it. The popular opinion of most of the farmers of my locality is, that to benefit your ground by clovering you must pasture it at least one year, and the practice is almost universal among them of turning their stock on the young clover on the wheat stubble as soon as they get the wheat out of the field, and I think there are but few among them who know that in a favorable fall the clover plant will often reach its full development so as to blossom and thoroughly shade the land. Since I adopted this plan three years out of four, I have had as heavy a previous spring sowing, as is usually seen in June on a field left for mowing. I was led to adopt this plan because I wished to abolish inside fences on my best plow land, and not pasture it at all, and it has been successful beyond my expectations. I am enabled grow three crops every wo wars, two money crops and a clover crop for fertilizing, and under this system my land is maintaining a high degree of forther. My farm contains ninety wenty-five of which is in permanent pasture, five more being in orchard and garden and the remaining sixty is in the one inclosure, and is never pastured. About one-half of this sixty acres is sown in clover each year -as we seed clover with all small grain-and the larger part of this clover is plowed under the next spring, although we usually leave a few acres to cut for seed each year. I have used large quantities of manure since I began to farm, buying and drawing from the village, two miles distant, hundreds of loads, in addition to what we save at home. Since I adopted my present method of growing a fall clover crop for fertilizing I have tried to fairly estimate the value to the soil of this crop as compared with stable manure, and I have reached the conclusion that a good crop of clover benefits the soil as much as twelve loads of manure. All that the clover costs is seed and sowing, which averages about one dollar per acre. The manure cost nine dollars cash in the village, and three heavy days' work for a man and team. I do not buy a dollar's worth of anure nov, and yet am growing as avier crops than I ever did. Waldo F. Brown, in Farmer's Re-

SUGAR IN MORTAR.

The Extraordinary Effect Which Cane-Sugar Produces on Lime.

My attention has been called by a entleman well known in the scientific world to a new use for sugar, which might be capable of being practically applied. Experiments have recently been made proving that sugar is a valpuble ingredient in mortar and cement, having strong binding qualities. Equal untities of finely powdered lime of a mry common kind were mixed with an nal quantity of good brown sugar, with the addition of water, and the rewas a cement of exceptional trength. This has been tried at Peterborough Cathedral, two large pieces of stone of the broken tracery of a window having been joined firmly together by ared mortar. The severest test is ning glass, which gives no hold to nortar without the use of sand, and this has been successfully done. The fact appears to be certain that sugar produces an extraordinary effect on me when the latter has been allowed to fall into a fine powder and has been thoroughly slacked. Particles of unslacked lime would destroy the result, because of their expansion, which would make the mortar lift. The sugar-mortar thus made will be found. I believe, to be as good as Portland cement; and the only question, there-fore, would be one of cost, and it is robable that Portland cement itself would be made much stronger by the addition of sugar. Treacle might have the same effect. It is not necessary to mention in detail the numerous small experiments which have been made. It is a matter which any one can test for himself by joining bricks with Portland cement alone, and by joining others with sugar and water added to lime form a definite chemical compound has long been known. It is used, indeed, for various purposes, and it may be hoped that the suggestion of its use as an ingredient in mortar may be (urned to practical account by buildare and cement manufacturers. It has suggested to me that the use of r is the secret of the success of the Roman mortar. - Thomson Hankey, #### ondon Times. A Cruel Hoax in Brazil.

A criminal trial arising out of a hoax has just been concluded. A Portuguese merchant here was crazy to become a Baron, and one day a mounted soldier dressed like a Minister's orderly came to his house and delivered to him a large sealed envelope, bearing the official P. S., on opening which he tound the long-sighed-for letters patent appointing him Baron de Villa Rica. Overjoyed, he summoned all his relatives and friends to a grand banquet, with rockets, band, toasts and speeches, and assumed a truly noble and baronial demeanor. But when he went to pay the taxes that have to be satisfied before public use of the title he discovered that he had been the victim of an elaborate hoax. The enraged pseudo-Baron fixed his suspicions on a party to whom he had lent three thousand milreis, in the belief that he had influence at court, and had him arrested for swindling. However, the jury seemed to think the joke too good a one to be looked on seriously and acquitted the accused .- Rio Janeiro Cor. N. Y. Herald.

The Value of Legal Advice. The firm of lawyers from which President Cleveland graduated into his present high office still maintains its organization and standing in the profession. The gentleman who succeeded to the president's place in the firm is known as the Tall Sycamore. Besides being a good 'awyer and astute politician he is also the father of the prettiest of blue-eyed and blonde-haired little lassies. This little maid has reached the mature age of 4 years. Sometimes she comes to the historical office in the Weed block to pay her respects to the members of the firm and incidentally to bring a bit of sunshine into the ordinary gloom of professional work. On one occasion when the Tall Sycamore's little girl was at the office her father was busy with a number of gentlemen. The little lass wandered into the senior's office and entered into conversation with that gentleman. After the manner of lawyers he managed to get into her confidence and after the manner of her sex she poured into the professional bosom the narrative of her woes and besought the counsel of her learned friend. Briefly stated, her case was this: She wanted a goat. She had made several motions to growth of clover in October, from the | that effect in the paternal court, but on one pretext or another the hearings had been adjourned and postponed to an extent which made her doubtful of ever securing a final decision in the matter.

Having accepted a kiss as a retainer in the case, the president's former partner proceeded to advise his fair client. His legal intellect grasped the situation at once. His experienced and quick working mind immediately seized upon the remedy. "The thing for you to do," said he, is this: "Go right into your papa's office and, no matter who is there, tell him you want a goat. If you only tell him once he may not hear you, so you had better tell him several times. Yes, you had better keep on telling him until you are sure he understands you."

The little woman opened her big, blue eyes in admiration of her lawyer's ability, and immediately proceeded to act on his advice. She marched soberly into her fathers office, intent upon her mission. So absorbed was she in her purpose that she paid no attention to the seven or eight prominent railroad men who were receiving and treasuring the precious and expensive words of counsel falling from the lips of the Tell Sycamore. She lifted her dimpled chin to the level of the paternal desk and remarked in bell like tones, "Papa, I want a goat." The matter under discussion was an important one and her remark was not noticed. She resumed:

"Papa, I want a goat. I want a goat, I want a goat, I want a goat. I want a goat, I want a goat, I want a goat, I want a goat. I want a goat. I want a goat. I want a goat, I want a goat, I want a goat. I want a goat, papa, I want a ---

"Here! You run along into the other room like a good girl and you shall have a goat." It had at least been made clear to the paternal mind that something was wanted and wanted badly.

The little maid returned to her adviser's office and told him of the success of the mission. "You know how to get goats," she remarked approvingly, and rewarded the lawyer in a coin which does not usually pass current in law offices. - Buffalo Express.

> > Odorous,

The Rev. Jonas D-, a well known Methodist minister, still living in the state of Massachusetts, has all his life had what all his friends regard as fanatical ideas regarding the observance of the Sabbath. He is very careful that no work of a domestic nature is done on that day in his house. No meals are cooked, no sweeping or dusting is done, and the day is one of solemnity and pions meditation, combined with church and and Sunday school going.

On one occasion the Rev. Mr. D. spent Sunday with his son's family. His daughterin-aw, a very pious woman, concluded, in honor of the guest, to forego her usual cold dinner on Sunday, and just before starting to church she slipped a fine fat turkey into the oven to roast under a slow fire while she was gone. On returning an odor of burning meat filled the gouse, and smoke was seen coming from the oven. "Why, daughter, what is that?" asked the Rev. Jonas Das his nostrils sniffed the unpleasant odor. The daughter-in-law, conscience stricken and abashed, said meekly: "A broken Sabbath, father; a broken Sabbath." "Humph!" was the old gentleman's immediate reply, "don't break another one, please, if it's going to smell like that."-Detroit Free Fress

Nearly as Good as Mark Twain's Frog. An old gentleman at Tewkesbury for many years rode a blind horse. Though sightless, the steed, which had probably been a good fencer once, had learned to jump whenever he received a hint that he was desired to do so. One day, after a run with the hounds, some hunting men were talking in the bar of a hotel about big jumps, and the owner of the blind horse stoutly maintained that that animal would jump over a single obstacle which none of their hun ters would leap. He was ready to back his words with money, and as the result of the conversation he made four bets of $5 each on the subject. Very soon the four sportsmen repented of risking their money so rashly. The owner of the blind horse put down a straw in the street, and this constituted the "obstacle." He rode up to it, and the blind steed, responding to his call, "rose at the rasper," clearing it with a bound four feet in the air, and covering twelve feet of ground at least. None of the other four horses would rise at a straw, and the owner of the blind horse was £20 richer. -Court Journal.

There is a great deal in managing a servant in such a way that the minion isn't aware of it. But some people don't know how to do this, and consequently a servant that is a jewel in my well regulated household is utterly useless in my neighbor's service. Now, not long ago I had occasion to part with a colored man. I didn't want to cast him out upon the cold world, because I feared that if the world got too cold he would come back to me. So I unloaded him upon a neighbor. I never had a ripple of trouble with him. I had employed him ostensibly to groom a horse occasionally and mow the lawn once or twice a year. I soon learned that he was running an African dormitory and a poker layout in my stable, and the general appearance of my premises finally brought me letters from the American Missionary union, asking permission to establish one of their Congo out stations between my barn and the kitchen. This, as much as anything else, induced me to part with Albert. He shipped with me under the nom de plume of Albert Wilson, but I noticed that some of the natives called him "Lame Jake," and he requested me, in writing his letter of recommendation, to call him Thompson Easley. By and by my neighbor said to me: "That man, Sam Norton, you sent to me-did you ever have any trouble with him?" I said no, never. "Well," said my neighbor, "I can't get along with him. He won't do one thing I ask him, not a thing." "Oh, well," I said, "he tried that on me, too, when he first came, but I settled that in short order." "How did you manage?" asked my neighbor. "Well," I told him, "I quit telling him to do anything." And do you know my neighbor was real angry with me, and abused me, and said I was a fool and deceived him. You see, he had no tact. That very night Albert landed on my coast again. He confided to me that his real name was James Sinclair, and he brought with him his brother, whom he introduced as Walter Taylor. They took up their old quarters in the barn and boarded with me for a week before I was able to secure them places in the county work house. They both left me with sincere regret, and Albert said, in parting, that any time I wanted him to come back, a letter addressed to Charles Martin would reach him. Albert was a saddle colored pagan, but he was the richest man in names I ever worked for .- Robert J. Burdette.

"One of your Baptists has my hat." "Then," said Brother Acree, "your hat has nore brains in it than ever before." A few days after that Dr. Hannon was passing by Brother Acree's yard gate, and when urged to come in, he said:

"I am on my way to preach." "You can't preach," replied Brother Acree. "So I felt for a long time," replied Dr. Hannon; "but since hearing you the other day I have changed my mind."-Richmond Religious Herald.

He Must Have Been an Umpire. During a thunder storm recently in a town up in New York state a man hurrying to a shelter was knocked senseless by a flash of lightning. He was taken into a hotel, and after he had been labored with for some time he recovered. Struggling to his feet he gazed upon the anxious faces surrounding him, and remarked with an air of severity: "Gentlemen, if order has been restored, we will pro ceed with the game."-Pittsburg Dispatch.
