OF GENERAL INTEREST.

—The name "United States of America" was first applied to the colonies in the famous pronounciamento for American liberty, the Declaration of Independence, made July 4, 1776.

—A Jacqueminot bush is mentioned by Vick's Magazine, which grows in a very small city garden, and has branches eight or nine feet long, on which were borne last June 971 roses.

—A Carroll County (Mo.) man over eighty years of age recently walked from his home in the country to Carrollton, a distance of eight miles, to buy a clay pipe and a paper of fine cut.

—A Stockton (Cal.) consumptive called up an undertaker the day before he died and challenged him to shake dice with him for a coffin. The astonished undertaker accepted, when the poor man threw three sixes and won the coffin.

—A man of forty lately confessed on his dying bed in a New York hospital, that he had been married sixteen different times in the last seven years, and that he believed all his wives to be living. He wanted to live to make them all happy, he said, but death claimed him as its own.

—A Maine minister recently received from an admiring female parishioner a present of a nicely made burial robe. The gift was made in such evident good faith and innocence of any idea of impropriety that he received it with thanks and cheerfully laid it by against the need that must come.

—At Greenville, Miss., the other day, a policeman shot at a white man, but hit a negro. This is how a local paper describes the result: "The cop blazed away at the man, and shot him in the elbow, the ball glancing and striking the negro in the cheek. As he spit the ball out he said: 'Look heah, white man, you quit dat shootin' at me; fus' thing yuh knows yuh gwinter brake some 'spectable pusson's winder glass.'"

—The longest pendulum on this continent swings in the technological school at Atlanta, Ga. It is a heavy pear-shaped piece of iron attached to a brass wire forty-two feet long. The upper end of the wire is pivoted in a steel point which rests on the center of a steel plate so as to cause the least possible friction. The swinging of the pendulum gradually describes a circle on the floor in a direction following the sun, showing in this that "the earth do move."

—A woman living at Burham, near Rochester, England, has just had a narrow escape from being buried alive. She fell into a kind of trance, which was mistaken for death, and a coffin was ordered and the usual preparations made for a funeral. But while a number of relatives were gathered at the bedside bewailing their bereavement, the supposed corpse startled them by suddenly rising up in bed and asking what was the matter. The woman is making good progress toward convalescence.

—The discovery that brass tubes, when properly annealed, have resonant qualities far superior to be[illegible] of the same comparative weight and cost is being utilized in Germany, where tubes are being used for chimes in church towers. It is stated that a tube three inches in diameter outside and one-half inch thick, twelve feet long, can easily be heard a distance of one mile, and under favorable circumstances two or three miles. In Providence, R. I., these tubes are now being used for chimes, which are rung by the clock movement at regular intervals.

—A suggestive yarn about the abuse of the fee system by constables is told by a Gardiner, Me., man. Officers down on the Kennebec have pocketed lots of money from fees for arresting tramps. It seems to have been the custom in times gone by that when one of these gentlemen of leisure was committed to jail he was presented with a plug of tobacco by the officer who arrested him, with the understanding that when his time had expired and he came round on the circuit again he should look out for his official friend and help him get another fee. The increase of this branch of the police duty caused competition to spring up among the members of the force, and it is stated as a fact that some of the bribes of tobacco run as high as a pound.

A Beauty on the Water.

Down past the steamboat wharf at Bar Harbor floated a thing on the water, that seemed endowed with life. Its broad white wings were spread to the wind and it swept along to the open sea at a high rate of speed.

"See the beautiful yacht," cried a near sighted dude on the wharf, adjusting his monocle.

"How gracefully she breasts the waves!" exclaimed his exquisite female companion, who was also near sighted.

"Chawming—weally charming!" exclaimed the dude.

A titter that almost swelled into a roar rippled among the other people on the wharf—for with their undimmed eyes they saw it was the garbage-scow, loaded to the rail.—Lewiston Journal.

THE TWO PLATFORMS.

The Friend avers that the National Reform platform is "suspiciously silent" on the matter of the segregation of lepers and finds occasion for solicitude in this circumstance in case the National Reform party comes into power. The Bulletin thinks (or rather says) that the platform is not silent on the matter, but that it is that of the Reform party which is suspiciously so.

What is the truth here?

In reaching any sound conclusion on this question, it is necessary to consider the situation in which each of the two parties was placed.

The Reform party had a record of more than two years, during which it had controlled the administration of affairs. It had devised a new constitution, brought it into operation, elected a Legislature, passed the usual volume of session laws, and a ministry drawn from its ranks had actually administered the affairs of the country for two years. Moreover its leaders, and a goodly number of its rank and file, had co-operated politically for years in the Legislature, in the press, and before the public generally, and had established a record of many years as the old Opposition.

The so-called National Reform party on the other hand was a totally new organization. It came into existence as the result of a fusion of the Mechanic's Union and of the Hui Kalaiaina, two organizations supposably of a totally different character, with different antecedents and different aims. Its leaders were, as a rule, either unknown, unfavorably known, or known as political opponents. Several of the most popular and prominent among them were men high in office under the old government, who had originally been opposed to the Reform movement and had always remained so. To the eyes of the outsider the whole combination looked like a union of extreme opposites.

Such then was the character of the party which came forward as a candidate for power—asking the people to entrust to its leaders the control of affairs.

Each party framed the platforms which its situation rendered necessary. For the National Reform party to publish a short instrument, confining itself to general and vague declarations of policy, would have been absurd. It would have been abandoning all pretence that the party existed for the sake of any principles. It would have been an open confession—"We are here for the offices."

The author of the platform (we say the author, for there is no evidence that the platform was the cohesive principles of a party) evidently saw all this very clearly. He perceived the necessity of a very full and explicit declaration of principles, and of principles which as far as possible should contain nothing to shock the enlightened sentiment of the country. The result was a platform specific and definite to the last degree on every point where it dared to be.

The situation of the Reform party was totally different. It had a full record on every question touched upon in its platform. It was perfectly possible to adopt a short comprehensive platform referring generally to the leading points in its policy, and reaffirming them. Such a platform is of course to be read in connection with the previous history, of the party, with its legislative and administrative acts, and recorded utterances. In this case for instance it must be read in connection with the ministerial reply to the inquiries from Hilo. Under the circumstances more specific utterances in the Reform platform were utterly superfluous. Putting them in or leaving them out was a mere matter of taste. These are points clear to anyone with a very moderate allowance of common sense.

Upon this state of facts, which is the suspicious circumstance, the silence of the Reform party's platform, or the silence of its enemies? Probably no one with a normal pulse and sound faculties, would really pretend that there is anything really suspicious about the platform of the Reform party on this point, so that we may give our undivided attention to the other. And here the case lies in a nutshell. If the platform of the National Reform party had contained a declaration against the segregation of lepers, the respectable wing of the party would have abandoned it and the organization would have been broken up. It is safe to assume, we hope, that Mr. Widemann and those whom he represents, Mr. D. Logan, and others, would have declined to run. On the other hand, the party relied for its success in the solid native vote. It did not rely on the excellence of its platform. It did not rely on any zeal for national Reform. It relied on nothing in the world but the solid native vote. Without that vote, as every one knows, the party would not have had a ghost of a chance. Now, if the platform had contained a strong declaration in favor of the segregation of lepers, and had pledged the party to carrying out such a policy the solid native vote would have been gone, and with it all chance of National Reform success. The insertion of a plank on the segregation of lepers would have furnished the strongest guarantee of the good faith of the party, but they would not and could not, and dared not give it. Freedom for the lepers was the sap which it was necessary to give to the natives, and it was given, although the Bulletin, which was asleep during the campaign, asleep—brain, heart, conscience and all, professes not to have known it.

Under these circumstances is it not true that the "silence" of the National Reform platform is "suspicious?" We think the word a very mild one. We think further that solicitude as to the possible result was a natural and justified sentiment, was a natural sentiment before the election, and that it continues to be so, after it.

The Niles Tool Works, of Hamilton, Ontario, have finished and are now loading an immense armor plate bending roll that is to be sent to the navy yard at Mare Island, near San Francisco. The tremendous machine weighs 400,000 pounds, and the freight will be something over $10,000.

DEATH OF CAPT. H. B. WILLIAMS.

On Saturday, February 8th, Captain Henry B. Williams of the firm of Williams, Dimond & Co., died at Santa Barbara, Cal. Captain Williams was one of the best known merchants in San Francisco, and as General Pacific Coast Agent of the Pacific Mail Steamship Company he was known and respected by every one in the mercantile community. He was born in Woodstock, Vermont, seventy years ago, and went to California in 1850. After some years he entered the employ of W. T. Coleman & Co., and shortly after engaging in mercantile pursuits he formed a partnership with Mr. Blanchard and General W. H. Dimond, under the firm name of Williams, Blanchard & Co. Subsequently the firm was changed and became known as Williams, Dimond & Co. He has had charge of the Pacific Mail Company's business at the dock ever since the firm became agents of the corporation.

About three months ago his health began to fail from too close application to business. Paralysis set in and he went to Santa Barbara to recover his health if possible. His visit was not as beneficial as was hoped, and he lost all the time, the malady eventually reaching his heart and causing death.

Captain Williams left a wife and one daughter, Mrs. Alfred Poett, both of whom were with him at the time of his death.

The office of Williams, Dimond & Co., was closed on February 10th out of respect for the memory of the deceased, and suitable resolutions in his memory will be adopted by the Chamber of Commerce and other mercantile organizations.

A Thrilling Adventure.

In a private letter received by the Lehua from Hilo, is the following account of a very narrow escape from drowning:

On Friday, February 28th, Mr. Edw. G. Hitchcock and his brother Mr. D. H. Hitchcock, drove out on the Volcano road. During their absence heavy rain fell and filled all of the water-courses with roaring torrents. On their way home all of the streams were crossed in safety till the rocky ravine on the north side of the woods about four miles from Hilo, was reached. Here the water came up to the carriage box, and one of the horses stepped off of the raised embankment into the deep water dragging the vehicle with its occupants into the turbulent waters. They immediately jumped into the water and while swimming tried to cut the horses loose. They succeed with one, but the other was drowned, and they then turned to save themselves, but found that they were so exhausted that they hardly had the strength left for the effort. Mr. D. H. Hitchcock succeeded in catching the branches of a tree and then looking for his brother saw him go under. Although almost exhausted he plunged in again and succeeded in getting hold of him. Supporting him on a branch, they succeeded in again getting hold of a tree where they rested awhile and then got on shore, where Mr. E. G. Hitchcock fainted wholly away. After he was brought to they proceeded on their way, assisted by a carriage from Mr. W. H. Shipman. At last accounts both were doing well and perhaps none the worse for their perilous adventure.

Gate City Stone Filter

These Filters are easily cleansed, and NEVER become Cracked or CRAZED by change of Temperature of the Water.

The Filtering Medium is a NATURAL STONE, mined from the earth. It is unlike any other stone.

IT DOES NOT ABSORB AND BECOME FOUL.

IMPURITIES never PENETRATE it, but lie on the surface, and internally the stone remains as pure and white after years of use as when taken from the mine.

"The Gate City Stone Filter is a perfect success. It is the only real filter I have ever seen. I would not be without one for any consideration. It converts our lake water into the best drinking water in the world. HENRY M. LYMAN, M. D., 533 West Adams St., Chicago.

Sugar Notes.

A dispatch from New York, February 14th, gives the following quotations: Raw is steady. Sales of six cargoes centrifugals, 96 test, at 3¼ cents freight and insurance; 1,691 bags San Domingo centrifugals, 96 test, at 5⅜ cents. Refined, firm.

Jim Keene has made his re-entry on the New York 'Change on February 12th. The corner of the Stock Exchange devoted to the purchase and sale of sugar trust certificates was the scene of wild turmoil and there was a great deal of excitement there all day long. An immense number of shares were dealt in. One of the heaviest purchasers was James R. Keene, and there was much conjecture as to whether he was buying stock for the Havemeyer pool or whether he was covering shorts. He is believed to have taken 25,000 shares altogether.

San Francisco News.

A fight to the finish at the Golden Gate Athletic club February 12th, between Pete McCoy and Charlie Gleason, was a fine contest. McCoy was the victor after six good rounds had been fought.

A man aged about 23 years applied to have his right hand amputated at the County Hospital February 12th. He said that his father was a merchant in the Sandwich Islands, and that while working there several months ago he had broken his shoulder blade and thereby injured his hand. He submitted his hand for examination to Drs. Finnie, Healy and Ellinwood. They decided that the man was suffering from leprosy. The fingers of his right hand were terribly swollen and enlarged. He stated that he had previously applied for treatment to several doctors, and that none of them had pronounced his a case of leprosy. He was sent to the Health office, and will probably be consigned to the pesthouse.

The conspiracy was to effect his capture, and until he concluded to surrender thus amount to hold him in captivity. The Parnell Commission Report.

The report of the Parnell Commission was presented to Parliament February 13th. It is a document of 162 pages. It exonerates Parnell as to some of the charges and holds him guilty as to others. It reports as not proved the three specific charges against him that he knew that Sheridan and Boynton were organizing outrages, that he was intimate with leading Invincibles and encouraged the Phœnix Park murders, and that he enabled Byrne to escape to France. It finds that the Pigott letters are forgeries. It accuses Michael Davitt of being a Fenian and of being prominently concerned in bringing about a combination of the Land League and the Clan-na-Gael. It accuses the Parnell respondents generally with being concerned in conspiracies to bring about the independence of Ireland and with encouraging intimidation and agragrian outrage.

T. P. O'Connor's paper, the Star, asserts that the report of the Parnell Commission is a triumphantly acquittal of all the accused Parnellite members of the House of Commons.

Amid the cheers of the Opposition in the House of Commons February 14th, Parnell asked what action the Government proposed to take upon the report of the commission. Smith, the Government leader, replied that the Ministry had not had time to decide upon their course.

British Parliament Opened.

Parliament opened February 14th, and the Queen's speech was read from the throne by the Lord High Chancellor. The speech opens with a reference to the relations between Her Majesty's Government and the other powers, which are declared to be of the most friendly nature. Referring to the recent trouble with Portugal, Her Majesty says: "An armed force under Portuguese officers entered the territory where the British settlements have been formed and where there are tribes who have been taken under my protection. Collision with natives resulted, which was attended with bloodshed, and acts were committed inconsistent with respect to the British flag. Portugal has now, at my request, promised to withdraw the military force."

All the papers and protocals concerning the Samoan treaty with the United States only lacks the ratification of the United States Senate.

Following is the text in full relating to the Australian question: "I shall await with lively interest the result of the conference being held to discuss the important question of federation in the Australian colonies. Any well-considered measure for bringing these colonies into closer union will increase their welfare and strength, and will receive my favorable consideration."

Following is the text concerning the Irish question: "The continued improvement of affairs in Ireland and the further diminution of agrarian crime there has made it possible to very largely restrict the area where it is necessary to deal with certain offenses by summary process. Proposals for increasing, under due financial precaution, a number of occupying owners, for extending to Ireland the principles of local self-government which already have been enjoyed in England and Scotland, so far as they are applicable, and for improving the material well-being of the population of Ireland will be submitted to you."

The address also says: "A bill facilitating and cheapening the transfer of land in England will be again presented, and new provisions will be submitted."

The remainder of the address is taken up with matters principally of home interest.

STYLES IN THE HOUSE.

Inexpensive Methods By Which Pleasing Effects May Be Had.

Light, breezy materials that serve as screens rather than drapery should be selected for bedroom windows. No excuse exists for leaving the hard, bare lines of these neccssary apertures undraped, for the counters of dry goods shops are piled high with a variety of cotton stuffs that are within reach of the ordinary purse. Pretty colorings and artistic floral designs are seen in these and their washing qualities are undoubted. Dull blue and brown are mingled together in these, also pinks and browns, and the whole scale of browns, from cream to the wood shade, is oftentimes represented in one piece. These are diaphanous and a yard wide. To loop them back are cotton cords and tassels in mixed colors, matching the curtain stuffs. These same materials are suitable for draping beds and mantels. The old plain white counterpane of Marseilles now finds a rival in the newer one, whose snowy threads are intermingled with others of yellow, blue, red or pink, giving a soft, lovely effect. These also come in two tones of a single color that are really artistic. Beautiful spreads are of the durable washing silk and may be finished with a strip of brocaded ribbon running down the sides and a third directly down the center. The edge should be finished with a frill of antique lace, and four widths of the silk will be found ample for widest bed. Down spreads are pretty though heavy looking. A compromise may be effected by placing two layers of sheet-wadding between the silk covers and catching it in place at intervals with invisible stitches. This slight filling is calculated to enhance the effect of flowered silks, whose patterns are thus thrown into semi-relief. A pretty bed-cover of this description is of pale heliotrope with branching flowers of pink and leaves of light olive. The long, round bolster is covered to match and its ends as well as the edges of the spread trimmed with deep cream lace. A delicate pink one made in the same way has daisies and trailing vines running all over it.

Something new in night-dress cases shows a bolster large enough to accommodate that article. It is made of silk to correspond with the spread and bed bolster and has its ends puckered up exactly like the latter, so that one wonders how the night-dress is to get into its nest. A long slit at the back fastened by a trio of buttons explains away the apparent mystery. With spreads of colored Marseilles these cases are made of linen, trimmed with point de gene or fine torchon lace, and have embroidered on them simple designs in colored cottons.

The newest grate curtains, whether for bedrooms or other apartments, are hung directly below the shelf-board and completely hide the mantel. These curtains should always be low in tone and the same facts should be borne in mind in buying draperies for the shelf, that the ornaments placed on it may have a pleasing back-ground. —Chicago Times.

AN ENGLISH INTERVIEW.

A Process Differing From That Employed By American Reporters.

General Pryor tells an amusing story. When he was in England defending the Irish patriots, he was quite desirous of spreading his views before the English public. It was much harder to get at an English editor than at an American, but finally communications were established, and, one evening there was a subdued knock at the door of his room in the hotel. "Come in," said General Pryor. The door opened about six inches, and through the aperture sidled a dilapidated specimen of humanity. Softly closing the door, the dilapidate' specimen put his dilapidated hat on the floor, and, bowing humbly, uttered: "General Pryor, I believe." "Yes, I am General Pryor, what can I do for you?" "I am a reporter, sir, and I was sent to ask you if you would give your views on the American aspect of the Irish question." Every body who knows General Pryor well knows that he is one of the most affable of men, and in this case he meant to be particularly pleasant, for he wanted to be interviewed. But forgetting that he was not in New York, he followed the usual practice of statesmen in this country, and began with "My dear fellow, I really haven't any thing to say," intending this, of course, as a prelude to a long conversation. What was his astonishment when the specimen grabbed his hat, genuflected still more humbly than before, ejaculating "Thank you, sir; thank you, sir;" and disappeared. To have a reporter give up the struggle so quickly so surprised the General that he really sat in his chair paralyzed for the moment, and before he could recover the Englishman had gone, and the interview was lost.—N. Y. Herald.

Then the World Turned 'Round Again.

He entered a tobacco store on Grand River avenue with a handkerchief pressed to his jaw, and was at once an object of solicitude.

"I've been there," said number one, "and I can feel for you. Try peppermint essence."

"I always put on a bag of hot salt," said number two. "Have cured the worst kind o' case in two hours."

"Bosh!" exclaimed number three, "electricity will stop that ache in two minutes. I'll never fool with any other remedy."

"Gentleman," said number four as he put his finger into his mouth to feel of an old snag, "there's nothing like laudanum for the toothache. It comes from an exposed nerve. Laudanum deadens the sensibility of the nerve. I've used it with success a hundred times."

"I'd never advise a man to waste time fooling around," said number five. "Let him go straight to the dentist and have it pulled out. It takes grit, of course, but in five minutes you are over it forever."
