Something New In Ranges.

THE PACIFIC HARDWARE COMPANY, Limited, have just received an invoice of the M. & D. Wrought Steel Ranges which are superior to anything of the kind yet invented. They have been adopted by the United States Navy after a severe test and are in use on the Charleston, San Francisco, Boston, and other new vessels, as well as on several of the new vessels lately built for the trade between Honolulu and the Coast.

An examination of these Ranges will at once show their many advantages over all competitors.

THE DAILY

PACIFIC COMMERCIAL ADVERTISER

Six Pages.

Be just and fear not:
Let all the ends thou aim'st at be Thy Country's, thy God's, and Truth's.

MONDAY, OCTOBER 31, 1892.

MR. TOWNSEND, in a communication to this morning's ADVERTISER, makes a suggestion in regard to the formation of a Coffee Growers' Union which is worthy of note. It is doubtful, however, whether there are enough coffee growers who would take part in such an enterprise to make it a success. Perhaps the same ends could for the present be better attained through the medium of the Planters' Labor & Supply Co.

NOT OF THE THREE.

Hon. J. N. S. Williams objects to an item in Saturday's ADVERTISER connecting him with the feverish efforts so benevolently being made by the minority to form a Cabinet for the majority. He states that he has been spending his time in his office, and not in politics.

We are only too glad to take Mr. Williams' name from the number of the Big Three, and we hope soon to see the honorable gentleman in better political company.

MINISTERIAL STATEMENTS.

An editorial in Saturday's ADVERTISER has drawn forth a communication from the lately dismissed Minister of Finance and Attorney-General, in which these ex-officials set forth that, while they have not endeavored to influence Her Majesty's choice of a Cabinet, they have advised her that she is not bound to follow the behests of a majority in caucus, and that such a majority cannot properly demand the appointment of its nominees.

These opinions of Her Majesty's de facto advisers are not perhaps altogether wanting in interest, but it would certainly be more interesting to hear something from them which is germane to the matter in hand. No one, so far as we are aware, has contended that Her Majesty is compelled to follow the behests of a caucus, or to accept its nominees, and it is of very little consequence what advice members of the Cabinet have given her on this subject. Has the acting law adviser of the Crown told Her Majesty that parliamentary government requires the appointment of a Ministry from the ranks of the Opposition party? Has he informed her that usage in such cases required her to entrust the formation of the Cabinet to a recognized leader of this Opposition? Has he charged her that the Premier so selected should be left to the free exercise of his discretion as a leader of the victorious majority, unhampered by influence from the Throne? Has he further suggested to the Sovereign that, apart from all questions of technical legality, the wise and proper course for her to follow would be in any case the one suggested? Finally, has the acting Premier, in the exercise of his ordinary official duty, advised Her Majesty to send for a leader of the Opposition?

These are the questions upon which the people vainly seek information. They do not care to see the Ministers putting up straw men for the cheap luxury of knocking them down. Have they advised the Queen as described? If they have, we cheerfully acquit them of all responsibility for the present interregnum. If they have not, we charge them with a miserable dereliction of their duties; and it may be added, that a lawyer who should betray his client as the Attorney-General has upon this assumption betrayed the people, would richly deserve to be disbarred.

THE LEGISLATURE AND THE PEOPLE.

It seems to be admitted by the paid defenders of illegality that the Queen is more or less bound to select a Cabinet in accordance with the will of the people; but they claim apparently that the present Legislature does not represent the people. We are always eager to learn what the leaders of the Palace party think—if indeed they think at all—and therefore welcome even this feeble contribution to the literature of the subject.

The contention named is, however, a most lamentable subterfuge. The Legislature now in session was elected but six months ago. It was elected by secret ballot. There has been no general change in public sentiment since that time, though the ideas represented by the majority of the Opposition have undoubtedly made great advances. The House now in session, duly chosen by the people, has rejected the Ministry by a vote of more than two to one. It is the legal and the only legal representative of the nation, and the attempt to resist it in the exercise of its lawful privileges is an abuse without color of excuse.

The Constitution of Hawaii does not make the Cabinet responsible to the people but to the House only. The direct appeal to the voters upon dissolution of Parliament is a democratic arrangement peculiar to England. It has its advantages and disadvantages, but it is not necessary to inquire which of the two preponderate, for the system could not be introduced here without a constitutional amendment. In Hawaii the appeal to the country can be made but once every two years and the forty-eight men chosen at each general election are entrusted with the power residing in the people to determine who shall rule. If it is competent to the Sovereign or anyone else to evade plain duties upon the pretence that the Legislature does not represent the people, then the rights guaranteed by the Constitution are not worth the paper they are written on. No doubt the leaders of the present Cabinet are inflated with an egregious confidence that they are, if not the Lord's anointed, at least the favorites of the nation; but the law, which is no respecter of persons, takes no more account of the purely subjective hallucinations of Cabinet Ministers, dismissed or otherwise, than of the delusions of the meanest citizen.

It is perhaps hardly worth while to refer to the originally hollow and long since exploded pretence that the late bye-election was an endorsement of the Cabinet and an index of sentiment throughout the country. One of the two candidates at that election stated that the lottery would pave the streets of Honolulu with silver. The other was understood to be of the same mind, while the Attorney-General stretched a point to appear on the same platform with his ardent supporter and admirer, the member for Lahaina, who made a speech in favor of the lottery bill. It is thus plain that, before the election, the Ministers were not only coquetting with the lottery, but their familiarity was impudently exposed to the public gaze. The motives of the unworthy union would be obvious to a tyro in intrigue. The object gained, the Ministers grew cooler and hastened to kick down the ladder by which they had climbed. It will therefore be time enough to admit that the election was an endorsement of the Cabinet when the Cabinet has officially endorsed the lottery.

The other contention, that the election represented the sentiment of the country generally, is not even plausible, and may be dismissed with a word. Honolulu is a pocket borough of the element represented by the Cabinet, and the expression of its voters, to judge by the past, is a pretty good index of what the country at large does not feel.

Another Letter from "Junius."

MR. EDITOR:—There is no man, however indifferent to the prosperity of Hawaii nei, who will not readily admit that the situation to which the country is reduced, justifies the most serious apprehensions and calls for the exertion of whatever wisdom may be found among us. At such a time as this no honest man will remain silent or inactive. The least considerable person among us has interest at stake in the land of his adoption or birth, and is equally called on to make a generous effort in its behalf, whether it be in the heart to conceive, the understanding to direct, or the hand to execute. The condition of the country is far from hopeless, and may be likened to that of the invalid whose strength has been wasted by empirics, and who needs but a change of treatment to revive.

That our sovereign ascended the throne with the resolution to seek the prosperity of her people,—to discourage idleness and inculcate virtue among them,—and to place her subjects and her country in a more healthy and prosperous condition, no one can for a moment doubt. How little has thus far been accomplished, tending to sustain the hopes of her people, needs not to be stated. The best of purposes fall lifeless to the ground unless seconded by a cabinet with a will to cherish, and the nerve to execute them. It was one of the virtues of the Kamehamehas that they always found a way to accomplish their purposes. A measure once determined on as wise and for the benefit of the nation, was resolutely carried out. A little of the unyielding firmness and indomitable will of the founder of that dynasty, which rested not until the entire group was united in one peaceful kingdom, is now wanted to arrest national decay and assure a prosperous change. This is Queen Liliuokalani's golden opportunity to render her reign illustrious, by saving the remnant that remains and infusing into it new life.

Could there be found within her domains one man thoroughly inspired with the same benevolent purposes which she brought to the Throne, who comprehends the situation and wants of the Kingdom—could she induce him to devote his energies to the public service, and, with the scanty materials available, inaugurate such public improvements as may be practicable with our limited revenues—it might prove the turning point in Hawaiian prosperity. If to the assistance of such a person a full cabinet could be installed, enlisting men of experience, knowledge and character, fitted for real service; men whom the office seeks rather than those who seek it; who could act as a unit and work earnestly to place the industries of the country on a firm and prosperous basis, public confidence would at once be restored.

The first service in which such a Cabinet should engage would be the negotiation of a commercial treaty with America—by far the most important measure that can possibly demand attention. All efforts to obtain such a treaty must, however, be looked upon as hopelessly vain without a complete, earnest and united Cabinet. If our labors in this direction fail at this time, a dark cloud must hang over our future. That the treaty is loudly, nay imperatively, demanded by every interest, needs no proof, and just in proportion to its necessity should be our exertions for it. Every member of the Government, as well as every person in the community, should cheerfully lend his influence and support to secure it. The ablest talent should be retained for its negotiation without regard to cost. In its details, it should cover every interest which this country possesses, and which, under proper encouragement, may be developed to assist the laborer, the farmer, the mechanic and the commercial prosperity of the nation. If such a treaty is obtained, it will only be by stubborn perseverance and diplomatic skill. If reciprocity be worth anything, it is worth whatever it may cost to obtain it.

That America has done Hawaii a wrong by practically annulling a treaty in a manner not contemplated at the time of its enactment before its legal time had expired, and without notice, will be generally admitted by her fair-minded statesmen. For these reasons, a magnanimous people will not hesitate to make such amends to a weak and powerless nation like Hawaii, as justice and national honor alike demand should be made.

The Tourists' Guide for the Hawaiian Islands can be had at this office. This handy book is invaluable for strangers visiting this country. It contains descriptive matter pertaining to the different islands with handsome illustrations and maps. No tourist should be without the guide as it will save them a lot of bother and questions.

October, 1892.

Come in, out of the rain! or, if it has quit raining when you see this, just come in out of the sun, and we will show you a fine lot of new goods just at hand ex "J. C. Glade," "Aloha," "Discovery" and S. S. "Australia." You may want one of those new Patent Pliers, very handy about the house to use either on wire or as a pipe wrench, in fact your tool chest is not complete without it. It will turn anything it takes hold of, from a piece of pipe to "an honest penny."

Is that your pup? You don't say so, part "Sooner" is he; well, the sooner you cut off that old dirty collar, and pick out a nice one from our new stock, the better your dog will look. That leather one you are looking at, is very strong and with its nickle trimmings looks very neat, but if you prefer an all-metal one, the one in the next box is what you want. You will notice that they differ from the ordinary link collar in that all the links are solid and no soft solder is used. If you want to see a sad dog, just look at one just after he has tried to break one of these collars, the way he used to break the old soldered link kind by walking to the end of his chain and then finding that he had an engagement to keep in the next yard.

Those waterproof linen Lariats, one of which you see in our front window, have been tried by a number of ranchmen and they all report them a good article, "better than rawhide," and they do not cost as much. We have them 50ft. long, in two sizes of rope and for anyone wanting a longer or shorter "lass" we will cut you off any number of feet you want, and we will have the "hondas" and metal grips that are used with the rope. Like the metal dog collars, the same animal never tries to break them more than one.

Those new style Pruning Shears and those steel edge Dust Pans, are goods that will please the ladies. With this kind of a shear, you don't have to screw your mouth up, and say "Oh!" before you get that tough piece of vine or rose bush cut through, and the dust pans, well, you know how you felt the other day when you had a little dirt to brush up and 67-100 of it slipped under the pan, because the edge was so bent. The steel edge Pan "keeps straight," and don't let dirt get by. Are any of your fine old shade trees troubled with the blight? If so, the only way to save them is to spray them. We have the Spraying Pumps complete with Nozzles and Hose, and if you get an outfit in time, it may save many a valuable tree. We have a new lot of hair clippers, and can sell you one that will clip your wife's, your boys', or your hair, so that it will be any where from 5-16 to 1-16 inches in length.

We have just added to our large stock of Buckles which fills up on many sizes we were short of. Among articles received by the "Glade" are Pig Lead, Steel and Iron Wire Rope, Fence Staples, Colza Oil, Galvanized Horse Shoes, Coal and Stockholm Tar, Sheep Shears, Shot, assorted numbers 2 to 10; Paris White Galvanized Fence Wire, Galvanized and Black Chain, Sal Soda, Lamp Black, White Castile Soap, Galvanized Plain Iron, Anvils, Bar Iron, Yellow Metal, 14 to 28 ounces; Red and White Lead, Boiled and Castor Oil in drums.

Next steamer we will have another big lot of those fine Westholm Pocket Knives, and by the "Martha Davis" now due from Boston, we will have a store full of new goods, but these you will hear about later. If you want anything in our line, come and see us, we will be pretty sure to suit you, both in quality of goods and in price.

Yours truly,

The nicest dishes set on the table to tempt the epicure are the outcome of experiments by the cook. The fifty different ways of cooking potatoes are but the result of a desire on the part of a chef to learn the extent to which the vegetable may be made palatable. Taro bears the same relations to the potato in the vegetable kingdom and is susceptible of many different ways of cooking. The way is simplified by the use of Taro Flour or Taro Maloo. Both of these preparations are of the purest quality and free from any deleterious matter usually found in articles of this character. Hot biscuits, gems, puffs, or imitation buckwheat cakes made of Taro Flour mixed with wheat flour are delicious. Ask your grocer for it.

SAFE CRACKERS

made their unwelcome presence felt last Sunday morning. Their victim was an inoffensive little safe, down on Queen street. The safe, demolished and ruined, shows that "beauty is only skin deep" even in safes. It was not a Hall's.

May this be the first and last act of a nefarious gang. But it behooves prudent business men to place their valuable property beyond reach of the safe-cracker. No successful attempt to "crack" a Hall's Burglar Proof Safe is yet on record. They have often tried, but as often failed.

The U. S. Government appreciates the class of work, our Company turns out, when it awards the contract for the S. F. Mint Vault to us, although our price is more and the time to construct longer than our competitors.

MAUI NEWS.

Downpours, Floods and Electricity. Personal Mention.

[Special to the ADVERTISER.]

During most of the past week Old Probabilities has been on the rampage, all Maui has been victim to his anything but tender mercies.

On Tuesday everything atmospheric took on a bluish-gray tone, the mountains east and west were clear of clouds, and storm indications grew stronger and stronger.

During all Wednesday, a strong kona wind blew, clouds rolled in from the South, while the booming of the surf could be heard distinctly far distant from the sea beach.

Spreckelsville, too, was nearly flooded—pools of water are standing all over the plains. The ditch was washed out in places, the boxing broken and the flume filled with dirt.

PERSONAL MENTION.

Severin, the photographic artist, is still in Wailuku, taking some beautiful landscape views.

It was Mrs. H. B. Bailey (the lady, and not the gentleman) who put the last brick on Makawao's chimney.

Mrs. W. D. Alexander and Miss Mary C. Alexander returned home by the last Claudine. The young lady, who has assisted in all the recent Makawao gaieties, will be missed by her friends in the district.

A. G. Burchardt, Esq., now a resident of England, was formerly a member of the Makawao Polo Club.

N. Ormsted, of Paia, won the cup at the monthly shoot of the Maui Rifle Association, held last Saturday, the 22d.

Sheriff Treadway did not return this week, as some of his friends expected. He is making quite a stay at the capital.

Quite a number of the Maui legislators took advantage of the present recess and visited home. Hons. Baldwin, Walbridge, Cornwell and Kaluna are among those mentioned.

HERE AND THERE.

The Wailuku Gun Club holds a special meeting at the telephone office, Kahului, on Monday night, the 31st inst.

The public sale, by Auctioneer Friel, of twenty-five Haleakala Ranch mares and colts, which took place last Saturday in Wailuku, resulted in an average of $14.50 per head.

Houses are being built in Kahului on lots of land bordering the beach, the leases of which were recently sold at public auction.

The mechanics at Spreckelsville have been busy all the week putting up innumerable new smokestacks. It is hard to remember how many are required—12 or 14 perhaps.

The affairs of the Wailuku Library Association seemingly have come to a standstill. There is a hitch about procuring suitable quarters or something of the kind.

Tuesday, the 24th inst., at the Makawao Court, the other Japanese (house-mate of the one sentenced last week to pay a $500 fine for distilling liquor) was acquitted of the same charge.

At port of Kahului yesterday the bark Leahi, Captain Nielson, arrived with a cargo of coal for the Kahului R. R. Co. She made the voyage from Departure Bay in twenty-three days. She was first sighted on Monday, the 23d inst., off Paia. When about a mile from shore, the wind died out and the swell carried her rapidly toward the breakers.

During Tuesday night, the Claudine met her and informed the captain of the removal of the cholera embargo, and turned her back for Maui again.

Messrs. W. G. Irwin, W. O. Smith and G. N. Wilcox are visiting Mr. and Mrs. von Graevenmeyer, at Hamoa.

Mr. H. Center, of Spreckelsville, is the guest of his brother, Mr. David Center, at Kauiki.

Miss Gertie Whitney returned to her home, Honolulu, this week, after a protracted visit to Mr. and Mrs. F. Auerbach.

Miss Glade left on Wednesday on the steamer for Hawaii.

The weather during the past week has been very wet, the roads muddy, and the wind has been shifting to all points of the compass.

Why Army Pepper Was So Poor. There is an old weather beaten shed that stands on the brookside near the road leading from the West Shore railroad station at Highland up to the village, in which two men during the rebellion made a snug little fortune.

The building is in the shadow of overhanging boughs and directly behind a mill that stands at the point where another road leads up a hillside and to the Bellevue villa.

"D'ye see that little buildin'?" "Yes, what of it?" "Waal, b'gosh, d'ye know two fellers made high on a fortun' in there during the war times, 'pon my word?"

"Counterfeits? Naw; better'n that. It was the darndest thing y' ever heard of, that business stroke was. I'll tell y' it. You know there's lots of slate in those hills—piles of it—and it breaks to pieces almost when y' look at it."

"Those two fellers just looked at that slate and then started to thinkin. They talked over what they thought and the next thing people hereabouts knew was that grindstones was being hauled into that buildin."

"Then load after load of slate was hauled and dumped in the buildin, and the next thing the people knew there was a rollin of them grindstones and piles of powdered slate were carried out and put in wagons and carted off."

"People wondered what was goin on, and if they asked, the two men just smiled and replied, 'Nothin,' or else explained how the powdered slate was being used all over for soft fillin for teeth."

"But the thing leaked out after awhile. Then two fellers were grindin that slate and shippin it away to be mixed in the pepper that was supplied to the army. B'gosh, they made a fortune apiece."

"Say, I wonder how many of the G. A. R. fellers now livin etc the slate from Highland's hills? Geet' up," said the driver.—New York Herald.

The Features of the Camel. Apart from differences in species, to enumerate the parts of the camel is to catalogue instances of evident design.

His long neck, giving wide range of vision in desert marches and enabling him to reach far to the meager desert shrubs on either side of his pathway.

The cartilaginous texture of his mouth, enabling him to eat hard and thorny plants—the pasture of the desert. Ears very small and nostrils large for breathing, but also specially capable of closure by valvelike folds against the fearful simoom.

Five horny pads to rest on when kneeling for burden or repose on the hot sand. His hump—not a fictional, but a real and acknowledged reserve store of nutriment, as well as nature's pack-saddle for the commerce of ages—have you ever thought of the relation between your morning cup of Mocha and the hump of a camel in Yemen?

J. CHAS. HARRISON, M. D.

The Distinguished Traveler will Lecture to Men at the Opera House on Thursday Night.

Thursday night, J. Chas. Harrison, M. D., the eminent specialist, traveler and speaker, will give the first of his popular illustrated lectures to men, in the Royal Hawaiian Opera House, and all indications point to a crowded audience.

Dr. Harrison possesses the distinction of having made a lecturing tour of the world. In the course of his travels the doctor has been the recipient of some of the highest honors ever conferred on an American.

During his recent visit abroad he was elected a member of the Royal Geographical Society of England and of the Institute Polytechnique of Paris.

He is well and favorably known to medical men and scientists on three continents, and has contributed many valuable papers to the medical press.

During his lecture the doctor will relate many interesting and amusing anecdotes of travel in many foreign lands, and render them doubly interesting by means of a stereopticon which was especially constructed for him in Paris.

It is of interest to know that Dr. Harrison is a registered physician in thirty States of the United States where the right to practice medicine is regulated by law, besides in New Zealand, New South Wales, Austria, the United Kingdom of England, Ireland and Scotland, France and Germany.

He brings with him credentials from such prominent men as General Russell A. Alger, United States Senator, Chicago, Congressman R. I. Mills, Allen, Crisp and many others. The Chicago Herald says of Dr. Harrison: "He achieved great success while traveling in Australia and England as a lecturer. His diction is chaste and elegant, and his manner dignified, though a marked vein of humor lights up his discourses."

The lecture Thursday night will be free. Those desiring reserved seats can obtain them at Mr. Levey's office without charge. The first lecture is given free that the merits of the lecture can be determined without cost.

Reservations for the second lecture will be held for holders of Invitations. 3214-td

Opening for Fruit Industries—
Bananas, Oranges and Fine-apples—Snow-capped Maunakea.

[SPECIAL TO THE P. C. ADVERTISER.]

The people are getting very weary of this irresponsible system of government, and sigh for the time to come when we can get down to a period of peaceable, practical management of the country's affairs, and an opportunity to develop new resources. Hawaii is, at present time, struggling on the eve of the development of a diversity of industry; but everything is, in a measure, handicapped by the instability of our Government. The districts of Hilo—Puna especially—feel it more, if anything, than elsewhere on the islands, for until the Government succeeds in overcoming the heavy duty imposed by the United States on canned and preserved fruits, extensive districts that could be cultivated in small fruits and other products will remain undeveloped. There is not now, nor will there ever be here, a good home market for the small fruits we ought to raise, and it is only by means of canneries that we can hope for development in that line; but this industry could not be expected to exist against a 35 per cent. wall, and this when we get down to a working government should be hastily removed.

The numerous sections that are being cut up into homestead lots, particularly on Hawaii, are in many cases better adapted to the raising of small fruits of some nature than for any other product. If the Government can succeed in providing a market for our fruit produce, the industry would in a very short time develop. Lands that are otherwise bound to lie idle would be taken up, planted and cultivated by small farmers, canneries would be started, and the industry become one among the prime factors in the future prosperity of the islands.

There are 391 lots of an average of about 50 acres each, as yet surveyed only in part, but located on the map, but lying along the Volcano Road beginning eleven miles from Hilo and running mauka a little above the twenty-four mile post, the elevation being from 1000 to 3000 feet. This stretch has only lately been opened up to settlement and the lots can be obtained on a lease of thirty years and on reasonable terms. The road is now built and there is no question that it will always be maintained in first class order. In fact, if this section develops and our tourist travel becomes of any magnitude, there can be every assurance of a railroad to the Volcano. While considerable tracts of this land will be planted in coffee, there will still be large areas of it which would be better adapted for growing fruits. Were the industry once started, such large lots could be subdivided, and the whole would support a considerable population.

Lack of steamer service is another of our drawbacks, but we are all ways getting nearer the time for a steamer to touch at Hilo, and competition on the tourist travel will eventually make this a steamer port. When such is the case the banana trade, which is so looked forward to by many of our citizens, will be opened up. With it will be other fruits which some of our citizens are at present cultivating and yearly increasing at no present profit to themselves, in fact the whole place lies in abeyance for the want of steamer service, and it will not take long after it is guaranteed to produce freight. Hilo has developed so much in the past seven or eight years, and has got such ample room for increase as soon as the times and circumstances warrant, that it is destined in the future to be the banner district of the islands in other products, as it is now the greatest sugar producing district.

On Tuesday afternoon a good deal of thunder was heard rolling around the mountain slopes, and on Wednesday morning, when the mountains cleared, the upper peaks of Mauna Kea were seen to be capped with a beautiful mantle of white snow. It is rather unusual to have a snow-storm so early in the season.

The principals (John Costa and his wife) in the Kona poisoning case, were, about eight years ago, residents of Hilo. Costa started, at Wainaku, the growing of sugar cane and built a small mill to take the crop off when matured, but becoming insolvent by mismanagement, the place was eventually taken over, and with other plantations adjoining, formed into what is now the Hilo Sugar Co. Costa was married to his present wife in Hilo, shortly before they left. They took up their residence in Kona, where he went into the dairy business subsequently drifting into several other occupations none of which proved successful. He was a hard worker, but was not able to direct his efforts successfully for his own benefit. Since the deceased sister came to live with them, there has been a good deal of strife among them all, and the two sisters became very bitter at times. It is generally supposed that to avoid this constant bickering the murder was committed. There was no preliminary examination in Kona, as they decided to waive that and stand committed for trial at the next Assizes. The case will more than likely come off in Hilo in the Spring term as it is not likely to get ready for the Waimea term in November.

A few light showers have fallen in Hamakua which are some help, but the need of a good drenching rain is still as great as ever. Mr. Watt, of Honokaa, is expected back by the Claudine, with his bride from Scotland. Pitman street has been quite refreshed lately; a number of the houses being newly painted in tasty shades of olive.

Sheriff Hitchcock and Dr. Williams returned overland on Friday from their labors in the Kona poisoning case. The doctor was over the Kona Coffee and Tea Co.'s plantation, and reports everything looking in fine order. The coffee is growing finely and there are about five acres of fresh young tea ready to harvest in the beginning of next year, and a vigorous young nursery, Mr. Miller being very active in the management of the concern, which at present has a force of about fifty men, and the prospects of the enterprise are very good.

A fire occurred on Wednesday, the 26th, about noon, in the Honokaa Sugar Mill, which resulted in the destruction of the trash carrier before it could be got under. The fire originated in some way from the furnaces. No serious damage was done and the delay will be temporary. The Postmaster General and the Wilder S. S. Co. have the thanks of this community for the delivery of the Alameda's mail by the Claudine. It would have lain nine days in Honolulu had this favor not been extended.

"I SHALL NOT BE PASSING AGAIN."

To thy dear love my heart is much beloved. Yet never more shall I be passing here. The sands of time, which they say, are golden. But running out so fast, so fast, my dear. The dew soon dries upon the morning meadows. The midday sky soon is overcast; Then cometh afternoon with lengthening shadows. And soon the gates of starlight will be passed. Sitting tonight beside the smoldering embers. The flickering firelight—like my fond desire—Blazed up a moment; now my heart remembers. 'Twill soon be time to cover up the fire. Ah! well I mind me of thy dear caressing; If love's sweet story hath not all been told. Send with the passing year a parting blessing From thy heart's treasury of pearl and gold. If thou hast yet one gift in thy possession. Send it upon the glad wings of today; Thou see'st with what fleet steps the years are going; Like them, we never more shall pass this way. The king is dead, hear't then the church bells chiming? Long live the king! With new hope to inspire. But if for me there's naught but idle rhyming— Ah! well, 'tis time to cover up the fire. —Detroit Free Press.

THE MAJOR'S DUEL.

The flagship Martingale, of the South Atlantic squadron, was moored in the beautiful harbor of Rio Janeiro. The flag of Rear Admiral Sansonpost flew from the mainmast. The war between Brazil and Paraguay was progressing slowly, but as it affected many interests of foreigners domiciled in both countries, a large number of warships were on the South American coast, and the metropolis of Brazil was gay with uniforms and the constant festivities consequent upon the presence of so many strangers. The days of dueling were past. The larger courtesy consequent upon better education, and a more careful regard for personal rights, had practically condemned it, and the naval and military regulations of all nations threatened severe penalties for its exercise. The night was calm, dark and starless, and the Martingale lay listlessly at her anchors off the plaza landing. The officer of the deck lounged over the capstan and thought of home and longed for his interesting watch to be over. The band had ceased its evening concert and had been dismissed. The charming strains of the old time "tattoo" with files and drums had died away. "Two bells" had been struck, and the boatswain and his mates had "jipped down." Lights had been reported out, and a perfect stillness succeeded the stir made by 400 men, who had retired to their hammocks. "Boat ahoy!" sang out the quartermaster. "Boat coming alongside, sir; can't make out the answer." The messenger boy with a lantern flew over the gangway and down the ladder, and soon a brisk, dapper little man came on board and presented himself to the officer of the deck with a graceful salute. "Sir," said he, "permit me to introduce myself. I am Baron Knockoff, of the Russian legation, and I have had a personal difficulty with a Brazilian gentleman on shore. I am going to shoot him in the morning. We have no Russian ship in port, and relying upon the friendship that exists between our nation and the United States, I have come on board to ask one of your officers to act as my second. Is Major Randall on board?"

The officer of the deck woke up in an instant! Here was some mischief out of the common line, and he could scent some fun in the air that would relieve the tedium of his watch with a vengeance. Grasping the baron by the hand he shook it warmly, delivered a brief address to him reciprocating his friendly sentiments, and assured him that he had come to the right place and at the right time to get accommodated. Unfortunately the gallant major of marines was on shore, but might return at any moment. Something must be done to keep the baron amused for the present, so the officer of the deck sang out: "Orderly, ask the captain if I can see him."

Captain Tompion had eaten an excellent dinner. The better part of three bottles of claret had disappeared down his throat, and he was at peace with all the world. He belonged to the fighting men of the "old navy," and any hint of a fight was music to his ears. To him appeared the officer of the deck, with the little baron in tow. "Sir," said he, "I have great pleasure in introducing you Baron Knockoff, of the Russian legation, and I have had a personal difficulty with a Brazilian on shore, and as there are no Russian officers here he has come on board to ask one of ours to act as his second. I have assured him of our sympathy and assistance, and he desires to consult with you and await the return of Major Randall, who is on shore."

Captain Tompion was on fire in an instant. Shaking the baron warmly by the hand, he sang out: "Steward, a bottle of champagne. Baron, be seated. Orderly, call the first lieutenant and tell him that I wish to see him. Going to shoot him in the morning, eh, baron? Bless my soul, this seems like old times, indeed! Stand by you, of course, we will, my boy. Have another glass of wine. Steward, cigars."

Lieutenant Lawrence, the first lieutenant, came up the hatch—tall, stern, erect as a soldier—and passed into the cabin. The popping of corks ensued, and the conference began. The officer of the deck caught a stray messmate and sent him to the wardroom with the story, and soon an interested group gathered on the quarter deck, eagerly awaiting developments. "Such punishment as a court martial may adjudge will be inflicted on any person in the navy who sends or accepts a challenge to fight a duel or acts as a second in a duel."

This is the language of the articles of war which were framed to regulate the conduct of these gallant officers who were aiding and abetting the baron. The officer of the deck was summoned to the conference. During the continued use of champagne it was determined that it was a solemn moral duty to stand by the baron, and another bottle was opened. Still the missing major came not. Time was passing. Something must be done, so Lieutenant McKillop was sent for. After being introduced to the baron and hearing the case, the captain informed the lieutenant that our honor was at stake and that he would have the high privilege of acting as the baron's second, when, just at this juncture, Major Randall came on board. With a flower in his buttonhole, his coat thrown back from his ample chest, humming a popular air from the "Grand Duchesse" and apparently at peace with all the world, the gallant fleet marine officer stepped from the outer darkness upon the quarter deck. He was probably the most peaceful warrior in the world at that time. Correct in habits, mild and gentle in demeanor, with a profound respect for regulations and a great care not to break them, he seemed to be the last person in the world to assist in a duel. Upon him pounced the officer of the deck.

"Major," said he, "prepare your mind for something very serious. You will require all your fortitude for a painful and trying duty; one that you must perform for the honor and credit of the flag and of the uniform you wear," and before the astonished soldier could utter a word the deck officer rushed him into the cabin. "Oh, major, you are just in time. You have just come very near to losing a chance to distinguish yourself in a serious matter. Have a glass of wine." So spoke Captain Tompion, while the baron shook him effusively by the hand. The matter in question was explained to the major, while the captain and the first lieutenant impressed upon him his duty in the case. Lieutenant McKillop, who was now out of the fight, took great pleasure in helping the major with friendly advice, while the steward opened another bottle of champagne. What passed through the pacific mind of the soldier no one knew at that time. If he mentally beheld a vision of a gory field of battle, with one or possibly both combatants stretched upon the grass wounded or dead, if he thought of his own arrest and trial before a court martial, he gave no sign of his feelings. On the contrary, like one waking from a sleep, he suddenly exclaimed, "Baron, I will act for you in this case with much pleasure. I am quite at your service," and after each had shaken him solemnly by the hand, they all took a drink. It was getting late. The major, saying nothing to any one, carefully arrayed himself in his best uniform coat, and accompanied the baron on shore.

The next morning an intense but quiet excitement prevailed throughout the ship. In low voices the officers discussed the matter in all its bearings. Had the duel come off and the major secreted himself until he could evade the authorities on shore and escape to the ship? Had the combatants gone a long distance into the country and not yet returned? Such queries were discussed pro and con, and still no major came. Breakfast passed. Quarters, and no major. Lunch, and he was still absent. Every boat was scanned for a sight of his stalwart form and general face. At last it was resolved to send a detachment on shore to look him up, when, just as they were about to start, a boat came alongside, and the major stepped on deck. His countenance was solemn, almost stolid in its expression. His coat was buttoned up and was unbrushed. His usually resplendent shoes were unpolished, but drawing his form to its full height he saluted the officer of the deck in a military manner and deliberately said, "Sir, I have returned aboard."

Making a half face to the left he proceeded to the hatch and carefully went below. His expectant messmates were in the wardroom in force to hear the news. Whether he was the bearer of tragic words or whether of cheerful ones was the question. The hero seated himself at the table, and all gathered around. After a moment of silence the major spoke as follows: "If any of you fellows want to fight a duel, call on me to act for you. I can do it right every time."

"How was it, major?" "How did it come out?" "What did you do?" Such questions came in fast. The major pulled himself together, called for a glass of water and said, "Sit down, gentlemen, and I will tell you all about it."

"Messmates," he began, "judging from my dilapidated appearance and my somewhat interrupted speech, you may imagine that I am the victim of grief, or of a hurried flight from a tragic scene. I beg to assure you that it is not so. There is nothing the matter with me but conviviality, and that of the strangest kind. I hereby renew my offer to act as second in any further duels that may come our way," and the major leaned back in his chair and patted his swelling breast approvingly. "I need not tell you, gentlemen, that when I started ashore last night with the baron I could not see my way out of what promised to be a very serious scrape. After reaching the baron's room, over a bottle of champagne, he gave me his case. It seems that at a ball the previous evening the Brazilian gentleman spoken of by the baron had given him offense by something that he had said, and the baron was determined to demand satisfaction. He was ready to fight at daylight with either sword or pistol. I at once demanded that my principal should put himself unreservedly into my hands, and be governed by any arrangements that I should make. Fortunately I knew the Brazilian well, and as the baron insisted on haste in the matter, I proceeded at once on my mission, although it was after midnight. "I assumed a serious expression of countenance, and summoned the Brazilian to a conference with his bed. He received me very courteously, but expressed some surprise at so late a call. "I said, 'My dear sir, you have given great offense to my friend, Baron Knockoff, and he has desired me to demand satisfaction of you.' "The gentleman was greatly surprised, and said that he knew the baron very well, and regarded him as one of his friends, and was utterly unconscious of giving him offense at the time mentioned, and that the baron was mistaken. He said that he had no desire to fight without cause, and that in this case he saw no cause. "I thought this was a good time to get in a bluff. I can only say that it did not work. I said with a frown, 'Am I to understand that you refuse to meet my friend?' "The result was not just what I anticipated. The Brazilian gentleman jumped up and said: "You can tell Baron Knockoff that I shall shoot the top of his head off if he gives me just cause, and that I won't stand any nonsense about it either."

"Boys, I came near falling off my chair, and it took about half an hour to pacify the fellow. At last he cooled off and opened a small bottle. "After some talk he said he did not know where to look for a second at that time of the night, and at last he asked my advice in the matter. "You are a military man," said he, "and are accustomed to these affairs. What do you advise?" "I answered that I thought that if he would write a note to the baron disclaiming any intention of giving offense I could arrange the matter. He said: "That would look like an apology. I won't apologize to any man that hauls me out of bed like this. I would rather fight him!" "I hastened to assure him that he had mistaken my meaning. "Well," said he, "you write out such a note as you think I ought to send and we will see how it looks."

"So I wrote out a pacific note, expressing regret that the baron had taken offense, and stating that note was intended. "The Brazilian read the note and said he did not like it. At last he said, 'Major, you are a military man; if you were in my place would you sign that note?' "Boys, I meant all I said when I answered, 'I certainly would.' "So he signed the note, and after mutual expressions of good will, I returned to the baron. "I found him with a bottle of wine before him smoking a cigar. He jumped up when I entered and said: "Well, major, which is it, swords or pistols?" "Baron," said I deliberately, "I am the bearer of a communication to you from your antagonist to which I beg your earnest attention."

"I handed him the note, which he read with a frown on his face. He threw it down on the table, and said: 'The fellow is trying to get out of this thing. I won't accept his note.' "I at once arose and buttoned up my coat. 'Baron,' said I with all the dignity I could assume, 'I will remind you that you put yourself unreservedly in my hands. In view of your remark in reference to this note I must at once withdraw from this affair.' "My dear fellow," said the baron, "don't be offended; let us talk this matter over." He read the note again, and after some conversation he asked, 'Major, you are a military man; if you were in my place would you accept this note?' "I can again assure you, brethren, that I spoke with much feeling when I answered, 'I certainly would.' "Then I will accept it," said the baron. "We will go and get the gentleman up and shake hands over a bottle of wine." "We did so, and have been shaking hands in the same condition ever since. "So, gentlemen, bring all your duels to me. I will be your second," said the major. It was at once voted that for bravery and diplomacy the major took the prize. —Commodore Rockwell, U. S. N., in Harper's Weekly.
