WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 22, 1893.

The Examiner of the 10th states that a consignment of young palm trees from Honolulu has been condemned by the State Board of Horticulture because it was infected with the Cottony Cushion scale. The pest originally came to this country from California and its return thither is only an application of the familiar Old Testament principle, "An eye for an eye, and a tooth for a tooth." The Cottony Cushion scale is still occasionally seen, and there is a venomous black blight which has attacked the tamarind trees. These are ills which annexation cannot cure, and they need prompt attention. It would be well if the Commissioners of Agriculture were to publish some information concerning the proper treatment of the blight which is now afflicting the tamarind trees.

A FRANCHISE FOR SALE.

In this morning's issue appears an advertisement of the sale of the Electric Light and Power franchise, which is to take place according to the terms of an Act passed by the last Legislature. The sale is to take place on Wednesday, the 3d day of May, at Aliolani Hale. The franchise is to run ten years and is exclusive, with some unimportant exceptions. The upset price is 2 1/2 per cent. of the gross receipts for all light or power furnished to consumers. For further particulars the Act may be read.

The conditions attached to this franchise are a novelty in Hawaiian legislation, but it is probable that they will work well.

A WORTHY INSTITUTION.

There is no public enterprise more deserving, and we may add, more in need of generous patronage and support than the Honolulu Library and Reading Room. It is an association as purely philanthropic in its aims as the Y. M. C. A. or the Church. It seeks to supply a want which the interest of civilization requires to be supplied. There is no better way of coping with the forces of evil in the world than to dispel ignorance, and an ancient philosopher touched on a deep truth when he laid all wrong-doing to lack of knowledge. The diffusion of knowledge is not only the condition of civilization and culture; it is a main instrument in the promotion of morality as well.

To encourage a taste for reading of a wholesome kind, and to provide an attractive place to spend an hour, as a rival to base resorts is part of the purpose of the Library and Reading Room. Another part of its purpose is to create a public library which shall be a credit to the town, and to enable students and scholars to obtain books and information not otherwise accessible. Without adequate support, however, it can attain the first end only imperfectly, and the second not at all.

The library, though small, already contains many good books, and when one remembers that a considerable part of it is the fruit of private donations of books which were given away that the owners might be rid of them, it is a wonder that it is as good as it is. It already contains books which one would seek in vain elsewhere, and supplements most usefully many a choice private collection. Yet it is still woefully deficient. Suppose for instance one is studying so trite a theme as Roman History. He will not find a single standard work on that subject in the library—and deficiencies like this, glaring as it is, are common enough in many other departments. It is hardly an exaggeration to say that a thousand dollars is needed to put the Library on a tolerably efficient basis as regards history alone, not to speak of other departments with as pressing a claim to attention.

It is only proper to say that the Book Committee is a very competent body, and the purchases which it is able to make with the very limited funds at its disposal show great discretion.

Will not some generous citizen come forward and help the Library? Money charitably given is often wasted, but every dollar spent in this direction will bring forth sixty or a hundred fold.

CORRESPONDENCE.

"An Revoir."
MR. EDITOR: "Veritas Prevalent," in the Bulletin, having failed to answer my last letter in a respectful manner, resorting instead to abusive language unbecoming a gentleman, thereby adding proof to the character I suspected belonged to him, and showing the weakness of his arguments, will receive no further reply from me.

In the Circuit Court.

Judge Whiting filed his first written opinion yesterday in the Circuit Court, in the case of the Queen vs. Ah Foo and Ng Chin, being an appeal from a conviction had in the Police Court, October 25th, for unlawful possession of opium. The counsel for the defendants, Judge Hartwell and A. P. Peterson, moved for a discharge on the ground that the so-called opium license law, passed by the Legislature of 1892, repeals the Statute of '90, under which the defendants were prosecuted, but contains no provision exempting from the operation of the repeal prosecutions then pending. The result is that there is no law at this time under which these defendants can be convicted.

Judge Whiting takes the same view, following Chief-Justice Shaw in Com. vs. Marshall, 11 Pick 350, who says there can be no judgment "unless the law is in force at the time of the indictment and judgment. If the law ceases to operate by its own limitation, or by a repeal before judgment, no judgment can be given." A number of other authorities are cited.

The motion of the defendants was accordingly granted and they were discharged.

Madagascar and the "Golden Chersonesus."

Two lectures will be given by Mrs. Leavitt before her near departure, which cannot but benefit all who will give themselves the pleasure of attending. The first, on Thursday evening next, will relate to Madagascar, that land almost unvisited and unknown. She made a rare social departure in travelling thither, and as all who know or have heard her can testify, she will not only contribute to her listeners a fund of information concerning the life, customs, etc., of this country, but will give them an unusual treat in listening to a gifted lecturer.

"Golden Chersonesus," the title of her second lecture, also the name of one of Miss Bird's late books, treats of her varied experiences in the Malay peninsula. An admission fee of 50 cents will be charged on the first lecture for the benefit of the W. C. T. U. There will also be an admission fee at the second lecture which the lady's friends are desirous of tendering her as a slight token of their appreciation of the many free lectures and talks she has so kindly given them. The ladies hope for a large attendance both evenings.

"The Throne by Telephone."
A queen was she of low degree,
But over-fond of power,
Who had her way with regal sway
Until the fatal hour
When S. E. Dole, a Yankee droll,
Of royalty grown tired,
Assumed the throne by telephone,
And told her she was fired.
No flow of gore upon the floor
This great revolt created:
Thus told to "git," the queen she quit,
Although to go she hated.
And then with grace, Dole took her place,
Of Hawaii the Rexlet.
But he'll step out without a flout
If only we'll annex it.
—Syracuse Herald.

MR. ENGLISH SURPRISED.

The Choir of St. Andrew's Cathedral Present Him With a Hood.

There were nearly twenty members present at Mr. F. M. English's singing class last evening at the St. Andrew's Sunday School room. After rehearsing music for about an hour the exercises ended, and Mr. English prepared to go home. Mr. Ed. Stiles approached him and in behalf of the class presented him with a B. A. hood of the University of Oxford. Mr. Stiles, in making the presentation, said that the Cathedral choir had been improved and brought to a high standard of proficiency through the indefatigable exertions of their organist and master, Mr. English, and the presentation of the hood was but a slight token of their appreciation of his services. Mr. English, although taken greatly by surprise, replied in befitting terms, saying that he had done nothing more than his duty, and that if circumstances compelled him to leave the sunny shores of Hawaii nei, he would always carry with him pleasant recollections of his association with the choir of St. Andrew's Cathedral.

A Cabinet Story

Fred Somers is strong for Hawaiian annexation, illustrating the uncertain character of the native government by the following story: On the islands Somers met Ned Macfarlane, with whom he worked fifteen years ago on the San Francisco papers. Macfarlane is now a prosperous planter on the islands. They met one day in Honolulu, when Macfarlane was evidently in a hurry. "What's the rush, Mac?" Somers asked.

"The Queen has just appointed me a member of the Cabinet and I'm in a hurry to get my court uniform made before the Ministry is changed," answered Macfarlane.

While they were talking a native messenger came running and spoke breathlessly to the new Minister in Hawaiian. Macfarlane listened, and a look of disgust passed over his jovial face. Turning to Somers he said: "Well, let's go and have a bottle of wine, Fred."

"But about your uniform?" "Oh, it's too late. The Ministry has been changed!"—New York Letter in S. F. Chronicle.

FRANCHISE FOR SALE

The Right to Furnish Electric Light and Power to Be Sold.

In the "By Authority" column in this issue a notice appears regarding the sale of the electric light and power franchise for the city of Honolulu. The law was passed by the defunct Legislature, and the party or parties who purchase the franchise will have the exclusive right to furnish and supply electric light and power within the district of Honolulu for the term of ten years from the third of May, the day on which the sale takes place.

The upset price has been placed at 2 1/2 per cent. of the gross receipts and "all bids for such franchise shall be for the percentage of such gross receipts, which the bidder is willing to pay to the Government over and above such percentage."

A number of privileges are exempt from the franchise, among which are that any person or corporation can erect electric apparatus to furnish light and power for his or its own use; the Tramways Company under their franchise have the right to furnish power to propel their cars. Their right is not disturbed. The Government retains the present plant, and will furnish the street lights the same as at present.

MOONLIGHT EXCURSION.

The Pacific Wheelmen Will Give An Outing At Remond Grove.

Some time ago the Oahu Railway and Land Company made the hearts of the Pacific Wheelmen glad by granting them enough land at Pearl City for a track. The boys have long felt the want of a suitable place to practice and grounds to hold their annual races on. They now have the land, but as it will cost quite a little sum to fence the same in and otherwise prepare it for occupation, the wheelmen have decided to ask the general public to assist them in doing so.

On Saturday evening, March 4, a moonlight excursion and dance will be given at Remond Grove under the auspices of the club. The round trip has been placed at $1 and tickets can be obtained of members or at the principal business houses. The wheelmen are a lot of gentlemanly young fellows and it is unnecessary to add that everything will be conducted in proper style. The dance music will be furnished by the Hawaiian Quintette Club.

DISTRICT COURT.

Some Cases Disposed of by Judge Foster.

Some days ago a native named Kailipaka was arrested for stealing two watches from a Chinese storekeeper on King street. He had a hearing yesterday, and was held for trial before the Circuit Court. His bail was named at $250.

Ah Lam was given sixty days for walking off with a pair of boots, the property of a Japanese.

W. E. Kerr was brought before the Court for annoying and threatening to kill a Mrs. Johnson. He was ordered to file a bond of $50 as security that it will not happen again.

Several Mongolians who had not realized that their new year holidays were over, were reprimanded and discharged for exploding fire-crackers.

Company D Election.

Company B, N. G. H., met for drill at the new Armory for the first time last evening, about 75 members being present. After the regular drill, a number of Company B men and new volunteers met for the purpose of forming Company D for battery work.

Upon roll-call, it was found that 65 names were on the muster-roll, and as that was sufficient to comply with the law, the election of officers was at once taken up.

For the captaincy there was but one nominee, Charles T. Wilder, and the secretary was ordered to cast a unanimous vote in his favor.

For the first lieutenant, J. W. Jones and George C. Potter were contestants, J. W. Jones being elected second lieutenant.

The regular drill night was not decided upon, but will be announced later.

In accordance with an order received from the President of the United States, the American flag which flies over the office of U. S. Consul Severance will be placed at half-mast for ten days as a tribute to the memory of the distinguished statesman, James G. Blaine.

All the invitations for the reception tendered Captain Witte have not been delivered as yet. Anybody who is desirous of going, and who does not receive an invitation, can obtain one by applying to any member of the Committee on Invitation. Their notice appears elsewhere in this issue.

WHARF AND WAVE.

DIAMOND HEAD, Feb. 21.—9 P.M.: Weather, clear; wind, fresh N. E.

The bark S. G. Wilder, Captain Griffiths, will leave for San Francisco the last part of the present week. She has excellent passenger accommodations, and as a traveler she ranks first-class.

The American bark Hesper, Captain F. O. Sodergren (formerly of the bark Lady Lampton), arrived yesterday morning, sixty-two days from Newcastle, N. S. W., via Pepee-teo, Tahiti, seventeen days. She brought 1182 tons of coal for W. G. Irwin & Co. Left Newcastle, N. S. W., December 22d; experienced squally weather with variable winds from N. E. and S. S. E., with much rain the first part of the passage; took the S. E. trades in lat. 30 deg. S. Arrived at Pepee-teo, Tahiti, on January 27, and remained in port eight days. She sailed from that place on February 4th, and crossed the equator in long. 151 W.; took the N. E. trades in lat. 5 deg. 30 min. N.; thence to port had steady breeze. Mrs. Sodergren accompanies her husband. The Hesper was docked at the P. M. S. S. Co.'s wharf yesterday.

The steamer Kinai will arrive this morning from windward ports.

Captain Sodergren, of the bark Hesper, did not see anything of the missing boat of the wrecked bark Lady Lampton.

A whaling bark was reported off port last night. She is probably the Sea Breeze, which was sighted by the W. G. Hall last week off the Kona coast, Hawaii.

The tern Queen sailed yesterday for San Francisco.

The American bark Matilda, Captain Swenson, brought yesterday to the firm of Allen & Robinson 676,621 feet lumber, 15 M laths and 190 M shingles. She came down from Port Townsend in twenty-six days, and reported having had rough weather to Cape Flattery. The deck of the vessel was covered with snow, six inches thick, for two days, and the men shovelled it off as soon as it fell; thence had fresh N. W. gales to San Francisco, after which variable winds set in; got the trades about 320 miles from this port. The Matilda will dock at Robinson's wharf to-day.

The schooner Aloha will sail next Friday with 1600 tons of sugar for San Francisco.

The steamer Hawaii will leave to-morrow for Hamakua.

The American barkentine Tropic Bird arrived at Pepee-teo, Tahiti, on February 3d, from San Francisco, via Honolulu. She was to leave again for San Francisco with freight and passengers on or about the 15th inst. The four sailors from the bark Hesper, who were left at Tahiti by Captain Sodergren in charge of United States Consul Doty, were to be sent to San Francisco on her in charge of a Deputy Marshal and four gentlemen.

The American bark Ceylon sails to-day at noon with 924 tons of sugar for San Francisco.

MURDER AT SEA.

MUTINOUS SAILORS KILL THEIR SECOND MATE.

The Bark Hesper Arrives Yesterday with the Story of a Bloody Crime.

The American bark Hesper, Capt. J. F. O. Sodergren, left Newcastle, New South Wales, on December 22d, with a cargo of coal. She arrived yesterday morning with the particulars of another marine horror, only this time it is not a story of wreckage, but one of murder, mutiny and piracy.

The captain brings information of a plot to kill him and four others, and their lives were only saved by the accidental discovery of the first murderous move on the part of a piratical and mutinous crew.

The plot was hatched by Thomas Le Clair, a sailor who shipped as a native of Norway, but it was afterwards learned that he was born in New York. Le Clair's partners in crime were four other sailors named Herman Sparf, Hans Hansen, Thos. Green and Edward Larsen.

THE SECOND MATE MURDERED.

The men were shipped at Newcastle, and, judging from their actions, they are very dangerous men. Their plot was to murder the captain, mate, second mate, cook and a Greek sailor in the forecastle, and then run the vessel either to the China or Chilean coast, sell the cargo and fit the bark out for a piratical cruise.

The men were all on one watch and they had ample opportunity to formulate their dastardly programme without the knowledge of the captain or the officers under him. They started in on the 13th of January to carry out their bloody work. They picked out a dark night, and about 10:30 o'clock Le Clair cruelly murdered the second mate by attacking him with a hatchet. The murderer lay in wait about amidships, and when his victim came along he struck him a blow on the back of the head with the sharp edge of the hatchet and almost instantly killed him.

THE BODY THROWN OVERBOARD.

After the mate fell down the fiendish mutineer struck and struck again with the weapon until his victim ceased to struggle. As soon as the murder was committed two of his accomplices, Sparf and Hansen, came along. They wanted to throw the body overboard and then remove all traces of the terrible crime by washing up the blood stains. St. Clair would not consent to this, and immediately proposed that they go after the captain and the other marked men and murder them also. His companions weakened and would not give their consent and Le Clair left them and went aft. The two men then picked up the body of the murdered man, carried it to the side of the vessel and then threw it overboard.

TO KILL THE CAPTAIN.

The murderer was not satisfied with his night's work and when he reached the wheel, he told the man on watch to call the captain from the cabin with the intention of killing him as soon as he made his appearance, but the wheel would not obey Le Clair's command. The rest of the terrible story is told by Capt. Sodergren in his appended report of the affair which he furnished to an ADVERTISER reporter.

The next day the captain placed Le Clair, Sparf and Hansen in irons and then changed his course and made for Tahiti, which was reached after a voyage of fourteen days.

While the vessel was on her way to the French settlement to turn over the men to the American Consul, the other two mutineers Green and Larsen attempted several times to release the imprisoned men but without success.

MADE A FULL CONFESSION.

When the Hesper reached Tahiti, the five men were taken before United States Consul Doty at that place. He held an examination during which Sparf and Hansen made a clean breast of everything, and finally Le Clair, the murderer and ringleader, made a full confession of his crime. The five men were placed in jail, and on the 15th inst. they were sent to San Francisco for trial on the barkentine Tropic Bird. Captain Sodergren then shipped five Tahitians and continued on his voyage to this port.

The Hesper will load sugar for San Francisco as soon as her coal cargo is discharged. Le Clair and his companions will not be tried until the Captain arrives in San Francisco.

THE CAPTAIN'S REPORT.

At sea, January 13, 1893, in latitude 30 deg. south, longitude 150 deg. west.

At 9:45 P. M. I, J. F. O. Sodergren, master of the American bark Hesper, came on deck as usual before retiring, remained there about three or four minutes only, as the weather was very fine and the south-east trade winds about to set in, ship going about seven knots per hour at the time by the wind, starboard tack. The second mate, Mr. M. Fitzgerald, was standing on the poop, aft, on the weather side, Thomas St. Clair being at the helm at that time. The second mate went over to the other side of the ship just as I was intending to speak to him, but the wind being steady with fine weather I had no particular orders to give him and went below, little thinking it was the last time I should see him.

About half an hour later, just as I had retired, I heard someone go forward from aft very quickly, believing it to be the second mate, and immediately after, say about two minutes, it sounded to me as if a staysail was hauled down and the men were singing out as they pulled on the rope, but it was very short, only once or twice could I distinguish the sound of a voice; the dog also barked, but stopped short at the same time, and all was quiet.

I was on the point of getting up to go on deck to see if anything had carried away, but concluded the second mate would soon see it right, and so went to sleep.

At about 12:10 A. M. on the 14th of January, 1893, Mr. Lucas, my first officer, came and called me, saying: "Captain, I cannot find the second mate anywhere." I jumped up and dressed myself and went on deck, not thinking much of it, and called Mr. Lucas from forward, as I could see him with a lamp in his hand searching for the second mate. I then asked him, "Can you not find him or does the watch know where he is?" I then asked the man at the helm if the second mate had not been aft lately. The answer was, not since half-past ten. I then went on deck, but did not haul down a staysail at the time the second mate went forward. He said, no, I could not hear nor see anything as the night was very dark. I went forward again to the mate and requested him to call the carpenter; also, if he had looked in the carpenter's shop for the second mate. "Not yet" was the reply. I, with the mate, went into the shop and called the carpenter, saying: "Do you know anything of the second mate?" He replied "No." We waited there until he was dressed, and the three of us then went to continue the search for the second mate.

We had one light with us, but it was not sufficient to give us a good light, as the night was very dark. The carpenter then brought us an anchor light, and with those two we saw better. On coming into midship I discovered blood on the deck-load, likewise Mr. Lucas and the carpenter. I strictly cautioned them to be quiet, as it was very thick and fresh, and a great quantity of it. Tracing it out to the starboard side, found blood on the fore-braces in two places. I took the mate and the carpenter and went quietly if he had a pistol on him; he replied no. Then let us get away from here and arm ourselves, for there was no foul play (at the same moment the starboard watch was not near enough to hear what I said to the mate), we both went aft and each loaded a pistol and put it in our pockets and went back to the place on deck where the blood was, and called the port watch's attention to what had been such a plain and horrible murder. "Men," said I, "do you all see this blood?" They all said "Yes." I said "They have been foul play here." The names of the three seamen in the port watch, present at this moment, were Thomas Green, Jens Olsen and Pandy Zaccaria.

The mate and I had already gone to bed by this time. I then told the mate—let us go into the forecastle and call them out (at the same time thinking to myself I may be able to discover some of the names of the men's clothes as they were getting out of their bunks, but I could see no traces of it as their clothes must have been evidently changed, and appeared clean). Hans Hansen rushed up to me, and looked very treacherously, saying, "Well, what is it? here we are." I told him in a very gentle unsuspecting manner, I want to see you men aft. He then retreated and answered more agreeably, alright and put his clothes on. I little dreamed of what danger we were exposing ourselves to at this very moment, as they had the hatchet under one of their bunks. But Hans Hansen's looks convinced me it was not a safe place for me and my first officer to be in any longer. I said to Mr. Lucas, let us go, and you men come aft as soon as you are ready; they replied, alright. I went aft into the cabin with the mate and carpenter, and in a few seconds the starboard watch entered the cabin. Thos. Le Clair, Herman Sparf, Thos. Green and Edw. Larsen composed this watch.

I asked them each if they could account for that blood on deck, they answered, no (each of them above, 12:55 A. M., January 14th), as Thos. Le Clair and Hans Hansen said, they had been asleep on the deck load by the little boat, between the hours of 10 and 12 o'clock, on the 13th of January and only went into the forecastle twice to light their pipes. The furthest distance from the little boat to the place where the blood was measured a distance of fourteen feet; still those two men said they heard nothing during those two hours in which the second mate had been murdered, and thrown overboard.

Herman Sparf was on the lookout during those two hours and said, he saw the second mate come forward about 11 P. M. and go up the fore-ripping but did not see him come down again; and at 12 o'clock he came on the deck load and asked if it was not one bell yet to pump the ship. Thos. Le Clair and Hans Hansen said, we don't know where the second mate is, and heard one bell. He, however, thought perhaps he (second mate) must be asleep some place, and went and called the mate to let him be caught at it, and that is all I know about it. Edw. Larsen was at the helm from 10 to 12 P. M., January 13th. He states the second mate went forward at 10:30 P. M. and did not return, he heard nor saw nothing. I dismissed those seamen as above named and told them, I hoped they had told me the truth and ordered them to return to bed as it was their watch below, which they did to the best of my knowledge.

EXAMINATION OF PORT WATCH.

Thos. Green in port watch, and below during the hours of the second mate's ill-fate, gives a clear evidence. I was woken up about 11 P. M., Jan. 13, said he, by the starboard watch and asked to give them a hand to dump the old man overboard, (meaning the Captain), and if those three men are not put in irons, Captain, our lives are not said any more, and when you have done that I can tell you a little more. Jens Olsen, Pandy Zaccaria and Henry Westering, also of the port watch, said nothing in particular at this time and I returned them to their duty on deck with assurance that by morning I would see that every one's life was safe on board by securing those three men, in whom I saw much danger, and with the mate, carpenter and myself, well armed, we waited on deck until four o'clock in the morning for the port watch to be relieved from duty. When the starboard watch came on deck I waited until twenty minutes past four and all was quiet with the port watch to sleep. At the above mentioned time I called to Mr. John Lucas, my first officer, to bring Herman Sparf aft, want to see him in presence of my first officer and carpenter, in my cabin. I told the above named seaman I must put him in irons to protect myself, as the fresh, thick blood on deck was evidence of foul play having been done, taking care not to mention what Thos. Green had already told me. Herman Sparf made no resistance, as he saw it was useless; and likewise I did the same with the other two, Thos. Le Clair and Hans Hansen, and gave them temporary quarters until more evidence could be had.

MIRTH, MUSIC AND MINSTRELSY.

MR. STOECKLE AND HIS WONDERFUL PHONOGRAPH AGAIN IN TOWN.

"Talking Machine"—Italian Opera for Ten Cents.

The residents of Honolulu have had opportunity in the past, by the enterprise of Mr. C. Stoeckle to become very familiar with the practical working of the wonderful Phonograph, and almost every man, woman and child in the city, has heard of the peculiar powers of the "Talking Machine." The public concert given by Mr. Stoeckle in the Y. M. C. A. Hall here, about one year ago, and at which the Phonograph instrument, furnished the speeches, vocal and instrumental music, etc., etc., to a large and delighted audience, is remembered to this day, and with both interest and pleasure. After a series of tours over and around the islands of Hawaii, Maui and Kauai, where the wizard instrument has delighted and mystified the residents of those districts, Mr. Stoeckle again returns to Honolulu strictly equipped with a new and improved instrument, intending to remain for a short time. The repertoire of the "Talking Machine" has been greatly added to by the importation of a large number of new records for production by the instrument. The new additions consist of (1) choice selections from celebrated Italian and other operas, several having been vocalized by the famous prima donnas Adelina Patti, Clara Louise Kellogg and Anne Louise Carey; (2) new miscellaneous vocal selections of well known Eastern vocalists, both comic and sentimental; (3) new duets, including an artistic rendering of the famous "Larboard Watch;" (4) new instrumental selections both band, orchestral and solos from the performances of Gilmore's and other noted bands, celebrated orchestras and artist soloists; (5) fresh, funny dialogues and recitations; all in all making an olio of mirth, music and minstrelsy which should please any fancy. There are also national and local airs in German, French, Spanish, Italian, Portuguese, Japanese, Chinese and Hawaiian which have been specially recorded by Mr. Stoeckle and are well reproduced by the Phonograph. The general public are thus now again privileged to enjoy themselves from 9 A. M. to 9 P. M. in the company of the PHONOGRAPH to the extent of their own wishes, by calling at the exhibition rooms, THOMAS' BLOCK, KING STREET, BETWEEN NUUANU AND BETHLEH STREETS, (store formerly occupied by Thos. Lindsay, the watchmaker) where Mr. STOECKLE and his phenomenal TALKING MACHINE are, at present, located.

Miss Mary H. Krous. Another Lady Correspondent to Arrive on the Australia.

The ADVERTISER announced yesterday that Miss Mary H. Krous, a niece of Rear-Admiral Brown, U. S. N., would arrive on the Australia this morning to represent the Chicago Inter-Ocean.

Blackburn, Kentucky: I have an unchangeable opinion on only one thing: That is that no power between heaven and hell can extort an interview from me on any question.

Proctor, Vermont: I don't think we should let anybody else have them. We should control them in some way: like Alaska, possibly, but I have not yet decided upon the best means.

Brice, Ohio: I am waiting to see what showing will be made by the representatives of the Provisional Government. I am disposed to be against annexation, a protectorate or anything of the kind.

Teller, Colorado: I am heartily in favor of annexation. I am an annexationist to the extent of wishing to take in Canada, Cuba, Hawaii and any Pacific islands lying convenient to our coast.

Gordon, Georgia: I should favor annexation rather than see any foreign power take possession of the islands. I do not think, however, there is any immediate necessity for annexation.

Ransom, North Carolina: I am not in favor of it; but while we should not annex them, we cannot allow any other Government to take control of them.

Vance, North Carolina: I hardly know. It looks like a sort of Yankee job down there. I do not think there is much sentiment for annexation, but we need some kind of protectorate so we can have coaling stations and other privileges necessary to our commerce.

Stewart, Nevada: I am for it. It is not a charitable question. For us not to take those islands would be a crime.

Gallinger, New Hampshire: I am in favor of annexation. The opportunity is favorable, and new territory should be welcomed by this Government.

Hiscock, New York: I am in favor of taking Hawaii under our flag. I see no reason why Hawaii should not be allowed to come into our fold.

Dubois, Idaho: You may quote me as in favor of the annexation of Hawaii, or at least of securing jurisdiction over the country.

Gibson of Maryland: At first blush I should say we ought to annex Hawaii, but I believe such an important step as this, which may have an important bearing on the policy of this country in the future, should receive the most careful consideration.

Vilas of Wisconsin: I believe the annexation of Hawaii would be of great advantage to this country, but I think it premature to express any decided opinion until we are fully informed as to the situation by the President and Secretary of State.

Felton of California: We all believe in annexation out in California. I think our government should take advantage of this most favorable opportunity.

Of those who express decided opinions it will be seen a large majority favor annexation. Nineteen Republicans and four Democrats venture unqualified declarations on that side, while only one Republican and five Democrats come squarely out in opposition.

Invitations are out for the reception to be given to Captain G. C. Wiltse by the citizens of this city. The affair will take place at the Opera House on Friday evening, and it promises to be the most successful of the kind in the history of Honolulu.

THE BARK PROGRESS.

This is the bark Progress. It is the bark that will bring the cable to Hawaii, and Progress is what we all want. There cannot be any progress unless you buy your hosiery from Fishel.

A girl will wear hose with a hole in the heel, but ducks like rainy weather, and FISHEL'S bargains are the talk of the town.

What's the matter with the anchor? FISHEL has an anchor in low prices and steady sales. He don't sell anchors, but peanuts should be roasted before eaten.

Why does an anchor resemble an old tomato can? Because it don't. Buy toys of FISHEL. Goats like tomato cans, and hard times melt away when bargains are offered. FISHEL has 'em—not tomato cans, but bargains.

Now we have a cunning little fellow who is waiting for a holiday. He has a bald headed doll, and papa is going to see FISHEL about some new toys. FISHEL is the man for these times. He doesn't want the earth by any means, but will sell everything in his store for Kalakaua Dollars. Horner's money won't go.

THE CHARM OF YOUTH

IT DOES NOT ALWAYS EXCEL THE GRACES OF MATURITY.

A New Type of Femininity Has Arisen, and the Combination of Angel and Idiot Formerly Idealized in Poetry and Fiction No Longer Exists.

[Copyright, 1883, by American Press Association.]

THE old time superstitions in regard to woman are year by year growing fewer in number, and it is safe to predict that in the not distant future her social and intellectual rights will be everywhere as freely acknowledged as are her brothers'.

In all ages and countries where women have been regarded as intellectually inferior to men and relegated to the animal plane their charm has been considered as a thing exclusively of youth. In eastern lands girls are mothers at twelve, fourteen and sixteen years of age, grandmothers often at thirty or younger and old and passe at thirty-five.

That a woman could possess any personal attractiveness after she had passed her teens would be beyond the comprehension of the oriental mind, and until the last quarter of a century the western world has been hardly less material in its estimate of feminine character. The heroine of the original novel was the fourteen-year-old "Sweet sixteen" and "blooming eighteen" were the favorite ages less than half a century ago, and it was not until the multiplication of colleges for women kept her from society until past twenty that the world of fiction—usually a fair reflection of a world of realities—discovered the possibilities of sweetness in the early twenties.

The increase in the longevity of girlhood is the result of woman's broader life and a wider recognition of her capabilities and possibilities. Among the better classes the girl's need of education and right to it are as readily conceded to her as the boy's privileges to him. The old time fallacy that girls mature more rapidly than boys no longer serves as reason for thrusting upon the undeveloped maiden of sixteen cares for which she is no more ready than is the average boy of that age. Up to twenty-one and later the young woman of the period is busy with her books and educational interests, and instead of being a mother at eighteen, as her grandmother was before her, she is now what she should be at that age—a happy, unfettered girl.

Nor is the tag, "old maid," affixed to the unmarried woman at as early an age as formerly, when twenty-five was designated the "second corner" and thirty marked the age of forlorn spinsterhood. A study of marriage statistics in fashionable society will show that more girls marry after twenty-five than younger, and further study of modern society will reveal the fact that its belles are quite as often women in the 'thirties as in the twenties.

The girl of eighteen has the charm of youth, and the world will always pay tribute to her innocence and freshness, but she no longer excels, as in the earlier century, as the divine creature who can compel all knees to bow before her. Indeed the debauchees of modern society often complain that the adoration which should be theirs is borne off by the young matrons and bewitching widows, and if this is so it only compliments the good sense of society.

Men demand more of women than they once did, and this the woman of the world soon learns. If she is more interesting at thirty than she was at twenty it is because she has learned the importance of being as well as looking attractive. Indeed it may be argued that the wise woman of modern times is learning the lesson of history, which is that the secret of lasting charm is found in the culture of something more than youthful grace.

Cleopatra was no longer a girl when she subjugated the heart of Marc Antony, and it is difficult to believe that the secret of her inexhaustible attractiveness, whose "infinite variety age could not wither nor custom stale," was found in the play of shapely limbs or the flash of beautiful eyes. Josephine had passed the boundaries of girlhood when she won the heart of Napoleon, and the leaders of the French salon were women of years as well as of intellect.

Who remembers to inquire how old Lady Mary Wortley Montagu was when reading of her triumphs as the most brilliant woman of the reign of George II? Who ever thinks of the beautiful Mme. de Recamier as a woman "well on in years," or associates a thought of age with Mme. de Staël?

And in our own country and day are not the women most honored in society, in literature, in the world, women who have studied life, and whose faces oftener showed lines of thought than cheeks abloom with the glow of youth?

The Clarissas and the Lucys and the Mariannas have had their day. A new type of femininity has arisen, and the combination of angel and idiot formerly idealized in poetry and fiction no longer exists. The artificial, hot-house specimen of girlhood, in whose nature all spontaneity was repressed, is now rarely met with.

Girls are encouraged to be natural and unaffected, and educated less in stilted views of propriety than they were when the innocence of youth was marred by enforced teaching upon the necessity of securing a home and providing one's self with a husband. The instincts and desires of youth are not crushed out as they were under the old regime, and the life, physical and mental, develops more in accordance with natural laws.

The mothers of the present have discovered that enfeebled constitutions and impaired vital powers are the result of the prudish ideas of past generations of women. In consequence girls of today are encouraged, as are their brothers, in all athletic sport and out of door exercise, and in the better circles of society early marriages are no longer desired by intelligent parents, who are learning physiological truths which the Spartans respected and recognized when they made laws forbidding their females to marry under twenty-five or their males under thirty.

Nor do women marry, as formerly, for the sake of a home or of being supported or to secure the claim of being "old maids."

So many avenues of usefulness and honor are now open to women everywhere that in every rank of life women are more independent than their grandmothers would have dared to be. The old time jokes about woman's insincerity as regards her age are rarely perpetrated now. Up to thirty-five no woman hesitates to acknowledge her age, and a successful novel of recent years actually made its heroine an unmarried woman thirty-seven years old.

In English and American society, as well as in France, the women recognized as social leaders and society belles are women oftener in the thirties than in the twenties. The woman of the world knows that with years she gains in charm—that where in her first season she bored and irritated the man who took her out to dinner she has in her fuller maturity and experience a stimulus and a fascination for him. Women of society know, too, that to retain their sovereignty they must cultivate individuality and be something more than reflectors of the life around them. Hence it happens that instead of the exceptionally brilliant woman of the last century the women of today are as a whole women of wit, of intelligence, of versatility. Women have more interests in life than they had in past years. Literary clubs, reading circles, language classes and a host of other stimulating interests keep the modern woman young and active. People grow old not from years, but from want of purpose.

Some one has said that the age of grandmothers is past and deprecates the departure of the picturesque old ladies who, adorned with spotted kerchiefs and close made caps, formerly occupied the rocking chairs in the warmest corners and industriously knitted endless socks. But if they have gone we have in their stead worthy successors, of whom Mrs. Livermore, Julia Ward Howe, Mrs. Henry Ward Beecher and Elizabeth Cady Stanton are illustrious examples. These women are all past "threescore years and ten," and still no one of them has as yet laid her scepter down. No one thinks of these women as old, for their lives are full of the fragrance of eternal youth.

Lives cease to be measured by time's calendars when they rise above the material plane. The women who fear the years for the wrinkles they may bring or the lines across beauty which they may make will never possess the freshness of spirit which is life's greatest charm. But the women who stay young in spite of years are those whose lives lead many interests. They are the ones who do not feel that with the attainment of a certain age desuetude of all the powers must ensue. They never grow "too old" to enjoy life and all its stimulating influences.

Fifty years ago it would have been a most unusual thing to have met women past thirty as students in any department of active effort. Today women of all ages are found in every field of activity. The woman of forty takes up a new language or a fresh study with as much zeal as a girl of twenty, and the world forgets to consider the age of those who fling over its dusty highways the flowers of new thought and the fragrance of fresh life. LUCRA GIDDINGS.

A Novel Bridal Procession. A pretty little bride-to-be in a month-old gown is engaging her brain for novelties and has hit upon a decided one. "I am going to have Rex bring up the rear of the bridal procession," she announced.

Everybody laughed. Rex is her favorite setter and a beauty. "Yes, I'm in earnest," she continued. "Of course it wouldn't do in church, but as it's at home I don't see why not. I'm to have six bridesmaids and the last pair my two little nieces, five years old. They shall be dressed in light blue and lead Rex between them with light blue ribbons from his collar. I know he'll behave nicely, and of course I couldn't think of leaving the dear fellow out."

Somebody said it sounded dreadful because it reminded one of an Indian brave's funeral, which his favorite warhorse is allowed to attend; but the bride-to-be is practicing Rex in walking up the parlor in leading strings, and it only remains to be seen whether she will adhere to her fancy when the evening arrives. Trust to Yourself.

When you make investments of your little savings, look about you on all sides and find out for yourself where it is wise to put your money. Do not trust anybody implicitly. Women often lose the money through sheer laziness in finding out what sort of risks they are taking. Naturally nobody is as much interested in your affairs as you are. Do not expect, therefore, that anybody else will take trouble for you that you are unwilling to take for yourself.

Dividing the swag. The prisoner was in the police court for stealing a pocketbook and a slyster interviewed him.

"You want a lawyer to defend you, I suppose?" he said insinuatingly.

"I'd as soon have one as not," replied the prisoner. "if it doesn't cost too much."

"Well, I'll only charge you ten dollars."

"Thunderation!" exclaimed the prisoner. "there was only eleven dollars in the pocketbook, and you don't want more than half of it, do you?"—Detroit Free Press.

The Yost

WRITING MACHINE.

Years ago, Mrs. Yost built a typewriter, the Remington No. 2 and Calligraph which were good enough then. But the family has increased by thousands. Other folks have hitched on extensions to hold 'em. But it's the same old typewriter, same ribbon, same scales, same rickety print. We want something modern, and we get it in the NEW Yost, which rises superior to the difficulties of any ribbon machine. The ribbon blurs print, wears full of holes, clogs type, takes power to pull it along, weakens manifolding and costs $8 or $10 a year. Our ink pad outlasts twenty ribbons. Can be changed in ten seconds, and costs less than $2 a year. And as to permanent alignment the Yost is the only machine which accomplishes this much desired feat.
