THE RUSSIAN OCCUPANCY.

One of Many Interesting Features of Hawaiian History.

GOVERNOR BARANOFF, OF SITKA.

The "Robber Baron" Who Was a Hard Drinker, and a Strict Disciplinarian, but a Good Friend—His Influence Over the Natives.

The following interesting paper on the Russian Occupancy of the Islands was read by Prof. Alexander before the Historical Society last evening:

Few persons at the present time are aware of the many links connecting the early history of these islands with that of the northwest coast of America.

One of the most interesting historical relics in this country is the old Russian fort, which is still standing at Waimea, Kauai, a short distance south of the mouth of the river, and which was the scene of a bloody fight in 1824.

Another memento of Russian occupation is a circular redoubt situated on the bluff east of the Hanalei river.

The Hawaiian version of the story was collected on the spot by Rev. Samuel Whitney, a few years after the events referred to took place, and was published in the Hawaiian Spectator in 1839, in Vol. I, pp. 49-51, and also in Dibble's History, pp. 76-80.

The Russian account, which has until lately been locked up in the early records of Russian America, I shall now have the pleasure of laying before the Historical Society.

During my late visit to Washington, Mr. Allen, the librarian of the Department of State, at our request, caused a thorough search to be made in the ancient archives of Alaska for any references to these islands.

At length a complete account of the transactions referred to was found in Ikmeneff's "History of the Formation of the Russian American Company," which was translated for our benefit.

I have since found that Mr. H. H. Bancroft had already made use of it in Vol. XXVIII of his history relating to Alaska.

CHARACTER OF GOVERNOR BARANOFF.

During the early part of this century Russian America was governed by Count Baranoff, who resided at Sitka, and is described by Washington Irving in his "Astoria," pp. 465-466, as a "rough, rugged, hospitable, hard-drinking old Russian; somewhat of a soldier, somewhat of a trader; above all, a boon companion of the old roystering school, with a strong cross of the bear. Mr. Hunt, Astor's agent, found this hyperborean veteran ensconced in a fort which crested the whole of a high rocky promontory. It mounted one hundred guns, large and small, and was impregnable to Indian attack.

"Here the old Governor lorded it over sixty Russians, who formed the corps of the trading establishment, besides an indefinite number of Indian traders, who were continually coming and going. * * * Besides these immediate serfs and dependents just mentioned, the old Russian potentate exerted a considerable sway over a numerous and irregular class of maritime traders, who looked to him for aid and munitions, and through whom he may be said to have, in some degree, extended his power along the whole Northwest Coast." These were American captains engaged in fur trade. * * *

"Over these coasting captains, as we have intimated, the veteran governor exerted some sort of sway, but it was of a peculiar and characteristic kind; it was the tyranny of the table. They were obliged to join him in his 'prosnics' or carousals, and to drink 'potations pottle deep.' * * * "He is continually," said Mr. Hunt, "giving entertainments by way of parade, and if you do not drink raw rum, and boiling punch as strong as sulphur, he will insult you as soon as he gets drunk, which is very soon after sitting down to table."

But with all his faults, Alexander Andreievitch Baranoff was no ordinary man, and possessed great administrative ability. As Bancroft truly says, "The poor could always rely upon his aid, and this benevolence was coupled with an integrity and disinterestedness far above the usual standard among his associates." * * *

"As for the natives, his influence over them was unbounded, chiefly through the respect with which his indomitable courage and constant presence of mind impressed them."

Another side light is thrown on his character by Captain Golovnin, who speaks of the furniture in his house as being very fine and costly, having been brought from London and St. Petersburg, and adds, "But what astonished us most was the large library in nearly all European languages, and his collection of fine paintings,—this in a country where no one but Baranoff can appreciate a picture, and no travelers are likely to call but the skippers of American coasting vessels."

Such was the old so-called "robber baron," who planted a fortified trading post on Bodega Bay, California, in 1812, which was a thorn in the side of the Spanish governors for thirty years, until it was sold to Captain Sutter, in 1841.

HAGEMEISTER'S VISIT.

According to Archibald Campbell, Baranoff had some idea of planting a colony on these islands as early as 1809, for in the account of his voyage from Sitka to Honolulu in the "Neva," Capt. Hagemeister, he says (p. 81): "It would appear that the Russians had determined to form a settlement on these islands; at least, preparations were made for the purpose; and I was informed by the commander that if I chose I might get a situation as interpreter. The ship had a house in frame on board, and intimation was given that volunteers would be received; none, however, offered, and I never observed that any other steps were taken in the affair."

While the "Neva" was off Lahaina, Mr. Campbell had much conversation with a Scotch settler by the name of MacCallum.

He says: "Amongst other things, I told him that I understood the Russians had some intention of forming a settlement on the Sandwich Islands."

"This reached the captain's ears, and he gave me a severe reprimand for having, as he expressed it, betrayed their secrets."

Mr. H. H. Bancroft remarks of this expedition, "Baranoff certainly instructed Hagemeister to found a settlement, and a copy of his instructions has been preserved in the Sitka archives, but no mention of this is made in the captain's report. It is probable that he was deterred by fear of British opposition, as on August 6th of the following year Kamehameha wrote to George III, asking that the islands be placed under British protection." * * *

"After calling at the other islands in the Hawaiian group, and bartering seal skins and walrus tusks for salt, sandalwood and pearls, Captain Hagemeister sailed for Kamtschatka, and thence to New Archangel, (Sitka)."

THE KAUAI ACCOUNT OF SCHEFFER'S PROCEEDINGS.

I will now give the substance of Mr. Whitney's paper, referred to above, supplemented by other information.

During the last war between the United States and Great Britain, the ship "Attahualpa," of Boston, was sold to Governor Baranoff at Sitka, and re-named the "Bering."

Previous to the discharge of the American captain and crew, the ship was sent on a voyage to the Sandwich Islands, in the course of which she was wrecked at Waimea, Kauai. Most of the ship's stores and cargo were saved and left in the care of Kaumualihi, king of the island, for the owners.

In the year 1815 Governor Baranoff sent Dr. Scheffer, a German physician, to the islands on the American ship "Isabella," Captain Tyler, to look after the property. He landed with a large stock of goods at Kailua, Hawaii, where he was kindly treated by Kamehameha until he obtained a passage to Kauai on the ship "Millwood," Captain Eddes. After landing his merchandise at Waimea, Kauai, he built a storehouse there and engaged in trade. Kaumuali soon purchased all his powder and some other property, for which he paid in sandal wood.

Shortly after this, a Russian ship of three hundred tons, the "Discovery," (Otkrytie), in search of seals, arrived with thirty Kodiak Indians on board, who were left at Waimea with Dr. Scheffer. Next, a Russian brig, the "Imen," which had been trading on the coast of Mexico, ran down to the Islands for repairs, and a Russian ship, the "Myrtle," Captain Young, sent by Governor Baranoff, arrived about the same time.

The "Myrtle" (Kodiak) anchored at Honolulu, where the Russians landed and built a block-house, mounting a few guns, and hoisting the Russian flag. As soon as Kamehameha was informed of it, he sent Kalanimoku and John Young with a large force of chiefs and warriors, with orders to watch the Russians, to exercise great discretion and forbearance, but, if necessary, to resist them with arms.

On the night after Kalanimoku's arrival at Honolulu, the "Myrtle" and "Imen" both sailed for Kauai, and remained some time at Hanalei, where a fortification was thrown up, and a few cannon mounted.

It is stated that Kaumuali gave Dr. Scheffer the valley of Hanalei and two or three other valuable pieces of land.

At his request, Dr. Scheffer superintended the building of the fort at Waimea, on which a number of guns were mounted, and the Russian colors displayed.

While the Waimea fort was building, Dr. Scheffer, according to this account, proposed to Kaumuali to lease the whole island to him for a term of years.

Meanwhile, by the advice, and under the direction of John Young, Kalanimoku proceeded to erect a fort at Honolulu to command the harbor, which was commenced in January, 1816, and completed before the end of the year.

By order of Kamehameha, a messenger was now sent to Kaumuali with imperative orders to expel Dr. Scheffer. According to Mr. Whitney's information, the doctor was sent for immediately, and told that he must go on board the brig, which was then in the offing, to which he made no objection, and took his leave.

The next day he sent a boat for his private property, and for such articles belonging to the company as he chose, and sailed for Hanalei, whence with the ship and brig, he left for Honolulu.

Here, again, they were soon requested to depart, which they did without any resistance.

The ship "Myrtle" (Kodiak), however, being old and unseaworthy, was obliged to return, and sank in the harbor.

Her crew are said to have been well treated on shore until they had an opportunity to leave. As we shall see, they had not left Kauai in the friendly manner reported above.

Soon after this the Russian sloop of war, "Diana," touched at Waimea for supplies. The captain made some inquiries about Dr. Scheffer's conduct and treatment, and appeared to be satisfied. The Russian flag over the Waimea fort was hauled down by Capt. Adams, March 12, 1817, and the Hawaiian flag hoisted in its place.

Such is the Hawaiian account of these events.

I will now read a translation of a chapter in P. Tikhmeneff's "Historical Sketch of the Formation of the Russian-American Company," published at St. Petersburg in 1861, Vol. I., pp. 185-192.

[Here Prof. Alexander read a long account from Tikhmeneff's history.]

This decision of the Czar, Alexander I, was in accordance with the wise and far-seeing policy of his Government. Russia has since chosen to retire entirely from the Western Continent, and her latest action with relation to these islands is not only consistent with her decision in 1818, but also with the view that they belong to the Western Hemisphere.

EXTRACT FROM KOTZEBUE, VOL. II, P. 197.

Captain Kotzebue, who was at Honolulu in the Russian exploring ship "Rurik," October 1, 1817, makes the following statement, which corroborates part of Tikhmeneff's account.

"Kareimoku informed me, with much pleasure, that Dr. Scheffer had been expelled from the island of Atooi, and had landed here some time ago with his crew, consisting of a hundred Aleutians and several Russians, in the ship "Kodiak," which now lay on the strand. The ship was in such a miserable condition that the crew in the voyage from Atooi to Waohoo had been obliged to pump continually to keep her from sinking, and therefore the fugitives, as soon as they had reached this harbor, were obliged to run her aground. Kareimoku told me that he had kindly received the unfortunate Aleutians and Russians, as he did not wish to return evil for evil. Even Scheffer had been permitted to go on board of a ship from the United States, which a few days before our arrival had sailed for Canton.

"Kareimoku had scarcely finished his account when Mr. Tarakanoff, agent of the Russian-American Company, came on board with several of the company's officers. Tarakanoff, who, according to Baranoff's orders, had been placed entirely under Scheffer's command, expressed his disapprobation of the proceedings in Atooi, through which they had all been placed in danger of their lives, and he considered it a great miracle that, in their flight from Atooi, only three Aleutians had been shot, as Tamary (Kaumuali), who regarded them as his bitterest enemies, might easily have killed many more.

"He also mentioned their dangerous voyage hither, and was now, with his people, in the most miserable situation, as, of course, they could not have provisions without paying for them.

"Fortunately I had laid in such a provision of stock-fish in Unalaska as enabled me to send these poor creatures provisions for a month. Tarakanoff, who seemed to me to be a very sensible man, had concluded a contract with Mr. Hebet (Captain Ebbetts), the owner of two ships lying here, by which he bound himself to maintain and clothe the Aleutians a whole year on condition that he should bring them to California, where they should employ themselves in catching sea-otters on the islands there.

After the expiration of this year, Hebet is to bring them to Sitka, and to give the company half of the skins obtained.

"Speaking of the new heiau at Honolulu, Capt. Kotzebue says: "This morai was very quickly erected near Hanarura, because the natives had been obliged to destroy the old one, which had been profaned by the entrance of Dr. Scheffer's people. The fury of the natives at that time was without bounds, and Scheffer's men would certainly have lost their lives if it had not been for the interposition of Young." This must have been after their return from Kauai.

THE SUBSEQUENT HISTORY OF BARANOFF AND SCHEFFER.

Dr. Scheffer, as we have seen, after making his escape from Oahu, proceeded to Canton and thence to St. Petersburg, where he presented the memorial to the Minister of the Interior, which is mentioned above by Jikmeneff.

He left Russia in disgrace, but soon turned up again in Brazil, where he managed to ingratiate himself with Don Pedro I., who conferred upon him the high-sounding title of Count von Frankenthal, and sent him with a commission to Germany to recruit men for his body-guard.

Dr. Scheffer died peacefully in Germany at a very advanced age.

As for Baranoff, the old autocrat of Russian America, after nearly thirty years of arduous service, he was relieved at his own request, in January, 1818, by Capt. Hagemeyer, who had been sent out with a commission from the directors.

The property which he turned over in Sitka alone was worth two and a half millions of roubles. "In all the complicated accounts of this vast business," says Baranoff, "the new commissioner failed to find a single discrepancy. The cash accounts, involving millions, were in perfect order."

The task of transferring the property and accounts of the company occupied many months.

It seems, the weather-beaten old pioneer at one time had thought of sailing to the Sandwich Islands, to end his days at the court of King Kamehameha, with whom he was on friendly terms. But finally he decided to return to his native land, where his advice would be of great service to the company.

Accordingly he embarked on the "Kutusof" for Kronstadt, but his health failed rapidly on the voyage, and in the straits of Sunda, on the 16th of April, 1819, he breathed his last.

MORPHINE'S NEW ANTIDOTE.

Dr. Moor Tells How He Made the Discovery and of His Experiments.

Dr. William Moor, whose discovery of permanganate of potassium as an antidote for morphine poisoning has made him famous, has written a paper upon the subject which has been published in a well known medical periodical. In this he treats the subject almost altogether, as might be expected, in a technical manner. He tells, however, of the investigations that led to his discovery in the following words:

"After some trials I found that the best way of administering it was to have it made up in pills with cacao butter and talcum of kaolin, and to direct the patient to drink very slowly a glassful of water just one minute after taking the pill, for the latter begins to disintegrate in one minute at the temperature of the body. By using this method I successfully combated the extremely disagreeable odor in a case of cancer of the stomach.

"About that time I treated a well known actor suffering from acute pleurisy. This gentleman was addicted to morphine, and as I had taken much interest in him I earnestly sought the best plan to break his habit. The idea occurred to me that perhaps permanganate of potash might decompose morphine, the latter being an organic substance, and that by making use of a certain method I could eventually break his habit without restricting him from taking his morphine. My patient, however, started on a professional tour just when I began to put my idea to a test. This circumstance did not prevent me from continuing my researches as to the effect of permanganate of potassium on morphine, and today I am permitted to offer to the profession what I consider to be the antidote 'par excellence' for morphine."

Then considering in detail the peculiar effects of the antidote when differently administered Dr. Moor continues:

"Having gained the knowledge of these facts, it is not surprising that I could swallow with impunity toxic doses of sulphate of morphine followed in a few moments by a corresponding amount of the chemical body which I was justified to consider the antidote par excellence for morphine. Thus on one occasion four hours after a full dinner, at a time when the stomach must have contained a great amount of soluble peptones and other organic matter, I took two grains of the sulphate of morphine in about half of an ounce of water, followed in one minute by three grains of its antidote—for safety's sake one grain more than necessary—dissolved in four ounces of water. In another instance three hours after a light supper I took in the presence of several colleagues belonging to the staff of the West Side German clinic of this city three grains of the sulphate of morphine, followed in about 30 seconds by four grains of permanganate of potassium, both in aqueous solution. I was perfectly confident that the antidote possessed such a wonderful infinity for the morphine that it would select it instantaneously from among the contents of the stomach.

"In case of poisoning by any of the salts of morphia 10 to 15 grains of the antidote dissolved in six or eight ounces of water should be administered at once and repeated at intervals of 30 minutes three or four times, or even more often. Permanganate of potassium as well as the salts of manganese are comparatively harmless, even if given in large quantities."

Dr. Moor continues: "In cases of poisoning by the alkaloid itself or by tincture of opium (laudanum), also by opium, it is advisable to acidulate the antidotal solution with diluted sulphuric acid, or in the absence of this with some white vinegar—not red vinegar—by which the insoluble morphia will be at once converted into the soluble sulphate of acetate. I have strong reason to believe that the administration of permanganate will be of beneficial effect even after absorption of the morphia has taken place."

Ages of Stone and of Bronze.

The transition from the stone age to the bronze age can be read in the disclosures of the lake dwellers of Switzerland. This wonderful people lived through the stone age and for long ages continued on until they lapped over into the bronze age. Some of their settlements disclose only stone implements, while others of a later date show the bronze chisel, the bronze winged hatchet, the bronze knife, the hexagonal hammer, the tanged knife of ornamental design, the socket knife and the bronze sickle. They show also the bronze fish-hook, barbed and in exact similitude of our present device. The ornamental hatpin as now used, together with other articles of utility and ornamentation, is plentiful. The stone mold for casting the copper or bronze hatchet is of exceedingly ancient date, but probably the use of sand was far more common, and hence we have less traces of that method.—Hardware.

The Height of Obliviousness.

Yesterday I met a worthy gentleman whom years ago I used to see in the Paris salons. A few rapid words of greeting were exchanged between us. "Madame is quite well, I hope?" "Quite well, thanks." Here my old acquaintance suddenly bethought himself and added: "Beg pardon, no—nothing of the kind. I forgot for the moment that I lost her six months back."—Etoile.

HISTORICAL SOCIETY.

An Interesting Session Held Last Night.

Quite a large number of persons gathered at the Y. M. C. A. hall last night to hear Prof. Alexander's paper. The following persons were voted into the society as members: Miss Jenira Henry and Mrs. Emma Nakuina, corresponding members, and the following as active members: Mrs. H. A. P. Carter, Miss Helen S. Judd, Mrs. Haalelea, Mrs. S. G. Wilder, Messrs. Chas. W. Both, C. S. Bradford, A. W. Carter, J. L. Carter, Antonio Fernandes, W. M. Graham, L. T. Kennedy, L. B. Kerr, Dr. J. Mott-Smith, C. A. Peterson, R. P. Myers, T. R. Mossman, C. A. Luther and John Kidwell.

On motion of Mr. D. Logan, Dr. Emerson seconding, Robert Louis Stevenson was unanimously elected a corresponding member of the society.

After the reading of the paper of the evening, the senior vice-president presiding Joseph Emerson, drew the attention of the society to the plentiful lack of funds. The purchase of books made constant demands, and a very elaborate catalogue had just been completed, which naturally cost money.

The Board of Managers held a business meeting just before the regular session of the society, at which the following resolution was adopted:

MR. PRESIDENT.—We live in historic times. The events that are now shaping themselves in Hawaii are of the highest interest to us as individuals, as a community, and as parts of a nation.

We should deem it a good fortune that the Historical Society was seasonably brought into existence and charged itself with the duty of collecting and keeping material and data to be used by future writers and historians in formulating Hawaiian history.

It would probably be no exaggeration to say that during the twelve months in Hawaii's last hundred years of history has there been a tithe of the attention given to this group and its affairs by civilized nations that has been directed to it during the past year.

The amount of attention given to Hawaii by writers and publicists abroad has been almost paralleled by the activity of writers for the public press and for pamphlets on the spot.

Such of this work may seem to us now of ephemeral value. Experience however, teaches that on such a point the snap judgment of those who are themselves actors on the stage and are in the thick of the fight is likely to be faulty, and the fact is often deplored too late for repair that important evidence has been lost, and the truth of history sometimes obscured through a failure to preserve some seemingly insignificant proclamation, poster, pamphlet, or other printed page. Time alone can determine the true value of such things.

In view of these facts: Resolved, That the Librarian of the Hawaiian Historical Society is hereby instructed to use his best efforts to collect, obtain and preserve in the library of this society:

1st. Copies of all newspapers, periodicals and other publications published in Honolulu or elsewhere in the Hawaiian Islands since January 1, 1893.

2d. Copies and samples of all proclamations, posters public announcements, etc., especially those that are of political significance, that have been published since the above date or that may hereafter be published, etc., etc.

3d. That in fulfillment of this purpose the Librarian is authorized to expend the sum of $—

THE PLAY OF TONIGHT.

First Production Here of Baker's Francesca Di Rimini.

Judging from the sale of seats a large and fashionable audience will be present this evening at the Opera House to see the Dailey Stock Company in Baker's tragedy "Francesca Di Rimini." The leading character, that of Count Lanciotti, the hunchback, will be played by Darrell Vinton. The story of the tragedy in brief is as follows: The province of Rimini in Italy is controlled by Malatesta who has two sons, Lanciotti and Paola. A Roman named Guido, who controls a neighboring province, has a beautiful daughter and to make peace the two rulers decide upon their heirs apparent and named Francesca and Lanciotti. The brother, Paola, is deputized to act as a courier and with an army escorts the prospective bride to the groom's kingdom. Francesca falls in love with Paola at first sight, which feeling is not given vent until a moment after the wedding when the truth dawns on Lanciotti. Simultaneously there is a cry of war and the groom leaves his bride at the altar to join his army. The news of Francesca's estrangement is carried to Lanciotti's camp by the court easter and this drives Lanciotti frantic. He returns and finds his wife in the arms of his brother. The cast is as follows: Count Lanciotti (the hunchback), Darrell Vinton; Count Paola (his brother), Mortimer Snow; Pepe (the jester), Chas. Connors; Malatesta of Rimini, Wm. Bennett; Guido of Ravenna, Edwin Lloyd; Rene, W. B. Ash; Knight, John Howard; Cardinal, W. R. Dailey; Francesca Di Rimini, May Nannary; Ritta (her maid), Josephine Gassman; Knights, Soldiers, Couriers, etc.

A NEW VAULT.

It Will be Built in the Executive Building.

The contract for furnishing a burglar-proof vault for the Finance office has been awarded to the Diebol Safe and Lock Company of Canton, Ohio. There were three bidders for the vault, but the above company were awarded the contract for $2350. T. W. Hobron is the local representative.

The vault will be placed in the small room on the right-hand side of the entrance leading into the office of the Minister of Finance. The vault will be 6 feet 8 inches wide, 6 feet 2 inches deep, and 12 feet high. The peculiar shape is necessary owing to the smallness of the room in which the vault is to be erected. The lining will be constructed of 1/4-inch 5-ply welded iron and steel. There will be both inner and outer doors. The inside doors will be double and one inch in thickness, with a four-tumbler combination lock. The outer door will be 3 feet 4 inches wide by 7 feet 6 inches high, composed of four plates of chrome and Bessemer steel. The bolt-work will be massive, and operated by an automatic locking device controlled by a three-movement-time lock. The patent-locking device will obviate the necessity of any aperture or opening through the door, which will be one solid piece of steel two inches thick. When the door is closed and the pressure gear applied, the tennons and grooves on the door will be forced tightly into corresponding ones on the vestibule, making an air-tight joint. The grooves will be lined with felt packing, which will prevent the introduction of liquid or other explosives.

The order for the vault material has been forwarded, and the vault will be completed in about four months' time.

THE TAGAWA COAL MINE!

is located in Fukuoka Ken in the Island of Kinshui, Japan, and was discovered about twenty years ago. It was owned by the government and mined simply for the government's use.

Great improvements, however were made since it was sold to a corporation about six years ago, by importing mining machinery from Europe and America.

is used more than any other Japanese coals in the following countries: China, Manila and Strait's Settlements. It has found its way even to Bombay.

Two cargoes have been imported into the Hawaiian Islands recently, and it has no superior in this market as stove or steam coal.

TUESDAY, : MAY 8, 1894.

The able and learned paper upon the Russian occupation of Hawaii, read by Professor Alexander before the Historical Society last night, furnishes a fresh illustration of the usefulness of this organization. It is a gratifying fact that a little State like Hawaii can have a learned society not only in name, but in fact, and that there are within her borders men well qualified to carry the torch of science and enlarge the sphere of knowledge. Though the society is less than two years old, it already has a valuable library which is steadily growing, while the researches of its members are making it widely and favorably known across the sea. Professor Alexander's paper comes as a welcome addition to those which have already been published as part of the society's proceedings.

AN EXPERIMENT THAT FAILED.

The testimony from Maui concurs with the experience of Oahu in pronouncing the experiment with cumulative voting very unsatisfactory. The object of the arrangement is supposed to be to secure representation to a minority which would otherwise be unable to obtain a hearing in the legislative body. If this object and nothing else were attained, there would be nothing to criticize, for there is no doubt that minorities are as much entitled to representation as the majority. The difficulty seems to be that the end sought is not reached. Here in Honolulu, it was entirely lost from view, and the device was utilized to secure objects which had as little to do with the case as "the flowers that bloom in the Spring." The adherents of the American Union party hoped to find in it a means of consolidating votes upon the party candidates. The Third District and the Portuguese colony labelled it, "Bolting made easy;" while other voters simply regarded it as a convenience for pushing a favorite candidate.

We should not, however, infer from the failure of this initial experiment that cumulative voting should be abandoned altogether. When parties are regularly organized, and are opposed in the field, the adoption of such a method of concentrating votes may very well lead to a more equitable division of power than would otherwise be possible. At the same time, the difficulty of inducing electors to make a systematic and methodical use of their votes, instead of following a mere unregulated fancy, would seem almost insuperable.

It might be well, in the constitution to be drawn, to provide for minority representation in the lower house, in case the legislative body should be divided.

AN IMPORTANT RESOLUTION.

The resolution which was adopted by the Board of Managers of the Historical Society last night, draws attention to a matter of great consequence, which ought to have been attended to before. The collection of the documents which illustrate the progress of history in the making falls of course peculiarly within the scope of a historical society. The past year has witnessed great activity in the manufacture of history, and it has been enriched by an extensive literature. Some of this is preserved in the voluminous reports of Blount and Morgan. A large quantity will be found in the files of the ADVERTISER and GAZETTE. The original documents, however, be "real evidence," to borrow a lawyer's phrase, has not been preserved, and it will speedily and irretrievably disappear, unless rescued at once. Such "real evidence" are all posters, proclamations, and pamphlets which have from time to time appeared. Everything of this sort should be obtained by the society, as should copies of all the newspapers which have been published in Honolulu during the past year.

It is a singular fact that age which wastes most things should enhance the value of some. What for instance, could be of less value than the Holomua? Who can thrash out even one grain of wheat from its daily stores of chaff? Yet a file of the Holomua, gathering its daily and yearly allowance of dust on one of the back shelves of the Historical Society would possess a certain value. If the Holomua takes this view of its own merits, it could not do a more graceful thing than to present the society with a file. At the same time it would perfect its appeal to posterity, and rid itself of all "smell of mortality."

We believe that such persons as have kept copies of proclamations, posters, and any other memorials of the events of the past year, will be glad to secure their permanent preservation, and enlarge their usefulness by giving them to the Hawaiian Historical Society.

CONCERNING NEW ZEALAND TAXES.

Reference was made in an editorial note yesterday to the report of the United States Consul at Auckland, upon the New Zealand tax reforms. The object of these reforms, as already explained in the ADVERTISER, has been to shift the burden of taxation so as to relieve the poor, to break up the system of enormous landholdings, to make it unprofitable to retain large tracts of unimproved land, and to discourage real estate speculation. If these objects are socialistic, then the New Zealand legislators must certainly be taxed with socialism. On the consequences of the system, and its effect upon the credit of the Colony, the Consul Mr. John D. Conally, speaks as follows:

"In a very short time the incidence of taxation has been almost entirely changed—always a most hazardous undertaking, because of its tendency to disturb existing values, and disarrange business enterprise. Here reforms have been introduced which revolutionized the old system without affecting, at least to any appreciable extent, existing interests. It is true there were many who, through the public press, in the halls of legislation and on the highways and byways of the country, proclaimed their belief that the changes in the incidence of taxation would surely involve the country in financial ruin, but subsequent events conclusively demonstrated how ill-founded were their apprehensions. The most determined opposition to the 'new taxation' came from the moneyed institutions, loan companies and the owners of vast landed estates. It was found, however, as soon as the new system became law and was thoroughly established and fully understood that instead of involving the colony in ruin, it had exactly the contrary effect. The credit of the colony in London (which is, of course, the center of financial operations so far as the colonies are concerned) increased to an unprecedented degree. New Zealand's credit is better today on the London money market than is that of any other colony of Australasia."

CORRESPONDENCE.

Hard Work for the Constitutional Convention.

A convention to frame a constitution having been called, and the call having been responded to by the people by their electing delegates, to whom they have deputed the power to frame a convention, the question arises, what is the extent of the powers beyond the mere framing of a constitution deputed to this assembly of delegates?

Had the call for the election specified any requisites further than that of drawing up a constitution, the people, by their assenting to the call, would have conferred on their deputies the power to have given up for them some of their natural rights. As it is I cannot see how the constitution to be framed can become the fundamental law of the land without a submission of it as drafted to the electors for their approval. It is possible that the first legislature to be elected under the drafted constitution may come from the people empowered to adopt the constitution, but this appears decidedly irregular.

In the formation of the constitution one of the prime matters for consideration is the suffrage, and we cannot but note the trend of affairs in England and other European countries toward granting the suffrage to all who are possibly capable of understanding the value of it. I think the suffrage in Hawaii nei should be as liberal as possible, for instance, that all who can read and write Hawaiian or some European language, excepting Chinese and Japanese, should be allowed to vote.

The President should be elected by the legislature, and the term of office should be six years. The manner of electing the President in the United States by an electoral college is not applicable here, and much complaint is made against it there. The necessity of having an upper and lower house to prevent hasty and ill-considered legislation is apparent. The lower house should be elected by the people at large, but the upper house should be elected by a selected number of those having the suffrage, say having a high property and educational qualification. There is considerable agitation in the United States at present trending toward the election of the Senate by the people direct, in place of as at present by the State legislatures. But it is observed that the Senate has and does consist of better timber than the House of Representatives, and it is largely attributed to the fact of their being elected by the representatives of the people than through or by the people direct. It is impossible for a man to get into the Senate who has not a State reputation. As to the number who should constitute the two houses it should be large, and yet not so large as to be either unwieldy or an extra burden to the taxpayers. The former legislature was unnecessarily large. An attempt should be made to reduce the number of paid officials, although, from the nature of the country in its natural division into islands, I do not see at present in what direction the reduction should be made. We can easily see from the consistency of the population and geography of the country, together with our treaties with foreign lands, that the Constitutional Convention has not any picnic; but I feel satisfied that it is composed of men whom we can trust to do justice to the work.

A PIONEER JOURNALIST.

Mrs. Isabel W. Ball Has a Double Claim on the Title.

Looking back to the sixties, we must admit that for a girl in short clothes it seemed then a far cry from a prairie cabin to a desk in the sanctum of some great newspaper and the privileges of a journalist in the counsels of the state and national capitals. This long, hard road was traveled by Isabel Worrell, a successful Washington special correspondent and one of the founders of the Western Authors and Artists' club.

Mrs. Ball was born at Hennepin, Ill., over 30 years ago. Her parents were Scotch-Irish, that compound race which gave western America many of its most able, thrifty and energetic

MRS. ISABEL WORRELL BALL, is a pioneer. In childhood she was a good scholar and in youth studied history and law. At the age of 16 a weakness of the eyes compelled her to leave school, and about that time her home was transferred to western Kansas. There she turned her hand to cattle herding, became a horsewoman skilled with the lasso and the gun and coaxed back good health by outdoor exercise. She also taught district school and tended store while in her teens. From 1876 to 1886 she served as clerk during sessions of the Kansas legislature and also as press reporter. She wrote for the Albuquerque Journal and the Kansas City Times and followed up the construction party of the Atlantic and Pacific railroad across Arizona and New Mexico. The work demanded a reporter who could live in a gripsack and smile at danger. Today it was an Indian outbreak of Comanches or Apaches, and tomorrow a washout or a wreck in the heart of the hostile Indian country, which must be "written up on the spot." She narrowly escaped with her life and once saw two of her companions on the same car shot down while battling with Indians. On her return to civilization she served as editor on various papers, was secretary of the Kansas Historical society, and finally, in 1891, removed to Washington.

Besides her journalistic work, Mrs. Ball has contributed to the western periodical press. She does not lay claim to drawing room graces, nor does she care for fashionable life. But she is a moving spirit in the club which she helped create and also a leader among women, though not a suffragist.

A FEW NEW IDEAS.

The Latest Fads and Fancies of the Fair Sex.

You've no idea what a relaxation is afforded the whole nervous system by the following simple remedy:

When you feel completely tired out in body and mind, lie down in a darkened room, a smooth, silk handkerchief drawn lightly around your head across the eyes. Banish all thought and remain perfectly still, on the back, the arms lying heavily at the sides.

You've no idea how pretty the close velvet collar called the continental looks on a thin neck when an evening gown is worn. It serves the purpose of the high pearl collar worn by the Princess of Wales, which is said to cover a scar, and though so much cheaper is almost as effective.

You've no idea, unless you talk with one of the saleswomen in the big shops, how much ermine is worn this season—on opera cloaks, on carriage boots, on dressing gowns. It is the newest thing in furs, and many a grandmother's cloak has been renovated to do duty on parade.

You've no idea how perfectly natural and simple the great Mlle. Calve is. Her Carmen and Santuzza draw thousands to the opera house far beyond the seating capacity of that enormous place. She is the rage. Yet a friend who knows her tells me that she is still as unspoiled and impulsive as a child, delights in long walks in Central park, drinks milk, loves babies and hasn't a fad to her back.

You've no idea how costly miniatures are. Lillian Russell has had six made of herself, and they cost from $300 to $800 apiece. Marie Tempest has had almost as many.

You've no idea how the massage cure is spreading among women. It takes the place of exercise these cold, dark days. A masseuse whose hands are strong as steel and soft as velvet will spend an hour kneading every muscle of the body until the blood stings with life, and the charge is $2. It seems expensive, but it isn't, for often it takes the place of medicine and doctor bills.

You've no idea how women rouge nowadays until you see the carmine take on a purple tone in the bleak winds.

You've no idea how well brilliant red looks on a pale blond. It is not usually supposed to be her color.

You've no idea how white bran water will make the hands if applied every night for a week.

GOOD ADVICE.

Marriage is a lottery, you say. And all single folks should give thanks. Now, I do not think it's that way. Or that all the married draw blanks.

HELD UP.

This is not my story, and I have really no business to write it. It belongs to the railway manager. He ought to tell it, but he won't. A railway manager will not admit in print that trains are ever "held up" on his road, whatever may happen on the opposition line.

Of course a sober railway manager would not tell an incident that might frighten traffic away from his road, so you have to learn these things from them when they are half seas over. The story is strictly true, because I related it to the manager next day (he was suffering from a headache), and he admitted its accuracy and said with a groan:

"I had no idea I drank so much as that." He implied me not to tell the story, and I will not. I merely write it. Hang a man who won't keep his pledged word with even a railway manager!

The railway runs through a wild part of North Carolina, and Tompkins had been manager of it for some years. It is a picturesque line and gets itself tangled up among the mountains in the most bewildering way. The train puffs and staggers up awful grades, winds and twists and doubles on itself in the most confusing fashion, goes round and round cuplike depressions and seems in general not to know where it is going.

Well, one day there was a lot of nabobs going east, and as the manager was also traveling in that direction he ordered his private car hitched to the noon express, and away they went.

A private car, the manager tells me, differs from an ordinary coach and is superior in some respects even to the aristocratic Pullman. A good deal of course depends on the manager. If the manager is a prohibition man—but then, what is the use of discussing the improbable? Tompkins knows them all, and he says a railway manager is content if the engine drivers and trainmen are teetotalers, without carrying the temperance fad to extremes.

The time of this memorable trip was a few days before Christmas, and people were going east to see their folks, many of the travelers having considerable amounts of money on them. Besides this, there were $400,000 in the safe of the express car going through to New York. This fact made the manager a trifle anxious, and it was one of the causes that was bringing him east. However, the train would be out of the mountains while it was still daylight, so the manager felt no real anxiety.

All the nabobs who amounted to anything were in his private car, and they were enjoying themselves as people should during that festive season, but not, if I understand Tompkins right, entirely by admiring the scenery, although doubtless that added to their pleasure.

Just as they were in the roughest part of the mountains there was a wild shriek of the whistle, a sudden clasp of the airbrakes, and the train, with an abruptness that was just short of an accident, stopped.

"What's up?" cried everybody. "I don't know," said the manager, getting a little pale around the gills. "You all stay here, and I'll go out and see."

know what they're after. There's nearly half a million in gold on board. I'll go forward and parley with them as long as possible, so as to give you time. I imagine that if they break open the safe they'll be in a big hurry to get away and will leave the passengers alone. Still I don't know, so warn everybody."

There is no question but the manager was a brave man. He went briskly forward, as if nothing particular was wrong and it was all a little mistake that could be explained away in a few words. As he explained the length of the train, he made up his mind to sacrifice the $400,000 if by so doing he could prevent bloodshed and further robbery.

"What's the row here?" he cried cheerfully as he approached the gloomy group of mountaineers. "Who are you, anyhow?" asked the man who was "covering" the express messenger. "Who am I? I'm the manager of this railroad. What do you fellows mean by stopping one of my trains?"

"The matter's just this, Mr. Manager. You run the goldardest railroad in all creation. That's what's the matter, and we ain't a-goin to stand it no longer. I don't mind your trainmen throwin coal at my dog; I don't mind 'em sassin my wife an makin fun of my clothes, but when it comes to monkeyin with my whisky I'm dodgasted if I'm a-goin to stand it."

The other mountaineers nodded their approval of these sentiments. "Monkeying with your whisky? What do you mean?" cried the bewildered manager.

"I mean just what I say. They can throw coal at my dog; they can sass my wife."

"Yes, yes; but I don't understand about the whisky. What have my men to do with your whisky?"

"Why, don't you know, and you manager of the road? Well, moonshine whisky's all right enough ordinary days, but we allus has good old Kentucky for Christmas. Day before yesterday I gave your man in this here kyar a jug and $2 to bring me some prime Kentucky from town fur Christmas. Yesterday, bang through goes your train, jug and whisky and all and never stops. Now, we ain't a-goin to stand that from no road that ever tooted a whistle to scare the steers. I said I'd bet my boots next train 'ud stop, and she has. I don't allow no man to monkey with my likker. He kin sass my wife and chuck coal!"

"See here," said the manager to the expressman. "Did you take his $2?" "Twan't me," said the messenger. "Must have been Bill Simmons, on No. 9, and she must have gone through without stopping yesterday."

"Then all you want is your whisky?" asked the manager, with a sigh of relief. "Fair's fair, boss. Tain't Christian-like to drink moonshine this time of the year. Besides, he's got my $2 and the jug."

"That's all right," cried the manager. "Have we got a jug on the train?" "Here's one," said the mountaineer, taking a jug from behind a log. They had been refreshing themselves while waiting for the train.

The manager grasped it by the handle, turned it upside down and let the remains of the "moonshine" gurgle out, to the horror of the mountaineers. Then he started through the train, shouting: "Here, you men with flasks, I want half your stock. Pour it in here and be glad you get off so cheaply."

Every man who had a bottle produced it, and before Tompkins had gone through two cars the jug was brim full. He went back to the leader, who now allowed the engineer and expressman to hold down their hands.

"Taste that," said Tompkins. The mountaineer smacked his lips after sampling the content. "That's a good blend," he said, with solemn reverence. "Blend? You bet it's a blend. I've blended it myself. There's a sample of every known brand in the states there. Now, tomorrow, I give you my word that No. 9 stops and unships your jug, or there'll be a row. Is that all right?"

"It's all right, boss," said the leader, who had given the word. Thereupon his lank company had flung the old ties and tree trunks clear of the track. "You're a white man, if you are the manager of this road. And your men can make fun of my clothes an sass my wife all the've a mind to an leave the company's coal at my dog as long as they know you ain't a-goin to let 'em monkey with my whisky."—Robert Barr in McClure's Magazine.

A Bit of Royal Fun. According to a story which is going the round of the French press, the queen of Italy on New Year's eve had a serious conversation with her consort as to the critical state of affairs. "If things go on as they have been doing of late," she is said to have exclaimed, "we shall soon arrive at a revolution and then at a republic." King Humbert did his best to laugh away her gloomy apprehensions, and next morning on presenting himself to wish her majesty a happy New Year handed her his accustomed gift in a dainty casket on which was fastened a label thus inscribed: "To the Citizeness Margaret of Savoy, from the Citizen Humbert of Savoy." The queen, so the story goes, was much delighted at this bit of playful and affectionate railery, which had the effect of restoring her to her wonted good spirits.

A Genuine Knowledgeing. "Well, I see congress has met." "She has?" "Yes." "What's congress?" "Don't you know?" "Ain't I askin you?" "Why, you know about the money stringency?" "An what's stringency?" "The devil!" "Hit is?" "My friend, there was a war in this country at one time."

Some thirty or forty names have already been sent in and we shall be grateful if any member desiring to appear will send word to Mr. Wellesley Parker care of this office when he will immediately call and furnish full particulars.

Early attention to this is requested as the pictorial pages to the History must positively be closed next week.

National Cane Shredder

PATENTED UNDER THE LAWS OF THE HAWAIIAN ISLANDS.

The attention of Planters and Agents is called to the following letter from Mr. JOHN A. SCOTT, Manager of the Hilo Sugar Co., regarding the working of the National Cane Shredder, which he has just introduced into the Mill of that Company:

WAINAKU, HILO, HAWAII, January 23d, 1894. HON. WM. G. IRWIN, HONOLULU, H. I. DEAR SIR:—In reply to yours of the 16th inst. regarding the National Cane Shredder furnished by the Universal Mill Co. of New York, and erected by the Hilo Sugar Co. this past season,

I would beg to say, that it has now been in operation day and night during the past three weeks working on plant cane, and also hard ratoon, and it is giving me the greatest satisfaction. The more I see of its capabilities, the better pleased I am that I put it in, as I am satisfied that it will repay the original outlay in a short time, in saving of labor, higher extraction, etc.

It is shredding from 350 to 400 tons of cane every 22 hours with the greatest ease, and it could shred a much larger quantity if necessary. It delivers the shredded cane in an even uniform feed to the three roller mill, which receives it without the intervention of any labor, and as the cane is thoroughly shredded or disintegrated it relieves the mill of a great deal of strain, thus reducing the liability of broken shafts, gearing, etc.

There is a saving of four (4) men daily on the mill, as only one man is required to regulate the amount of cane delivered by the carrier to the shredder. It has increased the extraction from 4 to 5 per cent.

The economical use of steam is generally a serious consideration in adding new machinery, as in most mills the boiler power is taxed to its highest limit, as it was in this mill, and any increased demand necessitated an additional boiler. But I find that the shredder and the three roll mill engine combined use no more steam than the three roll mill engine did when working on whole cane, while doing better work and more of it, and owing to the uniform feed on the mill, the engine demands very little attention.

The Megass from the shredded cane makes superior fuel, and the firemen have less difficulty in maintaining a uniform pressure of steam than formerly.

I will be pleased to have a call from parties interested, as it is necessary to see the machine at work to fully appreciate its capabilities.

I remain, very truly yours, (Sig.) JOHN A. SCOTT, Manager Hilo Sugar Co.

Plans for erection of these shredders may be seen at the office of the Agents, where prices and other particulars may also be obtained.

ARTHUR LIKES CRACKERS.

So He Lays in a Stock and Then Gets Arrested.

Arthur Fitzgerald used to hold the honorable position of horse trainer for W. H. Rickard. Lately Mr. Fitzgerald has been collecting bills—either for himself or for some one else.

A few days ago Fitzgerald went to collect a bill from Mrs. Percy Gardiner. Mrs. Percy did not feel in the mood for paying bills. Arthur insisted. Mrs. Percy insisted. Arthur became more insistent, and, Mrs. Percy aches, struck her and severely hurt her. Arthur says he didn't. Nevertheless, Mrs. Percy swore out a warrant for Arthur's arrest. Arthur did not want to be put in durance vile, and made it a strict point of honor to keep out of the way of the officers of the law.

All this happened some days ago. Arthur has been dodging the police, and Mrs. Percy has been swearing vengeance for these same "some days." Last evening Arthur grew tired of dodging the police. He decided to give himself up to the minions of the law and to stand his trial on its merits. But Arthur is dainty. The thought of staying in a dark dungeon with no comforts was discouraging to a man of Arthur's refinement. Mosquitoes also entered into Arthur's calculations, so he invested part of his hard-earned wealth in a voluminous mosquito bar, and when he decided to give himself up to the "peace-makers" he resolved that he would take this creature (comfort) with him. He also bought a box of fancy crackers with which to beguile the weary hours away. Then, being loaded down with luxuries, Arthur bled him to the police station, and explained to the officer on watch that he was "wanted." He was given apartments for the night, and slept the sleep of the just under his nice new mosquito net. Whenever he would wake up he would munch a fancy cracker, and reflect on man's inhumanity to man. This morning Arthur will appear in the District Court, mosquito net, fancy crackers and all, and will have a chance to explain to Justice the reasons why he is a much abused individual.
