Suicide - Circuit Court

Mung and Chang Kai, two Chinese residents of Paia, indulged in a quarrel during which the latter cut his coun ryman's cheekbone with a small knife Early Thursday morning, just as a policeman was about to serve a warrant on Chang Kai for assaut he observed a Portuguese woman running in great terror from her cook house. Upon being stopped she pointed to the kitchen and exclaimed: "Pilikia no! make no!" Then it was that the officer discovered the lifeless body of Chang Kai suspended by a small rope from a crossbeam of the shanty. Friday the Coroner's jury brought in a verdict of suicide. The Lahaina term of court opened Wednesday, with Circuit Judge Kalua on the bench and Deputy Attorney General E. P. Dole as prosecuting officer for the Government.

On Saturday, after the luna blew his whistle, notifying the men to knock off work, Fitzgerald was wheeling a barrow load of dirt toward the dump, and was told to turn the dirt out where he was and go get his shovels and put them in the box.

"After doing this and was going for his tools, he met the prisoners filing off; one of them had a new shovel in his hand, and Fitzgerald claimed it. The prisoner demurred and told Fitzgerald that his shovel was where he had left it. This did not satisfy the little fellow, and he assaulted the other prisoner, when Stone, the luna came up and separated them and told Fitzgerald to go and get his tools and put them away.

"Fitzgerald started, but changed his mind and ran to the cook's quarters, a by the younger generation of Hawaiifew feet away, seized a kettle of water and threw it at Stone, scalding him on the arm and neck. KEPOOLELE APAU, 124 YEARS OLD

Familiar With Earliest Events in History.

Visited Kilauea Volcano With Kapiolani I-Trained by the Missionaries.

After passing Smith street, walking on the mauka side of King, one no-tent deprived of her hearing it was with difficulty that one in the party who spoke Hawaiian, could make himself understood. She was willing to talk, and she was able, but she must be allowed to go on in her own way without being bored with questions.

Mr. Atkinson, General Inspector of Census, made several visits subsequently, and investigated the case of the woman, who is supposed to be anywhere from 120 to 124 years of age. He tells his story in his own inimitable

"Among the census returns received in my office were many which gave ages of natives varying from 100 to 110 or so. These cases I had investigated by the district superintendents, but when I came across an old lady in Honolulu who claimed to be 124 years of age, I thought it was time to make investigations on my own account.

"To carry out this investigation I asked Prof. Alexander and Mrs. Nakuina to accompany me. Prof. Alexander has a wide-world reputation as an historian of the Islands, as a man of exact thought and of the highest culture. Mrs. Nakuina is an Hawaiian lady of high cultivation, both in English and her own language, and has also a very thorough knowledge of the history of the country. For myself, my training as a newspaper editor has tices a number of dingy, muddy alleys. made me ready to watch facts, and a In the second one from the bridge long period of work as Inspector Gen-

Walk through evidence and weigh it carefully. the alley, and when you get to the rear of the store facing King street, there is another passage way, narrower than the one which leads from King street, to a collection of old tumble down cottages occupied by Hawaiians.

If you want to find and converse with the oldest inhabitant of the Islands, turn into this narrow way and stop at the two-story house on the left. It is an old place, so old that the date of the erection of it is almost forgotten by the people who live in it or in the cottages around. "I give the above statement, because I wish the deductions we have made to bear the stamp of exactitude. The case being a peculiar one and likely to be doubted.

"On entering the house we found the old lady sitting up on the floor. She was attended by two women, one of whom was the wife of a grandson. She was very deaf and though not blind, could not see very clearly, though when I held a dollar in my hand she saw it, put out her hand for it, and placed it in her pocket. This was at the close of the interview, but I mention it here to show what the old lady's faculties were.

"Prof. Alexander, after some preliminary remarks, in order not to alarm the old lady, suggested a number of historical questions, which were put by Mrs. Nakuina. From those we learned that she remembered the abolition of idolatry, that she remembered the war in that connection. She stated that she was a married woman and an atliever in soft beds; a mat on the floor tendant of Kapiolani I, when the lathas greater attractions than the most | ter descended into the crater of Kilauea and broke the tabu, and that her On the lower floor the house is divid- name was changed from Kepoolele to Kawaihae. ROPIC OIL

For Engines and Cylinders

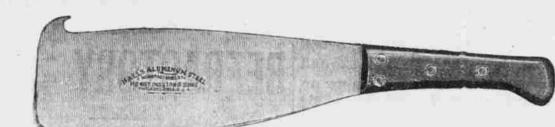

THIS IS THE OIL that Plantation Engineers are calling for.

19 Sugar Mills

Are using the TROPIC Engine and Cylinder Oils, and we have yet to hear of a case where it has not given perfect satisfaction.

The TROPIC is a pure, unadulterated lubricator, and is fully warranted to be of the highest possible grade and to give first-class satisfaction in every particular. It is made at one of the best Oil Refineries in Cleveland, Ohio, and is shipped direct to Honolulu without passing through the hands of any Middle-men, and we sell in original packages, barrels or cases. The great success that the TROPIC OIL has met with, during the past season, ought certainly to recommend it for use in every Sugar Mill.

We have just received ex Bark "Edward May" a fresh supply from Cleveland, and can supply immediately, or at any time specified, any quantity required.

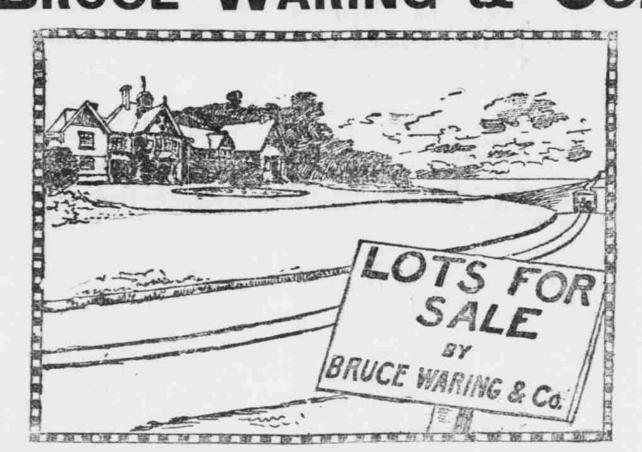

HALL'S ALUMINUM CANE KNIVES

Are being used on TWENTY-SEVEN PLANTATIONS. They are made by H. Disston & Sons of Philadelphia, and are acknowledged by them to be the best knives they ever turned out. They are made of Aluminum Steel, with Apple-wood handles, secured with four rivets, and hang easier in the hand, when in use, than any other Cane Knives. The fact that the cane cutters prefer these knives to all others, because they do not tire their hands, and they can do much more work in a day, is sufficient guarantee of their superiority.

We have just received over a hundred dozen from the Factory, and can supply Plantations now or at any time during the coming season. Plantations that have not yet tried them, should send for a sample lot, and give them a trial. We have them with the hook and without.

DR. RYDER'S LECTURE.

Splendid Treatise.

A large and interested audience of ladies assembled in the Y. M. C. A. Hall yesterday afternoon to listen to

Dr. Emily B. Ryder's opening address. the afternoon the doctor explained the nature of her work for the child-wives of India, and briefly referred to the Hindu belief with regard to marrying their little girls at as early an age as possible, in order to aid their spiritual evolution. Women being considered soulless beings, it was only by mar riage that they became human.

All little Hindu girls in India were married before they were 8, or in some cases, 9 years of age, and when married to mature men and sent to live result was cruelly disastrous to the child-wife. It is medical and legal aid for these child-wives that Dr. Ryder is working to obtain.

FORT STREET WIDENING

The petition now before the Ex ecutive, requesting that the Fort street widening be continued mauka of Hotel street, ought to receive prompt and favorable consideration. The petition is signed by all Fort street property owners; the Legislature has given the necessary authority and provided for obtaining the funds. What more i

Just what action the Executive will take we cannot forecast, but presupposing that the widening will be authorized, we would suggest that the property owners refrain from clogging the wheels of progress by putting an extraordinary valuation on their property and passing in million-dollars-anacre claims for damages. One of the strange freaks of the business side of human nature is always brought out when street widening or the extension of any public work calls for contributions from property owners. Honolulu is no exception to the general rule. Business men and property owners, large and small, join in a movement to obtain extensive public improvements; legislators are labored with, and finally the necessary authority is obtained to improve streets and beautify the city. This point having been reached, in nine cases out of ten some of these same business men and property owners suddenly discover that the ten or twenty square feet of land they must give up to the Government is wonderfully choice and valuable. They consider that one of their rights as free born citizens is to make the Government pay all the property is worth, and more too if possible. If the guardians of the public purse have proper business sense, they of course refuse to allow the price named, consequently delay follows, and months and sometimes years pass before the much needed extension or improvement can be accomplished.

There is not a property owner on Fort street who cannot well afford to make the Government a present of every inch of land required to establish the new street lines, and it is to be hoped that there will be a fair appreciation of this fact when the damage claims are presented. That damages should result from making a decent sized street out of a lane seems almost preposterous.

WHO ARE THE POLITICAL SHEARERS?

Judge. Hart in a letter to an evening paper says: "Today I find myself shorn of my political rights, not even possessing a vote, though having the necessary property and other qualifications." This calls to mind a story told by Artemus Ward of a man who, while in the bloom of youth, was thrust into prison. His cell was the usual cold, damp, cheerless spot, the only ray of light coming through the pondering over how he might escape. From youth to middle age, and from middle age to second childhood the cycle of years carried | The following valuable properties: him, and still he pondered over some method of escape. One day a happy thought struck him-he opened the window and got out.

Judge Hart says he is shorn of his political rights. There are others who assume that they have been shorn as well. Now we would like to know who does the shearing, if on this lot. not the individuals themselves. Hawaii in its short history has furnished much that is new and interesting, and Prof. Brigham has usually worn the laurels for ferreting out ancient landmarks. He must, however, take a secondary position to the Census Bureau this vear. The story of the old Hawaiian woman who is well along in the second century of her life reads like a romance, and it is doubtful if the Historical Society will have a similar instance to re cord in many years.

IN THE SUPREME COURT OF THE HAWAIIAN ISLANDS.

June Term, 1896.

JAMES A. LOW, Administrator, v. JOHN M. HORNER.

EXCEPTIONS FROM CIRCUIT COURT, FIRST CIRCUIT.

SUBMITTED JUNE 26, 1896. DECIDED NOVEMBER 30, 1896.

JUDD, C.J., FREAR, J., AND CIRCUIT JUDGE PERRY IN PLACE

OF WHITING, J., DISQUALIFIED.

Although a judgment is assets, for the purpose of administration, where the record is, yet, if the judgment debtor removes to another jurisdiction, administration may be granted there also, and the administrator may there maintain an action upon such judgment.

OPINION OF THE COURT BY FREAR, J.

This is an action by the plaintiff as Hawaiian administrator with the will annexed of the estate of Thomas Newell, deceased, upon a judgment recovered by the decedent in his life time against the defendant herein in the State of California, where the decedent was domiciled at the time of his death. The Circuit Court tried the case, jury waived, and rendered judgment for the plaintiff in the sum of $4,109.02 and interest thereon from the commencement of the action, and costs. The case comes here on defendant's exceptions to the final decision of the trial court, and to all the findings of law and fact therein, and to the overruling of a demurrer which had been interposed. The overruling of the demurrer appears to have been correct, and the exception thereto has been practically abandoned in this court and need not be further considered. The only question raised under the exception to the final decision and the findings therein is whether the appointment of the plaintiff as administrator was Defendant's counsel contends that it affirmatively appears upon the face of the probate record that the only grounds, if any, upon which the court could or did exercise jurisdiction in the appointment of an administrator was the existence of the unsatisfied judgment obtained in California and the presence of the judgment debtor here; that, as matter of law, a judgment is assets for the purposes of administration only where the judgment record is, that is to say, in this case, in California; and that therefore the probate court here acted without jurisdiction and that the appointment was void. The trial court ruled that the appointment by the probate court could not be thus collaterally attacked, and this is the ruling that is now claimed to be erroneous.

Considering the state of the law upon the subject of collateral attack, and in view of the circumstances of this case, we prefer not to go into the question whether the ruling of the trial court was erroneous or not, but to concede to the defendant, for the purpose of argument, that it was erroneous; in other words, that the appointment of an administrator may be collaterally attacked for want of jurisdiction appearing upon the face of the record; also that that which is relied upon in this case as showing want of jurisdiction does appear upon the face of the record, and to base our decision upon the conclusion to which we have come, that that which is relied upon does not show want of jurisdiction. This is purely a question of law and one that may be decided by this court, although not passed upon by the trial court, in order to show that the ruling of the Circuit Court, if erroneous, was not prejudicial to the defendant. For if the sole ground upon which he sought to attack the probate decree was untenable he could not have been prejudiced by not being allowed to make the attack. The question is, whether administration may be granted upon a judgment only where the record is, or may it also be granted where the judgment debtor is, if in a different jurisdiction from that where the record is?

The American case most frequently cited on this question, Vaughn v. Barret, 5 Vt. 333, states the rule thus: "Judgments are bona notabilia where the record is; specialties, where they are at the time of the creditor's decease, and simple contracts where the debtor resides." Cases, all English, are cited in support of each of these propositions. The English case most generally referred to for a statement of the rule, Att'y-Gen'l v. Bouwens, 4 M. & W. 171, puts it thus: "As to the locality of many descriptions of effects, household and movable goods, for instance, there never could be any dispute; but to prevent conflicting jurisdictions between different ordinaries, with respect to choses in action and titles to property, it was established as law that judgment debts were assets, for the purposes of jurisdiction, where the judgment is recorded; leases, where the land lies; specialty debts, where the instrument happens to be; and simple contract debts, where the debtor resides at the time of the testator's death."

This rule has been repeatedly stated in text books and decisions, but generally if not always in substantially the affirmative form above set forth; but on the doctrine of expressio unius est exclusio alterius, and since the object is to prevent conflicts of jurisdiction, it would seem to be a plain inference that the converse of the rule were also true, namely, that if administration may be granted where the assets are as stated in the rule, it should not be granted anywhere else, as, for instance, where the debtor happens to be at the time, if in another jurisdiction, and, no doubt, this has very generally been considered a proper inference. And for this reason we feel that our grounds for arriving at a different conclusion should be set forth at greater length than would otherwise be necessary.

It may be observed, in the first place, that the converse of the rule is not a necessary, although a natural, inference. In the second place, the rule itself is somewhat artificial and was adopted at an early date in England as a practical rule for avoiding conflicts of jurisdiction, and under such circumstances that a statement of the rule in the affirmative answered most practical purposes. There was little or no occasion to consider its converse. But under recent conditions of greater freedom of movement in population and personal property, courts have been obliged to consider the converse of the rule in a number of cases, and have found that while the rule itself may be unobjectionable as far as it goes, its converse cannot be maintained without resulting either in a failure of justice or in a conflict with another and unquestioned rule of law, namely, that an administrator cannot sue as such in a jurisdiction other than that in which he was appointed. The courts have therefore declined to follow the converse of the rule, whether in respect of simple contracts, specialties or judgments.

Take, for instance, the case of simple contract debts. These, by the rule, "are assets where the debtor resides at the time of the testator's death." But suppose the debtor removes to another jurisdiction before administration has been obtained or suit brought in the jurisdiction in which he was when the decedent died. Then, if the converse of the rule is held, that is, if administration cannot be granted in the jurisdiction into which the debtor has removed, either the debt cannot be recovered because the debtor cannot be reached and justice must fail, or else the administrator appointed in the jurisdiction in which the debtor was at the time of the decedent's death must be allowed to sue in the foreign jurisdiction into which the debtor has gone, without first obtaining letters there, and yet the authorities hold, even in the same breath in which they state the rule in question, that this cannot be done. See, for instance, Att'y Gen'l v. Bouwens, supra. It is therefore held that administration may be granted and suit brought wherever the debtor may be at the time, even though in another jurisdiction than that in which he was at the time of the decedent's death. Pinney v. McGregory, 102 Mass. 186.

So in the case of specialties. These, by the rule, "are bona notabilia where they are at the time of the creditor's decease." but suppose the debtor resides at that time in, or subsequently removes to, another jurisdiction. Then, if the converse of the rule is held, the debtor cannot be reached and justice must fail. Cases of this kind, naturally, have not often come before the courts. But Whyte v. Rose, 3 Ad. & Ell., N. S. 493, was just such a case. The decedent died in Nova Scotia, the specialty was in Ireland and the debtor in England. An administrator was appointed in England and brought suit there. The Court of Queen's Bench, in which the action was brought, gave judgment for the defendant on the ground that the appointment of the administrator in England was void for the reason that, as stated in the rule, the specialty was bona notabilia in Ireland. But, on appeal, the Court of Exchequer Chamber reversed this judgment, and held that administration might be granted in England and suit be brought there where the debtor was, whether administration had been granted or not in Ireland where the specialty was, and that none of the former decisions were inconsistent with that view. This was the actual decision of the court in England where the rule originated and after elaborate argument by counsel on both sides upon numerous former cases bearing upon the subject.

So in the case of judgments, which, by the rule "are bona notabilia where the record is." It is obvious that the rule must be the same in respect of judgments as in respect of specialties, and, therefore, referring to Whyte v. Rose, supra, if administration may be granted and suit brought in England where the debtor is, upon a specialty in Ireland, so, referring to the case at bar, administration may be granted and suit brought in Hawaii where the debtor is, upon a judgment in California. The rule is arbitrary, and there is no more reason for holding to its converse in one case than in another. And the rule itself places specialties and judgments on the same footing, giving them a situs of their own apart from that of the debtor, apparently because from their solemnity they are regarded to some extent as things visible. Cases of this kind upon judgments would be likely to be even more rare than similar cases upon specialties; but, so far as we know, when they have arisen they have been decided the same way. Emery v. Hildreth, 2 Gray 228, was a suit in Massachusetts by an administrator appointed there upon a judgment obtained by the decedent during his lifetime in Missouri. The defendant denied the sufficiency of the appointment of the plaintiff as administrator. The court held: "Such debt was estate to be administered within this state. * * * The probate court therefore had jurisdiction of the subject." The precise question now involved was, however, not raised or argued by counsel, though passed on by the court and apparently raised by the pleadings, and it may be also that the court had in mind not this precise question at all, but only the question whether a debt as well as tangible property was sufficient to confer jurisdiction. "But in Swancy v. Scott, 9 Humph. (Tenn.) 327, the court held that in case a judgment was recovered in a foreign state and then the creditor died and the debtor removed to the state of the application, administration could be granted to recover the claim." Note, 24 L. R. A. 687. See also page 684. Unfortunately we have not access to the full report of this case and can state its substance only at second hand. It seems to have been the subject of discussion in a later case in the same state, but not overruled. Bigelow's Overruled Cases, Supplement, 148.

Thus we find that the converse of the rule has been deliberately rejected by the courts when called upon to actually decide the question, whether in respect of simple contract debts, specialties or judgments. And we know of no decision to the contrary. The cases cited contra, whatever may be the first impression, will be found on careful examination to have turned on some other question. For instance, in Adams v. Savage, 2 Ld. Raym. 855, the court decided merely that an administrator appointed by the Archdeacon of Dorset could not maintain scire facias upon a judgment in the Court of King's Bench, on the ground that the appointment was void as to that judgment, in other words, that an administrator could not sue upon a judgment and in a court outside of the jurisdiction in which he was appointed. So in Vaughn v. Barret, supra, the court actually decided merely that an administrator appointed in New York could not sue an inhabitant of Vermont in Vermont, upon a Vermont judgment, and that therefore (in the opinion of the court) a voluntary payment to the New York administrator would not bar a subsequent action in Vermont by the Vermont administrator. If the converse of the rule were true, then, as above stated, in order to prevent a failure of justice, an administrator appointed where the property is assets as stated in the rule, should be allowed to bring suit in any other jurisdiction where the debtor is, without first obtaining administration there, just as he could if he were in possession of a negotiable note belonging to the estate and payable to bearer, or as he could if he had already obtained judgment in the jurisdiction of his appointment, for then he could sue as owner of the chose in action and not merely in his representative capacity. For instance, in the case at bar, if administration could not be granted in Hawaii, where the debtor is, then an administrator appointed in California where the record is, ought to be allowed to sue here, for otherwise suit could not be brought at all and the debt could not be collected. But, as we have seen, all the authorities hold that an administrator cannot sue as such outside of the jurisdiction of his appointment. See cases, supra. In Huthwaite v. Phaire, 1 Man. & Gr. 159, and in Whyte v. Rose, supra, in the Queen's Bench, the courts saw that the converse of the rule, if held, logically required that suit should be allowed to be so brought, and they apparently thought that the converse was true and that suit could be so brought, but the question was not actually decided in either case, and in the latter case on appeal to the Exchequer Chamber, the court, as we have seen, reversed the judgment of the Queen's Bench, and, in doing so, said that suit could not be so brought, and the same Chief Justice (Tindal) who delivered the opinion of the court in Huthwaite v. Phaire, said in substance that that opinion should not be taken beyond the question actually before

It may be argued that a failure of justice would not necessarily result from holding that an administrator can be appointed only in the jurisdiction where the record is, even though the debtor might be in another jurisdiction where suit could not be brought by such administrator, for the reason that the judgment could be assigned by the administrator appointed where the record is, and then suit be brought by the assignee in the foreign jurisdiction. This course has been pursued in some cases. Low v. Burrows, 12 Cal. 181, see also Lewis v. Adams, 70 Cal. 403; Peterson v. Chemical Bank, 32 N. Y. 21, approved in Johnson v. Wallis, 112 N. Y. 230. But a right can hardly be said to have an adequate remedy in contemplation of law if it cannot be itself enforced by its owner, but can be realized on only by a sale, and what if, as would often be the case, it could not be sold under the circumstances except at a great sacrifice, or if it were non-negotiable and the debtor were in a jurisdiction in which the assignee could not sue except in the name of the assignor?

the court. See pp. 501, 504.

The question of real difficulty that generally arises is whether the debtor may be compelled to pay the debt more than once, in case he is sued in different jurisdictions into which he may go, or in case he voluntarily pays in one jurisdiction, and is afterwards sued in another. For instance, if the debtor in this case were obliged to pay the judgment at the suit of an administrator appointed here and should afterwards go to California, could be be obliged to pay the judgment a second time at the suit of an administrator appointed there? The solution of this question would seem to be to hold, not that a debtor cannot be sued where found though in a jurisdiction other than that where the record is or where the specialty or debtor by simple contract was at the time of the decedent's death and so deny justice to the other party, but to hold that a payment once made, at least if made under compulsion by suit, and perhaps / if made voluntarily wherever he could be so compelled by suit, is a good defense to a suit anywhere else, and so do justice to both parties. Westlake's Private International Law, Secs. 296-299. Some courts go even further and hold that a voluntary payment to the domiciliary administrator by a debtor in another jurisdiction, is a good defense, if there are no creditors of the decedent in that jurisdiction. Wilkins v. Ellett, 9 Wall. 740. Other courts go still further and hold that even if there are creditors in such jurisdiction, such payment is a good defense, if made before the appropriate proceedings have been taken there by such creditors in order to realize on the debt. Marcy v. Marcy, 32 Conn. 308, criticizing Vaughn v. Barret, supra. We therefore hold in order to prevent either a failure of justice or a conflict with the rule that an administrator cannot sue outside of the jurisdiction of his appointment, and in accordance with the actual decisions as distinguished from dicta and natural but not necessary inferences, that the Hawaiian probate court had jurisdiction to appoint the administrator in this case and that such appointment is valid.

Assuming therefore, but not deciding, that the trial court erred in ruling that the probate decree could not be collaterally attacked for want of jurisdiction, if any, appearing upon the face of the record, the defendant was not prejudiced thereby, for no such want of jurisdiction appears.

The exceptions are overruled. Paul Neumann and A. S. Hartwell, for plaintiff. Kinney & Ballou, for defendant.

Everybody knows "Lonny," or Lounsbury, and the following testinonial shows what the Hagey Cure has done for him:

Mr. Kirkpatrick, Secretary Hagey In-

Dear Sir:-From the 11th of June, monials, Address 1896, until the 6th day of November I have been on a protracted spree. I lived on liquor; and, in fact, what little food I ate I forced myself to eat it. It is very easy for a man who has no craving for liquor to say: "Quit it,' "Let up on it," etc., but altogether a different matter for a man who has an insatiable desire for it. I have made resolutions and promises many times, but when the thirst came on had to drink.

At the suggestion of a friend I visited the Hagey Institute and arrangements were soon made for my treatment. I drank whisky for four days after I started on the treatment, but my craving for it gradually became weaker. After the first four days I became indifferent to liquor, and then a dislike of the odor, and I believe now if I were to take a drink that I could not hold it down. During the treatment my appetite for food returned, and I could sleep well, something I had not done for months. There is no suffering connected with the treatment. Since finishing the cure myself I have part of the time kept the key to the closet where the liquor is kept, and have given whisky | KODE or beer to the new patients as they needed it, and I have not felt the least desire to take any of it.

I am pau with whisky-I feel fine and can say to the boys that the Hagey Cure will do the work.

Anything I can do or say for the Hagey Institute or its management I will be glad to do it. Wishing the Institute great success.

I am, Respectfully yours, W. C. LOUNSBURY.

Frank Edwards Swims Ashore After Being Courtmartialed.

Frank Edwards, a blue jacket aboard the U. S. S. Adams, deserted during the middle of last week and was caught in Kalihi a day or so later.

He was taken aboard ship and courtmartialed on Friday for desertion. Evidently the appearance of the trial did not seem to be in his favor, so he made his escape from the Adams and swan ashore some time during Sunday night On Monday morning Capt. Watson reported the matter at police headquarters, and Capt. TION, Dec. 7, 10 p. m .- The weather is clear; wind, light; north.

The Iwalani has been put back on her old route.

The Likelike sails at 5 p. m. today on the Claudine's route. The bark Albert, sugar laden, will probably sail today for San Francisco. The Kaala for Oahu ports and the James Makee for Kauai, both sailed yesterday.

The J. A. Cummins did not got away for Oahu ports until about 2 p. m.

The Claudine taking the place of the Kinau, is due from Maui and Hawaii ports this afternoon.

The bark C. D. Bryant is at the Pacific Mail wharf, where she will discharge her cargo of coal.

The bark Samoa moved out into the stream yesterday morning. She will await her turn at loading sugar.

Capt. Hilo of the steamer Mokolii is very ill. Capt. Lee of the bark C.

D. Bryant is in the same trouble. Capt. Clarke, formerly of the S. S. Columbia, will assist Mr. Fred Whitney in the wharf work for Wm. G.

Irwin & Co. The S. N. Castle will finish discharging tomorrow. It will be about the end of this month before she will load sugar for San Francisco.

The W. G. Hall and Mikahala have changed places for one trip. When the former returns from Kauai she will go on the marine railway. The Waialeale went on the marine railway for a cleaning yesterday morning. The Kinau was taken down and will leave on her regular Maui and

Hawaii route Friday. A. Cummins who returned from the Wednesday, December 16th, 1896, at Coast on the S. N. Castle the other day, 10 o'clock a. m. was made Captain of the steamer Mokolii yesterday morning. He left on his first trip during the afternoon.
