HE MIGHT HAVE HAD WALES' TITLE

The True Story of A Bavarian Prince HE IS A ROYAL MIGHT HAVE BEEN

Would now be Successor to British Throne But for Act of Settlement.

(Special Correspondence). LONDON, July 26.—An engagement recently reported in the Court Gazette, London, possesses a remarkable interest to the Anglo-Saxon race who follow up royal pedigrees. It is that of His Royal Highness Prince Rupert of Bavaria to the Duchess Marie Gabrielle, fourth daughter of the Duke, Charles Theodore, the distinguished oculist of Bavaria. Prince Rupert is one of Europe's royal "might have been," being according to the Legitimist genealogical table, the heir of the throne of Britain and consequently the present alternate Prince of Wales. If Prince Rupert had chanced to exist some seven hundred years ago he might not have been going around in the careless way that he does with a royal tag upon him, conspicuous to all. Had he ventured around very much, he probably would soon have been rounded up by the myrmidons of the court and placed in the Tower of London for safe keeping, for fear that he might some day get an itch to wear his own crown himself. Now, however, he is allowed to stroll around like any other person and enjoy himself right in the shadow of the throne to which he is the trustee heir. It is a long way to wade through pages of history to show upon what base the claims of Rupert to have Albert Edward's place rest, he being separated by a chasm of at least two centuries from the British throne. The trouble all came through the Act of Settlement, an instrument perpetrated in 1702, which deposed one section of the succession to the British throne in favor of another. The primary reason for the Act of Settlement being passed was the prevention of Catholics or those married to Catholics from ascending the British throne, which turned the succession over to the House of Hanover, which it reached through Elizabeth of Bohemia, the daughter of James I., the nearest blood royal not indicated for office by professing the Catholic religion. The Act of Settlement changed the royal descent of England from the common stock of King Egbert and William the Conqueror from which it had run uninterrupted until the death of Queen Anne into a more indirect channel and has practically limited the succession now to the descendants of Queen Victoria. According to legitimate calculations, based upon de jure rather than de facto sovereignty, Prince Rupert therefore really has better claim to the British throne than the present Prince of Wales. In the same way, his uncle and aunt, Prince and Princess Louis of Bavaria, are better entitled to sit on the throne than were the Prince Consort and Queen Victoria. Prince Rupert is not carried away by any foolish dreams, however, for he very well knows that the day has passed when such questions agitate the mind of the public to any extent. As a relative of the Queen he was present at the Jubilee, but the Legitimists could not induce him to become a new pretender. The fact is that the right to change the line of succession at any time is firmly vested in the British Parliament, so that whoever rules with its sanction, is within reasonable limits, a monarch de jure. The royal star does not seem to have been in the ascendant at the time of Prince Rupert's birth, for it is doubtful if he will ever even inherit the Bavarian throne, to which he is also a direct heir, there being three already before him in the line of succession. There are his father, Prince Ludwig of Bavaria; his grandfather, Prince Luitpold, who has been regent of Bavaria for the past fourteen years, reigning in place of the third line of succession, the mad King Otto. So far as the chances of the latter ever ascending the throne again, they seem to be extremely slim, for Otto still broods his time away over his pipe in the Schloss Furstenfeld and seems to forget that he ever enjoyed the pains and pleasures of regal existence. But in case of the death of Prince Luitpold, the present occupant of the Bavarian throne, it is supposed that he will be succeeded by his son, Prince Ludwig. Should both Otto and Ludwig die without heirs, Prince Rupert's chance will come in. Prince Rupert's marriage, also is closely allied to the British royal family, his wife, who was Maria Theresa, Arch-Duchess of Austria-Este-Modena, being the most direct descendant of Charles I. who but for the Act of Settlement would have been Mary IV. of England and III. of Scotland. The Arch-Duchess could not have reigned in England, however, as her grandmothers, Mary III. and II. by marrying her uncle, the Duke of Modena, vitiated the claim according to English law. This line of possible or impossible succession brings in another string of royal "might have been." The next in line on this Jacobin branch, therefore, was the Arch-Duchess's sister, the Duchess of Palma, whose living representative is the present dual head of that house, he being also a de jure royal personage and figuring as Robert I. of England and IV. of Scotland on the other side of the family. To offset the snatches of pleasure which must accrue from the feeling that according to one standard of succession he some day might have been king of the greatest empire on earth, Prince Rupert has to look back to a

REAL PRINCE OF WALES AND HIS FAIR FIANCEE

Their coming wedding recalls the romance of the Legitimist succession and as strangely happens both are relatives of Queen Victoria. The Act of Settlement, which overrode the direct line of descent from King Egbert in favor of the House of Hanover and subsequently tied up the heritage of the British Crown in the family of Queen Victoria, set aside a long list of legitimate successors to the crown, many of which belonged to the House of Bavaria. There often have been hard feelings over the matter, but the present heir to the throne, Prince Rupert, does not fret himself about what might have been, but makes himself very agreeable to his English cousins. around the northern end of the Island from Waipahoehoe to Waialua. There is a decided need for these routes for the closing of a number of small hostels on the Island has produced great inconvenience to many residents of the Island. The Orpheum. Quite a number were present at the Orpheum last night to witness the performance by the late McAdoo Company. The hit of the evening was a "disturbance" by Miss Milton as the "tough girl" who takes a seat out in the audience, treating a commotion, and is ejected by the special policeman who is employed by the theater. The program for tonight will be the same. A large crowd is looked for.

Tricked the Chinese. Four small Portuguese boys worked a neat scheme to rob a Chinese of a portion of the load of bananas which he was bringing to the city from Kalihii valley. As the man neared Kamehameha school leading two donkeys laden with the fruit, the boys accosted him and while two engaged him in conversation the other picked bananas from the load and dropped them in the road. Presently the boys left the Chinese and started with all apparent innocence on

SUMMER DAYS IN WASHINGTON

Army Officers All Want To Go To China.

THE CABINET IS A WAR COUNCIL

Gen. Miles Would Like Active Service Abroad—Visit of Prominent People.

(Special Correspondence). WASHINGTON, August 8.—The flower of glory can only be plucked in the field of danger. That is why army officers and their friends are thronging the corridors of the war department, pulling every wire in sight to get assigned to duty with our troops in China. The army officers expect it to be a big war, and believe, in the language of Admiral Schley, that there will be glory enough for all who are on the ground. The glory-hunters are by no means confined to the youngish officers. They all seem to want to go. Lieutenant General Miles, commander of the army, would himself like to get service in China, and even General Leonard Wood, military governor of Cuba, who is over here to talk about Cuban matters with Secretary Root, has taken the Chinese glory fever, and will go if he can get the consent of the President and Secretary Root to go there, but that is not likely. Gen. Wood is wanted right where he is. Some of the old retired chaps have been scenting glory, too. Gen. O. O. Howard stopped while on his way to the Blue and Grey reunion at Atlanta to assure Secretary Root that he was at the disposal of the department if he could be of any service in connection with the trouble in China. Mrs. McKinley did not accompany the President on his flying trip to Washington, but remained in Canton and awaits his early return there. Meanwhile the cabinet room in the White House is again a war council chamber. Whatever may be the opinion elsewhere it is a sure bid for public attention in Washington for a man to decline a prominent office. Therefore, when it was announced that Curtis Guild of Boston had declined the position of first assistant postmaster general, which Perry Heath is about to give up and take an active hand in the game of politics, which is only one grade below a member of the cabinet, everybody was trying to find out something about Mr. Guild. But they didn't find out very much. He is an active newspaper man with large business interests, which he declined to jeopardize by accepting office, although he did not hesitate to let his business take its chances when he thought the country needed his services to fight; he wore a uniform during the war with Spain. Mr. Guild is not yet forty, but he is recognized and spoken of by such men as Secretary Long and Senator Lodge as one of the solid men of his state. John T. Spear of Denver, who is now in Denver, believes that every man should help advertise his state when he is away from home. Here is a portion of what he said of his: "Colorado is coming more and more to be the health resort of the nation. The high altitude makes residence there very beneficial in cases of lung trouble. When I left home on July 5 there were many places in the state where the snow had not yet melted. The combination of warm sun and unmelted snow gives a peculiar balmness to the air that I have felt in no other section of the country; but a peculiar thing about this combination is that it will sunburn a man quicker than exposure on the Sahara desert. A single day outdoors when the sun shines brightly and the ground is covered with snow will make the skin peel off a man's nose as thoroughly as though he had dipped it in boiling water." There is a gentleman in Washington just now who so thoroughly dislikes notoriety that he is thinking seriously of either taking to the woods or adopting a new name until after the Presidential election. His name is W. J. Bryan, and his home is in Atlanta, Ga., and although he invariably puts his home town and state after his name on hotel registers, he no sooner enters a town than he is bombarded with cards and notes intended for the other Mr. Bryan, whose home is in Lincoln, Neb. The duplication of names might make even more trouble for the Atlanta Bryan were it not that he differs so widely in appearance from the Lincoln Bryan that he saves much explanation by simply showing himself. A way suggested to him that he use gummed portraits of himself, instead of writing his name on hotel registers, but, as before remarked, he shuns notoriety. There is quite a flutter among the Washington masculine fortune-hunters, who are in town for one reason or another, principally because they have to sell a portion of their time to live, over the announcement that Princess Sophia and Princess Bamba, daughters of Prince Dhuleep Singh, one of the greatest and richest of the potentates of India, who are now in New York, are coming to Washington to see the sights and to be seen. The eldest of the sisters is said to be thirty years old, but they are both beautiful women of the Hindoo type, and each of them wears jewels worth a fortune. If one or both of them should take a fancy to add an American husband to the already large outfit, Washington has bunches from which choice might be made.

Seaman's Club. A well attended concert was given last night at the Seaman's Club. The program was an unusually good one, and was much appreciated. Mrs. Annis Montague Turner, Mr. Paty, and Mr. John Wilson vocalized; Miss Duffy recited with feeling; Messrs. Johnson and Parker gave a banjo and clog dance number, and Miss Rice accompanied in her usual finished style.

SPECIAL SESSION NOT AGREED ON

Governor not Determined to Convene the Legislature.

A special session of the Legislature may be called; again, it may not be. Governor Dole and his advisers have reached no determination in the matter. The subject has been discussed for weeks and the Governor has asked and heard the opinions of many prominent citizens as to the advisability of convening the Legislature at an early date. Some months ago, immediately after Hawaii had become a Territory, there was talk of an "extra" session, which meant the holding of a special election at a great expense. The "extra" session was not called, and what is now discussed is merely the assembling of the Legislature after its members are regularly elected, sooner than they would ordinarily be gathered. The Governor, who has all the say in the matter, has not made up his mind one way or the other. He is being urged by many to take the momentous step and by others he is being counseled against it. The regular session of the Legislature meets the first Monday in February, the election being on the first Monday in November. It is not possible that the Governor will call a special election for legislators, as with the thirty days' notice required by the Territorial law, it would be the first of October before such an election could be held, if the call was made in the next few days. What is talked of is the meeting of the Legislature in December, or two months before the regular session. It is claimed that the fact that the tax rate, at present 1 per cent, will become a fixed rate on the first of January, and those who desire to expend more of the people's money than is raised by the existing levy, are anxious that the Legislature elevate it before it is too late. Eminent lawyers believe that the Legislature cannot enact a retrospective measure and that if the tax rate is not changed before the first of the year the Legislature will be powerless to alter it. Contrary to the expectations of some, the matter did not come before the Governor's council yesterday, and it is still in the same condition as it was weeks ago, says Secretary Cooper.

JUDGE LITTLE'S JOKE REBOUNDS

The Funny Miltimus Must be Amended—Doings at Council.

The miltimus from Judge Little commanding the execution of Fujihara, the Japanese wife murderer, in which by a curious error the soul of Hugh Sheriff Brown, and not of the murderer, was commended to the mercy of God, has been adjudged defective by Governor Dole, and it will be returned to Judge Little for correction. The miltimus was presented to the Governor for his signature yesterday, but after looking it over he sent it back to his secretary with the request that it be forwarded to Judge Little for correction. Dr. Carmichael, Government medical officer at this port, and Collector General Stackpole, have united in a protest to the Governor against turning the channel wharf over to any private party for use. They say that the need for the wharf may arise at almost any time, and urge that it be preserved for the purposes for which it was constructed. The sewer outfall question was considered by the council at some length and it was decided that work must be pushed on it at once, for there was danger that if the work were left as at present, all the work might be undone by a single storm. Superintendent Atkinson announced to the council that steps had been taken for the examination of all teachers in the schools, and that they would all have to have medical certificates.

ON OUR AUTOMOBILE

A former Chinese kitchen servant yesterday met the master of the house where the Celestial was wont to break divers dishes and serve up the food in a generally indigestible manner. They met on Fort street. Their last meeting was on a certain day several months past when the servant who had enriched his pocket book by successful gaming at che fa was independent to a fault. A wordy war ensued over the breakage of a particularly fine piece of Haviland and the old saying that the "Chinese must go," was put into effect. When yesterday they met the Chinese proudly doffed his sun-tanned straw pile and disclosed a shock of black hair, minus the queue which adorned his head as a kitchen servant.

"You want boy in office? See, no got queue now? I like work in office."

Despite the fact he was not an English scholar the young Chinese had gained the idea that minus a queue he had ascended the social ladder and was a fit competitor with the white man for a clerical position.

"Bubonic plague is an old disease," said a Honolulu doctor yesterday. "The First Book of Samuel (chapter four to six) describes an epidemic in 1141, B. C., which was bubonic plague. After the Philistines had captured the Ark of the Covenant and taken it to Ashdod, severe illness broke out among the people. 'The hand of the Lord was heavy upon them and smote them with emerods.' The Ark was afterward taken to Ekron, and here again we are told 'There was a deadly destruction throughout all the city . . . and the men that died not were smitten with the emerods, and the cry of the city went up to heaven.' The word 'emerods' has usually been taken to mean hemorrhoids, but in the revised version of the Old Testament is stated to mean tumor or plague boil. The epidemic in Philistia occurred at the time of the regular plague season, and mice are mentioned in connection with it, which furnishes additional evidence that the epidemic was plague, for a connection between the death of rats and plague at Bombay and elsewhere has been clearly established. Taking all the facts into consideration, there appears to be contained in the few chapters of I Samuel an account of an epidemic of bubonic plague that occurred more than three thousand years ago, or more than eight hundred years previous to the hitherto accepted historic record."

A gentleman who alighted from a tram car yesterday at the corner of Richards and Beretania streets and was suddenly tripped off his feet and felled to the earth thought an earthquake had passed beneath him. When he had risen to a sitting posture and gazed ruefully after the car which rattled on down the street, he discovered the reason of his sudden elevation and resultant downfall. It was a boy on a bicycle who had found that clinging to the rear rail of the car and being towed by Pain's mules was much easier than pumping away at the pedals. It has been noticed that the custom is growing of late to such proportions that from one to two bicyclists cling to every car like so many cockroaches. The passenger who alights from a car while it is in motion takes his chances nowadays and it is a great wonder to the automobilist that more accidents have not occurred from this source.

Rollin M. Daggett was United States Minister to Hawaii back in Arthur's time and a more rough and ready diplomat never came out of the Nevada mining camp. A scholar and a poet in his writings he was always a Bret Harte miner in his speech and in the phases of his social life. Soon after he came here he called on Queen Emma and was shown about her mansion. One of the treasures pointed to was a fine portrait of the Queen's dead son, the Prince of Hawaii.

"Likely boy," said Daggett. "Trot him out!"

"But Your Excellency," answered the Queen with a pained look, "he is dead."

"The-h-l-you-say?" was the diplomat's reply, with a rising inflection which anybody but the bereaved Queen would have found irresistible.

The divorce laws of Hawaii were materially affected when the act to provide a government for the Territory of Hawaii was passed by Congress. The result is that Hawaii will not become the mecca of divorcees as Dakota proved to be for so many years. Formerly the laws of the Republic were such that a residence of two years was required before either could apply for a divorce, but both parties must have lived in Hawaii together as man and wife. The principle of the law was upheld if persons passed through by steamer and were in Honolulu but a day. That constituted a residence here.

Under the ruling of the United States statutes upon the subject no one can take up a residence here expecting at the end of two years to file a divorce in case the wife or husband as the case may be, resides on the Mainland and has never lived in Hawaii. This law absolutely shuts off the possibility of one party to a divorce suit living here for the statutory time and securing a decree of divorce. Despite the fact, however, that the laws effectually prevent Hawaii from becoming a second Dakota, it is probable that in the next legislature the subject will be investigated. Attorneys believe that the legislature should create a law, or modify the present one, which gives the privilege of divorce after the full two years' residence.

THE PACIFIC Commercial Advertiser WALTER C. SMITH - EDITOR. SATURDAY AUGUST 25

Yesterday's instalments ought to have been a receipt in full for that Sewall printing press.

We congratulate Judge Humphreys on having a much better opinion of the Grand Jury than his paper expresses.

The Republican Central Committee directs attention in another column to the fact that precinct or district clubs cannot hold meetings in conformity with the rules and regulations of the Republican party unless they advertise them six days in advance.

In view of the Oriental labor attitude there should be a full regiment of militia in Hawaii, drilled as infantry and artillery and supplied with the requisite arms and munitions.

Hawaii wants of Congress: Forts at Honolulu and Hilo; Federal garrisons on the four larger islands; The enlargement of Honolulu harbor or the opening of Pearl Harbor or both; In case of the opening of Pearl Harbor a Navy Yard; A breakwater for Hilo; Federal buildings.

The Delegate who will secure the necessary appropriations will never have much trouble about a re-election.

The Government has sent for rubber seed and there will be a thorough test of the capabilities of Hawaiian upland soil for growing one of the most useful and remunerative of trees.

THE GRAND JURY LIBELED.

Enraged because its charges against the Republican administration of Hawaii failed to impress either the Grand Jury or the people, the yellow journal accuses the jurymen of being organized to whitewash.

- Who are the men whose names and reputations are slurred by the yellow scold whose sponsors are already sorry for its appearance in this community? We give them as they appear appended to the report which the morning libeller tries to impeach: E. I. Spaulding, foreman, W. G. Ashley, S. Lowden, J. S. Walker, J. L. McLean, W. O. Atwater, John Effinger, L. C. Ables, C. H. Atherton, F. M. Lewis, Edwin Benner, T. W. Hobron, M. P. Robinson, C. Hustace, Jr., E. A. McInerney, A. F. Cooke, W. H. Hoogs.

If there were no other certificate of character for the Grand Jury report these names would be sufficient.

One of the reasons why the yellow journal objects to the Jury is that the latter was not under the control and responsive to the spite and petty revengefulness of the Sewall machine.

Chagrined as they are at the failure to wreck the Republican Territorial administration, the machine politicians console themselves with the belief that a way can be found to deprive the High Sheriff of his jury-drawing prerogatives and confer them upon a creature of the ring.

It is to be hoped, in the interest of good government for Honolulu, that the next Grand Jury will be drawn and summoned by an Editor especially appointed by the court, and that it will be bereft of such a liberal supply of whitewash, as seemed to be in the keeping of the body just adjourned.

Certainly, turn over the drawing of the Jury to a ringster and when drawn instruct that body to let no innocent man escape. This is the whole scheme in a nutshell and it is an important part of the conspiracy to get the political control of Hawaii into hands that would use it to line their pockets at the expense of the taxpayers.

IN THE MATTER OF BOSSES.

It is perfectly natural that journals which admire Mr. Sewall should also admire the late Walter Murray Gibson. The records of the two men, except in ability—Gibson's strong point—are very much alike.

The Advertiser recalled Kalakaua's scheming Warwick from the shadows of the past, partly to remind the people of what they must expect when they accept a political boss.

The whole theory upon which Mr. Sewall has proceeded since he came to these islands is that of private political aggrandizement leading from and to the control of Hawaiian politics.

For the good of the country? Mr. Sewall never did Hawaii even a grateful turn. For the benefit of the native Hawaiians? Mr. Sewall always ignored the Hawaiians, until, in recent politics, he found that he must have their votes or go to the wall.

The Advertiser in its long fight for good government will not accept anything for the Republican party but Republican principles. It knows the party to be great enough and wise enough to manage its own affairs without let or hindrance from individual self-seekers.

THE DANGER AT HAND.

It has been stated several times of late by an organ of the machine that delegates to the District Convention chosen at the primaries, will be instructed to nominate no one for the Legislature who will not vote for city and county government.

The desire of the machine to get city and county government is purely one of spoils. Debarred in the main from their contemplated enjoyment of Territorial offices, the ringsters want city and county systems that will take over much of the present authority of Territorial incumbents and give the ring a great number of salaried jobs to enjoy and to dispense.

It is amazing that the taxpaying, conservative elements are so apathetic in the face of this danger. Are they going to sleep forever, they who have made such magnificent showings of civic patriotism in the past?

The transport Siam was expected last night with mail from the Coast but up to the hour of closing the Advertiser's forms she had not arrived.

owing to the need of haste in getting to the China station. There has been a rearrangement of the Manila schedule since the Boxer crisis became acute.

One of the interesting features in the Paris exhibition is the furniture section, where is exposed, among other delectable exhibits, a small Louis XVI salon, the woodwork of which, in sculptured oak, painted white, has been executed for the Duke of Marlborough.

Costly Cabling.

For telegrams between Washington and Manila the American government is at present paying about $400,000 annually. Communication is by a round-about way 14,000 miles, as follows: To New York by land; to Valencia, Ireland, by cable; to Brighton, England, by cable and land; to Havre, France, by cable; to Marseilles, by land; to Alexandria, Egypt, by cable; to Suez, Egypt, by land; to Aden, Arabia, by cable; to Bombay, India, by cable; to Madras, by land; to Singapore, Malay Peninsula, by cable; to Saigon, Cochinchina, by cable; to Hongkong, by cable; to Manila, Philippine Islands, by cable.

Partial to Boy Critics.

A VICTIM OF AGUINALDO HERE

Teeth Torn Out By The Luzon Fiends.

TALE TOLD BY A SPANISH SOLDIER

Bonita Dias, Now in Oahu Penitentiary, Discloses a Horrid Romance.

There is a prisoner at Oahu penitentiary who is not an advocate of the admission as good American citizens of the horde of semi-savages who own allegiance to Aguinaldo. It is not alone the fact that he is a Spaniard that leads him to believe that the Filipinos are not of the stuff of which Americans are made. He has a grievance against the Aguinaldites and he tells a story of cruelties received at their hands that is hard to match in this century; that is a reminder of the days of the Inquisition, or of those reckless old German barons to whom horrid barbarities were the breath of life.

Bonito N. Dias is the man, and he is confined at Oahu for a petty theft. His record is none too good, but there is no doubt of the truth of his story, for he bears the living marks of the tortures to which he was subjected by command of Aguinaldo's soldiers.

In Dias' upper jaw not a tooth remains and half of those in the lower jaw are missing. They were pulled out one by one with a shoemaker's pincers while Dias was a prisoner in the hands of the Filipinos; pulled out by the roots, torn from his jaw by a couple of little brown-skinned fiends in human shape who were the uniform of the alleged Filipino republic, because the prisoner asked for a drink of water!

In Warden Henry's office at the prison yesterday Dias told his story. He is a tall, gaunt Spaniard, rather good-looking but bearing in his bent frame and his rather cringing manner the tokens of the suffering he has gone through. He came into the office wearing the blue and white striped clothing of the prison and a pair of light, cheap shoes. He held a hand to his side and at the direction of Warden Henry took a seat on a bench until the interpreter arrived.

"You see he has not been well," explained the Warden. "His experiences with the Filipinos seem to have ruined his health and we have had to keep him in the hospital since he has been here. He can't eat very much, on account of his teeth, you know, and it was because he asked to have special fare that we learned his story."

Presently the interpreter shuffled in, hastily buttoning his coat. He, too, had a history, for he proved to be A. C. Reis, the man who was involved in the attempt to blow up the residence of the Portuguese Consul early in the spring. Dias was perfectly willing to tell his story—eager, in fact—and as soon as he understood what was wanted he began to talk volubly in Spanish, waving his arms in air to emphasize what he was saying, and his eyes flashing with indignation as he came to the more harrowing details.

"I was a sergeant in the Spanish army stationed at Cavite when the Americans came into the Bay of Manila and sank all our ships," he began. "It was a hard fight, but their guns were better than ours and they beat us. Finally all of our ships were gone and the Americans took the forts at Cavite and we had to get out as fast as we could. I was in command of a squad of twenty-five men, and when we left Cavite for Manila we got separated from the rest of our regiment, and before we knew it we were in the midst of the insurgents.

"There were hundreds of them all around us," cried out the Spaniard, spluttering in his excitement and his endeavors to make himself understood, for the Portuguese was not quick and Dias spoke so rapidly and gesticulated so wildly that a trained linguist must have had difficulty in following the rapid fire of his remarks. "There must have been 3,000 around us, anyway. We tried to stand them off but we were so few in number that they soon had all our guns and we had to give up. Then they took us to Malolos. Some of the officers knew me, for I had learned to speak their language and I had acted as interpreter many times in Manila before there was war between the Filipinos and the Spanish.

"When they got us to Malolos they put us in prison and they treated us frightfully," the man's eyes grew wide and he shook his head mournfully and almost wept in self-pity. "They took all my clothes off—everything. They tore the sergeant's stripes from my jacket and one of the men put it on. They left me with nothing but my drawers and a shirt—no cap; nothing to cover my head. Oh, but we were hungry, and then they didn't care. All they gave us to eat was eighteen grains of rice a day and hardly any water. How we wanted water! I asked for some water of the man in command after we reached the prison all tired out and hot and dirty after the march, and what did he do? He ordered me tied up and whipped! They fastened my arms behind my back and tied my legs together, and a man whipped my back with sticks. He struck me on the head until it bled. See, you can see the scars yet."

He leaned forward, panting in the intensity of his passion, and passed his fingers through his hair. The red scars of those two-year-old wounds were yet visible.

"But I did not care how they beat me. I cried out that they might shoot me; I begged them to kill me, but first to give me some water. Only water—that was all I wanted. And then they were furious because they could not make me keep still. Two of them came at me and I thought they were going to kill me, and I was glad. One of them had a pair of shoemaker's pincers and before I knew what they were going to do they pulled my jaws apart and stuck the pincers in and tore out three of my upper teeth."

In pantomime he showed how it was done, stretching his jaws wide and showing the mutilated upper jaw, guiltless of teeth, like that of a very old man, but red and scarred and horrid.

"After that I don't remember much; I thought they were tearing my head off entirely," he went on, more soberly. "My mouth filled up with blood, so that they could not see to pull all the lower teeth. And when I came to my senses again they had taken every tooth out of the upper jaw. And even then, when I was half dead, they would not give me water."

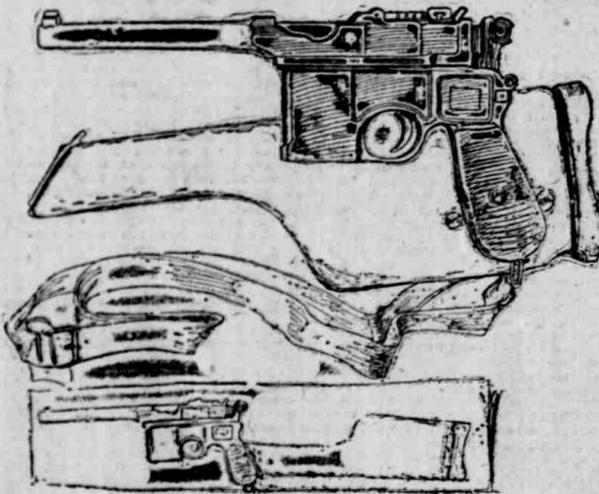

"I got well after a while, but I could not eat much, and I was so nearly starved to death. We were all kept in a narrow prison with guards all around. Three months and nine days I was there, all the time getting weaker and almost dying. And so I made up my mind to escape. One of the guards was kind to me, and I asked him to let me get away. He said he would if I would promise not to tell who let me escape if they caught me again. That night I got out of the window and away, and for three days I lay hid. Some French women befriended me, or I don't believe I should have ever reached Manila alive. They gave me clothing and even $50 in money to help me to Manila.

"A few days after that the American troops landed and they soon took the city for we had no ammunition and we could not fight without ammunition. I was sent away in a transport back to Spain. From there I came to Honolulu to work on a plantation, for the wages in Spain were so small that I could not make a living there and I had to go away."

TO HELP HIM OUT.

"Oh, dear!" sighed Ronald as he puzzled over his multiplication table. "how I wish I had an Australian rabbit." And to the look of inquiry on his teacher's face he added quickly, "Cause my geography says they multiply with great rapidity."

THIS PISTOL KILLED MORE THAN ONE BOXER

DURING the recent fights of the foreigners in China against the Boxers and Imperial forces a new weapon of death was brought prominently into action by the citizen soldiery which proved most effective. This is the Mauser revolver, which sprung into prominence during the South African war. The Boers were armed with the weapons, and nearly all the photographs shown of the Boer fighter in the field depict him with a holster slung over his shoulder having much the same appearance as a carbine holster. It was a recent invention, made in Germany, and was considered one of the finest weapons yet in use. In appearance it is a "young" Gatling or Maxim, and contains a magazine which holds ten bullets. An expert can load the gun four times a minute. Smokeless powder is used and there is no recoil whatever in the discharge. A lead band contains ten cartridges which are fed direct into the magazine by a side chamber. At each discharge the shells fly out of the barrel at the side shown just above the magazine. They are ejected with such velocity that it is almost impossible to discern them. At seventy-five feet a ball will penetrate seventeen inches of pine. Mandel & Co., of Shanghai, the agents of the firearm company in the Orient, furnished hundreds of these revolvers to the volunteer foreigners. The revolver is a great curiosity inasmuch as it is one of the first relics to be brought here from the scene of the war, and it has a record of a few dead boxers.

The revolver is carried ordinarily in the wooden holster. A spring releases the end of the butt, which flies open and allows the gun to be drawn out. If it is desired to use it as a rifle, the wooden holster can be easily attached to the handle of the revolver, making it into a short carbine.

A MINISTER'S GOOD WORK. "I had a severe attack of bilious colic, got a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, took two doses and was entirely cured," says Rev. A. A. Power, of Emporia, Kan.

"My neighbor across the street was sick for over a week, had two or three bottles of medicine from the doctor. He used them for three or four days without relief, then called in another doctor, who treated him for some days and gave him no relief, so discharged him. I went over to see him the next morning. He said 'My bowels were in a terrible fix, that they had been running off so long that it was almost bloody flux. I asked him if he had tried Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, and he said 'No.' I went home and brought him my bottle and gave him one dose; told him to take another dose in fifteen or twenty minutes if he did not find relief, but he took no more, and was entirely cured." THE OTHER MAN'S ARM (Continued from Page 5.)

ness being old and somewhat feeble, it required but the work of a moment for Snyder to finish his victim; but before he had time to relinquish his murderous grip, he was seized and overpowered by the servants of the house, who had heard the cry of their mistress. Snyder had made a full confession, and it looked as though nothing but the hand of Mercy could save his miserable life from the hand of the executioner.

"One week later Snyder plead guilty, stating at the same time that hunger and the impossibility of securing work that he could do had driven him to desperation. His plea, however, seems to have had no effect on the judge, for he was sentenced to be decapitated by the sword on the following Friday at 11 o'clock in the morning.

"On the night before Snyder's execution I could sleep but little. I was exceedingly nervous and despondent. Miserable thoughts racked my brain, and I rolled and tossed in bed. One notion in particular got possession of my mind and I could not shake it off. I imagined I was Snyder's accomplice. Just then I was directly, if not directly, as guilty of the crime as he, for, I reasoned, if I had not deprived him of his arm he might not have done the deed. At last, toward morning, my wretchedness became so unbearable that I got out of bed. I drank some brandy, lit my pipe and sank back into a chair before the fire. Then it seemed to me that every incident, every circumstance that linked my life with Snyder's passed through my mind in frightful review. Mechanically I raised my eyes to the little clock on the mantel. It wanted five minutes to 4. In five minutes Snyder would be a corpse--headless! I shuddered. It was horrible. Just then I began to tremble violently; then to jerk and twist, and the fingers to twitch and close spasmodically. The arm had never been so violent before. I sought in vain to check its action. Frenzied with fear and apprehension, I sprang to my feet and started to pace the floor. At that instant the clock began to strike. I stood stock-still, my eyes fixed upon the dial. Suddenly at the fourth stroke of the little clock my arm shot up furiously into the air; writhed for a moment like a wounded snake, and then, with one convulsive tremor, dropped heavily to my side. I seized the hand frantically; my fingers were stiff and bloodless, and a cold clammy sweat covered it like a glove. The arm was rigid, powerless--dead! For nearly two years I had been chained as it were to the arm of a devil, now it was the arm of a corpse. Filled with horror and dismay, I rang the bell furiously for Hans and sent him in haste for Dr. Meyer. The doctor, whose belongings were in the same square, soon made his appearance, looking somewhat pale and agitated, but in an instant recovered his usual composure when he saw that I was up and tramping the floor with the security of a professional sprinter. When he had learned what had happened to the arm, he gently took the stiff and lifeless member in his hand, and examining it closely, coolly remarked, notwithstanding his former words of encouragement, that he had expected something of the kind all along. He said the arm was dead beyond repair, and that amputation should be performed with delay. Suddenly my heart sank within me when I heard those words, and I trembled perceptibly with fear. Once more my courage had deserted me. To tell the truth, extreme suffering had by this time deprived me of that heroic courage which I possessed when you saw me first. I begged any doctor not to be too hasty, but to wait a little and see if something might not turn up which would be favorable to the arm.

"The doctor shook his head and declared that delay was exceedingly hazardous; but that if I still insisted he would, more through pity for my ungodly weakness than for any other charitablely give his consent. He warned me, however, that he would not be held responsible for anything serious that might occur.

"But I had not long to wait before something did turn up. Four days after they had put Snyder's body under ground, I began to feel better. My arm began to tingle and tingle, and finally to escape death from blood-poisoning I was more than willing to submit to a hasty operation. I buried the arm in Snyder's grave, and with it I buried all my trouble, and now I am," he said, with a merry twinkle of his eye, "one of the happiest men on earth."

"I believed him, for there sitting before me once more, was assuredly the same jovial, one-armed Lieutenant, whose hearty laughter and enjoyable loquacity had made his companionship so delightfully entertaining on the Rhine boat nearly three years before.--Pittsburg Dispatch.

The Rev. Mr. Alcott, of Elgin, Ill., one of the Abraham Lincoln's Springfield acquaintances, tells of seeing him coming away from church unusually early one Sunday morning.

"The sermon could not have been more than half way through," says Mr. Alcott, "his son 'Tad' was slung across his left arm like a pair of saddle-bags, and Lincoln was striding along with long and deliberate steps towards his home. On one of the street corners he encountered a group of his fellow-townsmen. Lincoln anticipated the question which was about to be put by the group, and, taking his figure of speech from practices with which they were only too familiar, said: 'Gentlemen, I entered this colt, but he kicked around so I had to withdraw him.'"

Neuralgia Cured

Not eased, but cured. Not quieted for a short time, but permanently cured. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People cure Neuralgia by revitalizing the nervous system and restoring the life-giving elements of the blood.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People

Mrs. William Cotter who lives at No. 42 Windsor Street, Hartford, Conn., says: "I was taken with neuralgia several years ago and suffered untold misery. I tried a great many doctors and several remedies, but I found only temporary relief. About three years ago I was advised to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People and I did so. I thought that the first box gave me some relief, and my husband insisted that I keep on taking the pills. I did, and I can truly say that the pills are the only medicine that ever permanently benefited me."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People contain, in a condensed form, all the elements necessary to give new life and richness to the blood, and restore shattered nerves.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People are sold by all dealers, or will be sent, postpaid, on receipt of price, 50c. a box or six boxes for $2.50 (they are never sold in bulk or by the 100) by addressing Dr. Williams Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y.

ALICE E. COOKE.

The schooner Alice E. Cooke, twenty-two days out from Port Gamble, docked yesterday morning at 7 o'clock at the Oceanic wharf. Captain Penhallow reports a fine voyage the entire trip, no incidents worth mentioning from the time the towing steamer left her. She is consigned to Lewers & Cooke with 950,000 feet of lumber and a number of spars, two of them particularly fine specimens of the Sound sticks. She will return in ballast. Captain Penhallow brought down a splendid little second-rater, Optisar, belonging to his son, who is with Brewer & Co. The Optisar was formerly of the mosquito fleet in Honolulu, and was taken to the Coast when young Mr. Penhallow entered Stanford. Later it was left with the Oakland Boat Club, but was misused. Captain Penhallow secured the little flyer, renovated her, and she now looks as trim as if just off the stocks. She is four years old, was built on board the Alice E. Cooke, and carries a keel weighted with 350 pounds of lead. She is sloop-rigged and uses a deep center-board. Optisar is the Chinook word for "sweetheart."

The two spars are consigned to Sorrenson & Lytle. One is 106 feet long, 39 inches in diameter at the base, tapering to 25 inches at the top.

A RICH PRIZE.

One of the richest prizes ever picked up at sea is now making her way through the Atlantic to Gibraltar, in charge of six seamen from the British ship Senator. The vessel is a Norwegian iron ship Superb, with a rich cargo of ore, which was picked up in latitude 36 north, longitude 36 west, totally abandoned, but in first-class condition, vessel and cargo being valued at fully $200,000. The prize was spoken on May 24 in latitude 36 north, longitude 29.04 west, by Captain Jones, of the British steamship Chiverstone, which arrived at this port yesterday from Carthage. Despite the fact that the Superb, a full-rigged ship, was manned by only six men, there were no requests for assistance made. Captain Jones, who stated that signals displayed showed that the vessel was proceeding for Gibraltar. When last seen he calculated she was proceeding at the rate of about four knots.

The Superb left Rio Janeiro on February 17, for Middlesborough, England, with a full cargo of manganese ore, and was deserted by her crew, who became needlessly alarmed in a storm on April 27, in latitude 33 north. The frightened sailors were picked up by the bark Seafarer, from San Francisco for Hull, and were landed at Portland by the tug Oceana on May 1.

The British ship Senator, from which vessel the prize crew was taken, sighted the abandoned vessel on May 6, and an officer on boarding the vessel found her sound and staunch, with the exception of her main, mizzen and foretopgallant masts, which were gone. Jones, 59 feet of her amidship starboard rail was also gone, but otherwise she was as sound and staunch as on the day she was launched. An examination made by the officers from the Senator showed that the vessel was deeply heeled with her bows up.

COWBOYS FOR DECK HANDS.

Life on a Columbia river towboat as a general thing is quite prosaic, but the monotony of life on the Ocklahama on her last round trip to Astoria was varied slightly by the presence of a couple of new deck hands just off the range, says the Portland Oregonian. Deck hands are scarce at present, along with other kinds of labor, and to fill out a crew last trip a couple of Montana cow punchers were shipped, along with guns, sombreros and all the rest of the range paraphernalia. The mate could not persuade them to lay aside their guns, but by gentle argument he convinced them that it would be wrong to carry out their determination to shoot out the range lights along the river. The Ocklahama went down light, but the men had a comparatively easy time until the up trip. The steamer stopped a couple of times to wood, and this kind of labor disagreed with the new men. The anchor was dropped near Ranier, and it was at 7 o'clock before they turned in. One of them left word with the watchman not to call him until 7 o'clock. As the steamer was to get under way about 4 o'clock, the watchman roused the bad man about that time. The new deck hand pulled a gun out from under the blanket more forcible than the watchman's nose, and shouting it under the "I told you not to call me before 7 o'clock; now you clear out of here, and if you come back again, I'll bore a hole through you."

The watchman departed, and it was 7 o'clock before he repeated the call. The Lydgate, which the Ocklahama had in tow, was a source of wonder to the strangers, and one of them strolled over to the ship and began talking to the sailors who were steering. The mate of the ship, shocked at this breach of discipline, strode up, and in language more forcible than elegant asked the intruder what he was doing there. Maverick Brander, who was in kind by telling the mate that it was none of his business, and in response to the mate's invitation for him to leave, told him that if he did not "close his face" he would "poke him in the jaw," "push in his clats" and otherwise disarrange his anatomy.

The mate took him at his word and left him absorbing information to take back to the range with him. After he had secured all the pointers he needed he went back aboard the Ocklahama and climbed up to the pilot house. He went in without knocking, and when Captain Colson asked him what he wanted, said he was just looking over the boat because he felt like it. He said he had never "saw" one before, and thought he would look it over while he had a chance. The colossal nerve of the man staggered Captain Colson, and he permitted him to wander around the boat with as much freedom as though he was still on the range. The men were paid off when the boat reached Portland, and the next applicant for a job will undergo a little civil service examination and must leave his guns ashore, else he cannot feed in the Ocklahama's mess.

Consumption

It Can be Cured.

There is no doubt about it. Begin early, take out all impurities from the system, enrich the blood, and recovery is certain. If your child is thin and pale give Ayer's Sarsaparilla at once. Consumption only attacks the weak. Mr. Alfred G. Stevens, of Parnell, Auckland, N. Z., sends us the photograph of his daughter and says:

"My daughter Emily, 17 years of age, was in a very low state. She could not sleep because of her violent cough. Two doctors said she was in the first stages of consumption. She was so weak she could not get out by herself. A friend induced me to try

AYER'S Sarsaparilla

In less than two weeks our daughter could sleep well at night. Her mother and I would go into her room at all hours of the night, it seemed so good not to hear that awful hollow cough. She raised great quantities of blood, yet notwithstanding all this I can now say she is entirely cured."

With the Change in Tariff

Comes a sweeping reduction in the price of all goods of American manufacture.

We have cut on every piece of jewelry and silverware in the house, and you will be surprised at the great difference from former prices. No fear of comparisons here, where quality and pattern are considerations.

What do you think of full-sized solid silver teaspoons being reduced to $8.00 a dozen, with engraving thrown in, and all articles of silverware reduced in like proportion.

These are by no means catch prices, but regular prices which will prevail here from now on, on all the different lines of goods from the States.

While reducing all our American goods we have not changed the prices on any of our European potteries, glass and chinaware, and although the present cost is forty per cent more than formerly, while our present very large stock lasts we will sell at the old rates. This is a very large saving to you, and we recommend that you make your purchases from these lines now, before an advance becomes necessary.

The Best Food for Infants

Nature planned that infants should have only milk for at least the first year of life. But thin milk, skimmed milk, will not nourish. It's the milk that is rich in cream, or fat, that does the work. This is because fat is positively necessary for the growing body.

Scott's Emulsion

contains the best fat, in the form of Cod-Liver Oil, for all delicate children. They thrive greatly under its use. Soon they weigh more, eat more, play better and look better. It's just the right addition to their regular food. The hypophosphites of lime and soda in it are necessary to the growth and formation of bone and teeth.

CAMPING SUPPLIES

IN OUR STORE you'll find scores and scores of articles particularly suited to camping.

FOODS of every sort in diminutive packages—in glass, wood and stone—ready for packing, handy or eat—little eats.

BAGGERS for carrying—hamper and hand bags—experience.

OF COURSE you don't buy the equipment, but it's of great value to you. Because knowing how to pack enables you to insure safe arrival, no breakage, loss—whether transported over mountains or pack saddle or carried in the locker of your yacht.

ADVERTISER'S GALLERY OF LOCAL SPORTSMEN

Yachting Editor Sizes up His Brethren and Gives His Opinions On Them.

Without the intuition of Mr. Sherlock Holmes we know him at sight. A peaked cap, white in color for preference and bound around with much cord, is a signa non for every true yachtsman; also during the season of trade winds, a full-blown face, culminating in bloom in a centerpiece of red, sun-burnt nose—that is, if he be not Wednesday or Thursday, those being the days upon which that organ "peels," presumably preparatory to furnish a new and polished surface to bourgeois afloat in Saturday's (and, I fear me, Sunday's) sun; also as a valuable aid to identification—he has hands abnormally broadened, freckled on the back, with sometimes copper-paint indelibly impressed in the recesses of the finger nails. These symbols, with a certain looseness of attire in the matter of collar and blue serge suit—always blue serge, even when for social purposes it has become a little passe—and a quasi-nautical rollick, complete his identification.

Having found him, note his all-absorbing passion for his sport and the persistency with which he pursues it, rain or shine. Is it the Saturday afternoon of a big baseball game or races at Kapiolani Park, the throng moving thereto is divided by his westerly course to the boat houses. I verily believe that if the battle of Armageddon were offered as a spectacle at Waikiki on a Saturday afternoon, when the breeze held good, he would still betake himself to his boat shed.

In town he is a citizen. Aboard his craft—whether it be a modern saucer type or the more luxurious ten-tonner—he is a Martinet. We know it, for we have been there. From the moment his ensign goes up, his mooring dropped, and he spans away on his first "leg," the spirit of the man chafeth. Visions of his early forefathers, probably of Norse blood (all men's pastimes can be traced to their progenitors) rise before his eyes. Regardless of flying spume, which, by the way, rarely reaches the cockpit, wherein he sits in state, he "lets her have it," to the infinite detriment of the for'ard hand, who, if he be not a hired menial, is usually a visitor, his regular crew having modestly retired to the cabin for a preliminary "sniffer."

However, should the wind be fair and the sheet eased, he may unbend a little to relate to the above mentioned visitor, who by this time has mustered up courage to creep aft in a highly strung state of nervous dampness, how in precisely such a blow as this, and under similar conditions, he lost his top-hammer, and for a time was in mortal peril.

In these intervals of relaxation he allows a critical eye to rove over the rigging of some rival craft, with whom, for the world, he would not admit he is having a comparative "spin," never by any chance allowing his gaze to fall on the crew thereof, lest any measure of complacent triumph should be read and constituted a breach of nautical etiquette.

leaves in Vallambrosa (a port not mentioned in the nautical almanac), and as under his direction his crew fall bodily upon flogging canvas and flying cordage, his powers of exhortation are marvelous. By nature he is gregarious, loving mainly in holiday times to rendezvous in some sheltered bay, a lagoon in Pearl Harbor preferred, in order that all who shall have their full mead of seasickness tempered with the glorious uncertainty of the return passage. Arrived there he forthwith shows undiscovered propensities for practical joking and Bacchanalian harmony. Of the former there is not much to be said, his jokes being time-honored and the recipient prepared for them; of the latter it may be safely said that in the heavens above or the waters beneath there is nothing to be compared with it. On a still evening, with riding lights out and all made snug, strange and weird noises emanate from his cabin. There is usually a banjo; also one timorous tenor inclining to falsetto at every available opportunity. The combined efforts of these, with a chorus ad lib in those favorite airs "The Swanee River" and "John Brown's Body," being gratifying in the extreme to any alert watcher of the night. On these occasions, like the celebrated cow in the basin, he is also omnivorous. Sardines and strawberry conserve, with chops and sand, are staple items in his menu. Still dyspepsia troubles him not, the only acute malady apparently being an unquenchable thirst.

We have written of the yachtsman first because we place him first in the category of national sportsmen; at any rate, he is the purest—his search is for fresh air and sunshine; his desire a favorable breeze. The excitement bred by the "feel" of his craft as he heads her through white-flecked water, with the sting of the spindrift on his cheek, is clean and wholesome; by watchfulness and precision his nerves are steeled for the "harder walk." In his pastime he is a man, and free.

TWO GAMES OF BALL SCHEDULED FOR TODAY

Makiki and Kakaako and Punahou and E. O. Hall & Sons The Nines.

Makiki will play Kakaako this afternoon at the baseball grounds, on Kinau street. The teams are in good form and should furnish interesting ball. The makeup of the nines is as follows:

- Makiki—G. Kahoiwai, c.; J. Williams, p.; J. Sylva, 1b.; Akoni, 2b.; Kiwa, 3b.; Joo, Bento (captain) ss.; J. Medeiros, lf.; F. Freitas, cf.; H. Rodriguez, rf.; substitutes, H. Honan, J. Fernandez, M. Simpson.
- Kakaako—Kahaulelo, c.; H. Defries, p.; H. Kolowena, 1b.; C. Kaanui, 2b.; Jos. Iao, 3b.; C. Jones (captain) ss.; Keiho, rf.; Kakaoko, cf.; W. Bush, lf.; substitutes, Paka, Cockett, Kawakiki.

It is understood that the winning team will challenge any team in Honolulu for a game for next Saturday.

Punahou, who succumbed ignominiously last Saturday to the hard-hitting young men in the employ of E. O. Hall & Son, are hot after vengeance. This afternoon at Punahou they will confront last week's victors with a team strengthened by the inclusion of Messrs. Cook and Hemenway, and will make a big effort to turn the tables.

The E. O. Hall & Son combination will be as follows: Messrs. Wilkoki, Henry Kane, E. H. Paris, Antoine Lewis, Richard Reuter, Kiwa, Solomon Koki, Pat. Gleason, Mana and Akina (substitute). The manager of the Sacramento Gilt Edges has written to a friend in Honolulu enquiring if it would be possible to arrange a series of baseball games after January 1, 1900. The Gilt Edges are one of the strongest teams on the Pacific Slope.

RACES AT KAPIOLANI PARK THIS AFTERNOON

Pole Event and a Three-Eighths of a Mile Dash are Down on The Card.

Racing at Kapiolani Park this afternoon will be good and varied. The first event will come off at 3 o'clock and the nominal charge of twenty-five cents will be made for admission to the grand stand. The proceeds will go toward defraying the expenses of having the track put in shape for the afternoon's sport.

The main event will be a pole race of one heat between teams driven by Messrs. Bellina, Judd, Grigsby and Monsarrat. Fast time is expected to be made, and each entry is in good shape to put up a rattling race. C. H. Judd's team should lead the procession at the finish, barring accidents.

the class of the race if there can be said to be any class to it, and should win, with a half-way decent ride. Mystery, as indicated by name, is an unknown, but is reported to be shifty; he should be the runner-up.

HONOLULUANS AND SAILORS ARE MATCHED TO PLAY

Game of Cricket Arranged for Makiki If all Goes Well This Afternoon.

Another attempt will be made at Makiki this afternoon to bring off a game of cricket. There is every possibility of the attempt being successful, provided it does not rain and the sun is not too warm, and there are no plagues in order, and if about two dozen other things do or do not happen.

According to existing arrangements the match will be between eleven of the Honolulu Cricket Club and sixteen players recruited from the officers and crews of ships in the harbor. The following are the teams selected:

- Honolulu Cricket Club—Messrs. D. W. Anderson (captain), R. A. Joren, R. Anderson, H. B. Sinclair, R. Hatfield, J. W. Harvey, A. W. Bottomley, F. Seymour, J. F. Waldron, W. Stanley, O. St. John-Gilbert and J. Catton.
- Ships in the Harbor—Messrs. Neddie, Fowler, Dickson, Young (Dunneegan), Draper, Holland, Walker, Zuck, Rankine (Dechmont), Lucas, Kelly, Aldridge (captain) (Kilmory), Wilson, Dampfi, Cros-ton, Burnett (Halewood).

The sailors will indulge in preliminary practice at 1 o'clock and the game will commence at 2:30 p. m. sharp. The local team is a fairly representative one and makes a good showing against superior numbers. Visitors are cordially invited to be present.

THE CRICKETERS SADLY LACKING IN ENERGY

Long Stop Removes the Laziness and Excuses of the Honolulu Willow Wielders.

Sporting Editor of the Advertiser: Cricket without a doubt is the game of all games where two or three Brits are gathered together, and there is not a single corner of the earth where the pastime does not flourish to a greater or lesser extent. Wherever there are enough to form a club, there will be found the necessary enthusiasm to become proficient in the game and to make cricket enjoyable not only to the players but to visitors to the ground.

Every rule has its exceptions, however, and in the rule of cricket the most notable exception seems to be right here in Honolulu.

All sports—whether cricket, golf, football, rowing, tennis or baseball—require much practice if creditable performances are to be looked for, and it is imperative that a certain amount of time be devoted to practice. All of the branches of sport, with the exception of cricket, receive from their respective followers the time and energy necessary to the attainment of perfection. Why is this lack of interest? When the last annual meeting of the Honolulu Cricket Club was held, I looked as if the ensuing cricket season would be a hummer. How has it turned out? Practice, none; practice matches badly attended; men who promise to play do not turn up and have not the common decency to make an excuse. The result is that the afternoon is spoiled for, say, at least a dozen others. Then, again, this one wants to rest so as to be fresh for golf on the following day, and that one must take his girl to a picnic or participate in some other equally effeminate amusement. The consequence is that one of the finest and most invigorating of sports is dwindling into local nothingness for the lack of that pluck and sportsmanlike behavior which are so characteristic of many other places where the tremendous advantages of a beautiful climate and an excellent ground are entirely wanting.

Why do not more of the baseball men join the ranks of the cricketers? Such men as Ross or Woods would be a credit to many first-class clubs, and ably demonstrate that with practice baseballers would make A-1 cricketers.

The merchants and business houses in town are only too willing to allow any of their employes who wish to join in these sports, the Saturday afternoon off, to remain in town, but all work and no play is a bad policy and that healthy outdoor exercise insures a corresponding display of vigor at the desk. No blame can be placed at their door. It rests entirely with the young man himself.

YACHT OPTISAR A FINE ADDITION TO THE FLEET

Likely Looking Craft Arrives on the Alice Cooke to Enter the Local Sport.

The fleet of racing craft received an addition this morning in the shape of the yacht Optisar. The new boat is owned by Harry Penhallow and is a likely-looking craft, 22 feet over all, and reputed to be a flyer.

The Optisar arrived on the schooner Alice Cooke and has not yet been taken off the deck. She was designed and built on board the Alice Cooke while that vessel was making a trip to Alaska. After a while she was brought to Honolulu and afterwards taken to Oakland, where she has been lately.

The Optisar, which is the Chinook for "sweetheart," has been painted and newly canvassed and looks as pretty as her name. Her arrival will be welcomed in local racing circles and already whispers of an impending race are going around.

The Heanani Senior and Junior crews will go into training quarters at Pearl Harbor this afternoon. The Senior crew this year will be Paul Jarrett, stroke; Renewer, 3; Damon, 2; Bolise, bow. The Dutch stroke has been abandoned in favor of the regulation American college stroke and a corresponding improvement in the "go" of the boat has already been noticeable.

When learning to swim, artificial aids, such as corks, air belts, cork jackets, inflated bladders and the like, should be avoided, as they raise some parts of the body too high and allow other parts to sink too far below the natural plane of flotation. The first rule, and the most essential, is that the more entirely the body is submerged the more easily can the head be sustained above the water. Confidence in the floating power of the body should be acquired by the learner as soon as possible. It is one of the hardest things for the novice to believe that the body will float in water, under certain conditions, without any effort whatever.

THE ART OF SWIMMING MADE EASY IN PRINT

Easy to Become an Adept if One Follows the Directions and Tries Hard.

The easiest way to float is to lie on the back, the arms stretched out beyond the head, but not lifted out of the water. This attitude not only facilitates respiration, but counterbalances the weight of the body. The head should be kept entirely submerged, but barely under the surface of the water. No better start toward learning to swim can be made than to wade out until the water comes up high on the chest, then with a full indrawing of the breath to allow the body to sink backward with the head toward the shore, until only the mouth and nose are above the water. The arms and lower limbs should be disposed as described, and if all effort be dispensed with, and the body quietly and confidently submitted to the water, it will be lightly borne and will not sink. When in this position the breathing should be easy and regular, and if kept perfectly balanced, the body will assert its buoyancy, and the necessary confidence be acquired.

To attempt to propel the body through the water by floating on the back with very soon follow the discovery that the body will float. This is a pleasant and very useful way of swimming, and if confidence be retained the beginner will have no trouble. The first movement toward swimming on the back is to draw the legs up to the body, at the same time spreading them apart as far as possible. The legs by one firm movement should then be extended, and at the same time drawn up close together. This motion sends the body forward, and when the impetus imparted is nearly but not quite expended the legs are to be spread apart and drawn up close to the body as before, and the previous movement of extending and drawing them back repeated. When extended the legs should be pulled strongly toward them.

Notwithstanding back swimming is the most easily acquired, breast swimming is the commonest and most easily practiced. This is begun by gently striking the body forward in the water and extending the arms to their full length forward, keeping the fingers closed and the palms flat. Turn the palms of both hands outward and make a strong stroke to the right and left with each arm. The hands should not be sunk deep under the water, as this tends to raise the body. The object is to keep the body as nearly horizontal as possible. As the arms are brought round in the semicircle movement the lower limbs are stiffened and brought together. Beginners should be careful not to make the arm movements more rapid than that of the legs, and it should not be forgotten that the latter are the principal propellers. Unison in movement and regularity of stroke and kick are indispensable to perfection. If all hurry and excitement be avoided, and each stroke and kick be accomplished precisely and completely, swimming will prove refreshing and invigorating.

The art of trading water seems to be the only part of swimming that is at all naturally acquired. The movements necessary are almost identical with the movements required in walking. In case of accidental immersion when the body is fully clothed a knowledge of this part of the art will preserve life for a long time. The body will assume a perpendicular position when cast into the water, owing to the buoyancy of the lungs and the weight of the lower extremities. When the water comes up over the mouth and eyes the inclination of any one unable to swim is to throw the hands out of the water. All that is necessary to increase the danger is when thrown into deep water one should be perfectly inactive for a short time. The head will soon rise above the surface, and at that instant the hands and feet should be employed in nearly the same manner as in walking, the hands beating the water at the sides and the feet climbing imaginary stairs. The hands should never be raised above the surface of the water, and the head should be bent back so as to submerge the shoulders, neck and as much of the head as will not interfere with breathing, the theory being that the whole body is lighter than the volume of water it will displace. If all portions of the body except the mouth and nostrils be submerged it may be kept afloat for hours. In this, as in all departments of swimming, the possession of confidence in the buoyancy of the body is the most essential requirement. A living body will float because of the air in the lungs, while a dead body will sink because the air has been expelled.

The side stroke is the most rapid mode of swimming. The body should be thrown on the right side, for the reason that weight is removed from the heart when in that position and the lower limbs act more freely and naturally than when on the left side. When the position in the water is assumed the right arm is thrown out in front, palm down. The arm is stretched out full length and brought downward through the water toward the legs. The hand is then brought up along the body to the chest, when the stroke is repeated. The left hand beats the water at the left side. The legs should be moved in strong and vigorous strokes in the same manner as that employed in breast swimming. The overhead stroke is one of several styles known to all boys. The practice of swimming "dog fashion" is not advisable because the body is propelled slowly by the rapid under stroke, and the strength is soon exhausted.

THE MAN WHO SPIES SHIPS AT SEA

How would you like to live all alone right on the edge of some jumping-off place with nothing but a dog and a telephone to talk to? That's what "Diamond Head Charlie" does. Ring him up and ask him all about it. Of course you know who "Diamond Head Charlie" is? No? Well, you're no doubt a stranger here in Honolulu. "Diamond Head Charlie" is the man behind the telescope, the person who resides on the almost perpendicular slopes of Diamond Head and watches the horizon for ships of all kinds and rings up Honolulu and lets it know when a steamer or sailing vessel or anything is about to approach. Plainly he is the lookout at Diamond Head. In the language of the man who is paid according to the number of words he employs, he is the sole, sad, guardian spirit of old Lehi's aulien, seamy sides; his restless, eagle eye, forever scans the softly swelling surface of the Pacific—that pie-shaped piece of it which he can see from Diamond Head—in search of swift ocean greyhounds from the great continents, east and west and otherwise, and the heavily-burdened, white-winged sailing craft bound for this lonely land.

boots, sardine tins and broken crockery and furniture—while in front of his residence stretches the broad highway of the sea along which hundreds of gallant vessels pass to and fro every year. Sometimes they forget the rules of the road, as it were, and drive recklessly close to the sidewalk—the reef. But glorious scenery, fresh breezes, the telescope, the cat and the telephone notwithstanding, Charlie gets very lonely, likewise. Sometimes very thirsty. Charlie has no water system in his house; if he wants water he has to climb for it up the mountain side and fetch it for himself in a pail. Charlie has been promised water for years but has yet to see the promises of the power's fulfilled. A mild-mannered man is Charlie and withal most considerate of his words. He never gets angry even when his water supply is short and is never known to say so much as a cross word to the dog or the telephone. Sixty years of this life's sorrow and pleasure, hope and disappointment, romance and adventure have passed for "Diamond Head Charlie," he carries the burden of his years lightly, his mind retains much of its youthful optimism notwithstanding the cares of advancing years, his eyes search the sea for sails much as they used to when Charlie was long ago but a green-hand aboard some wandering merchantman and his love for the mysterious ocean is the same as it was when he was a little child. For forty years and more he followed the sea, for two-thirds of his life he has been a sailor and now, not feeling inclined at his age to scramble aloft in some towering wind-jammer as a sailor or restlessly pace the poop as a skipper, he sits him down on Diamond Head to watch the coming and going of vessels from and to all the corners of the world. Comes there a mail boat from the Coast, Charlie sees it first with the help of his powerful auxiliary eyes and telephones the news to town. Comes there a big liner from the Orient or a little island steamer from some of the other isles, Charlie knows it first. Coal-laden carriers from the south, lumber-laden schooners from the north, rich, general-cargoed vessels from around the Horn and from San Francisco, big ocean tramps, men-of-war, transports, all first make themselves known to "Diamond Head Charlie." Charlie, though now an American citizen, is a native of Gotenburg, Sweden, and ever since he was old enough to understand the difference between a ship and a house he loved the stately vessels, and the ugly ones too, which sailed in and out of the little port. "My parents would never consent to my following the sea," says Charlie, "but, without asking their permission I one day signed on an American ship bound for New York. "Well, I made several trips between New York and Liverpool, on good and bad ships both, but it didn't take me very many months to tire of this. What my system naturally craved was something with a little more of the spice of adventure in it than just bumping along between New York and Liverpool. Just for a change I shipped on a boat for Chile. We went to Callao, thence up the coast after a cargo of guano. Going back to Callao we ran into pretty rough weather and did our best to make shelter in a small cove but struck a rock which ripped the old vessel wide open and down we went, that is to say, the ship went down, we managed to get ashore somehow and had afterwards a dangerous and thirsty journey on foot to Callao, but fortunately arrived there safe and sound. "I had all I wanted of Callao and soon found an opportunity of sailing for San Francisco. Again was I cast away, however, for when off Santa Barbara we were wrecked and had to take to the life-boats by which means we finally reached our destination. Then I enlisted on the revenue cutter Lincoln and voyaged to Alaska. I met with many adventures up in the frozen north and then again returned to 'Prisco. "Let me see! It was just about twenty-three years ago when I sailed from San Francisco for China. I traveled from China to India, thence to Manila. Afterwards I went around the Cape of Good Hope to Spain, Italy, France, England, and then the United States. From New York I sailed for Honolulu and here I am."

CLEVER THEFT

Solomon Kuaeli Now In Prison. Native Manipulated a Daring Scheme and Secured Valuable Merchandise.

One of the most daring larcenies ever committed in Honolulu was perpetrated in broad daylight yesterday morning at 7 o'clock, and before evening High Sheriff Brown, who personally conducted the search for the thief, had landed Solomon Kuaeli, a young Hawaiian, in prison. It is to the High Sheriff's credit that he ferreted out the larceny in a manner which was highly satisfactory to himself, and an example to the members of his department. Yesterday morning at about 7 o'clock, fifty-five bags of rice were sent from Sing Loy's rice mill at Kamalii on a dray to be stored in the warehouse of Theo. H. Davies & Co., agents for Sing Loy. The load was in charge of a Chinese driver. Just as the dray was nearing the warehouse a native man stepped up to the Chinese and told him the rice was to be taken to the Irmgard wharf, as the warehouse was full and could not hold the load he had with him. The Chinese driver accepted the statement, having seen him about the warehouse on other occasions. After reaching the dock the bags were deposited there and the driver was invited to breakfast by the native. The invitation was accepted and the meal was paid for by the native. As they finished the driver asked the young fellow to give him a receipt for his rice, which he did. Having further business at one of the feed company's offices he was about to drive away when the native said: "Let me have the receipt back; it's made out wrong." The book was handed him and the original and duplicate leaves were torn out leaving only the triplicate, which did not bear the signature of the youth. The Chinese did not understand the proceeding, but thought it was all right and drove away. In the meantime Sing Loy, who had telephoned to the warehouse, began to wonder what had become of it. Upon investigation he found it was not at the proper destination. He and the superintendent of the warehouse finally learned that fifty-five bags of rice had been dumped at Irmgard wharf, and that two express wagons had called for it. One of the wagons belonged to Netper and the other to Gomez. The drivers of the vehicles were located and questioned, who stated they had taken the stuff to Relief Camp No. 2 and delivered it to a Japanese and a Chinese. It seems that a native had told them to go to the wharf and take the bags to

ESCAPES REEF

Ship Invincible Almost Ashore. She Nearly Goes on the Rocks at Waikiki in the Middle of the Night.

For a time yesterday morning it appeared as though there was to be a repetition of the Dunreagan accident. The American ship Invincible coal laden from Newcastle was observed at daylight apparently on the reef at Waikiki. She was rolling heavily and seemed to be hard and fast and the report to that effect spread throughout the city. The tug Fearless went out shortly after daylight to bring in the Alice Cooke and she spoke the Invincible at that time ascertaining that the ship was in no danger, but was anchored and waiting for a tow. The Fearless made arrangements to bring her into port and then proceeded after the Alice Cooke. A short time afterwards the Elu went out to the Invincible but learning that she was all right came back to the harbor, and before noon the Fearless made a second trip to the reef and brought the Invincible in. Captain Mackenzie, her master, was formerly of the Matilda and he has been in port here before. He states that he arrived off shore at about 11 o'clock Thursday night. Deceived by the numerous lights along shore and hearing no sound of surf he came quite close in. As the ship seemed to be getting too near the shore he began to cast the lead. There was some delay on account of a tangle in the tackle. Captain Mackenzie found himself in ten fathoms of water before he realized his danger. He ordered an anchor overboard but before it could be got down the ship was in seven fathoms. Forty fathoms of chain was paid out so as to give the anchor all possible chance to hold and the ship rode in this position over night. At daylight she lay just outside the breakers, and had there been any wind from the south nothing could have prevented her from going ashore for she was close to the spot where the William Carson met her fate some months ago. At the best it was a dangerous position and Captain Mackenzie heaved a mighty sigh when the Fearless came alongside and the big ship was slowly drawn out again into deep water and brought safe and sound into the harbor.

FAMILY PRIDE

Proud of his family tree was Mr. Townster, and graciously condescending was he to all—as to put figuratively—he sat beneath the shadow of its spreading branches and discoursed upon the quality, flavor and beauty of its fruit. No one who did not bear the name of Townster, or who could not claim descent from the glorious original Townster, was quite worthy to associate with this gentleman. This may have accounted for the low esteem in which he held his mother's relatives.

Leong Sun Committed Suicide.

HE WAS SICK AND POOR

Consumptive Chinese Hanged Himself Near the Insane Asylum Yesterday.

Weary of battling against the world, sickly and poverty-stricken, Leong Sun, a consumptive Chinese, recently from Kauai, hanged himself early yesterday morning. The suicide was found in a dilapidated washhouse behind the Insane Asylum, where he had been housed by some friendly Chinese, field laborers, who took pity on the unfortunate man.

The body was first found by a Chinese friend who went to visit Leong Sun. The moment he opened the door the sight of the suicide hanging by his neck from the rafter above, drove him back to where his companions were. The alarm was given, a telephone message sent to the police station shortly after 2 o'clock, and confusion reigned on the premises until the arrival of the police officers. Officer H. J. Hanrahan was guided to the little house, which was the last place on earth where a sick man should have lain. There was no roof, everything was dilapidated and ill-smelling. The officer found the Chinese hanging at full length with his feet about nine inches above the floor. About his neck and tied fast to the rafter above, which was seven feet two inches above the floor, was a stout three-fourths inch rope. From the appearance of the body it was evident to the officer that the suicide had hanged himself several hours previous to his discovery. Decomposition had already set in. The rope was cut, the body lowered and removed to the patrol wagon, and the man's belongings searched. Three nickels and a dime were all the funds the man possessed, besides a valise. He was dressed in three coats and a pair of trousers, evidently his entire wardrobe.

At the police station the body was viewed by a coroner's jury composed as follows: J. W. Luong, William Savidge, William B. Jones, H. Zerbe, C. J. Campbell and F. C. Bertleman. Dr. Emerson also made a thorough examination and stated that death came by strangulation, and that the man had been dead probably twelve or fourteen hours.

High Sheriff Brown conducted the coroner's inquest. A Chinese laborer named Long Chuck testified that he had known the deceased for a month, and that the man came from Kauai, intending to journey on to China to die. He had come to the premises where he had killed himself, as there was a Chinese there whom he knew, having lived in the same city with him in China. This gave him the privilege of calling his new found friend "cousin," all persons hailing from the same Chinese city keeping up such a custom. The witness said he had been sent from Kauai by friendly countrymen who had raised a subscription. The man had a bad cough and was extremely feeble. He was given the use of the washhouse and was looked after by the field hands. He had little money and gave it out sparingly for the purchase of pork and rice. Not having seen the sick man, who occasionally walked about the premises, for a day or two, the witness on Thursday went to see him at 4 o'clock and gave him some tea. Yesterday he again visited the place and was shocked to see Leong Sun hanging at the end of a rope. He ran away and informed the "cousin" of the deed, and then notified the police. The man had once said in his hearing, "No use living; no money to live," and from this he gathered that he was much depressed.

See Wu Chow, the "cousin" referred to, said they had both resided in the same village in China, and when the man was taken sick on Kauai he came to Honolulu and immediately sought him out to help him, as he was poverty-stricken. He was so weak a month ago he could barely walk. Once, in a fit of melancholy, Leong Sun had imparted to him that he had only a few dollars, and was therefore unable to secure medical treatment, and thought it was of no use to try to live.

Officer Hanrahan testified that he had found the body and cut the rope which held him to the rafter. He found a wooden stool directly in front of the man's feet and presumed that he had stood upon it, and after adjusting the noose, had kicked it away. The jury returned a verdict in accordance with the above facts, and the body was at once buried.

One of the favorite stories of Father Dennis Tighe, of Holy Angels' Church, who died recently, was about a certain Bridget O'Sullivan, who only came to confession occasionally, and when she did she couldn't for the life of her remember any bad things that she had been doing. "When were you at confession last, Bridget?" queried the father. "Sure, faether, an' it moight 'ave been last waker!" "Wasn't it a year ago?" "Sure, faether, an' it's loike to 'ave been a year ago. But pwah do yez care, faether, to scowld an old craytur loike me? It's Moike, me husband, that's the bad one. It's three weeks that Moike niver confesses his sins, an' hiven knows his sins is scarlet. He drinks loike his sins is smokes loike a flue. He swears that bad St. Patrick wad trimble. An' sure, ye should see Moike smash the dishes an' break the furniture an' fling the stove lids an'—" "Six 'Hall Marys' every day for a week, and three fast days, Bridget," said the father. "Och, an' pwah do you mane, faether? Sure, OI never confessed a sin." "Yes, but you confessed Mike's," said the father, quietly, "and as long as you make his confessions for him I think you ought to do the penance, Bridget."

ATTRACTIVE WINDOW. The art of correct window dressing has become a science which is being reduced to a greater science each year. The use of windows in displaying goods is a very important factor with the merchant, and it is just as important to the public to see well dressed windows as it is for the merchant to be careful that his windows are attractive. In trimming his windows Mr. Brash of "The Lace House," certainly has used good taste and judgment in displaying an elegant line of lace curtains in such a decorative manner that one cannot help noticing how attractive it is. In the same window with the lace curtains are a few handsomely hand-painted couch pillows.

ALSEN PORTLAND CEMENT

WE HAVE JUST RECEIVED a large shipment of this celebrated Cement, which is the STONGEST AND MOST SERVICEABLE CEMENT MADE, and will permit the admixture of a larger amount of sand, gravel, with less loss of strength, than any other brand; it is therefore the most economical. ALSEN has no equal in color, fineness and sand carrying capacity. It weighs less per bushel, measuring about 10 per cent more cement to a barrel than other brands, which very materially reduces its cost as compared with other cements. It is therefore an economical cement to use, and especially adapted for fine concrete work. The following tests, made in actual work by Col. D. C. Houston, Corps of Engineers, U. S. A., at the sea wall around Governor's Island, New York Harbor, has never been equalled by other cement. It is as follows: Tensile strength per square inch—One day, 384 pounds; seven days, 606 pounds; thirty days, 818 pounds. For sidewalks it gives the best color and the most enduring wearing surface. A few of the large contracts in which Alsen Cement was used: Cable St. R., Baltimore, 35,000 barrels; Quebec Harbor Improvement, 4,000 barrels; Northern Pacific R. R. Bridges, 20,000 barrels.

WRECK OF THE WILLIAM CARSON
 Stunken Ship Will no Longer be a Menace to Navigation.

It has been learned through the researches of Captain Clarke of the Wilder Steamship Company, that the wreck of the William Carson, which was run down by the steamer Claudine and sunk off Waikiki, is not derelict.

Captain Clarke has searched carefully for the wreck for the past few days and he has located enough of her bones to be able to assert positively that the barkentine is so completely broken up that they will never prove a menace to navigation. The wreckage was found close to the place where the hull lay for so long on the reef off Waikiki. It had slipped into slightly deeper water, and under the stress of currents and surf the hull has disintegrated, and the timbers have been scattered far and wide, none of them being large enough to do any damage to shipping. All that Captain Clark was able to find of the wreckage that was worth saving consisted in the two large anchors of the vessel and 145 fathoms of chain. All the rest of her rigging, and all the larger portions of her hull had been so scattered and smashed by the pounding on the reef that they were not worth bringing away.

Somewhere in the sand near where the vessel sank there is supposed to be something like $600 in gold coin. When the vessel was run down she sank so rapidly that there was no opportunity for any one on board to save anything. Many of the crew scrambled onto the Claudine's decks without clothing, and the coin which is supposed to have been on board went down with the rest. There is little likelihood of its ever being found.

END OF CAPTAIN HEALY'S CAREER
 Well-Known Revenue Captain a Madman With Small Hope of Recovery.

The Port Townsend Leader states that there was much dissatisfaction aboard the McCulloch from the time Captain Healy took command of her. The voyage was made to Cape Nome without incident, but on the return trip Captain Healy on July Fourth was brought aboard his vessel in a state of intoxication. On July 5 the McCulloch weighed anchor and started for Puget Sound. During the day the peculiar actions of Captain Healy attracted the attention of the officers and crew and orders were given to keep close watch on him. On the 6th he came on deck, gave a few orders, and then made an attempt to leap over the side of the vessel. His feet slipped and he fell and by the time he got up and just as he was in the act of making a leap he was seized by several of the crew and taken to his cabin.

Lieut. P. W. Thompson, next in command, realizing the condition of the captain, gave orders to remove everything from his room with which he was liable to do himself harm and then placed a watch over him. Some hours later the watchman observed several quick motions of the bed covering and surmising something was wrong, turned the bed clothes down and as he did so, blood spurted from the captain's arm to the ceiling of the cabin, he having broken a bottle and with the glass therein severed a blood vessel in his left arm. The man on guard then bound his arm with a handkerchief and then called for assistance, there being no surgeon on board. During the remainder of the voyage to this place he was closely guarded and upon arrival he was conveyed to the United States marine hospital, where Dr. Gardner, surgeon in charge, made an examination and placed him in a straight jacket with two men watching him. When he was being placed in the jacket he made a vigorous fight, but was overcome. As one of the sailors who had assisted him to the hospital was taking leave of Captain Healy, saying he would see him again, the captain called him back and said, "You will never see me alive, notwithstanding I am in a straight jacket; I will find a way of killing myself."

At Port Townsend, Wash., on July 14, Capt. M. A. Healy, Revenue Cutter Service, late in command of the McCulloch, was arraigned before Commissioner Cheney for an inquiry into his sanity.

During the examination it has developed that during the four months he was placed on waiting orders as a result of an investigation of charges brought against him while in command of the Bear in 1899 during a cruise in Alaska waters, he was subject to attacks of insomnia lasting for periods of a week or more, supposed to have been the result of brooding over having been disciplined in such a manner. It was also ascertained that during the two weeks previous to July 5, Captain Healy had been indulging quite heavily in the use of intoxicants, which resulted in deranging his reason. The examining board after a thorough and careful examination pronounced him insane, with suicidal tendencies, and he was ordered committed to the hospital for the insane at St. Elizabeth.

Captain Healy is 59 years of age and a native of Georgia. He has a wife, an unmarried daughter, and a son, residing in San Francisco. He has had an eventful career in the revenue service of the United States, and perhaps no officer in that service is more widely known, and his misfortune will be deeply regretted by all.
