"CHINA AS A DEMOCRACY"

Washington, as we understand it, regards China as second only in importance to Great Britain among the nations who are trying to help to defend democracy against Hitler. We have more to say for the effect that you have to strain your eyes and ears to be able to catch the title of the Chinese dragon from the democratic dole, or jackass.

"Just how much of a democracy is China; and how much of any election being held by Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek became head of the present Chinese government that is fighting Japan. As we re collect, Chiang was an old lieutenant of Dr. Sun Yat Sen, then was active in China's Kuomintang (Nationalist) party, and was made a cabinet rank minister of the National government after the overthrow of the Manchu dynasty. It was said that he ran in the 1920's on the electoral campaign of the Nationalist party, and was a very effective politician.

"None of these parties was or is a political party in the sense of discussing the policies of the people on a platform. There are splinters, lodges, or more or less secret societies, as we see it, that are fairly representative of the people, but not to our national political organizations.

"None of the Chinese are democrats, nor do they think of democracy. The Chinese are what they have been for centuries—100 per cent capitalists. In no fewer democracies is based on individualism, the Chinese are individualists, all.

"They consider that they own all they see, and that they have no obligation to any one else but themselves and their own families. The 'good earth' they consider theirs to exploit, doing what they think best with no obligations to conserve for the public welfare or posterity. Hence China's huge area long since stripped of trees; and hence its tremendous erosion districts, denude and drain, without obligation to conserve for the public welfare or posterity. Hence China's huge areas long since disappeared into our national political organizations.

"In the coming days, as the Chinese are being stricken by the financial and industrial pirates who think everything that wasn't nailed down in the United States after the Civil War. We finally had to put armed meatheists on their property, or they would have wound up by owning all.

"The Chinese, as we understand the association, one of the 3,000 China.
