New Supply of Bonds Received

WASHINGTON, May 26

Reports were received yesterday that the president of the French Republic has issued a decree authorizing the issuance of new bonds to the amount of $300,000,000, the proceeds of which will be used to meet the current financial needs of the nation.

The new bonds will be issued at an interest rate of 5% per annum and will mature in 20 years. They will be sold to the public through a network of underwriters throughout France.

The French government has been facing severe financial difficulties due to the ongoing战争 in Europe. The issuance of these new bonds is expected to provide an immediate injection of funds into the French economy.

Valerie Wentworth, clerk in a New York department store, was fascinated by a movie star, whom she had seen on the screen, putting on a performance that was so real it seemed like a part of her own life. She was drawn to the star, who seemed to her to be living a life that was so much more exciting than hers. The star's life was filled with glamour, fame, and success, and Valerie longed to experience the same things for herself.

One day, Valerie met a man who promised to arrange for her to live with a movie star, and she eagerly agreed. She was determined to make her dreams come true, no matter what it took.

However, Valerie soon discovered that the life of a movie star was not as glamorous as she had imagined. The star was constantly on the go, with long hours of work and little time for personal life. Valerie found herself struggling to keep up with the star's schedule, and she began to feel like she was living a double life.

Despite the challenges, Valerie remained determined to succeed. She worked hard to make her dreams come true, and she was eventually able to achieve some measure of success in the movie industry. But she never forgot the lessons she learned during that time, and she continued to work hard to achieve her goals.

Valerie's story is a reminder that success does not come easily. It requires hard work, determination, and a willingness to take risks. But with the right mindset and a strong work ethic, anything is possible.

Grass as Food in Future Wins Support from Science

FTHACA, N. Y. — Modern agronomists are coming to the conclusion that grain may be a beneficial addition to the human diet. On that basis they are urging the granting of the following: the efficiency of the feeding of grain to livestock and poultry, and the growing of grain for human consumption. But the problem is not only for farm livestock but for human beings, too. The scientists are calling for the development of a new type of meat that will be more palatable, more nutritious, and more economical of labor.

The scientific research on grain feeding is being conducted at the New York Agricultural Experiment Station, where a number of experiments are being carried on the growth of grain for human consumption. The results of these experiments have shown that grain is an excellent source of food for both livestock and poultry, and that it is also a valuable source of food for human beings. WHALE, - World War II brought two brothers face to face for the first time in 19 years.

R. Stendahl, a Seattle merchant, had never seen his younger brother, Bill, since January 1939, when both brothers left for this country on a army ship. He was 21 and working on a ship repairing outfit which docked in the United States.

Upon arriving, he was reunited with his older brother, who was stationed with the army in New York. The two brothers, R. and B. Stendahl, were able to see each other and talk about the years
they have been apart.
