Nisei Creed Toward United States Placed in Congress Record by Senator Thomas

The Japanese-American Creed, written by Mike Masaoka, chairman of the Japanese-American Citizens League's national education committee, was introduced into the Congressional Record at a time when the Congress was in session. The introduction took place on May 27th, 1943, at the request of Senator Thomas, who gave the following reasons for the introduction: "The author, Mike Masaoka, is a Japanese American of the Nisei generation, and has been a leader in the movement for Nisei's rights and participation in American society. He is a strong advocate of the idea that the Nisei should be treated as equal citizens of the United States. The Nisei Creed reflects this philosophy and is a valuable contribution to the understanding of the Nisei's perspective on their relationship with the United States."

The creed states: "I was very happy when I came to the United States. I was very happy to be a part of this great nation. I was very happy to be able to express myself freely and to be able to participate in the life of the community. I was very happy to be able to contribute to the development of the United States. I was very happy to be able to make America a better place to live. I was very happy to be able to be a part of this great nation."

The introduction of the creed into Congress was a significant step in the struggle for Nisei's rights and participation in American society. It demonstrated the Nisei's commitment to being full-fledged citizens of the United States and their desire to contribute to the country's development. The Nisei Creed was a symbol of the Nisei's determination to overcome the discrimination they faced and to become full-fledged citizens of the United States.

new models probably will have only.

"Detroit—New model automakers next fall will have the utmost difficulty in making any new models.

"While no company can foretell the outcome of the present atmosphere, it is possible some new models will appear that can be built with the use of existing materials." was the report of Dr. S. Knudsen, president of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers.

Mr. Knudsen said, "The demand for the manufacture of machine tools has swamped order books, and possible attempts to expand production in this vital phase of defense are being impeded by changes in order design.

"In order to meet the demand for machinery before President Roosevelt's call for a wartime effort, many plants have been rushed plans for 1942 production.

"There is little likelihood of this occurring, however, because during 1942, it will be necessary to devote all facilities toward defense, there being little room for automotive output in engines for 1942. It has been announced that the draft will be called in on a basis of draft calls or 'a 50 per cent call.'"
