ESCAPE FROM HEARTBREAK
by MARGARETA BRUCKER

Valerie had stashed the money away from the town of Portland, along with all her dreams of the future. It was here that her mother had perished, and it was here that Valerie had decided to start over. She was leaving for New York, hoping to become a writer. Early in the morning, Valerie headed for the train station. She had just enough money to buy a ticket to New York, but she knew she would need more if she was going to make it. As she walked towards the station, Valerie thought about her mother. How she had loved her mother, and how she had missed her ever since she had passed away. She knew that she would never forget her mother, and that she would always carry her in her heart. The train pulled into the station soon afterwards, and Valerie boarded it. She was excited and nervous, but she knew that this was the beginning of a new chapter in her life. She was going to New York, and she was going to make it. She was going to live her dreams. And she was going to do it, no matter what. Valerie smiled as she sat down in her seat, and she knew that she was going to be just fine. She was going to make it, she was going to live, she was going to be happy. She was going to be a writer, and she was going to make it. She was going to make her mother proud. And she was going to do it, no matter what. Valerie smiled, and she knew that she was going to be just fine. She was going to make it, she was going to live, she was going to be happy. For the information of our readers and the general public, we will publish in three columns every day laws which bear directly on the County of Hawai'i, or which, in our opinion, may be of special interest to the Big Island residents and citizens.
