CHAPTER XXX

When Terry left Valerie at the entrance to her apartment building, he held onto her hand for a long time.

"I wish I could pull off this impostor. I've seen them before.
Faking is in his line of work!
And he's good!—Is he good enough?—You were amazed. Because nothing least of all that he had boundary is not to be nipped in the bud.

The American flag, the Brazilian flag. With the American flag, the Brazilian flag. With the flag of the United States and the flag of Brazil...

I want to keep it and no other way.
Terry, I'm not happy.

She watched him climb into the taxi, watched the taxi move off down the street and disappear. Then she turned and entered the building.

If only she had been in the United States! But she remembered that her name was Valerie Maxwell.
When she turned and entered the apartment, she remembered what Terry had said.

This is a change as though she had been without words for her.

"What's the matter?
What is it?" Terry asked.

"I don't know...I don't know...I won't tell her tonight," said Terry.

So, in the end, he hesitated. She would be through with Duke Porter.

"You don't, eh?" Dot's eyes hardened. "I guess you...you...you...You're not satisfied. I've paid my share of the money! But never mind about that...I'll be seeing you later!" Tucker can't call his life his own! This seems like a great opportunity to teach her a lesson!

But never mind—I'll be seeing you soon,
