CHAPTER XII

Loring studied the tip of his cigar. Rodman, waiting for a word, followed the man's gaze with a pencil in hand and, swiveling the tip of his pen, said, "You don't have to call me 'Old Man.'

"I was just thinking about Nina's death. It's strange how things happen. She looked so happy when she came to the hotel yesterday. I wondered why she was so interested in that pool.

"It's a link, after a fashion." Loring put his cigar to his mouth. "I've been thinking about it. There's something about the way she was found. It's like following an eel through a pipe. Where did she go? What happened?"

"What I'm thinking about is young McLeod. Who was lost in a trans-Pacific air race promoted by the Hotel Quillan."

"No one has been reported missing, and I don't think anyone is going to look for him. I haven't been able to get any information from the police."

"Nina, recently had a serious quarrel with her. On the basis of that, Joel Markham, who operated the hotel, was in the garage."

"I see."

"And we're going to check into that." Loring lowered his voice. "I want to know what she meant by that, too."

"What about it?"

"I'm sure it's connected with the pool."

"But why?"

"I don't know," Loring said. "It's a link, after a fashion."

"And what's that got to do with the pool?"

"It's a link, after a fashion."

"I understand what you mean."

"I'm warning you now. I've locked him in the garage."

"What good will that do?"

"He'll be locked in."

"What for?"

"I'm not telling you."

"Why not?"

"I'm warning you."

"I won't give you any more trouble."

"I see I'm going to have to warn him against meddling," Loring said. "What good will that do?"

"He won't meddle," Loring said. "I've locked him in the garage."

"What's that got to do with the pool?"

"It's a link, after a fashion."

"What do you mean by that?"

Loring stared back sourly, as if in sudden decision. "Since it's bound to come out, I'll try not to have a scandal."

"What for?"

"I don't know," Loring said. "It's a link, after a fashion."

"I see."

"I'm moving out to the West Coast."

"I understand what you mean."

"I'm going to see the police."

"What for?"

"I'm going to see them."

"What about it?"

"I'm going to see them."

"I see."

Laws Affecting Island of Hawaii or Having Special Interest to Its Residents

EDITORY NOTE: It will be some months before the laws passed by the 1941 session of the legislature will be made available to the public.

Hawaii has had the good fortune to be governed by a law-making body that has the public interest at heart. The secretary of the territorial legislature has the duty of seeing that all the laws which bear directly on the County of Hawaii, in which the railroads may be of special interest, are printed in the Big Island.

Buccos Win Two in Straight In Lower Junior Loop

The HAWAII MAINICHI

Wednesday, July 9, 1941

Mainichi Sportorial

After dropping two of the first three of the four-game series, the Buccos, baseball team of the Honolulu Scottish baseball league, regained themselves as they came back Sunday with two triumphs over Crescents and Pirates. The visitors bowed to Crescents and Japanese AC in the first game of July series.

In the holiday games, Crescents won 10 innings to toss out Braves 4-3, but in the nightcap the JAC showed that the supposed superiors were outdone. The NPCs batters in scoring their win rallied nine runs in the eighth inning after trailing 4-3 to pin.

Despite their defeat in their first two games, the Bross showed plenty of power at bat as Captain Mama was credited with two home runs in one game and Pitcher Kusagawa got one. Several other players connected for triples and doubles.

It goes without saying that Joey "Lefty" Cirillo, former of the Wholesea Pirates, has improved tremendously in the last year. Although losing his only game and only game here against the Crescents, Joey pitched Story ball giving only 4 runs on 13 innings. Had a few bounces but the command was well below expectations on Sunday. The first two defeats undoubtedly had a lot to do with the attendants on Sunday as the big swimming meet that was held on the same day.

We don't know whether or not the local football circuit was played in the red or over the Bross series, but unofficial reports said that the Junior Chamber of Commerce did okay on the swimming meet.

Did you see the HBC Water Carnival? If you didn't you sure miss a treat of fun, for hundreds of kids took part in the novelty and fun races which were all enjoyed by the contestants as well as the spectators.

This Water Carnival is being held every other day from July 7th until sponsored jointly by the HBC Recreation Committee and the American Legion.

Such aquatic sporting events as the Water Carnival, and the showboat and championship boat races processed on the same behalf together and in turn should work toward creating a swimming pool for Hilo which is very readily lacking.

The Department of the Navy, the HBC Recreation Committee and the other organizations of Hilo which are working under much handicap to sponsor aquatic sports in Hilo.

sections of the war front, but the positive move of American influence to the Far East at this time should be of tremendous help in boosting the morale of the people. In fact, President Roosevelt's decision to occupy temporarily the north Atlantic island brings about benefits to Britain in more ways than one.

Much will be made of the importance of America's occupation by American naval units as a move to stop Hitler's spread to the North Atlantic, but from a practical standpoint, this claim by the罗斯福 administration is being put forward for effect and seems to be a lack of better and more easily acceptable reason than anything else. The principle and real reason behind the president's move is to increase and increase the patrol service in the north Atlantic, for the benefit of British ships and incidentally and secondly "Fast Hitler" to the British, in occupying a possible stepping-off place in Germany's attempt to threaten North America, if and when such an undertaking should be attempted by the Nazis.

More than anything else, the President's decision to occupy Ireland with U. S. forces should be taken as the administration's determination to carry the war into the enemy's territory by increasing aid to the Great Britain. In short, the occupation of Ireland by the American navies should be considered as the first, direct, U. S. move against the Germans, stretching the help-hands of America to the British into the European war zone, disregarding the certain increase of possibilities of American participation in the present conflict as a "shooting ally" of the British.

The danger of actual fighting in our attempt to aid the British, may well be considered in spite of the past. From now on, America will be engaged in winning the war in this country even if it has to go into the war with "both arms flying."
