ANN didn't sleep very well that night. She lay in the darkness with her eyes fixed on the ceiling. She was afraid he would try to come in. She didn't want him to come in. She didn't want to see him. She didn't want to talk to him. But she was afraid he would try to come in. She was afraid to let them in. She was afraid to let them know she was here.

She lay there, staring at the ceiling, until the time came. She heard the knock on the door. She heard the voice on the other side of the door. She heard the voice calling her name. She heard the voice telling her to come to the door. She heard the voice telling her to open the door.

She got up from the bed and went to the door. She opened the door. She saw him standing there. She saw him looking at her. She saw him smiling. She saw him saying, "Hello, Ann."

She closed the door. She turned the key. She locked the door. She put the key in the lock. She turned the key again. She locked the door.

She stood there, staring at the door. She thought about what he had said. She thought about what she had done. She thought about what she should do. She thought about what she should say.

She turned away from the door. She walked into the bedroom. She sat down on the bed. She took a deep breath. She closed her eyes. She tried to block out the sound of the knock on the door.
