TWO MISSIONARIES ARE CAGED BY SINO TROOP

CATHOLIC PRIESTS ACCUSED OF "INCITE anz

BANGKOK, Oct. 29—Catholic missionaries were arrested here to-day in connection with alleged violation of foreign laws and "inciting the natives to foreign alliances." The arrests were made in the compounds of the Catholic Mission in the province of Chiang Mai.

The missionaries were warned not to leave the premises of the mission compounds until the charges were cleared up.

The missionaries were accused of "inciting the natives to foreign alliances." The missionaries were told that they would be released on bail if they agreed to leave the mission compounds.

The missionaries denied the charges and said they were innocent.

CHAPTER XXX

Ann returned to her room at the inn to the kitchen. Would she be able to squeeze through that back door? Well, she hoped there was no one in the kitchen. It was eleven o'clock, and she was not used to being alone. Could she perhaps talk the night watchman, Louie, into letting her in? She knew he was a friend of hers. While Ann waited, she hung the window shades. It seemed slightly more developed that way. And it was easier for her to think of him. It was easier for her to think of him. And it was easier for her to think of him.

They Rejected Strike Proposal 'Stacks Up' Well

They were wonderful things, these little proposals. As she sat there in the kitchen, she thought of the things she would say to Louie. She would tell him that she was going to the woods, that she was going to bring her story more convincingly. It seemed a little more developed. And it was easier for her to think of him. It was easier for her to think of him. And it was easier for her to think of him.
