HAAN MAY INCITE ANTI-JAPANESE FEELINGS AMONG THE AMERICAN POPULATION

It was an invitation to a headline contender of the current era, and a call to action. It was a statement that could set the stage for anti-Japanese sentiment. It was a call to arms, a call to unite. It was a call to action.

But what if we take a step back and consider the implications of such a call? What if we consider the consequences of inciting anti-Japanese feelings among the American population?

There are several reasons why this could be a dangerous move. First, it could lead to a rise in anti-Japanese sentiment, which could have serious implications for the Japanese community in America. It could lead to acts of violence and discrimination against Japanese Americans.

Second, it could undermine our efforts to maintain a strong and united front in the face of a common enemy. It could lead to divisiveness and factionalism, which could weaken our collective strength.

Third, it could alienate potential allies and partners. It could damage our reputation and credibility in the eyes of the international community.

Therefore, we must be cautious in our words and actions. We must strive to maintain a calm and rational approach to the current situation. We must work with our allies and partners to find a peaceful solution to this crisis.

JAPANESE WHO LEAVE TO BE ALL SEARCHED

During the early days of the war, the government of Japan was concerned about the loyalty of its citizens. It was feared that some Japanese might try to use their positions of influence to incite anti-American sentiment, or to undermine the war effort.

In response to these concerns, the government began searching out and tracking down Japanese who had left the country to live in the United States.

These searches were conducted by the U.S. government, who were concerned about the potential for espionage or sabotage by Japanese citizens living in the United States.

The searches were conducted in a variety of ways, including by contacting Japanese consulates and embassies, by contacting Japanese businesses and organizations, and by contacting individual Japanese citizens.

The searches were conducted in a variety of locations, including in cities and towns throughout the United States, as well as in Japanese schools and universities.

These searches were a significant part of the war effort, and played a key role in ensuring the safety and security of the United States during this time of conflict.

CHAPTER XXXII

As it happened, Ann just happened to be the one chosen as the three met at the airport, while they staggered back at Rome. Their faces plainly showed their surprise at finding her there.

Then, she asked, "What's the matter? What's the whole situation all about?"

Ann seemed rather taken aback. "I don't know," she answered, "but I'm here now, aren't I?"

That was all the business about that, so the three parted, Ann calling out to them over their heads, "Good night!"

And coffee, and during the after­

$2,000,000 Loss of Vital Rubber Stores

From a prominent view of the city, the scene of the fire can be seen. The fire, which started in a rubber warehouse, quickly spread to the adjacent buildings. The flames destroyed a large warehouse containing $2,000,000 worth of rubber. The fire has caused great concern among the rubber industry. Fire fighters from across the country have arrived to help combat the fire.

MANUFACTURING PATRICIAN DISTILLERS

THE U. S. R. I. y industry itself is a critical sector of the manufacx turer. From 20,000 to 500,000 barrels of Government-owned surplus corn, the distillers will convert 600,000,000 gallons of ethyl alcohol within the next two years.

The U. S. needs this alcohol to make jet engine gas and oil (450,000,000 gallons of ethyl alcohol to be converted into gasoline and aviation oil), and to put up 10,000,000 lb. of smokeless powder. Most of the smokeless powders are used for the Navy and the Army. The Navy has enough powder to supply the Navy indefinitely, but the Army is running short. It needs 200,000,000 lb. of smokeless powder.

Manufacuring is divided into 6 sections: 1) Alcohol is made from corn and other grains, 2) Aromatics are made from petroleum oils, 3) Acids are made from petrochemicals, 4) Lubricants are made from refined coal tar, 5) Alcohols are made from wood, 6) Nitroglycerine is made from coal tar.

NOW it's Johnny Ledesma, 1940 Oahu AAI lightwight champion, who announced that he will turn to the pros. Johnny Ledesma has been training for quite some time now and is reported to be in fine shape for a professional debut. He will be handled by Stan Ichinose.

Being the best of friends Johnny Ledesma and Frank Yip, these two lightweight champions have been bea­ ing in the Oahu amateur ranks alternatively for the past few years. Each year one of the two has had the little with the exception of the time Paul Matsumoto got the nod over Ledesma in the 1940 Territorial AAI championship.

Johnny Ledesma is a colorful and capable fighter who should make quite a name in the pros as he did in the ama­ tour ring. In selecting Stan Ichinose as his manager he will have no question as to the proper handling.
