Jane Andrews, whose home is in Cowden, was returning in the vicinity of the town when she returned to her home. She was traveling with her sister, who is a teacher in the local school. They had been shopping for groceries and looking for a place to eat when they met Jane. She was returning to her home to get some rest before going back to work in the evening.

Jane and her sister were considering the plans for the evening, wondering what they should do. Jane suggested going to the movies, but her sister suggested going to a local restaurant instead. They both agreed, and they set off for the restaurant.

At the restaurant, they ordered a meal and spent the rest of the evening talking and enjoying their food. They both had a good time and left the restaurant feeling happy and satisfied.
