HOLY MAN by Gavan Daws
Available for the first time as a quality paperback, Daws' biography of the "leper priest" of Molokai has been called "the best account ever published of Father Damien." Uchinanchu is the term used by Okinawan immigrants and their descendants in Hawaii to identify themselves as an ethnic group distinct from the Naichi of Japan's four main islands. This book, returned to print by popular demand, supports and promotes pride in this unique culture and adds another chapter to our understanding of Hawaii's rich, diverse, multi-ethnic heritage. $25.00

HULA KI'I: Hawaiian Puppetry by Katharine Luomala
Hula Ki'i offers a tantalizing glimpse into the little known world of Polynesian puppetry. In its 19th century heyday, this popular form of entertainment portrayed puppet figures dancing hulas, acting out ribald, slapstick skits full of wisecracks based on comic legend and current scandals. Luomala provides a solid description of the function and history of the craft with all of the color and fascination of a good novel. $24.95

Robert Louis Stevenson and
The Beach of Falesá
A Study in Victorian Publishing
WITH THE ORIGINAL TEXT

Barry Menikoff. One of Stevenson's finest achievements, Falesá ranks among the masterpieces of English novellas. Yet until now, it has never appeared as it was written. The printed version became to Stevenson "the slashed and gaping ruins" of his art, as the original text was systematically corrupted by friends, editors, publishers, and printers with deeply held Victorian political, sexual, and religious convictions. The text of Falesá, faithfully transcribed from the original manuscript, is preceded by an analysis of what happens when a work of art is converted into a commodity to satisfy the tastes and prejudices of the period and a discussion of Stevenson's own role and responsibility in the process. Illus. About $28.50
