THE SOUL OF A LYRIC.

With words that flutter through to utter, Winged thoughts for the world to hear, With a tramp call, or the rise and fall Of a fountain crystal clear, Like the magic roses that dawn uncloses, Dream roses that hold no thorn, With the light immortal from heaven's portal, Is the soul of a lyric born.

From death unfettered, like old wine bettered By the mellowing breath of years, With Machine measure words loseful pleasure Has an undertone of tears; Through all the ranges of Time's vast changes With the gold that its thought can give, Euterpe's token of words unbroken, Does the soul of a lyric live! —William H. Hayes in Youth's Companion.

THE BIG QUICKSAND.

"Papa, I don't like the way those men huddle together forward. They are up to some mischief, you can depend upon it." "Nonsense, Ella; nonsense!" cried bluff old Captain Myers; and he pushed back the broad brimmed straw hat which protected his head from the fierce tropical sun. "The crew is all right, and by sundown, if this breeze holds, we'll be at the mouth of the Colorado."

"Perhaps you know best, papa," said the captain's pretty daughter; "but I believe they are plotting mutiny or some other dreadful thing, and Mr. Edwards'—" "Humph!" growlingly interrupted the captain, and he scowled darkly. "It's from Frank Edwards then that you get these false ideas about my crew?"

"Nothing of the kind, papa!" protested Ella, although she blushed rosily. "It was I who first noticed the queer actions of the men, and called his attention to the matter. He said he would suggest to you"— "Well, I don't want his suggestions!" bellowed the captain. "I'm commander of the Peerless, and have sailed these waters long enough to know my business. These things are all in your imagination, and I don't thank Frank Edwards for encouraging you in libeling my most excellent crew even by thought."

Having thus delivered himself the captain turned on his heel and entered the cabin, while Ella, with another dreadful look toward the sullen faced crew, heaved a deep sigh and sank into a chair which the first mate of the Peerless, handsome Frank Edwards, had placed for her on the poopdeck beneath an improvised awning that had been stretched to shelter her from the rays of the burning sun.

Her face brightened presently, when a quiet step sounded on the deck, and the mate stood beside her. "What did he say?" he asked in an eager whisper. "Pooh-poohed the whole thing as a silly girl's foolish fancy, and stalked into the cabin, red with anger, when I mentioned your name."

"I feared as much," said the young man sadly. "He is blind to the daily machinations of those copper faced rascals, and it is no use giving him advice. They were plotting mischief before we were out of sight of Guaymas."

"That scar faced scoundrel, Manuel Rosario, has learned that we have a cargo of arms, ammunition and general stores for the troops at Fort Yuma, and this knowledge has excited his cupidity. "When we stopped for water at San Francisco island he met an agent of the insurgents, and was promised a liberal sum if he would capture the vessel and turn it and the cargo over to them."

"He does not know that I overheard him plotting. "If he did he would be cowardly and desperate enough to knock me on the head with a belaying pin some dark night."

"Oh, Frank!" cried Ella, and her beautiful face paled with apprehension. "Do be careful and watchful—for my sake!" "I will!" was his response, "and as your father will not take the precaution to checkmate any move these ruffians may make I will perfect my plans so that we can escape from the bark in case Rosario and his men mutiny and seize her."

"And papa?" faltered Ella. "I'll force him to go with us. Now don't worry, dear heart, for I feel able to cope with those rascals when the time for action comes."

They were in the upper Gulf of California, where it narrows to meet the waters of the Colorado river. The bark Peerless, of which Ella's father was captain and owner, was loaded with arms and ammunition and other supplies for the United States troops at Fort Yuma.

All but two of the original crew shipped in New York had died of the yellow fever, which broke out with terrible virulence shortly after they passed Cape St. Lucas and entered the gulf. The captain had managed to get his vessel into Guaymas, and there the two remaining members of his crew had deserted.

In consequence he was obliged to ship a native crew and employ Manuel Rosario, an ex-pearl diver who, unknown to him, was implicated in a revolution then in progress on the peninsula, to enlist the requisite number of men. Rosario had got together a band of as bloodthirsty ruffians as it was possible to find, and had no difficulty in inducing them to lend a willing acquiescence to all his nefarious schemes.

He nobly planned to make Captain Myers, the captain's daughter, Ella, and the mate, Frank Edwards, prisoners, seize the vessel and run it into a secluded harbor between the head of San Francisco island and the mouth of the Colorado river.

Here he would be joined by a party of the insurgents, who would loot the vessel, after which it would be broken up. The tides on the Gulf of California are gigantic, the rise and fall of the water averaging seventy-five feet. Rosario knew that they would enter the mouth of the Colorado river that night, and as the tide was rising swiftly at that point the bark would be securely anchored during the ebb and flow of the tremendous current. This he resolved should be the time and place of attack, and his faithful henchmen only awaited his signal to make the captain, the mate, and the beautiful young girl prisoners.

In tow of the bark was a small dinghy. Drawing this up to the rudder post Mate Edwards opened one of the cabin windows and dropped into it such articles as would be of use to them in their flight, as well as provisions for three or four days.

He then informed Ella of these preparations, and she held herself in readiness to flee at a moment's notice. At about 4 o'clock in the afternoon the Peerless entered the river, and as the tide was low and would shortly turn Captain Myers secured his vessel with a bow and stern anchor and awaited the coming rush of water, preceded by its ordinary high advance wave.

It could be discerned in the distance. The captain and his daughter were leaning over the stern rail watching its approach when Manuel Rosario gave the signal for revolt. He and two of his men stole softly toward the unsuspecting captain.

He dashed up the companion stairs. Captain Myers in another moment was struggling in the grasp of Rosario's companions. Before the latter could draw weapons the mate shot one and badly wounded the other.

Rosario released Ella, whom he had seized, and shouted for assistance. Reversing his heavy six shooter Mate Edwards brought the butt down upon Rosario's head with a force that sent him moaning and half senseless to the deck.

"Quick!" he cried, seizing Ella's arm. "Over the stern rail. There is a ladder. Drop into the boat. I will keep you from the river at bay."

He began firing into the horde of advancing mutineers. By the time his revolver was emptied Captain Myers and Ella had reached the boat. During the afternoon he had cleaned the captain's double barreled shotgun, heavily charged it with slugs and concealed it on deck under a tarpaulin.

With a yell of defiance he caught it up and discharged both barrels in the very faces of the mutineers. They recoiled before this terrible fire, and taking advantage of their discomfiture, Frank slipped over the rail and cut the boat adrift.

Before he could seize the oars the first big wave of the tide was upon them and they were hurled on past the vessel and far up the river with frightful velocity. Then came the recoil and they drifted back toward the Peerless.

Frank pulled toward a little island on the right hand side of the channel and succeeded in making a landing. He made fast the boat painter to a heavy rock, and the three, retreating, were above high water mark when the second wave swept up the stream.

Rosario, maddened at the blow he had received, staggered to his feet as the dinghy swept by the vessel and ordered out the long boat. So to it he leaped with his followers to pursue.

The second wave swept them toward the fugitives, and when the recoil came they were within 300 yards of the island. "After them!" shouted Rosario, leaping upon the beach as soon as the boat grounded.

Suddenly they began to flounder and sink in the sand. "A quicksand!" he cried, and made desperate efforts to reach firm ground. In vain!

The more they struggled the deeper they sank, and when the next wave swept up the river they were engulfed in ten feet of water. Not a soul escaped, and when, after waiting patiently on the island until the big tide was full, Mate Edwards rowed the captain and his daughter back to the Peerless, there was a look of grateful pride on the old skipper's face as he regarded his brave young mate.

Four of the mutineers had been shot dead and three others were desperately wounded. The bodies of the dead were thrown overboard and the wounded were imprisoned in the forecabin. When Fort Yuma was reached and the vessel had been unloaded there was a grand wedding on the deck of the Peerless, and when she started on her homeward voyage a happier couple could not be found than Mr. and Mrs. Frank Edwards—New York World.

Napoleon and Talleyrand. What was strange in Napoleon's behavior towards me was that at the very time that he showed himself most suspicious of me he was endeavoring to draw me nearer to him. Thus in the month of December, 1813, he asked me to resume the portfolio of foreign affairs, which I straightway declined, convinced as I was that we could never agree on the only possible way of his escape from the maze into which he had been brought by his folly.

A few weeks later, in the month of January, 1814, before his departure to the army, and when M. de Caulaincourt had already started for the Châtillon congress, the emperor worked almost every evening with M. de la Beaumardiere, who had the foreign office in M. de Caulaincourt's absence. In the course of these conversations, which were kept up far into the night, he often opened his mind to him in a strange fashion. Thus he severely reprimanded him, after reading the dispatches in which the Duke of Vintzena told him of the progress of the Châtillon negotiations, "Ah! if Talleyrand were there he would pull you through,"—Talleyrand's Memoirs in Century.

Daily Bulletin

Pledged to neither Sect nor Party, But established for the benefit of all.

FRIDAY, FEB. 19, 1892.

The late Judge Bradley of the United States Supreme Court was the member of the famous "eight to seven" electoral commission who gave the casting vote that decided Hayes to be elected President instead of Tilden.

The able letter of "Palamaite" on the Palama road will doubtless not be lost on the new administration of roads. It is no wonder that two members of the Board are from along that road, when its desperate state has been crying for redress these many years.

In London eucalyptus oil is in high favor as a preventive of the death-dealing influenza. The tree itself is mentioned by a London paper as an absorbent of poisonous exhalations in marshy places.

A writer in Ka Leo is arguing out the approaching end of the Hawaiian monarchy. He produces an array of charges against the institution as it has been worked for a few years past.

The annexation talk in the Mail and Express correspondence reproduced to-day is only a variation of what has been current for fifty years. If the sugar bounty was certain to endure as long as the Rocky Mountains, the argument for annexation would be irresistible.

Countless millions of gallons of water are running into the sea this season, some of which might have been saved for the probably coming dry period, if there had been reservoirs made in the mountains in times past.

The United States bought $3,450,000 worth of goods from Chile in 1891 and sold $3,130,000 worth.

Another instance of the profitable utilizing of waste product is found in the establishment of a mill at Memphis for making paper pulp from cotton-seed hulls.

DR. McLENNAN, the well-known specialist of San Francisco, Cal., recently arrived here with his family, has opened offices at No. 31 Richards street, opposite the Royal Palace.

An account of a wonderful invention made by Sellender, a mechanic of Oakland, is copied in this issue from the San Francisco Examiner. Often we hear just once of a great invention like this, which is to revolutionize the world's motive power, and then no more of it.

invention. When he proves to the world that he is not mistaken, he will probably find some of his earliest and best patrons in Hawaii. Where fuel comes so high and is so much used as here, titanic power in a nutshell and cheap at that would be a boon indeed.

What tyranny is exercised nowadays on behalf of statistics! Census-takers provoke small riots by their obnoxious questions as to age, debts, mortgages, dogs, etc. Girls in the public schools of St. Louis, United States, lately rebelled against Tyrant Statistics and made him retreat. The tyrant was represented by Dr. William T. Porter, who was commissioned to measure school children, for the purpose of establishing normal statistics of their physique.

PALAMA ROAD.

The Palama people have been waiting long and patiently for a bit of decent road while the (said to be retiring) Road Supervisor has been polishing up the streets of Kulaokala or "Nobtown." They are now asking one another, can anyone find a decent bit of walking ground along the entire Palama branch of King Street? Can the genius of a Road Supervisor fish out the missing sidewalk anywhere between the bridge and the railroad depot clear out to the tramway terminus?

There are only two streets in Palama, the main one is now a veritable slough of despond, the other having been built up by one of our ancestors in the remote past is still in the A-1 condition he left it. There is no other street in the city of Honolulu in a worse condition than the main Palama road—but there are no grumblers in Palama. Such of them as were in the business got tired and quit long ago.

The improvements needed for the Palama "cow path" called King street are (1) a surveyor to straighten out some of the half a dozen kinks in it; (2) a jury to give it a width of 60 feet instead of 20 feet; (3) sidewalks; (4) cutting down some of the hills; (5) filling up some of the hollows, and (6) a foot deep layer of good crushed rocks and gravel rolled down solid on the principle laid down by Mr. Macadam.

The Cuban Reciprocity Act doesn't take effect until July 1st next. The people of Boston invest about $50,000 a year in Louisiana lottery. Florida will make an orange exhibit at Chicago of 23,700 square feet.

The Kentucky Republicans favor the re-nomination of President Harrison.

Chicago's elevated railway will far surpass New York's in all particulars.

ANNEXATION TALK AT HAWAII.

[Honolulu Corr. N. Y. Mail and Express.]

The question of annexation to the United States, if put to popular vote in the islands to-day, would undoubtedly be voted down. The native Hawaiians would vote against it because their cry is "Hawaii for the Hawaiians"; at least, that is the cry that has been raised by some of their leaders. A few representatives of Great Britain, and, perhaps, of other European nationalities, would quite likely vote against it through jealousy of Americans.

It is considered probable by some that annexation would shortly be followed by an influx of office-holders and carpet-baggers, probably drawn largely from California, who would scorn the traditions of the past and thus cause great injustice, not only to the natives but also to the white men. There is great weight in this consideration. Take the questions of water rights, fisheries and public land; although not finally settled, they are comparatively quiet now; and there is good reason for the feeling that when the time comes for their final adjustment it will be necessary to keep in view the traditions of the soil.

It seems as if there were some ground for apprehension that these interests might not receive full justice at the hands of new-comers, whose lives have thus far been untouched by affectionate interest in the history of these islands.

A CHANGE IN PUBLIC FEELING.

But public feeling has been undergoing a change. The experiences of the past few months have done much to force upon the minds of all thinking and reasonable men, the conviction that the destiny of this country is sooner or later to be linked politically to the Great Republic. An important factor in producing this feeling is the hard times that have fallen upon us as a result of the sugar bounties and the removal of duties on all imported sugars enacted by the American Congress.

THE NEW RECIPROcity TREATY.

The new treaty of absolute reciprocity with the United States, recently signed by our Minister at Washington, Dr. J. Mott Smith, and now awaiting the signature of President Harrison, will, if it becomes a law, be of considerable help to us by opening up and making profitable certain "diversified industries." But all of them put together will not amount to a tithe of the sugar interest. It is felt that the United States have not dealt fairly by us in the matter of sugar, inasmuch as this new deal wipes out the benefit to us of the Reciprocity Treaty of 1875 by cutting off at one stroke our whole margin of profit on our most important product.

And this feeling is strengthened and made more galling by the fact that during the few months that immediately preceded the going into operation of the McKinley tariff and the sugar bounty very heavy investments had been made in this country in the sugar business, viz., the opening up of three enormous plantations, one at Ewa, adjoining Pearl Harbor, capitalized at $500,000; another at Kaluku, representing the same amount (both on this island), and a third at Makaweli, on the island of Kauai, capitalized at $2,000,000.

We are just at the beginning of hard times, and even now the distress is considerable. The other influence that tends to make annexation acceptable is the feeling that it will put a final stop to the plottings and the threats of revolution that have created much uneasiness during the last two years. Capital is needed, and capital is timid and does not seek storm or revolution centers for opportunities of investment.

INFLUENZA IN ENGLAND.

The influenza spreads so fast, and is becoming so deadly in its assaults on all weak constitutions, that any preventive which seems effectual deserves attention. A correspondent of the Times declares that in the office of the Royal Insurance Company, Lombard street, rooms protected by scattering a few drops of eucalyptus oil on the blotting-paper have been free from the scourge; while in another department, where the oil was not used, five clerks out of twenty-five were prostrated by the disease.

The immunity produced by the oil has been noticed during two outbreaks of the pest, and, though more evidence is required, it is certain that extracts of eucalyptus act as powerful disinfectants. The tree itself, it will be remembered, is believed to suck up the malarious influence of marshes. As yet the doctors seem certain of nothing except that "fighting up" against the disease is fatal. Patients should go to bed at once.—London Spectator.

Every family should be provided with some reliable medicine for bowel complaints. A fair trial will convince any one that Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy is without an equal; besides it is pleasant to take. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale by all dealers. Benson, Smith & Co., agents.

"German Syrup"

A Cough and Croup Medicine.

For children a medicine should be absolutely reliable. A mother must be able to pin her faith to it as to her Bible. It must contain nothing violent, uncertain, or dangerous. It must be standard in material and manufacture. It must be plain and simple to administer; easy and pleasant to take. The child must like it. It must be prompt in action, giving immediate relief, as children's troubles come quick, grow fast, and end fatally or otherwise in a very short time. It must not only relieve quick but bring them around quick, as children chafe and fret and spoil their constitutions under long confinement. It must do its work in moderate doses. A large quantity of medicine in a child is not desirable. It must not interfere with the child's spirits, appetite or general health. These things suit old as well as young folks, and make Boschee's German Syrup the favorite family medicine.

The Ring Was In His Boot!

An interesting incident occurred at a wedding in Nyack, N. Y., recently, says the Albany Argus. All went merrily until the bridegroom was called upon to produce the wedding ring. In vain he felt in his trousers' pocket for the indispensable article. Nothing could be found except a hole, through which the ring had evidently fallen into his boot. What was he to do? "Take your boot off," said the parson. The suspense and silence were painful. The organist, at the dominie's bidding, began a "voluntary."

The young man removed his boot, the ring was found, also a hole in his stocking, and the minister remarked, evidently with more than the ceremony in mind, "Young man, it is time you were married."

CHINESE TOUCHS.

Mention was made in yesterday's BULLETIN of a remark made by a Chinaman that a Chinese high-binders' society was holding sway in this city, and that the assault cases in the Police Court were the result of this society's nefarious work. The following named Chinese—Ah Wai, Pachee, Ah Gow, Ah Fat and Ah Poon—have been on trial in the Police Court the past few days on different charges of assault and battery. Most of the witnesses appeared in favor of defendants, but were so contradictory that His Honor did not take much stock in them.

Ah Poon, it was proved, however, was not concerned in the affair and was discharged. Ah Wai, Pachee, Ah Gow and Ah Fat were found guilty and sentenced to six months' imprisonment at hard labor and to pay costs of Court. Defendants noted an appeal. Bail was fixed at $100 each.

Five other Chinese, Aiau, Ah Pong, Lum Sung, Awai and Angeen are also under arrest for assault and battery on a fellow-countryman. Their trial will come up to-morrow. Not a day has passed this week but what an assault and battery case against Chinese has been on trial in the Police Court. Although the complainants do not show much injury, yet the fact remains that there is some society which has for its object the punishment of fellow-countrymen against whom they have trifling grievances. A few more sentences as previously mentioned will probably put a check on this vicious element.

Y. M. C. A.

The regular monthly meeting of the Y. M. C. A. was well attended. The treasurer's report showed net receipts of $101.05. Rev. Mr. Greely was reported to the meeting as likely to leave shortly, when a vote of thanks was passed to him for his good work among the sailors of vessels in port. Mr. H. W. Peck was re-elected General Secretary. The meeting was larger and more interesting than usual. The financial committee reported the financial outlook highly satisfactory. Thirty-eight calls on the sick were reported for the month by the visitation committee. The report of the evangelistic meetings in Bethel Hall is very cheering. They will be continued. The reading room has been improved in appearance by a large number of photographs of Vistas of Hawaii being hung on the walls. The meeting was larger and more entertaining than usual. After the enrolling of nine new members the meeting adjourned.

A PRETTY COMB.

The comb is of tortoise shell, surmounting which is the American eagle, also of the same material. The creases and different linings are plain and nicely polished. This is the second comb made by Mr. McGuire, his first one being a prettier one, surmounted by a crown, which was presented to Her Majesty the Queen.

THIS MEANS CHEAP SUGAR.

The following is an extract from a letter dated Havana, Jan. 7, 1892: Sugar making has commenced nearly a month earlier than in other seasons. We are now receiving the new crop freely at all the coast ports, and the prospect is very fair for the making of some one million tons of sugar. Cane enough has been planted to produce this amount, and with no unusual accidents we shall have the largest crop ever produced in Cuba.—Montreal Witness.

Usually has some foundation to start on. It is always advisable, however, to be prepared for emergencies. Smallpox is a terrible scourge; spreads rapidly by contagion or infection, and proves fatal nearly always. "The Picture that is Turned Toward the Wall."

In this quiet little city lives a couple with one child. A girl beloved by all, until, you bet, by the influence of false friends, and fairy ads, beguiled, she went to 'Frisco for a dinner set. She bought a "cheap and natty," and paid an awful price. And even this misfortune was not all; when her father saw the pieces tears of anguish filled his eyes, and he went and turned her picture to the wall. There's a thought that's never spoken And a pocket book that's broken, There's a dinner set that's thrown out in the stall. And a sad and wiser daughter (For experience has taught her), And a picture that is turned toward the wall.

GIANT FORCE IN TINY BULBS.

Accidental Discovery of What Ma⁹ Be the Most Potent of Motors.

EIGHT ROWBOATS MOVED BY A BATTERY THE SIZE OF A NUT.

The Possibility that an East Oakland Engineer has Discovered the Long-Sought Secret of the Means for Direct and Cheap Application of Electricity from Chemical Generation.

(San Francisco Examiner, Feb. 7, 1892.)

A procession of rowboats moving rapidly about Lake Merritt, Oakland, a few weeks ago was observed with intense interest by a few people who had watched with eagerness the movements of one of the men in the leading boat.

This boat was fitted with paddles, the rapid rotation of which urged the boat rapidly through the ripples and drew swiftly the seven other boats in tow.

The boating excursion was no pleasure party, but a private exhibition of a motor which, if able to accomplish one tenth of what is said of it, is the most powerful application of electrical energy ever devised.

Charles Sellander is the man who directed the movements of the leader boat, and he is the discoverer of the chemical combination that produces marvelous results.

The process, the materials, the manner of combination are secrets closely held, for no patent has been issued. To a very few people has any information of the discovery or invention been communicated, and these people must be losing sleep contemplating the marvels which the young inventor claims for his motive power.

Sellander is a modest mechanic, quiet and industrious, who is employed by the Southern Pacific Company as an extra engineer of locomotive engines. He lives on Fourth avenue, East Oakland, and bears an excellent reputation among all who know him. He is a member of the Congregational Church and attends service at the church in which the Rev. George L. McNutt preaches. His pastor is one of those deepest in the confidence of the young inventor.

THE EXPLOSION IN THE LABORATORY.

Sellander has said nothing for public perusal about his invention or discovery and is believed to be now in the East. What he has said and shown in private is merely sufficient to whet curiosity.

As a boy he had a fancy for chemistry, and spent so much of his time as he could spare in a little laboratory of his own construction, built in the back yard at his father's dwelling-place. Here, with crucibles and retorts and acids and mixtures and machines he made experiments and learned by his own processes the effects of combinations.

One day he spilled one chemical solution into another. Immediately an explosion occurred and fire ignited his little laboratory and burned it to the ground.

What seemed a calamity was his greatest benefaction. Interested by the unexpected and disastrous result of the chemical combination he began a series of investigations of the materials that had produced the explosion. During this study he found—accidentally stumbled upon, it is believed—his great discovery of a new means of generating electrical power.

The outward appearance of his apparatus is simple. His chemical compound is incased in air-tight copper vacuum bulbs, for it explodes on exposure to the atmosphere.

Attached to the copper receptacles are wires through which the electricity is fed as on supply wires of other electrical systems.

THE MINISTER'S PHONOGRAPH.

The discovery is the generating materials and their imprisonment.

One of these vacuum tubes is no longer than a walnut. Yet with this infinitesimally small storage, or generator, he is said to have sent the eight row-boats in column dancing over the surface of Lake Merritt as though they were shells moved by a Cambridge crew.

Sellander's pastor, Rev. Mr. McNutt, has practical knowledge of the value and success of the new motor. Mr. McNutt is the owner of a phonograph. To operate this he used an Edison motor weighing sixty pounds. Sellander applied one of his little contrivances, and it does all the work that formerly was accomplished by the cumbersome and heavy motor. With one of the small batteries young Sellander has for months furnished power to run his mother's sewing machine.

The inventor recently told a friend that for three weeks he had supplied constant power from his tiny generator to move a toy boat in a pond in his backyard, and the battery showed no signs of weakening. To the same friend he said that he regards his invention, or discovery, as the nearest approach to perpetual motion yet attained.

With the same generator young Sellander can furnish electric lighting, so he says, and declares that the cost will be so small that one is astonished at his estimates. For instance, F. M. Smith has magnificent and spacious grounds about his dwelling on the East Oakland Heights. The inventor has agreed to supply a current direct from the batteries to illuminate the grounds for a cost of $3 per month.

THE BACKERS OF THE INVENTOR.

These stories sound like fairy tales or the invention of some "Caxton" Rhodes to delude the people, but if the young man is a pretender he has succeeded at the beginning in gulping some very hard-headed business men who are not inclined to swallow the jolly tales of a fabricator of romance.

First, there is F. M. Smith, commonly known as the boss king of this Coast, from his business. Mr. Smith is ready to back the inventor with money. To an Examiner man Mr. Smith would say but little, but he referred with enthusiasm to the discovery or invention. He said that he has not been taken into Sellander's confidence and therefore knows nothing about the materials in the little battery by which the marvelous electrical force is generated. Yet he is satisfied that the device will be a great success. He says that the light produced by the Sellander system is proportionately as superior to the ordinary electric lights as gas-light is superior to kerosene lamp-light.

E. J. Baldwin ("Lucky" Baldwin of San Francisco) is said also to be willing to supply money to the inventor. Another report is that the Baldwin Theatre and Hotel in San Francisco with complete success.

George M. Pullman of Illinois, the great car-builder, is another who is said to have seen the Sellander battery, and to be convinced that it is what it is said to be.

TROUBLE ABOUT PATENT RIGHTS.

Among the clergy of Oakland Sellander has two firm friends. One is Rev. Mr. McNutt and the other is the Rev. Dr. J. K. McLean, pastor of the First Congregational Church, the largest Protestant church in the city of churches. Mr. McNutt, who has been particularly close to him, declines to say anything about the discovery, fearing that circulation of information about it might make even more difficult than at present the securing of patents.

Many disheartening troubles already have occurred in his attempt to secure Governmental protection for his discovery or invention. To regulate the tremendous electrical force generated in his tiny batteries he has used an apparatus which is deemed by the Patent Office experts to be an infringement of one of Edison's patents.

Twice has this regulator prevented him from getting his patent. The belief is that he is now in Washington making a third effort.

The inventor has a plan for constructing a wonderful boat for duck hunting for F. M. Smith. He intends so to arrange the craft that the occupant may guide it by mere movement from side to side in his seat, and start, stop, back and regulate speed by pressure of a foot on buttons in the bottom of the boat.

Sellander is modestly enthusiastic over his own work. He said recently to a friend, "This discovery will change the method of production of power and also of electric lighting."
