The University of Hawaii, with the cooperation of the Territorial Board of Health, Palama Settlement and the Social Service Bureau, offers a course in general public health nursing. This course is offered in alternate years.

The purpose of the course is to prepare well-qualified graduate nurses for positions in either urban or rural public health nursing fields. The program is planned to give a basic knowledge of and training in all phases of public health nursing with particular emphasis upon family health through social, educational and preventive work. A certificate in Public Health Nursing is awarded by the University to those who successfully complete the exact course as outlined with an average grade of "C".

Enrollment is limited to ten students.

ADMISSION REQUIREMENTS

†1. Graduation from an approved secondary school or its equivalent.

2. Satisfactory rating in college aptitude examination.

3. Graduation from a recognized school for nurses with evidence of the satisfactory completion of a course of at least two years connected with a hospital which had a daily average of at least fifty patients during the applicant's period of training. The training school course must have included theoretical instruction and experience in medical, surgical, obstetrical, and children's services.

4. Registration in the state or country in which training was obtained.

5. Personal and professional fitness for public health nursing.

Application blanks will be furnished upon request. All inquiries regarding the course should be addressed to the Registrar, University of Hawaii. A personal interview with the director, Miss MacOwan, is required whenever possible.

† Exception may be made in a few cases when the applicant has had satisfactory experience in public health nursing.
PROGRAM OF STUDY

The program of study requires the completion of one university year, the first semester of which is devoted entirely to class work at the University and the second to practical experience in public health nursing and social case work with the cooperating agencies. Exemptions may be granted for certain phases of field work upon presentation of evidence of satisfactory experience.

DESCRIPTION OF COURSES

PUBLIC HEALTH

150 Public Health Nursing
MacOwan
This course considers the development, methods, and technique of public health nursing with emphasis on the social and preventive aspects of service to the family and community. First semester, 3 credits.

156 Child Hygiene
Williams, Gaudin
This course is designed to acquaint the student with the hygiene of normal childhood from birth through school age. Desirable programs of work and the functions of the public health nurse in both urban and rural communities will be discussed. Opportunity will be offered for the students to observe and study various institutions and agencies engaged in child health work. First semester, 3 credits.

158 Nutrition
Glenn
This course takes up the study of the principles of diet in relation to health and their application in the planning of meals for the family. Special attention will be given to local racial foods and the nutritive value of island foods. Two lectures and one 2½ hour laboratory period. First semester, 3 credits.

160 Public Health Administration
Special Lecturers
This course is planned to give the student an understanding of methods for the protection and promotion of community health. Epidemiology and control of communicable diseases, modern public health organization and administration and statistical methods in health work will be considered. First semester, 2 credits.

171 Field Program
MacOwan and Field Supervisors
The field work is planned to furnish practical training in home visiting for both bedside and instructive care, including tuberculosis nursing; the student is given experience in kindergarten and school health work, prenatal and child health conferences, tuberculosis and other clinics, and the use of records and reports. Experience in social case work is given concurrently during the entire four months. Lectures, demonstrations, conferences, and case discussions are given in relation to the field work. The opportunity for this field experience is provided through the cooperation of the Territorial Board of Health, Palama Settlement, the Social Service Bureau, Department of Public Instruction, and the Free Kindergarten and Children's Aid Association. Second semester, 10 credits.
