Harbor Improvement Appropriation May Wait A Session

"When I was in Washington," said President E. D. Tenney of the Honolulu Chamber of Commerce in a meeting of that body this morning in the Stangenwald building, "I made an effort to see Congressman Burton, chairman of the Rivers and Harbors Committee of the House of Representatives, who had the matter of our harbor deepening in hand, but unfortunately he was very ill with a cold—threatened with pneumonia, in fact, and he was not visible. Consequently the work of the committee in this connection was held up.

"There seem to be favorable indications of an appropriation being provided. It is generally the custom, however, in a matter of this kind, to order a project made at one session of Congress and to act on it at the next session, and to make an appropriation at the next.

"If an appropriation is made by Congress for harbor improvement here at this session it will be the establishment of a precedent. Still, in Washington they are impressed with the urgency of the needs of our harbor and everything possible is being done to forward favorable action.

"Mr. George McClellan is working hard and is accomplishing good results."

Little or nothing, beyond the reading of numerous communications, was done at the meeting of the Chamber this morning. There was no unfinished business to handle, nor was there any new business to take up. No committees had to report, except that W. M. Giffard asked for and was granted further time in the matter of the proposition of the Chamber becoming a member of the National Business League, Committee looking into the rice industry is still at work, having much to do.

A letter was read from one of the Philippine Commissioners to the World's Fair at St. Louis, who passed through here, going and returning, thanking the Chamber in the most elegant language for kindnesses and courtesies extended to the Commissioners, referring to Honolulu as a splendid and magnificent city, and to the treatment by the Chamber representatives as "peculiar kindness and exquisite distinction."

Secretary Spencer reported turning five thousand dollars over to the Hawaii Promotion Committee.

A note from the Rapid Transit Company was read. It asked the privilege of using the quarters of the Chamber for their annual meeting on the 29th instant, for a consideration. Permission was granted, the secretary having arranged with the company as to terms.

Secretary Spencer read correspondence between the local Chamber and the San Francisco Chamber of Commerce relative to the deepening of Honolulu harbor, the communications including the letter of the San Francisco Chamber of Commerce referring to resolutions of that body favoring improvements, said resolution having been published in The Bulletin.

On the topic of harbor improvement, the Chamber's petition being referred to, President Tenney remarked that Delegate Kalaniana'ole had seemed somewhat annoyed at the delay in getting the petition forwarded.

A communication was read from a California man interested in pineapple raising, wanting to know something of prospects here. The secretary had referred the matter to J. D. Dole, largely interested in the industry.

F. J. Lowrey reported having received a brief note from James F. Morgan, prior to the latter's departure for San Francisco, to the effect that the Committee on Legislation might be advised concerning any desired action. President Tenney stated that it was up to any of the committee to proceed with suggestions. Lowrey thought if Morgan was going to be away any length of time it might be well to add to the committee.

"I don't know anything about Mr. Morgan's absence, I don't know how long he will be gone," said Mr. Tenney. "When does the Legislature meet?" he asked.

"February 15," replied E. Faxon Bishop.

Secretary Spencer read a letter from the Pacific Mail Company to the effect that this concern is doing everything in its power to forward Honolulu harbor improvements, and referring to all the commercial bodies of San Francisco having adopted resolutions favoring the plans and urging Congress to act favorably, facts previously published in The Bulletin.

A note was read from the Governor acknowledging the receipt of certain data from the Chamber. Word had been received from Lieutenant Slattery relative to the cable from Washington for harbor improvement data, previously published.

Present at the meeting were Messrs. Tenney, Spencer, Lowrey, Swanzy, Giffard, Spalding, Bishop, Isenberg and Lanz.

HIGH SHERIFF HENRY HAS MADE CHANGE AT HILO

(By Wireless Telegraphy.)

Hilo, Jan. 11, 2.15 p.m.

Bulletin, Honolulu.

John Searle has been appointed Sheriff.—Richards.

"A change is possible although I have received no information that such has been made," said Governor Carter this noon when asked whether he could give any information regarding the report that Sheriff Andrews is out of office and that Mr. Searle has been appointed in his place.

"Towards the end of last year I told High Sheriff Henry to pay more attention to the police in the outside districts and on the other islands in order that he would be able to make recommendations to the Legislature at the coming session. Sheriff Henry told me that he would go to Hawaii with a batch of prisoners and would use that opportunity for the purpose of looking into the police there.

"High Sheriff Henry and I have lately had several conversations regarding the police department on Hawaii and have also discussed the possible advisability of a change. There are at present three applicants for the position of Sheriff of Hawaii, should a vacancy occur. Searle is one of the applicants we have considered. He is a half-white and was formerly connected with the police force in Kau district.

"When High Sheriff Henry left for Hawaii a few days ago he had the authority to make any changes in the Hawaii police force which he thought advisable. He may have found it best to let Andrews out and to get another man in his place who he thought could do better work in the position, but I have not received any advices on the subject. I should think that if the High Sheriff has made the change he would have wired me to that effect. It also seems hardly probable that he has already made the change, as he arrived on Hawaii just a very short time ago and has had but little time in which to make an investigation."

POLICE CAPTURE CLEVERLY LEPER OUTLAW

Opulauohu was arrested by a posse of police at daylight this morning and is now confined in the detention camp at Kailahi. He will undoubtedly be sent to the Molokai settlement, as his condition is now such as to make the identity of his disease a matter of certainty. When he turned outlaw five years ago and took to the hills, leprosy was apparent only to physicians; but this morning any layman could find traces of the malady.

Opulauohu was arrested, examined and condemned five years ago, but escaped from the detention camp to the hills. There he armed himself and coolly notified the police authorities that he would shoot the first man or set of men attempting to arrest him. The shooting of Sheriff Stoiz and four soldiers in Koolau valley by Kailahi, the leper outlaw, which occurred in June, 1893, was still fresh in the minds of the police, so that there was no particular anxiety to seek Opulauohu in his lair.

The man was known to live in Kailahi and at Wataia, shifting from one place to the other when there was indication of a move against him. Yesterday Deputy Sheriff Rawlins located the outlaw in a house in the foothills of Kailahi, where his wife lives, and at 5 o'clock this morning despatched Lieutenant Leslie and a squad (eight men) of armed mounted police to the scene. They noiselessly surrounded the cottage and then broke through the door. The leper was found in bed and was taken by surprise. His rifle was near at hand but he had not time to reach it before he was in the clutches of the police.

Opulauohu was still disposed to fight for his freedom, but was persuaded by his wife and Lieutenant Leslie to make no resistance.

Mr. Cowan, who is on his way home from a trip around the world, addressed the advanced pupils of the Royal School yesterday on the "Resources of Australia."

Holloway On Queen Street Extension

Superintendent of Public Works Holloway stated this morning that the $20,000 appropriated for the extension of Queen street had been expended on the removing of warehouses which were in the line of extension, and in building a buttress where the street ran to the river, as well as in constructing a piece of road from the Palama side of the river towards Iwiliel road. Mr. Holloway has not as yet decided whether he will recommend to the coming Legislature that a further appropriation be made for the purpose of carrying out the original plan of extending Queen street on a line marked of King street until it joins the Bishop Estate's new road behind the Kamehameha Schools.

This is rather a surprise to me, and I am positive that there are people here who will be kicking themselves for having missed availing themselves of this opportunity, when the lands have day morning, have been taken.

"I am not booming these lands," continued Mr. Pratt, "and I do not want to be thought doing so. However, it is my personal opinion that the Paumalu and Paumalu lands are well worth having. I am basing my opinion on the statements of people who ought to know, and who pretend to know about such things. Byron Clark of Wahiawa appraised the land and made a thorough examination of it. He went down there with several men with picks and shovels and looked into the conditions of the soil and all other matters concerning the question. He spoke in high terms of the land.

"I think that the Paumalu and Paumalu lands show up very favorably in comparison with those at Wahiawa. The climate is better at Paumalu, as there is rather too much rain at Wahiawa. Another still greater advantage of the Paumalu lands above those at Wahiawa is that they have excellent transportation facilities, being quite close to the railroad line, while at the latter place the products raised have to be hauled by wagons for a very considerable distance.

"One of those who took up one of the Paumalu lots last Monday, Mr. Thomas, is the son of a Wahiawa farmer. He intends to raise pineapples at his new place and believes that it is excellently adapted for growing these plants. While no further applications have been made since last Monday I am informed that a combination is being formed of people in this city who intend to take up some of the lands at Paumalu for agricultural purposes. Seeing that this is the case, I think that those who want land should look out that they do not get left by waiting until all the lands have been taken up by other parties."

Weaver Reports

On Land Court

Judge Weaver of the Court of Land Registration has filed a report to Chief Justice Frear. He shows that he was appointed by Judge Dole on July 21, 1903, and was advised that the expense account under the appropriation for the new court would allow him to go to Boston and study the system there.

Weaver made the trip but the Auditor refused to pay any bill contracted during the six months ending Dec. 31, 1903, and the expenses are still unpaid.

The court opened for business on October 10, 1903. From then to January 1, 1904, six applications were made, one for a city lot in Honolulu valued at $25,000 and five for new sugar plantations on Maui with an area of about 5,000 acres assessed at $5 an acre.

From Jan. 1, 1904, to Jan. 1, 1905, 28 applications were made, 23 of which described town or city lots and 5 country lands. The former included the town site of Waihiwa. The country lands include 5,394 acres of land at Holomua, Kona, to which there are about 100 conveyances to abstract. There are also lands on Maui and Oahu.

What Blacow Did In Small Farm Effort

Peaches—Of all the imported trees from California we only had two fruit buds that had formed on one tree while in the nursery and matured after being planted on Hawaii. The year of planting they grew well and made as much as five to six feet of new wood and after that they did not grow as many inches a year, the young shoots would form a stubbin on its end and five or six leaves would grow from it in a kind of plume, after five years of such growth they were dug up. The native peach does well and a large number were planted, some proved a fine eating peach, others so strong of Prussic Acid, they can only be used for preserves, that kind are now dying. Thinking that the root of the California raised tree was the trouble, I raised from Hawaiian peach seed a lot of young trees, sent to California for scions and grafted both stock and root and the results were the same as the imported trees. So it was not the fault of the root but of the climate, the tree having no rest, reach trees imported from Florida, a warmer State than California, were next tried, they grew well and produced about the same as the native fruit for two years, then they too succumbed to the climate. Some peaches grown from seed brought from Madeira by Portuguese so well, but now the fruit that came from Australia gets in his work and large quantities fall off. (The same fly makes it impossible to raise any kind of melon, squash, cucumber or tomato now.)

The Small Fruits.
Apricots grew like peaches and had no fruit.
Persimmons grew so slow they did not amount to anything.
Figs grew into a bush with us and have borne some years fairly well, but of late years the mynah bird, rats, etc., take all the cream and nothing but the skim milk is left.
A half dozen fruit was the limit of the cherry production.
Pears, a deep-rooted tree, did nothing on our soil and when the trees were taken up the roots had not grown one foot.
Nectarines acted the same as peaches.
Almonds were of slow growth, a dozen nuts to a tree for their production.
Walnuts died down in every case after planting and never made any growth.
Apples grow and if switches were in demand for naughty children, one would do well growing apple switches on Hawaii. They bore a few good-sized apples of fine texture and flavor but never over one dozen to a tree with us, at best, who wants to give his land, time and labor for such a production of fruit?
Quinces grow about the same as apples, a few fruit.
Plums and prunes just kept alive.
Chestnuts grow switches and a few nuts.
The wind is too strong for both the Jackfruit and cherrimoyer.
Tea grows well with good cultivation and the Japs used to pick and cure all that they wanted for their own consumption.
Grapes grow all to vine for a while and then die, producing no fruit. The Isabella is the only kind with us that ever did any producing, and some years the bunches are badly infested by a worm and the fruit fall off half grown. The other kinds, the best table grapes of California, never produced a bunch.
Dewberries use up all their energies in running, with a fruit now and then along the wayside, which is large, black and fine flavored.
Raspberries would not grow from imported vines, so I raised what I planted from seed, and succeeded in getting about a sauciful from one quarter of an acre. They all went to vine and no cane ever became old enough to bear before all its vitality was taken up in producing another new cane.
Currants and gooseberries did manage to keep alive for two years.
Blackberries grew about as the raspberries did.
Japanese wine berry grew all to vine and no fruit.
Strawberries.
We had better luck with strawberries and produced a good and salable fruit until mynah bird and Japanese beetles found out that they were good, then it was a matter of herding off the birds to get any fruit at all, and even then over one-third would be spoiled for sale. I had as high as four acres bearing at one time and at any time during the year you could find ripe berries, but they produced most from May until September.
Our best crop would be 1500 quarts (dry measure) of that acreage, where as a good acre of strawberries on the mainland should produce a crop of four or five thousand quarts. Note the difference in yield. The berries were sweet, firm and of fine flavor and could be eaten out of hand with pleasure, they were so sweet, out our market was limited to 20 or 25 quart boxes, twice a week, any more was a drag on the market, and no chance to ship to any other place, finally the dry time in 1897, from May 1st until November 1st, (six months), with only a rain fall of 14.30 inches, gave them a paralytic stroke from which they and I never recovered. Of all the plants and trees tried, strawberries gave the best results if a large market could have been had. That year we had planted a new 3-acre patch, from which we never got a berry.

Asparagus from seed produces a small green-colored shoot of good taste but of no great amount and would require an acre to provide enough for a large family.
Rhubarb imported roots all died, raised plants from seed and if never moved did fairly well but all plants transplanted rotted.
Horse-radish roots all rotted.
Hop roots made about 6 feet of vine like a thread, no strength or vigor to them.
Our location does not seem favorable to the proper growth of the pineapple, although on new land the first time setting a fair sized pine of good flavor is grown.
Banana Vinegar.
Bananas grow good-sized bunches for two years after setting on new land, after that they decrease in size. We have no market for them, although we have sold some for three-fourth of one cent per pound, green; the market soon gave out. I have tried making vinegar of the fruit and after using up some 500 pounds of ripe fruit succeeded in producing a fine clear water white vinegar which we offered for 25 cents per gallon, sold some but no store would buy as there was not profit enough to be made for them, when they could buy a vinegar in Honolulu for 12 to 14 cents per gallon (duty paid of 8 cents per gallon) and sell for 40 cents per gallon, 10 cents per bottle, 3 bottles for 25 cents, it was more to their liking. There is a small wood-boring beetle that has a great fondness for anything made of oak and as all of our kegs and barrels were made of oak, they soon let lots of our vinegar out and we had to make all of our containers of northwest lumber and pick the kind that had a hard flinty grain running around the barrel as a hoop, that stopped the beetle, but did not produce us any better market, so gave that up.
Peanuts, both the Chinese (small kind) and the California (large kind) were tried and grew fairly well but the cost of digging was as much as you could get for the nuts and no profits from them whatever.
Mangos are so badly affected by blight in this district that no fruit is ever seen now.
Avocado pears grow fairly well but are slow to fruit, some never fruit, and some of the trees show signs of decay.
Papaya do well but are hard to transplant successfully, the seed come up well.
Vegetable Problem.
Our success with vegetables is as follows:
Field corn never produced enough to pay for labor expended, could buy it cheaper than I could raise it. Sweet and pop corn never prospered.
Egyptian corn, sorghum and sunflowers, unless each head was protected with a mosquito net bag, the birds never left a kernel of seed. They were tried to see if a poultry food could be produced here.
Cut-Worm Work.
Potatoes used to grow well here in former years but cutworms and blight have done their work on Irish potatoes. I have seen taken from one hill 18 inches square 53 cutworms at one time, they eat also the young potatoes while tender (a fact).
We have raised large quantities of melons, squash, cucumbers, tomatoes and pumpkins, which is now impossible since the advent of the fruit-fly, which is now working on the coffee cherry.
Cauliflower and celery require a richer soil and more water than we have.
Lettuce must be grown in boxes to get much of any crop, then only leaves and no head, even the heading kinds.
Peppers do well and grow all the year round and for several years from the same planting and could be raised for market as could some of the herbs, as sage, thyme, etc., they grow well and are rich in their essential oils.
Beans, radishes, cabbages, carrots, leeks, turnips and some kinds of table beets will do well in rich soil.
Beans are sometimes liable to rust, when the whole crop will be destroyed in a few days, the fruitfly attacks them while the pods are tender.
Japanese Garden Truck.
Japanese garden truck seems to do better than ours, but can the small farmer work and live for the same figure that a Japanese or Chinese can? And again would that kind of a small farmer be a desirable one? Would he improve the community? Raise its standard in any way and lastly make a desirable citizen and intelligent voter? No! he never will, nor can he be ever educated up to the required standard.
Our soil is only fertile for a few years at best, and then fails to respond. I do not say it is entirely exhausted, but does not produce as it should. The soluble plant food is soon used up and the supply is recuperating too slow for growing plants to live upon alone. This has but one remedy, plant and then fallow for awhile, not to grow weeds but improve the ground by tillage, allow the sun, air and rain, nature's means to make arable soil do their work in producing and restoring fertility.

Commercial fertilizers cannot and never will be an improvement over nature. It helps to a certain extent but can be over done, as it is in my belief on the islands today in regard to cane culture.

Small Farm Fertilizer.
Can the small farmer stand the cost of fertilizing, 1000 pounds at $60 a ton fertilizer, as is used upon some of the plantations.

Will the increased yield of such crops as he could plant and raise now justify such an outlay? No doubt he would raise more per acre, and it would grow faster and be more succulent for the ravenous cutworm, Japanese beetle, flea-beetle, fruit-fly, cabbage worm and other injurious insect and scale too numerous to mention.

Soil Deterioration.
As a proof that our soil deteriorates, in the year 1898, when that section of land was opened for homesteads, called the Paunilo Homesteads, Land Map No. 11, (where the Louissons located), 3 lots, Nos. 2, 14, 25 and 26 were taken up by the Messrs. G. P. Wilder, J. A. Wilder and D. H. Davis of Honolulu under the general management of Mr. C. L. Wight of Honolulu, and I was their superintendent on Hawaii. These lots contained an area of 176 acres, to be planted to coffee. Plants had to be had as fast as possible and to a great extent had to be grown, to hurry them along as fast as possible. Boxes for planting were made of 1x12 in. boards, 24 feet long, divided cross ways into lengths of eight feet, into which were planted 1,000 seeds each. These boxes had no bottoms, the sides set level, the soil was spaded up well in the bottom and the box was filled to the top with good top soil taken from other land and vegetable mold taken and packed from gulches where the water had deposited it during freshets that brought it from the woods above.

It was mixed half and half, boxes filled level full of this mixture all run through a one-half inch wire screen to remove sticks and stones and to thoroughly mix the two soils. All seeds were soaked and sprouted before being planted into the boxes, so that all came even and each growth of sprouting was planted by itself. In eight months time we had plants 12 to 16 inches tall, some showing two primaries and stalks averaging one-fourth inch in diameter. A fine plant to set out, which did well during the time I had charge of them, over three years. After the removal of the first planting, the boxes were again planted in like manner and the second planting did not make a growth of 6 inches in a year, the plants were worthless and the soil had become so granulated it would not hold water and was dry soon after the water was applied. The first planting had exhausted all the plant food in the soil.

The above lots spoken of had about 75 acres of coffee planted upon them and after about four years of time were sold to the Messrs. Louisson, and they now comprise about one-third of their cultivated coffee, as fine as any to be found in the Hamakua district.

Transportation Charges.
Transportation charges eat up all the little profit that may sometime come to the small farmer.
No roads to the homesteads, is another drawback, it cost more to get over a trail than the produce is worth. What has in my opinion done more to hurt the coffee industry of Hawaii, in Hamakua at least, is lack of roads, not roads that connect to the main government road running parallel to the sea, but a road connecting the different sets of homesteads to each other, parallel to the government road at an altitude of the coffee-growing belt.

Coffee Success.
The only success in growing coffee or any other produce that can be raised on Hawaii by the small farmer, lays in corporation, that is, any company or individual of means that would build and run a coffee mill in the immediate neighborhood of the coffee

CANTHURSTON MAKE GOOD?

J. A. Thurston has done so much destructive work in this Territory that the people would be very glad to see him try his hand at constructive labor. He has said through the medium of the paper he owns and controls that the report drawn on the labor condition of the islands by Messrs. Pinkham, Stephenson, Rosenstein, Callahan and Heffernan was useless and of no account before he set eyes on it. What conclusion his own prejudice didn't furnish it is understood was produced for his purposes by Maguire, the hackman.

Under the circumstances the public has very naturally formed the conclusion that Thurston's much vaunted small farm policy amounts to nothing more than grabbing the unsophisticated farmer from abroad by the scruff of his neck and the seat of his breeches, throwing him onto lands of Hawaii for which he pays a high price with the fatherly admonition, "Dig or starve you sucker. You ought to do well and if you starve it's your own fault."

Fairness to the small farmer and the community suggests that some detailed facts should be furnished and that Thurston pretends to know more about it than those who have had the experience he will add to the fund of information on the subject by answering the following questions:

Will Lorrin A. Thurston give his own signature give the exact commercial facts and figures, with exact and indisputable market authorities and show by every item of marketing, transportation and other imperative expense what Hawaiian small farmers can net at the ports of Honolulu and Hilo for sisal, cassava, castor beans, unrefined castor oil and their "etc., etc." products also?

Will Thurston demonstrate in an exact business estimate how the small farmer on the Hawaiian Islands can compete in sisal with the vast sisal plantations in Yucatan containing 8,000 to 20,000 acres each?

Will Thurston refer to the exact market prices of sisal for the past ten years and clearly demonstrate the safety of a small farmer in devoting five years to the product before he can produce a crop?

Will Thurston by market prices of cassava starch demonstrate to the exactness any and every business requires that it can be profitably raised?

Will Thurston study the consumption and competition in the banana trade on the Pacific Coast and show the exact market present and prospective requirements?

Will Thurston look into the raising of tobacco in the Hawaiian Islands and give an agricultural and commercial basis on which a small farmer can rely in his attempts to widen his farming operations?

These questions are fair ones and should be answered exactly, honestly, without evasion or distortion or the charge of E. C. Greenwell that people of small means are being "cruelly" and "criminally" misled stand.

LABOR MEN'S OPPORTUNITY.

A column of editorial space in Thurston's paper is occupied this morning by an appeal to the leaders of the main industry in these islands to dump Pinkham overboard and take on Thurston in his place.

The arguments or rather statements leading up to this craven plea are ridiculous. The complete photographic display that supplements the text of the Pinkham Commission's report and gives a concise idea to the outsider is put down as useless. It is claimed that "everybody knows" what Hawaii needs and all this statistical detail is unnecessary, really doesn't amount to a tinker's whoop.

Wouldn't this make the community smile? Especially when every effort since the annexation movement started has been centered on establishing a correct idea of Hawaii's main industry in Washington and throughout the mainland. The assumption of Mr. Thurston's mouthpiece can only arouse amusement for its supreme assinity or sympathy that personal prejudice should lead a man to attempt such crimes against common sense, his fellow-citizens and self-respecting intelligence.

As between Pinkham, Stephenson, Rosenstein, Cahalan and Heffernan on the one side, and Thurston and Hackman Maguire on the other the selection that would be made by thoughtful patriotic citizens is obvious.

Mr. Thurston offers nothing but wreckage in his program. He wants small farmers but admits that he does not know what to do with them beyond taking their money for land and supplies and allowing them to trust in the Lord for crops that will return a living. Discuss the farmer who rises to the dignity of rancher and the small farm advocate says that isn't what he means. He would have the farmers go into the valleys and supply the town garden truck. Discuss the small garden truck farmer, and the advocate will respond that he means the rancher, not the man who competes with the Chinaman. The advocate has boxed the compass times without number and has yet failed to light on any definite proposition beyond readiness with a hammer to knock.

It is an undisputed fact that this small farm advocate has produced only generalities to support his contentions. With this record on the small farm question there is no reason whatever for the labor men or the plantation leaders to turn to L. A. Thurston for advice when they are near agreement. Cooperation between the mechanics and the plantation men cannot stop the flow of Thurston's small farmers to Hawaii.

The mechanics and the plantation men were as far apart as the two poles, until Pinkham and his associates framed a definite program. Keen business men, the plantation interests will stand pat. They have shown readiness to carry out their program and await the labor men. Should the labor men allow themselves to be misled by the spiteful dust Thurston is raising they will sacrifice their birthright for a mess of pottage.

The Pinkham Commission program is to guarantee skilled and semi-skilled labor on the plantations to citizens. Develop the small farmer as markets justify, but get the skilled labor in the hands of the citizens. It is now largely in the hands of aliens.

Thurston's program is to defeat the skilled labor program and best for small farmers. The result will be increased alien skilled labor on the plantations and bankrupt small farmers because they have no one to buy their goods.

WHAT BLACOW DID IN SMALL FARM EFFORT

(Continued from Page 3.) growing section, purchasing the coffee in the cherry and paying a fair market price for the same, and it is only on these lines that Hawaiian coffee will ever amount to much here or else where. No small farmer has the means or appliances to handle his own crop to the best advantage. Now instead of a good quality and a large uniform quantity, there are scores of grades, sour black and brown, in fact anything that looks like coffee.

Can such an article command a good price where it is not known? Whereas by a central factory all would be the same quality and grade and what is the most desirable of all, a large quantity of few grades, and such can only be obtained by handling large quantities of cherries, therefore we need cross-roads to reach a central factory or mill. The Messrs. Louissous will take all coffee produced here and pay a fair price for the same, but outside of their immediate vicinity the cost of getting cherry coffee to their mill is more than it would bring.

Coffee at $1. Ton.

My own coffee that I have left, amounting to about 5 tons of cherries, each year, for the past three years, has been left to fall to the ground, although I offered it as low as $4.00 per ton on the tree, no one could pick and take it to the mill and make wages.

It is about three and a half miles direct to Mr. Louissous's from my house at the same altitude, but to get there I have to go now about seven miles. A cross-road would have four miles each way, and open hundreds of acres of good coffee land to a market, that would add to the small farmer's benefit.

In 1896 I bought a lot of 22.40 acres of land from a Portuguese a little higher up than the government lot first taken on, paying $35 per acre for the same; built a dwelling house upon it and make it my home at present; the past three years it has taken in little more than enough to pay the taxes. Although costing hundreds of dollars it would only bring the price that came land sells for, $30 per acre, and nothing for any improvements.

In fact plantations are taking advantage of hard times to acquire land for a mere song.

Honey Trial.

In 1899 we thought something could be made in honey, we went to the woods and cut wild bees, brought home the bees, built hives and started in, we got 8 hives the first year and with cutting other trees and increase, raised our stock to 49 hives the coming year. We had lots to learn and did learn much, we solved the secret of bee keeping and soon had an apiary of 150 hives, but until this day we have not found a way to sell it at any price that would pay us even the wages a Jap would get on a plantation.

We produced both comb and extracted honey, as white and clean as any one could wish, all eat it with a relish if given a section. We tried selling in Hilo and Honolulu and they asked for a case (10 gallons) as a sample, we sent it, and to encourage the small farmer, the report we had from it was "a little too sweet for good food tar and a little too black for good honey, but they would give us $1.00 per case of two 5-gallon tins laid down in Honolulu. We still have honey for sale and the hives all full and for the past two years all swarms have been let go to the woods, as it did not pay to have them.

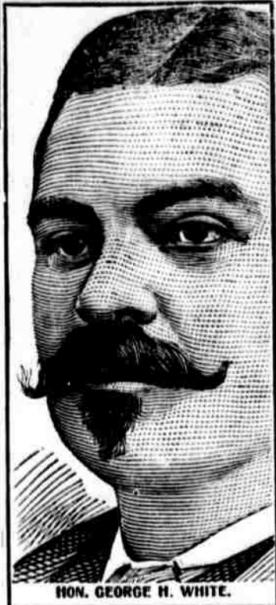

So much for a sweet industry, that might, I think, be made to pay a small profit, if things were different and all persons would "live and let live."

Poultry Experiment.

Poultry was next tried and that shared the same fate, after the feed bill was paid for, the appetite of Messrs. Mongoose, rat, wild cat and family

PE-RU-NA NECESSARY TO THE HOME.

A Letter From Congressman White, of North Carolina.

HON. GEORGE H. WHITE.

Congressman George Henry White, of Tarboro, N. C., writes the following letter to Dr. Hartman concerning Peru-na: House of Representatives, Washington, Feb. 4, 1899.

Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, O.: Gentlemen—I am more than satisfied with Peru-na, and find it to be an excellent remedy for the grip and catarrh. I have used it in my family and they all join me in recommending it as an excellent remedy.

Very respectfully, George H. White. If you have catarrh write to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case, and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Address Dr. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, O. For special directions every one should read "The Ills of Life," a copy of which surrounds each bottle. Peru-na is for sale by all chemists and druggists at one dollar per bottle, or six bottles for five dollars.

Those wishing direct correspondence with Dr. Hartman and can wait the necessary delay in receiving a reply, should address Dr. S. B. Hartman, Columbus, Ohio, U. S. A.

Benson, Smith & Co. will supply the retail drug trade in Honolulu. satisfied; the different poultry diseases, your profit would be the china next egg, if the mongoose did not pack that off, which they sometimes do; not saying anything of your time, buildings, fencing for same and incubators. By good management you may keep your flock to the same number you had at the start and keep them from starving. With cheap feed and a market, things in this line would materially be changed and a profit could be looked for.

Small Farm Prospect.

The small farmer at present can only by hard work and outside help, just make both ends meet and but few even do that. If you intend to get along as others would in any other place you must have a good sized bank account upon which to draw and as things now exist I would not advise any one to venture upon small farming only as a past time, not expecting much of any returns.

Such has been my experience and the same has happened to others. I have compiled reports of wages, money spent upon lot and sales for each year that speak for themselves, also some for poultry work.

I do not mean to say that things will not grow there, but I will say they do not produce a return that will justify the outlay of time and money. They do not produce a commercial quantity, even if we had the market and transportation. Take coffee at 800 pounds per acre, the price of labor and see where you stand. Then take labor at the present price and his cost of living as he obtains it and see how he stands and you soon can see who gets all the profits.

For whom is every one working for on Hawaii, and where does all the profit center? Some one must get it, and I can say it is not the small farmer. A great deal more might be said upon this subject that will have to be left for others.

$ 218 95—amount of sales over feed for three years work, and an outlay of $470. All eggs and chickens used for the family was charged to the account and sales got the credit for the same. It costs 12 cents per month to feed small hens (leghorns) and 15 cents per month for large hens (Plymouth Rocks). Costs 5 cents per month per hen kept for care and housing and it would be a good hen that lays six dozen eggs for the year. Feed, 2 and 2 1/2 cents per pound; eggs from 25 to 35 cents per dozen.

Mongoose, cats, dogs, sorehead and swelled eye takes all the profit, so quit poultry. I do not say that small farming will not pay if the conditions were favorable. Someone always takes the profit that should come to the farmer for some part that they play in this game.

Freight Charges. Here is an example: For our honey we bought ten gross of one-pound bottles at the factory in San Francisco, paying $65.00 cash; freight on same to Honolulu (2000 miles), $4.00; from Honolulu to Kukaiaua landing (200 miles), $8.00; landing charges Kukaiaua, $2.00 (400 feet); hauling to our residence, $3.00 (2 1/2 miles). A total freight charge of $17.00 or a little over one-fourth of the purchase price and to it add 10 per cent breakage on island steamers.

that did not net a return and reasonable profit. Coffee, sisal, castor bean, tobacco and poultry among with butter should pay if it only had a chance of a market and a fair profit.

Where is that market? On a plantation there are less than a half dozen families, the rest being Japs and Chinese who do not deal with you as you produce but little that they want and the others take but little.

Sugar goes up; wages come down, and I myself am now working for one-third less than three years ago. Was told if I would not work for the plantation figure that they set, they would put Japs upon the work. No sugar corporation wants the small farmer. They want his land and also his whole time if they give him a day's work and then when he has rendered a day labor for a day's pay (a commercial transaction) the plantation demand that he trade at the plantation store, which charge any kind of a price for second class goods. The small cane planter is tied up the same way or else they will not grind his cane. If plantations paid the prices that the small farmer pays they would all be bankrupt long ago, even if sugar went up to 10 cents per pound. All Not Farmer But Money.

Will the small farmer, but it is not the farmer at all, but his money. The whole aim of all the people on the island that have the swing is to see how much they can get for the least in exchange, and no small farmer can stand that long and so goes to the wall or into debt.

Respectfully submitted, C. R. BLACOW.

What Thurston Knew About Castor Bean

Editor Evening Bulletin:—On December 14th, 1904, I called on Mr. L. A. Thurston at his office in the Stangenwald building and handed him a letter, asking him for information in regard to the castor bean industry. Mr. Thurston was just leaving his office to go out on some business and said he did not have time then to give me the information, but made an engagement for me to meet him the following morning at 9 o'clock at his office. I called but he was not there and after waiting about an hour I left. I called at his office several times before I could catch him, which I finally did on December 19th, 1904. Mr. Thurston stated then that he had let out to people 250 acres of land at Haleakala ranch for the purpose of raising castor beans under the conditions that if it was not successful they would not have to pay any rent for the land. He stated that considerable of the crop was ready to pick then and that the rest would be ready to pick in February; that Mr. C. Koelling had offered him 3 cents per pound for the beans some time previous, but that when he was ready to deliver the beans Mr. Koelling offered him 2 1/2 cents per pound; that he (Mr. Thurston) had written to the mainland for full particulars in regard to price, etc., of the beans. I asked Mr. Thurston if it would be a paying proposition with the beans at 2 1/2 cents per pound, and he said it would.

The last paragraph in the report regarding castor beans, reading "The price offered for the beans was 2 1/2 cents per pound delivered, at which there was no sales. The price of oil being still further depressed, 2 1/2 cents per pound would be far above what the market would justify," was not stated to me by Mr. Thurston, but the committee received that from outside parties. He referred me to Mr. Koelling for any further information.

Yours truly, T. I. CAHALAN. Honolulu, T. H., Jan. 11, '05.

No Jury Secured For Arroyo Case

At noon today a full jury had not yet been collected to hear the Arroyo murder case before Judge Robinson. Yesterday afternoon there were eleven jurors in the box passed for cause. This morning Lono Austin was examined and excused on account of having his own ideas concerning the law and the Court's instructions. Taite was passed for cause when Strauss used another of his preemptory challenges on C. H. Atherton, who was consequently excused. Bachelor was called into the box and passed for cause. Again twelve jurors ornamented the box, when Strauss challenged James Auld. Jos. K. Clarke was examined but was excused, as he had an opinion formed about the case, and John Guild was called for examination.

SHORT STORY FOR EVENING HOURS

WANDERLUST IN REAL LIFE

Conversation had swung into the subject of letters, the vanities and non-sense of them, their value for evasion or directness, their crassities and kindnesses, the parts they have played in the tragedies and the comedies of life. Carlton finished his glass and set it down with unwonted deliberation. "It's my opinion," he said, slowly, "that nine-tenths of the letters written are insincere in part at least."

"Evidently you include the letters of women," Darragh, the youth, said with fine wisdom. "Youngster, what I know of the letters of women"—Carlton was looking fixedly at Darragh—"leads me to believe that they are in the remaining tenth. And I hope you may never find it otherwise."

Darragh, very properly, made no reply; there was really nothing to be said. We looked at Carlton rather hopefully, although not one of us expected anything. Carlton is known for the hold he has upon his tongue. But his comment had led our talk into the still stream of personalities, Saunders, who was sprawled out to his length on the chimney seat, peered through the tobacco smoke with a cynical eye said:

"Granted that women's letters are sincere, that is, in certain instances, there was the faintest suggestion of a nod towards Carlton, which Carlton lost, as he was looking at his pipe, "now many shining examples of sincerity in letters—men's letters—are known to any of us here? Of course, I don't mean letters from one's family, one's brothers. I receive letters day after day signed 'yours' faithfully, or 'most sincerely yours,' the ordinary penultimate line of correspondence which I know lack sincerity, either because I know the writers or the circumstances in which the letters have been written. It's so easy to read between the lines of most letters."

He lighted a cigarette and settled himself back among the cushions. "The only really sincere communications I receive are part in print and have 'Please remit' at the bottom. The persons who send these are sincerity personified."

"My observation of letters," said Insley, with a yawn, "has caused me to divide them into two classes, interesting and uninteresting. If I am amused I make no demand for sincerity. If a letter has amused me, there has probably been, at least, a sincere desire on the part of the writer to amuse me, and I accept that and am amused."

"You've voiced what in measure I've felt about letters," Barnes said from the depths of his chair. "In the ones which amuse I always seem to see the effort of the writer to be amusing."

"This may be due to the frequency with which the sacred personal letters of the illustrious dead have been published of late," Willing said. "Perhaps those who write the letters Barnes receives are living in the fond hope of yielding a volume or two of correspondence for the edification of those who remain after the curtain has fallen upon their little personal play."

While we had been talking, Vanderpool, the civil engineer, had sat in silence, his elbows upon the arms of his chair, his hands clasped, and his gaze upon the rug. There was a pause after Willing spoke, and it was broken by Vanderpool.

"I want to tell you people a little story," he said, without lifting his gaze. "It has to do with a letter. I have the letter here, and I want to read it to you. I don't intend to make any comment upon it and I don't say it answers any of the statements you have made. Perhaps I should have read it before all these comments were made. However, I'll make a preamble to the letter, and you may read it your own way. You don't know the man in the story; I will not tell you his name, only this much; I know a man; I knew him at college, and I liked him, as did every one else. I left college two years ahead of him, and soon after he was graduated I heard of him in the West. He had always seemed to have a hankering for the West, for the wildness, the unrestraint of it. He used to say that cities did not appeal to him whether they were Eastern or Western; he wanted to get out in the rough, open air, free part of it. I heard of him in British Columbia, prospecting, mining, living by his good honest wits, but avoiding the cities, save as way-places on his journey—to the open, and apparently he cared precious little whether that journey tended. He was just the sort of man for the wild, free life of the Northwest. He was a man's man in the superlative sense of companionship, reliability, pluck and endurance, and with these for assets, I don't think he ever had much in the dirty little gray leather-tongued pouch he always showed me empty; he went up and down the West, seeking, seeking, Fortune, perhaps, I hope he finds her."

"Well, after he had knocked about the gilded, if not golden, region of the Northwest, he came back to New York and dropped in upon me one day in my office. He might have come out of the clouds. When I asked him what he was doing in New York, he said he wanted to see what a real city looked like. It was then he showed me the little pouch, and turning it upside down, shook its emptiness over the desk. 'So much for four years in the West,' he said with a sorry sort of laugh. 'But I'll hit it yet.' I asked him if this meant that he was going back to his quest. He replied that he didn't know; that he thought of settling down in a civilized community, in New York, if possible. So we, some friends of mine and his, hunted around for a job for him. He's a good engineer, knows his profession, whether he likes it or not, and there was a chance here for him. But before anything could come of it, he stopped at my office, a week after his first visit, and said he was going away. 'I just can't stand it,' he said. 'I'm not the city kind, at least not yet. Lord, man, I'd smother here, crawling about among these buildings, plodding down to my work in the morning and plodding back at night. Every day would be just like the one before it—I believe I'd die here in six months. A man can't see about him in this town unless he gets on top of a building, and then what does he see?—miles of roofs and chimneys and steam jets! No. I can't stand it here.'

"He sat for a long time looking past me, and somehow or other I felt that I understood him. Although I have lived my life here as you people have, and know no interests beyond the limits of these acres of brick and stone, still it did not seem at all strange to hear this man cry out against the stiffness, crowd and hurly-burly to which I have been bred. I made no effort to argue with him, or even to suggest that perhaps if he worked here for four years he might find something at least in one corner of his pouch."

"No, old man," he said, arising; "some of us are not made for the city. If all of us were, there wouldn't be room to walk in the streets."

"I asked him what he intended doing, and he replied that he didn't know. 'Guess I'll hit the trail,' he added, 'as soon as I see the rest of the galley slaves I know here in the East. Oh, I used to like it all well enough—once. That was before I got out in the open. Why, man alive, you can't breathe here. I feel as if I'd like to push the buildings apart, widen things out a bit, and not be bumping elbows with a horde of bank clerks, and merchants, and money grubbers. I'm a money gruger, yes, one of the best of them, or the worst, but I'm not a gruber in the city. The moment a fellow gets to work here he turns around suddenly and finds the hand of his neighbor in his pocket; when you're out there—he pointed out to my west window—a man can't get close enough to put his hand into your pocket without your knowing it. Of course, some times when the days go hard I have a hankering to get back to comforts, but no sooner am I here than I eat my heart out with longing for the rugged West."

"Then he went away, and I was half sorry, half glad, at his going. I knew what he felt, although I don't believe he thought he did."

"That was more than a year ago. I had no idea what had become of him, and there was no one to give me news. But yesterday I received a letter from him, and this letter I want you to hear. It's written in pencil on two small leaves torn from a pocket notebook."

Vanderpool drew from his pocket the letter with its address in pencil, bent closer towards the light and read: "In Camp, waiting for it to stop raining."

17th August, 1903

"Dear Van: Take your map of Alaska and you will see, if you look long enough the Chena river, a tributary from the east of the Tanana, which is itself a southern tributary of the Yukon, about 500 miles from its mouth. About 70 miles up the Chena the South Fork comes in, and I am at present sitting in front of my fire about 35 miles up the said S. Fork. My destination is a tributary of the Goodpastor river, the third tributary from here of the Tanana on the east, about 100 miles away. I am alone, and if my grub hangs out, an confident (?) of finding the proverbial pot of gold at my journey's end. Anyhow, as I am carrying 65 pounds on my back, the trip will be strenuous enough to suit even our respected President, considering that the damned moon in this country holds out to the tops of the mountains. It has been raining here for three days while I have been lying under a 6x6 piece of canvas wishing I had enough hashish in me to imagine I was in God's country. You have the best profession one can follow except the army in war time, in my humble opinion, and as I have at times in this western country tried my hand at mining, cutting cordwood, working in a sawmill, U. S. Govt. carpenter, fixing boilers, fireman on a river boat, deckhand on the same, driving logs, cooking in a log camp, holding down a lot by squatter's right, surveying mining claims in B. Columbia, exploiting mining properties, and passing coal in an ocean boat (I have, however, never played the piano in a dance hall, probably because I don't know how). I think I am qualified in a way to judge. This prospecting lay-out is the worst of all except hunter and trapper, which puts a fellow on the bum forever as regards civilization. When I make the big clean-up will you let me buy a partnership in your firm? It would be all right to go to my office once a day, look wise for a while, then pull my freight, better than sitting here killing gnats with one hand while I try to write with the other. "22d August—It has been raining off and off since the 15th, which has made my progress very slow. Unless it clears up pretty soon will not have grub enough to get to my river, unless the moose or caribou are thicker than they are in this place."

"Sept. 6—Grub played out and could not get to my river, so I built a raft and came 100 miles down here (Chena City). Expect to start for the river in a day or two by the Tanana river, stay up and prospect and trap till spring. Drop me a line. As ever yours."

"Address me Fairbanks, Alaska." "That's all," Vanderpool said, as he ran his eyes once again over the small ragged sheets before thrusting them back into his pocket. "You people were talking about letters, that's why I read it."

And the most interesting part of this story is that it is mainly true.—B. in New York Post.

PHILIPS' TROUBLES GET INTO COURT

Waterfront Agents' Warfare Again Becomes Imminent

ROSENBERG SPOILED MCCARTHY'S BUSINESS

COMPLAINS THAT SAILORS WERE PREVENTED FROM BOARDING SHIP AFTER SIGNING ARTICLES.

The sundry troubles which the ship Erskine M. Phelps had in securing a crew preparatory to her departure for Philadelphia a few days ago, today culminated in a war between the well-known shipping masters, Wm. McCarthy and Morris Rosenberg, the former libelling the latter.

McCarthy in the libel sets forth that he contracted with Captain Graham of the Phelps to furnish him a crew and in pursuance with this agreement he secured nine competent seamen, who signed articles and agreed to proceed on her on her voyage to Philadelphia.

It was then that McCarthy's troubles started. Morris Rosenberg, who is also in the sailor shipping business, according to McCarthy, wrongfully and maliciously persuaded, enticed and prevented McCarthy's nine good seamen who had signed articles on the Phelps, from going on board the vessel. Rosenberg accomplished this by hiding the gallant tars on Jan. 5, which was the day set for the Phelps' sailing. The vessel subsequently left without McCarthy's men.

McCarthy further alleges that his conferees' conduct has caused him a considerable financial loss. After the men had signed the articles McCarthy advanced to them the sum of $20 in cash and the men furthermore became indebted to him in the sum of $70 for board and lodging. To secure this money McCarthy had accepted from Captain Graham certain advance promissory notes for the amount, which were payable three days after the Phelps had proceeded on her voyage with the sailors in question on board. Rosenberg by preventing the men from sailing on the Phelps caused McCarthy to lose the entire sum of $270, which he had advanced the seamen on the notes which on account of Rosenberg became of no value.

McCarthy claims that by reason of Rosenberg's improper action he has been damaged in the sum of $300, and prays for judgment against Rosenberg for that sum.

New York, Dec. 22.—After the careful weighing of the evidence accumulated by District Attorney Jerome in regard to stories that a bribery fund had been collected by the Liquor Dealers' Association to influence legislation in Albany last winter, the Grand Jury today returned a presentment finding not only that such fund had existed but that some of it was devoted to influencing official action of "one of the state departments of the State," and that a large part of it was expended upon various members of the Assembly and Senate in an "appalling and shocking way." Although the evidence was not made public, it is understood that the Liquor Dealers' Association expended $50,000 at Albany, and most of it was lent to legislators in gambling-houses and places of worse repute. There were no I. O. U.'s given. In other words, money, it is alleged, was used in taking legislators on a series of unholly sprees and paying all the expenses. In return the Liquor Dealers' Association expected excise legislation that would modify the Raines law.
