ASSAULT SENTRY WHILE ON DUTY

Marine Is Rushed And Beaten Badly By Hawaiians

Last night at 7 o'clock a marine named P. Picariello, who was on sentry duty at the Naval coal pile, was taken unaware by six Hawaiians and very badly assaulted.

The natives jumped the guard, and before he could draw his bayonet, they had thrown him to the ground and started to beat and kick him. The marine was badly bruised and cut by his assailants, and several of his teeth were knocked out.

The matter was reported to Chief McDuffie and he started an investigation at once. Picariello states that he had had no trouble with any natives, and that he is at a loss to account for the attack on him. He is unable to name any of the men who assaulted him, but thinks he can identify them if they are brought before him.

Picariello says that when the men rushed him and threw him to the ground, he did his best to get his bayonet clear but failed to do so. As soon as the Hawaiians released him he drew his bayonet, and the men at once took to their heels. McDuffie is hopeful of landing the men before many hours have passed and they will get stiff sentences if convicted.

Somebody please swear out a search warrant for the law of supply and demand.—Pittsburg Post.

Organic Salaries Cut Once More

Full Territory Committee Does Not Endorse The General Increase Recommended

The full Committee on Territories of the House of Representatives did not approve in its entirety the report of the subcommittee which recommended that the salaries in the Organic Act amendment bill be practically restored to the figures included in the bill as introduced. In a letter to Governor Frear, Delegate Kuhio states that the full committee report only approves of the advances of the subcommittee in three instances—salaries of the Governor, members of the Legislature, and Circuit Judges.

The report of the full committee puts the salary of the Governor at $10,000; members of the Legislature at $800—a compromise between the prevailing figure and the $1000 recommended in the original bill; and the Circuit Judges at $4000.

It is now believed that the three increases mentioned will have a good chance of receiving the indorsement of the Senate when the amendment bill is sent back to the upper house for action. Governor Frear stated this morning that he expected that the bill would receive final action of the House next Wednesday, when the plebiscite resolution is also expected to come up for consideration.

RUSSIANS BOARD SCHOONER "ALOHA"

Refuse To Leave When Ordered Ashore By Mate

This morning at about leven o'clock two police officers were sent down to the schooner Aloha, which is berthed at the foot of Fort street. A call had been sent in announcing that three Russians had attempted to board the vessel and talk with two of their countrymen, who are members of the Aloha's crew.

The mate of the schooner ordered the visitors to leave the vessel but they declined to do so. One of them who speaks a little English yelled out: "Me no fraid policeman. All time you people say 'dam the Russians;' we no fraid."

When the police officers got down to the ship they found that Sorenson, the agent of the Sailors' Union had managed to get the three Russians to leave the deck. It is not known why the three men wished to remain on board the Aloha, but some one suggested that it was in order to prevail on the two Russian members of the crew to strike.

MANY AUTOS IN RENT BUSINESS

Sixty Machines Ply For Hire On Island Of Oahu

There are sixty automobiles in the rent service on Oahu, and of this number fifty are in Honolulu and the balance in the country districts. Altogether, there are 522 machines registered for this island, and there are a lot more expected to arrive in the near future.

The rent machines pay a fee of $1 per passenger seat per annum, and as the average seating capacity of the cars is five, the sum of $360 is paid into the treasury every year. Then the automobile has to be registered as well, and that costs another $5; a tax of one cent per pound weight is also made, and, taking it altogether, the revenue from the automobiles amounts to a fair-sized sum of money.

On Hawaii there are 98 registered machines, and they are increasing every month. The Big Island plantation managers all have machines, and the doctors run them close. On Maui there are about fifty cars, and Kauai has almost seventy.

MARIPOSA MAY YET BE SOLD

Sonoma And Ventura Prepared for Service

A well-founded rumor seems to prevail in Oceanic Steamship circles that the Mariposa, which for some years has been operated between San Francisco and Tahiti, may join the Alameda and soon fly the house flag of the Alaska Packers Company.

In this event the steamer Sonoma or the Ventura, according to a wireless received by the Sierra, will be placed on the run to the French possessions down in the south seas.

The message that found its way into the receiver of the Sierra came from San Francisco and was to the effect that the Oceanic Steamship Company had decided to refit the Sonoma and the Ventura, both vessels having been laid up at Oakland Creek for the past four years.

The Sonoma or the Ventura could be operated at better advantage to Tahiti, it being claimed that the business to the South Pacific island is now far in advance of the revenue derived from the Honolulu line.

It must be remembered that the Oceanic Company derive a substantial subsidy from the French government and another bonus is given by the Union Steamship Company, and still another contribution comes along annually from the United States government. These payments are made for services rendered in carrying the mails between Tahiti and the mainland.

Freight rates between San Francisco and the French possessions are also said to be far in excess of the figures realized in the Honolulu business.

In event of one of the larger boats being substituted the other would be left free to handle special excursion business or in case of greatly increased tourist traffic to Honolulu, the vessel could then alternate with the Sierra.

LOS ANGELES WANTS DIRECT STEAMER LINE

"Frank Wiggins, secretary of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce, told me just before I left Los Angeles that he and Mr. J. B. Vicars of the transportation committee wanted me to take a message to Honolulu," said Mr. Culver, the passenger agent of the Oceanic Steamship Company, this morning.

"He says that Los Angeles business men want a direct steamship line between Honolulu and San Pedro. He says they are willing to do their share towards backing it but they want Honolulu to help."

Mr. Culver has been representing the Oceanic line in Los Angeles for some time and is visiting this city after a three years' absence from this run. He says that from one-half to two-thirds of the tourist passengers of the Oceanic line to Honolulu are those who have come through Los Angeles.

ADVERTISER SCORED IN ADDRESS BY PASTOR

In the editorial columns of this morning's paper the following appeared: "Rev. William Oleson took advantage of a speaker's place at a public meeting last night to attack The Advertiser for its stand on the liquor question. As Mr. Oleson did not know what he was talking about there is no occasion to reply to him."

The Rev. William Oleson was very definite in what he was talking about when he addressed the immense audience last night, on temperance, at Central Union church. Deadlock In Russians' Case

Crisis Expected Monday---Came For Territory, Not Planters, Says Frear

The deadlock between the Territorial Board of Immigration and the Russians continued today with slight evidence of the conference of yesterday having a peaceful effect upon the newcomers. There were a few applications for work upon the part of some of the younger of the Russians but the main body of the immigrants appear to be still under the influence of Vischnef, the disturber.

The problem will reach a critical stage Monday, the date set for the expiration of the free commissary department that is being maintained for the benefit of the immigrants by the Territorial Board of Immigration.

Governor Frear declared this morning that he was still hopeful that the Russians would see the error of their ways and turn to the plantations for the labor that is offered them.

"The Russians were not brought here for the benefit of the Planters' Association," declared the Governor. "They were brought here by the Board of Immigration for the Territory because it was thought that they would be a benefit to Hawaii as a whole. Of course, the Planters have the most use for them but that does not mean that they are here for the exclusive benefit of the Planters' Association."

SCHOONER TURNER MAY BE SAVED

Vessel Making Very Little Water Now

There is a possibility of saving the American schooner Mathew Turner, which at present is ashore on the reefs near Kahului, and her shipment of nitrates.

This report concerning the condition of the distressed wooden vessel was received this morning through the agency of Alexander & Baldwin.

The message from the firm's representative at Kahului reads as follows:

"Have just returned from the Turner. Vessel afloat at high water. Cargo intact. Vessel making very little water. Claudine will attempt to pull her off at high tide at two o'clock this afternoon. If successful schooner should be towed to Honolulu. Discharge there and put on marine railway. Impossible handle this vessel's cargo for three weeks on account ships already in port."

This message puts a new phase upon the trouble which the Mathew Turner met in going ashore at Kahului on last Thursday night.

The Bulletin's special correspondent at Wailuku sends the following version of the stranding of the Mathew Turner:

WAILUKU, Maui, Apr. 1.—The Mathew Turner, Captain John Lapping, with about 1500 tons of nitrate from Chile, went ashore near the Kahului breakwater at 11 o'clock Friday morning during a rain squall.

Pilot E. H. Parker was out at the time, but Captain Lapping did not notice him in the squall until too late, when the vessel had already gone over a coral bank under her own sails. When the captain realized his perilous position he lowered two anchors and signaled for help. The tug Leslie Baldwin went out, but owing to the high seas prevailing was unable to go near enough to be of any service. The big A.-H. steamer Mexican was in port loading sugar at the time, but could do nothing to help the vessel in distress. The steamer Mikahala, from Lahaina, and tug Intrepid, from Honolulu, are expected early this morning. The Turner is said to be lying on a sandbank now, but there is a hole in her bottom and her rudder is already gone. Captain Lapping and crew are still on board, but they have threatened to abandon the vessel if the storm increases and assistance does not arrive in time.

It was only a few months ago that the big English steel ship Alexander Black went ashore off Spreckelsville and became a total wreck with her cargo of nitrate on board.

HOUDLETTE DRAWS WARM RECEPTION

Sierra Again Makes Her Bow To Honolulu

Captain Houdlette, master of the Oceanic steamship Sierra, was given a hearty welcome upon his arrival at the port last evening in honor of the initial trip of the steamer on the new schedule. This is the first visit of the Sierra in nearly five years.

As a compliment to Captain Houdlette Captain Lawless, another old-time Oceanic skipper, who now presides over the destinies of the barkentine Coronado, dressed ship and this morning there flew from the rigging of that vessel a variegated assortment of flags and bunting.

The Sierra came down in a little over six days, owing to some difficulty with her machinery and the oil burning apparatus.

There was a joyous reunion of Honoluluans and practically all the old staff of the steamer Alameda when the Sierra drew up alongside the Oceanic wharf last evening.

Purser Tom Smith and Dr. Clark point proudly to a large package which was carelessly placed upon an office shelf, and which retained its precarious position during the entire voyage. The fact that the bundle was not dislodged was due solely to the stable qualities of the good ship Sierra which is declared by the officers as being as "steady as a rock."

"For the first few days I had to call a room boy to show me the way to my office," stated Purser Smith upon arrival last night. "I like this ship now that I have become acquainted with her and she makes up in increased comfort what we may have lost by the passing of the old Alameda."

Slight trouble was experienced with the oil spreaders that made the raising of steam in the boilers at times an uncertainty. This has been remedied and the best time made by the Sierra was 364 miles the last day out of Honolulu.

The vessel came up to quarantine shortly before 9 o'clock last evening and was at her dock before 10 o'clock. She arrived with seventy passengers in the cabin and several in the steerage. Eleven hundred tons of general cargo including four motor cars, arrived. The vessel brought 236 sacks of mainland mail as well as a quantity of express matter.

The officers of the Sierra are as follows: H. C. Houdlette, commander; J. H. Trask, chief officer; S. Church, chief engineer; G. W. Clark, surgeon; T. C. Smith, purser; J. Carleton, chief steward; J. H. Sellers, wireless operator; Miss Coombs, stewardess.

"Life is all right," rejoined the optimistic man, "if you only look upon the bright side of it."

CONBOY GUILTY MANSLAUGHTER

CHINA BRINGS MORE PILIKIA

Oriental Passengers Leave Steamers At This Port

Shades of Perelstrous and "Our Jack"! The Pacific Mail liner China, from Hongkong via Japanese ports, drew up alongside of the Channel wharf at 10 o'clock this morning and deposited twenty-two additional packages of pilikia.

Included in the number of cabin and steerage passengers to arrive at Honolulu this morning is a party of twenty-two Russians who have been recruited by Messrs. Perelstrous and Atkinson and embarked on the China at Kobe, Japan.

These people come here ostensibly to work on the sugar plantations of Hawaii, provided the outpost of Russian agitators do not see them first and defeat the purpose for which the immigrants were recruited.

The China brought 17 cabin passengers for this port, but they are all of Oriental birth. Those who left the ship included 4 Japanese and 13 Chinese. In the steerage were 19 Japanese, 12 Chinese, 22 Russians, and 1 lone Hindoo.

The East Indian will doubtless follow the footsteps of all his predecessors who have hit the Hawaiian trail, and, after remaining at Honolulu for several weeks in order to become acclimated and acquire a suit of "States clothes," he will take up the journey to San Francisco and join the large Hindoo colony on the Coast, who are building mainland railroads.

The China is leaving for the Coast at 5 o'clock this evening. Seventy-five tons of Oriental freight is being discharged and the liner will take on several hundred tons of coal. Through cargo amounts to about two thousand tons.

Captain Daniel Frisle reports rough weather from the time of sailing from Yokohama until the Islands were picked up nine days later. The good old China bumped a little bit, but then she is a pretty steady craft and the passengers suffered no inconvenience.

The list of cabin passengers for the mainland is about equally divided between the Europeans and those of Oriental birth.

The China will carry the mail and will also take a small general cargo for San Francisco.

SHANGHAIED, STATE SAILORS HELD AS MUTINEERS

It is seldom that the prosecuting arm of the United States Government in Hawaii has mutinous sailors to deal with but United States District Attorney Breckons and Marshal Hendry are now busy with the cases of the accused mutineers at the good ship W. F. Babcock.

Practically the whole crew of the Babcock are now in custody, bail having been fixed this morning by United States Judge Robertson at $250 in each case. The last sailor wanted under the indictments returned by the Federal Grand Jury was rounded up early this morning in the person of E. Adamson, a foremast hand, who is charged with mutiny on the high seas.

Additional charges of conspiracy have been lodged against John Christensen, who is said to be the ringleader in the trouble that occurred on the Babcock. He appeared before United States Judge Robertson for arraignment this morning and his case was continued to next week.

The sailors declare that they were lured on board the Babcock under false pretenses that practically amounted to shanghaiing methods.

QUEEN'S RECEPTION

One of the most elaborate and unique social events of the week was given in Washington Place, on Beretania street, in honor of Her Majesty Queen Liliuokalani, who returned on the steamship Korea last Monday from the mainland.

The interior of the beautiful residence of the Queen was most beautifully decorated for the occasion by Col. C. P. Iaukea, the Queen's agent. The grounds, which have been greatly improved since Her Majesty departed for the States, and the stately-looking trees, which have been carefully trimmed, added much to the loveliness and beauty of the Queen's home.

On the day of the arrival of Her Majesty, the reception room was decorated with royal standards and flowers of various colors which are most admired by the Queen. As usual, there were kahilis, indicating royalty, which are usually displayed on such occasions.

When the Queen arrived, accompanied by Messrs. John Aimoku and J. Kaipo Aea, she was greeted with meles by her faithful retainers, Col. C. P. Iaukea and Col. E. K. Lilikalani and the ladies-in-waiting also assisted in receiving the Queen.

At the conclusion of the reception, Her Majesty and the invited guests entered the dining room and partook of all the good things which had been prepared by Col. Iaukea. The Queen, who has been absent from the Islands for many months, was greatly pleased with the reception and paina which had been arranged for her return.

Among the guests of the Queen were John Aimoku, J. Kaipo Aea, Mrs. Wm. Auld, Mrs. George Smithies, Mrs. Lapana Keawepooole, Mrs. Naha Kakuole, Mrs. Lokalia Holt, Col. and Mrs. C. P. Iaukea, Col. E. K. Lilikalani, Mrs. H. C. Morton, Mrs. Kamaka Stillman, Mrs. R. C. Searle of Maui, and several others, making sixteen in all.

Those who were present at Washington Place state that the Queen seems to be in the best of health. The presence of Col. C. P. Iaukea and Col. E. K. Lilikalani, who were formerly on the staff of the late King Kalakaua, reminded those present of the good old days during the monarchy.

Richards, the driver, didn't testify, or give the jury any statement at all as to how the accident happened.

Through some unexpected change in policy the Honolulu Stock Exchange has passed a motion withdrawing from sale the three seats which were to be placed on the market. ADVERTISER IS SCORED IN ADDRESS BY PASTOR to be held next July. The saloons must go; the homes must be protected from this demon alcohol," stated Dr. Oleson in his opening remarks.

Rev. Oleson stated that the morning paper was advocating for better regulation of the liquor traffic, "but what good is better regulation of this evil if the laws are not enforced?" stated the reverend speaker.

Flourishing a clipping from the Advertiser, Dr. Oleson read passages from that "insipid sheet" pointing out the weak stand the Advertiser was making in controlling the liquor traffic in Hawaii.

"Divorce the bottle-selling evil; strengthen the Liquor Commission, was one of the 'bleats' from a morning issue of this 'rag.' Why, everybody supposed that this is being done now!" exclaimed Dr. Oleson. "You can't regulate liquor selling unless the laws are enforced."

"Hunt out the supply of imitation 'dago red'" was another of the passages read from the morning "weakling." "Why is this not stopped?" shouted Dr. Oleson. "You have a regulation of the liquor traffic. Why, then, are the laws not enforced?"

Holding aloft the clipping from the Advertiser, Dr. Oleson said: "There are some here this evening who talk unknowingly upon the subject of prohibition; among these are men who write for the newspapers.

"Just listen to this, my friends," and Dr. Oleson read again from the Advertiser words to this effect: "The people of Hawaii have already crystalized public thought."

"We do not want to have crystalized thoughts; what we want are active men and women who will work for the extermination of the saloon from our midst."

The reverend doctor spoke briefly about the proposed "beer garden" for the troops at Leilehua. "Will the United States Government allow a 'beer garden' to be located on its premises? Why, the United States forbids any canteen on its premises. Why advocate any such nonsense as this?"

ROOSEVELT TO MEET THE PRESS OF EUROPE

NAPLES, Apr. 1.—The newspapers of every country in Europe are sending representatives here to meet ex-President Roosevelt, and his arrival here tomorrow will be the occasion of the largest and most representative gathering of the European press that ever assembled at one point.

A majority of the European newspaper men, representing the press of all the nations, plan to remain with Roosevelt until he sails for home, evidencing the remarkable interest of the European public in the returning American statesman. On his arrival today he will have to meet scores of correspondents, all eager for interviews.

Thousands of Americans have also gathered here, in anticipation of the arrival of their former President. Roosevelt's landing on European soil promises to be the occasion of a tremendous demonstration, and if he consents to give out interviews, they will be published in practically all of the many nations of Europe.

GRAFT INDICTMENTS EXCITE PITTSBURG.

PITTSBURG, Apr. 1.—A mass meeting of citizens, to discuss municipal corruption, was held here today. It was occasioned by the recent revelations in connection with the indictment of forty councilmen for graft. Mayor Magee attempted to address the meeting, but he was hissed and hooted until he had to retire without making his intended speech.

PUBLISHER DEAD.

HAWAIIANS FORM ANTI-LIQUOR LEAGUE

Agents Visiting Homes; Wahine Huis Oppose Drink Habit

President, Rev. Moses K. Nakuina; Vice President, E. K. Lilikalani; Secretary, J. K. Nakookoo; Assistant Secretary, Solomon Kahoohalahala; Treasurer, Rev. Wm. K. Poai.

The above, who were duly elected at a meeting held in Kawaiahao church, February 17, are the officers of the Territorial Hawaiian Prohibition League, which is doing a good work among the Hawaiians.

Already a number of active agents are working among the native Hawaiians in the outside districts, with a view to inviting them to join the league and to pledge themselves to abide by its requirements.

According to Nakookoo, one of the organizers, there are about [illegible] members in the league at the present time. This number is, however, increasing quite rapidly.

Members of the Territorial Central Committee are F. W. Beckley, ex-speaker of the House of Representatives, Chairman; J. N. Mahuka, Vice Chairman; J. K. Nakaako, Secretary; J. H. S. Kaleo, Vice Secretary; Rev. Wm. K. Poai, Treasurer.

There are clubs established in Manoa, Moiliili, Kakaako, Boat-Landing, Moanalua, Kalihi, Camp, Kaiulani Tract, Kalihiwaena, Kaneohe, Waikane, Kahana, Punaluu, Hauula, Laie, Kahuku, Waianae and Ewa. In all these places officers and active agents are keeping themselves busy visiting homes and enrolling members in the league.

Plans are being prepared for mass meetings to be held from time to time at different places under the supervision of their respective officers. Notices, printed in Hawaiian, will be distributed to all the officers of the outside district leagues, for them to arrange for meetings.

In order to promote the welfare of the Territorial Prohibition League, a financial committee, consisting of Rev. Moses K. Nakuina, Rev. Henry K. Poepoe, Rev. Wm. K. Poai and Sam Kamaiopili, has been appointed. This committee, with the assistance of a number of well known financiers of this city, will look after the interests of the league.

According to authentic information, it is known that some of the well known politicians have been employed to work among the Hawaiians, showing them the pilika there is in the liquor traffic. As soon as the new members join the league of the districts where they reside their names are handed into the main office here in Honolulu.

That the great majority of the Hawaiians are in favor of the prohibition is evidenced by the expressions of many of the well known kamaainas. Although it is estimated that the majority of the Hawaiians are drinking people they are realizing the fact that the sooner they drop the liquor drinking habit the better it will be for their families.

Aside from the Territorial Prohibition League, the women societies are also getting interested in the promotion of the prohibition work in the islands.

It is said that Hawaiian women's huis are preparing for a big campaign against liquor. They realize it is to their advantage to prevent the sale of liquor here, which is the cause of much poverty in many a Hawaiian home.

Some of the officers of these wahine huis state that they will work together with the Territorial Prohibition League for Hawaiians, in order to defeat the aims of the liquor dealers.

Scrap and the world scraps with you, smile and they let you alone.

Few intelligent people of the Territory misunderstand the reason for the coming of the Russians.

Paul de Longpre has done better than Ella Wheeler Wilcox. She has not even suggested coming back.

That eighteen-year-old boy among the Russians who has cut loose and gone to work may be credited with the levelest head of the lot.

After various experiments with his many titles, Colonel Roosevelt is the name that promises to stick until he gets a new position or explodes at some new point.

Publicity for campaign contributions will require about twenty years of argument before it can expect to get beyond the committee-room pigeon-hole.

Publicity for corporation returns to be placed at the discretion of the President puts the Chief Executive of the nation in a position to do a great amount of evil as well as good work.

Doubting Thomases are always in the majority. Hardly a man in Hawaii who has followed the sugar market believes that the future holds anything but the highest prices for raw sugar. Yet ninety-nine of every hundred want to see a quotation before they really get in and back their opinions vigorously.

PROHIBITION AND THE LIBERALS

Talk of prohibition is beginning here in Honolulu in such a vigorous style that one may assume the plebiscite campaign is already on.

Judging from the bitterness of the remarks offered by prohibition advocates, the campaign here will not be unlike that in other parts of the country where temperance in speech has seemed impossible. Prejudice is rampant, and what the prohibitionist talkers think of anyone who happens to disagree with them is limited only by their list of evil-sounding adjectives.

It is very unfortunate that this is so, for there are a great many very honest and very sensible citizens who do not believe that prohibition is the best solution of the liquor problem, and they are not afraid to say so.

Furthermore, unbelievers become displeased when they are called names by believers in prohibition, and after the name-calling stunt has gone on for about so long, they strike back. Then follows a series of unpleasant exchanges that will not increase public confidence in the measure of self-control possessed by otherwise well-intentioned persons.

An effort to reach a solution thus becomes a row, and the amount of good accomplished is reduced to a minimum.

The trend of thought on all questions involving moral issues has been steadily towards the conclusion that no one set of persons has a mortgage on all that is right in this world.

The time was when some very excellent people declared that only one way offered itself to humanity for reaching Heaven, and that was the path marked out by a certain creed. Some people believe this at the present day, but the number is steadily diminishing.

So it is with prohibition. The issue has been bubbling and running over with prejudice; the people have been told that there is no other way to handle the evils of intemperance than an attempt to prohibit the liquor traffic. Experience, however, has not proved that the gentlemen laying down this hard and fast rule have the absolute right of it. There are other roads toward the haven of temperance.

When informed that the supporters of a regulated liquor traffic are, by their conclusions and acts, allying themselves with the low dives and the drunks of the community, we have always to remember that the day was, not so very long ago, when the men and women who had the temerity to entertain liberal views on matters of religion were branded as moral outcasts, and more to be despised than the heathen.

We should remember that the liberal-minded citizens who have decided to think for themselves have survived the storm, and, far from being all that was said of them, have established a standard of morals and practical Christianity that is attracting an increasing number of very good men and women. The liberal-minded ones were consigned to Hell in a great many different languages, but they have with equal insistence—though possibly without quite so much noise and bitter words—refused to go.

Much the same condition exists when the prohibition issue is taken up. There is an opportunity for an honest difference of opinion, and if the prohibitionists will not grant that such is the case, the opinions will be held anyway. And in the long run the liberal ideals will win out.

Let us hope that the advocates of total abstinence will not be so intemperate in their speech or methods of campaigning that it will be necessary for those who believe otherwise to meet them at their own game.

It would be a very gratifying situation if Hawaii could give the world a demonstration of how the prohibition issue may be decided on its merits without its supporters marking their campaign by an exceptional amount of blackguardism.

The idea of Republicans being weak on the tariff issue when it comes to a show-down is too much. The insurgents prefer to take it out in talk, and make Uncle Joe Cannon the goat if any votes are taken.

Commander Peary is wise to spend the remainder of his life enjoying the comforts of civilization. Polar exploration history has proved that an explorer has to work quite as hard to prove it as he did to get there.

Los Angeles still wants that steamship line between Honolulu and San Pedro. It is gratifying to learn that they continue to think about it, and most edifying to know what the men in that section could make out of Mr. Dearborn's proposition for a tourist steamship.

DEADLOCK IN RUSSIANS' CASE.

When asked as to the action of the Territorial Government in the event of the Russians continuing in their refusal to accept work, Governor Frear stated that it would be just as well not to consider a solution of the problem until it was reached.

A few of the Russians gathered on the grounds of the Capitol this morning, accompanied by Vischneff, who apparently expected that another conference was in order, but he was disappointed. There is no further disposition upon the part of the Territory to treat with the immigrants, it being believed that everything within reason has been done to meet their complaints.

A canvass upon a number of the immigrants this morning in the company of an interpreter revealed the fact a number of the Russians when questioned together publicly declared that they would rather return to Russia than accept work on the plantations. When questioned singly they were very doubtful and countered with the question, "What can we do in Russia?"

The closing of the commissary, it is believed, will have a prompt effect—the interpreter stating that some of the immigrants did not see why they should go to work while they could live for nothing.

M'BRIDE ROMANCE PROVES INTERESTING

Governor's Secretary Also Tries For Step-father

The San Francisco papers deal at length with the romance of Claudius McBride, former secretary to Governor Frear. The San Francisco Chronicle publishes the following account:

Claudius Hartley McBride and Florence Elizabeth Vale McBride were married by Rev. William Carey Bailey, pastor of the Centennial Christian Church, in the Manx Hotel yesterday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock.

The wedding represents the culmination of a remarkable romance. Less than eighteen months ago Mrs. McBride secured a divorce from Claudius McBride, secretary to Governor Walter Frear of Hawaii, poet, belletrist, wit, and a power in the Hawaiian Islands. Yesterday afternoon they were remarried.

From the time of the divorce until the event of yesterday an atmosphere of almost incredible intrigue, jealousy and occasional happiness has surrounded the couple.

A striking feature was added to the romance when McBride stated that he had discovered only yesterday that his supposedly dead stepfather, whose name he took just before the supposed death, is not only living, but is none other than Frank McBride, president of the McBride-Rothschild Confectionery Company of San Francisco, who is now in Santa Barbara.

The reunion between Mr. and Mrs. McBride came about in an equally strange way. After the divorce in Honolulu in October, 1908, Mrs. McBride came to San Francisco, where she has relatives. Last autumn McBride received a vague intimation reflecting upon his divorced wife. A few weeks ago he received a letter from a woman whose husband is engaged in the real estate business, stating that her husband was trying to persuade Mrs. McBride to run away with him.

Mrs. McBride had charge of the 7-year-old son, and the father determined to rescue the boy. He obtained permission from the Governor of Hawaii to leave Honolulu, and arrived in San Francisco last week on the transport Thomas and registered at the Hotel Manx. To his many friends here he stated that he was on his way to Washington to assist in lobbying on the discussion of the amendment of the Hawaiian Organic Act.

Hired a Detective.

Meanwhile he hired a private detective and set to work to investigate the allegations contained in the letter he had received. He found that his wife and child were on a ranch near Sebastopol, in Sonoma county, with her mother, Mrs. Dobelaar, and so determined was he to get the child away from the mother that he laid plans to kidnap the boy if necessary.

Last Sunday afternoon McBride went to Santa Rosa and found his wife and boy living disconsolately for want of a husband and father, and the reconciliation ensued.

McBride told his wife about the letter he had received, and was satisfied that the whole thing was a fabrication of jealousy. They talked over their divorce and agreed that it had been brought about entirely by the work of tattling tongues. Then they decided to take the next train to San Francisco and remarry.

McBride was born in Colorado in 1870. He was the son of H. L. and Carrie A. Sherwood. When he was 5 years of age his mother divorced his father and married a Frank Harrington. The Harringtons were divorced in 1898, and soon after Mrs. Sherwood-Harrington married Frank McBride of Pueblo, Col.

Financed by a man named May of Ouray, and in partnership with a man named Simpson, McBride senior started in business in Pueblo. In 1891 it was decided that Claudius and his brother, Cecil Charles, should take their stepfather's name of McBride, and they have been known by that name ever since.

Discovered by Chance.

In that year Frank McBride took Claudius to Cripple Creek with him, and opened a branch business. He succeeded, but went to Trinidad, Col., in 1895. In 1894 Mrs. McBride received a letter stating that her husband had been killed in an explosion in Trinidad. She died a few years later.

It was by a mere chance that McBride discovered yesterday that his stepfather was still living. A friend of his wife happened to mention the McBride-Rothschild concern, and the name claiming his attention, he inquired casually as to the identity of the San Francisco man. Hearing that he was from Colorado, he immediately began a search for him, only to find that Frank McBride had gone to Los Angeles. But he was shown a picture, and, although sixteen years have elapsed since he saw his stepfather, he recognized him at once.

Claudius McBride went to Nome in 1901 and was then engaged as secretary to Judge Moore, one of the characters made famous in Rex Beach's novel, "The Spoilers." The following year he married Florence Elizabeth Vale of San Francisco, to Nome and, from that time until just before their divorce in Honolulu, their married life was a very happy one.

For two years McBride has held the position of secretary to Governor Frear of Hawaii. At times he has undertaken the position of acting Governor during Frear's absence. His contemplated trip to Washington is one of responsibility and requiring a fine political and diplomatic knowledge.

The McBrides have not announced their plans for the future. They will go to Washington within a few days, but will not hurry, as the Hawaiian matter has been held up by the Cannon war in the lower house.

Mrs. McBride is not anxious to return to Honolulu, and it is very possible that her husband will accept an offer made to him to return to San Francisco and go into partnership with a local attorney, in which profession he is qualified to practice.

The Examiner of March 16 says:

Claudius H. McBride of Honolulu experienced last Tuesday not only the novel happiness of remarrying his divorced wife, but the romantic delight of discovering a putative long-lost stepfather in the person of Frank McBride, a local candy magnate, who was then in Los Angeles.

On Wednesday morning, Mr. and Mrs. Claudius McBride left the hotel where they were staying, and it was given out that she had returned to her mother's ranch and that he had gone to New York.

On Thursday Frank McBride returned from Los Angeles and denied the story of Claudius, claiming that he had no stepsons, and that the man from Honolulu must be mistaken.

Yesterday Claudius H. showed up unexpectedly. He had accompanied his wife to the ranch, instead of going to New York, and, seeing Frank's denial in the Chronicle, he looked him up in his office.

What happened at that interview is not known, but Frank McBride stated positively last night that he had never seen Claudius H. before in his life, but also said that the latter still seemed certain that the step-relationship exists. On what grounds or for what reasons Frank was unable to state.

When seen last night, Claudius H. refused to make any statement of any kind. He would not say that he still believes Frank to be his stepfather, he would not say that he is satisfied that he was mistaken, and he refused to make any comment on the elder man's denial published in the paper.

Judging by Frank McBride's statement that Claudius still seems positive of the relationship existing, in combination with the latter's refusal to talk, it would appear that the latter-day Japhet is loath to relinquish his search all at once, after discovering such a very attractive clew.

SAMUEL GOMPERS, POSSIBLE LEADER OF NATION WIDE STRIKE

PHILADELPHIA, March 24.—State and city leaders of the workmen taking part in the big general strike expressed themselves as confident of their ability to convince President Samuel Gompers of the American Federation of Labor of the necessity of a great national strike in sympathy with the disaffected trolley men. Calling out of the employees of the street railways in San Francisco, Cleveland, Pittsburg and Omaha was especially favored, as the car lines in those cities are under the control of the syndicate which runs the cars in Philadelphia. It was declared that President Gompers had had such action under consideration for some time, and in various quarters the belief was expressed that he was prepared to take the responsibility for so grave a step.

The girl fainted from the pain, and was at once cared for by her fellow employes. She was taken to the Queen's Hospital by the patrol wagon, and was admitted for treatment.

Paul de Longpre, the famous artist of Southern California, is to make good his promise of returning to Honolulu. The mail by the Sierra brought a letter from Mr. de Longpre to Mr. Lisbman, in which he says: "It may be possible that we spend another two months in one of your little cottages at deer old Waikiki."

Mr. de Longpre has also written the editor of the Bulletin stating that he expects to visit the city for two months, coming on the Sierra that leaves San Francisco on May 7th.

A Malihini's Letters

NO. 10.

My Dear Arthur:—It might not be amiss for the Health Department to investigate the why and the wherefore of certain employees who are in the habit of sweeping out the accumulations of dirt from various stores and banks of this city into the streets after 9 a. m. As the streets at that hour are usually crowded with pedestrians going to their several vocations, it is very annoying to have clouds of dust stirred up and blown into one's eyes while passing these places of business. The streets are quite dusty enough as it is without having more added to them.

There is a lack of public drinking fountains in this city for both man and beast. The members of the W. C. T. U. should certainly get busy and pass the hat round amongst the prohibitionists with a view to having drinking fountains erected at convenient places throughout the city.

Local prohibitionists are making a great fuss about the number of saloons and the increase in drunkenness, but it is only to be expected if there is a dearth of public drinking fountains. People who have a certain amount of pride and self-respect, would hesitate before entering a saloon to ask for a drink of water, especially if the bar happened to be lined with puffy cheeked individuals, who in all probability never used water except to bathe in.

On the mainland, drinking fountains are to be found in nearly all the principal cities and even in small towns of Southern California. Many of these have been erected by the W. C. T. U. At present I have seen only one public drinking fountain in this city, and that just outside the Y. M. C. A.

Water can be obtained at all drug stores; but it would be an imposition and a hardship to ask the dispenser of "soft drinks" to hand out water to every Tom, Dick and Harry, who happened to be thirsty. Soda fountains are operated solely for profit and ought not to be converted into free public Spas.

The Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals should most assuredly erect a few drinking troughs for the convenience of horses and dogs, throughout the city. These should be of iron and enameled. The horse troughs now being installed on the mainland for the convenience of animals are of enamel. These are easily cleaned and the water will be purer than if allowed to stand in wooden troughs, which soon become waterlogged and covered with moss.

These troughs should be placed under proper shade, so that the water will remain cool. The immediate surroundings should be cobbled or macadamized, so that animals will not have to stand in stagnant pools or in mud while drinking. I do not know how active the local Society is, but judging from the many half-starved mangy looking canines and the poor specimens of horse flesh occasionally met with in various parts of the city, the fines collected for neglecting these poor animals added to the collections made by the W. C. T. U. would more than pay for establishing a system of public drinking fountains for both man and beast.

On many of the vacant lots in and about the city are to be seen notice boards, bearing the mystic signs: Kapu. Nas Se Passa Aqui, which being interpreted means: No Thoroughfare. As most of these lots are in a disgraceful state of neglect and are for the most part choked with weeds and rank grass, it seems superfluous that these notice boards should have been erected, as they only tend to attract attention to the untidy and unkempt condition of many of these lots.

The owners of these should have enough civic pride in them to have these cleared. It would be a comparatively easy matter to get these lots cleaned if expense to be considered. Owners of stables might be induced to clean these by allowing them to have all the grass growing on them, which could be used as fodder or beading for horses or cattle. Such experiments have been tried before with great success.

Furthermore, owners of such lots could rent them to enterprising people to grow vegetables upon, with the understanding that a proportion of the crops thus grown be given the owner of such lots in compensation for such a privilege. In this way, property owners would be supplied with fresh vegetables and in addition would have the satisfaction of knowing that their vacant property was not only being kept clean, but was an ornament to the city.

Doubtless you will be surprised when I tell you that I was called into court last Saturday morning to appear as a witness. In marked contrast to his honor the presiding judge and the prosecuting attorney, both of whom were most courteous, the defendant's attorney, who by all accounts is a most estimable man, was just the reverse. He asked so many irrevalent and seemingly impertinent questions that the prosecuting attorney had to step in and ask him to refrain from such cross-examination. Being sustained by his honor the judge, the defendant's attorney, to use a slang term, had to "take a back seat."

This practice of asking peculiar and irrelevant questions in the course of cross-examination is closely akin to the antics of a very enthusiastic baseball fan who says and does things for the sole purpose of "rattling" the pitcher. I suppose the defending attorney tries to "rattle" the witness by asking such peculiar and at times really funny questions.

I have known men on the witness stand "sass" the defending attorney most unmercifully, much to the delight of the spectators. But I consider that the dignity of the court should at all times be upheld. As this was my first appearance and being a Malihini, the opposing attorney was not too irrelevent, but he might have been if he had not been promptly checked by the prosecuting attorney, who behaved in a most courteous manner.

It seems such a roundabout method to "bull-bait" witnesses on the stand by asking questions that appear to have nothing whatever to do with the case. Perhaps it is to break the monotony of the court, but it seems to me that much valuable time is thus wasted for which the "dear public" have to pay. However, if the fellow is paid to ask these questions it must be all right, but what bothers me, is why another man should have to be employed to keep him in check.

As I hear that you are leaving for Honolulu for a two month's visit, I will wait until your return to California before writing you any more Malihini letters. These letters have undoubtedly done a great deal of good, but on the other hand some people's feelings have been hurt. But it was unintentional, as a Malihini is not supposed to familiarize himself with all phases of conditions which prevail here within the space of three months.

Since these letters first appeared, the Promotion Committee have condemned the sale of fake picture postal cards, action is now being taken to have Waikiki Beach cleared of coral, or at least a certain portion cleared of this dangerous growth so that bathers may enjoy a dip in the briny without fear of injury. The Shippers' Wharf Committee have made an appropriation of $1000 a month towards the campaign which the Board of Health is now waging against mosquitoes, which have now become a menace to the public health. The side-walks are to be looked after, an adequate water supply is now assured, and several other important matters are being taken in hand which were mentioned in these letters at one time or another.

I will greet you upon your arrival and will present you with a flower leis, which is one of the prettiest customs in the world. I hope rain will fall soon, so that everything may be fresh and clean when you arrive so that your first impressions may be nice ones. Honolulu as I have said before is a mighty pretty little city and the people are more than hospitable, so a good time is in store for you.

VALUABLE HINTS ON HONEY BEE KEEPING

Eastern Keepers Give Varied Experiments With the Busy Worker — The Queen Bee and Bee Ways.

At a convention of beekeepers held in the States recently many new kinks and wrinkles were talked over. Whether they are adaptable to these islands can best be answered by those engaged in beekeeping. Arthur C. Miller, a noted beekeeper says:

It is the general custom among beekeepers to introduce a strange laying queen to a colony by placing her in a cage and allowing the bees to extricate her by eating away a piece of cardboard and eating the candy from the hole through which she is to emerge. It often happens that the beekeeper gets impatient to find out whether the queen has been let out of the cage or not, and when he opens the hive it enrages the bees and they sometimes kill her, blaming her for the disturbance. At this time of the year it sometimes happens that the bees eat out the candy, but keep the queen a prisoner. Mr. Miller has introduced about 200 queens of late by simply lifting the cover of the hive and dropping the new queen quietly on top of the brood-frames. He watches to see if the bees begin to act unkindly toward her and if so he gives them such a smoking that they are at once in a furore and gorge themselves with honey and by the time things are quieted down the queen has the "colony odor" and all is well. Mr. Miller has lost but two queens by this simple method, and those would not have been lost, he believes, if her had studied more carefully the character of the bees. Some are nervous and irritable and care has to be taken in giving such bees a strange queen. But ordinarily Mr. Miller has no difficulty at all.

A. W. Yates of Hartford, a queen breeder, said that he would not dare send out queens with instructions to introduce them in that simple way. He should expect the majority to be killed.

When two or more colonies have been mixed, Mr. Miller cautioned the beekeepers not to introduce a virgin queen until the bees had settled down. She can then be allowed to run in quietly. In introducing her to a normal colony he said that the bees would always accept her kindly if there were no brood in the combs.

When asked to name the factors that keep his bees from swarming, Mr. Miller mentioned four. The strain of bees has a great deal to do with it, the time of putting in new queens (August being recommended); plenty of space below the brood-frames and a large entrance; a proper hive. He regarded a proper hive as a large one with a dark colored paper covering. Such a hive may stand in the sun at a temperature of 120 degrees, or remain outdoors during zero weather, and if the entrance is large enough swarming will be about unknown in summer and in the winter the moisture will be taken care of.

THREE DAYS IN THE SADDLE ACROSS DOMINICA

(By Marshall D. Taylor.)

Having heard so much of the beauties of the Leeward Islands and armed with a pressing invitation from an Anglo-Indian planter, who owned a large estate in Dominica, I left Kingston, Jamacia in company with young Bullen, for Barbados, from which port transshipment was made into one of the intercolonial steamers for Roseau.

Leaving Bridgetown, the capital of Barbados, on a Monday, the vessel anchored off Castries, the capital of St. Lucia, the following morning. Although it was only 6:30 a. m. the heat was very trying and as there was nothing of interest outside the Botanical gardens, which were beautiful, it was indeed a pleasure when the time came to sail.

St. Pierre, the then capital of Martinique, was the next port of call. This is a most beautiful island, and, previous to the late terrible visitation, St. Pierre was a flourishing city. Having landed the mails, the vessl steamed away to Roseau, which port was reached at 5:30 p. m. on Tuesday.

Roseau looked very pretty from the sea. The Anglican church, the Catholic cathedral and the Wesleyan chapel, all built on commanding sites, nestling at the base of rugged mountains and surrounded by dense tropical foliage, resembles Honolulu. On landing, however, one's fond hopes are blighted. The streets, if such they could be called, were unkempt and paved with large cobble stones which made walking and riding difficult. This, coupled with the awful stench from the boiling sulphur lake, caused a feeling of uneasiness; as until it was ascertained where this odor came from, the drains were thought to have been neglected. So overpowering are the fumes at certain periods that an American tourist and his guide, who ventured too close to the crater, were suffocated and their bodies recovered only after the greatest difficulty.

Roseau, as the name implies is typically French. French is the language spoken and the negroes have not only adopted the dress, but the courtly manners of the French people. At the time of our visit there were about twenty whites a great number of creoles and half-castes, and some 6000 negroes. The Hon. Hesketh Bell, the then administrator of the island now Governor of Uganda, invited us both to dine with him at the Government House. The following day we accompanied him to Sylvania, his mountain retreat, where the day was spent in inspecting the new road and the Lancashire coffee estate; the ride back to Roseau in the cool of the evening was delightful.

As my friend had purchased an estate on the northern side of the island he was desirous of paying it a visit. This meant three days in the saddle through some of the wildest portions of the island. Considerable difficulty was experienced with the carriers the first day, so much so that instead of arriving at the camping ground before dark, Rosalie was not reached until after 9 p. m.

After leaving Roseau, the trail passed through some of Rose's lime and lemon estates, where the process of converting the fruit into lime juice and concentrates was witnessed. The trail then led us to an elevation of some 4000 feet, where a hut was called on the banks of some fresh water lakes. Here it began to rain, and to add to our discomfort a thick fog enveloped the mountain.

It was 5 p. m. and several hours' hard riding still had to be accomplished. We agreed to separate, I riding ahead to make arrangements for the night and to send out men with lanterns to meet Bullen and the carriers.

So dark was it that it was with the greatest difficulty that my horse was able to pick his way down the steep and slippery mountain path. On reaching the plains a light was seen gleaming from a charcoal burner's hut in the forest. After much delay its occupant opened the door in a half-hearted manner, but seeing that the visitor was a white man he became profuse in his apologies. He pointed out the way to Rosalie, saying that it was only one hour's ride. After what seemed an interminable time, another hut was reached. In broken English an old negro replied that Rosalie was not "too far," only one hour. It was then pitchdark and the rain was coming down in torrents. The lights of a village on the opposite bank of a raging torrent were seen, but as it was impossible to see the ford the horse was given his head.

So afraid are West Indian negroes of "Obiah men" that it was with reluctance the villagers opened their doors. Upon making inquiries it was found that Rosalie was still two miles distant so nothing daunted the journey was continued. As ill-luck would have it, the village was on the opposite side of a river, now swollen to twice its usual size. Giving the horse its head, and after sundry splashings and much floundering, the bank was reached in safety. A light was seen burning in a near-by house, which turned out to be the village constables'. After routing out the guard, which consisted of a negro corporal and one solitary private, the situation was explained.

Having fed and made my horse comfortable for the night, the private helped wash up the few dishes and cooking utensils. The corporal in the meantime had very thoughtfully paid a visit to the village, returning with a number of garments, chief of which was one of his mother's skirts. These I donned, being only too glad to get into dry clothes.

As Bullen and the carriers had not arrived, the private made the rounds of the village and engaged the services of several men. Armed with lanterns and ropes, these waited on the banks of the river. After what appeared an hour, Bullen and his men emerged from the forest and were quickly hauled through the muddy waters.

At the time of our visit the village of Rosalie consisted of about twenty grass huts and a population of some 100 negroes. Just prior to leaving Roseau we had taken the precaution to call upon the Inspector of Police, who gave us his card and a letter to the corporal at Rosalie to the effect that one of the two rooms in the constable's house was to be put at our disposal for the night, and we were also to have exclusive use of the two beds.

At daybreak the horses were fed and groomed and seemed none the worse for the long and trying journey of the previous day. After a hearty breakfast the journey was continued to Chestervale, where lunch was eaten under a grove of cocoanut palms. After a couple of hours' rest and a swim in the sea we remained in the saddle the whole of that afternoon and reached St. Marie before dark. Here the night was spent at a Jesuit priest's house.

St. Marie is in the heart of the Carib country, and consisted of three large buildings—the church, the priest's house, and the negro schoolmaster's cottage—surrounded by a number of huts. The church is entirely built of wod and quite a large building for so sparsely a populated district. The priest's house contained two rooms and a porch. As its owner was away, we had it all to ourselves. Sleep was out of the question and very much like performing a penance, as the bed consisted of several packing cases of uneven size and shape, covered with a straw mattress.

As so few Europeans ever visited St. Marie, a deputation of the leading citizens, headed by the negro schoolmaster, who was closely followed by the sexton and the priest's cook, a buxom negress, waited on us, and invited us to inspect the church, which served also as a school. It was late in the afternoon when we arrived, and almost time for the children to be dismissed. As we entered the children stood at attention and repeated very solemnly these words: "Good morning sars." Two songs were then sung after which the school broke up.

Mary, the schoolmaster's sister offered her services as cook. Having procured a couple of eggs apiece, she set before us what she considered her masterpiece. It certainly was a staggerer when the cover was lifted and the four eggs were disclosed, floating in all their glory on a red grease foundation. At first it was thought to be tomato sauce and we thanked her for all the trouble she had taken. One taste was sufficient however, for directly she left the room the contents were carefully consigned to the bush.

Just before retiring for the night the Carib chief paid a surprise visit. He was a venerable looking old man dressed in spotless white and spoke a French patois which at first it was difficult to understand. He presented each of us with a hen's egg and apologized that his wife was unable to come on account of ill health. We returned the visit and took with us a bottle of rum. The whole village turned out and, as it was a beautiful moonlight night, we sat around a large log fire and listened to Carib songs and music.

These people are of Red Indian descent, and at one time were addicted to cannibalism. Their principal settlement is now in the Republic of Honduras, where they form a prosperous part of the population. They still retain their original language and many of their peculiar customs. Their immigration into Honduras dates back from about 1796, when the British, weary of the continual disturbances which they occasioned, transported them in a body from Dominica and St. Vincent, so that now there are only a few in the islands of the West Indies.

A very restless night was passed, as the horses began to fight as to which should have the larger share of sugar cane tops, with the result that my horse changed stalls with that of Bullen, in doing which he received a severe lasceration of his near hind leg.

After saying "Howdy" to the school children the following morning, a sumptuous repast was prepared, in which the Carib chief's two eggs, which later proved to be of uncertain age, formed the "piece de resistance." Mary seemed to have brought all her culinary skill to bear upon this special dish, believeing that the honor paid us the previous night was worthy of her best efforts. So proud was she that, only under pretext of asking her to bring us some hot water, could we induce her to leave the room. Directly her back was turned the dish was emptied of its dangerous contents into a hermetically sealed cracker tin, the whole being carefully dropped into the nearest river.

A three hours' ride brought us to Hatton Hall, where lunch was taken with a Mr. Musgrave. He was the first white man we had seen for three days. Negroes were dispatched post-haste to the river, soon returning with a fine mess of crayfish, which, with other delicacies, were much relished. A short ride through magnificent forests, made more beautiful by the presence of tree ferns and blooming orchids brought us to Melville Hall, our destination.

Like all Anglo-Indians, our host treated us most hospitably. The finest of bathing, both in river and in ocean, were indulged in, and carte blanche was given us to fish and shoot when and where we pleased. Melville Hall estate comprised about 1400 acres, most of which was planted out in sugar cane, cacao, coffee, limes and nutmegs, so that our stay, if only from a botanical point of view, was most interesting and enjoyable.

Instead of returning to Roseau via Rosalie and St. Marie, we skirted the western slope of Mr. Diablo, putting up for the night with the manager of one of Cadbury's estates. From here by easy stages Buccaneer Cove was reached, where the coasting steamer Spey was boarded which carried us back to Roseau the following afternoon.

TRYING TO TAKE BIG EXPRESS COMPANY AWAY FROM PLATTS.

NEW YORK, Mar. .—Legal proceedings are again pending in the Supreme Court of New York State in the suit brought by some of the stockholders of the United States Express Company to take the control of the company out of the hands of the family of the late Senator Thomas C. Platt, recently deceased. Edward T. Platt and Frank H. Platt, sons of the Senator, are treasurer and counsel respectively of the company. The stockholders who object to the Platt control are able to muster a voting strength of more than half of the 100,000 shares of the stock, but a two-thirds majority is required to call an election, according to the special law under which the company was incorporated. This majority the so-called minority stockholders have never been able to obtain, and the courts have thus far refused to grant their petition for an examination of the books, an open meeting and an election. The protesting stockholders charge that under Senator Platt's management the affairs of the company have not been efficiently handled.

SPEAKER CANNON SHORN OF POWER

Taken Off Rules Committee He Still Shows Defiance

"Resolved, that the rules of the House be amended as follows: The committee on rules shall consist of 15 members, nine of whom shall be members of the majority party and six of whom shall be members of the minority party, to be selected as follows:

"The states of the Union shall be divided by a committee of three selected by the House for that purpose, into nine groups, each group containing as near as may be an equal number of members belonging to the majority party.

"The states of the Union shall likewise be divided into six groups, each group containing as near as may be an equal number of members belonging to the minority party.

"At 10:30 o'clock a m. on the day following the adoption of the report of said committee, each of said groups shall meet and select one of its number a member of the committee on rules. The place of meeting for each of said groups shall be designated by the said committee of three in its report. Each of said groups shall report to the House the name of the member selected for membership on the committee on rules.

"The committee on rules shall select its own chairman. The speaker shall not be eligible to membership on said committee. All rules or parts thereof inconsistent with the foregoing resolutions are hereby repealed."

The foregoing is the resolution in full, known as the "Norris resolution," intended to minimize or deprive Speaker Cannon of his autocratic power, was framed by Congressman G. W. Norris of Nebraska, an arch-insurgent among the Republicans.

Norris Launches Bombshell.

A lull in routine work in the House gave the opportunity, and before the regular business of the day could be resumed Mr. Norris of Nebraska, was on his feet demanding recognition. The speaker could not ignore him. Mr. Norris in a twinkling had offered his resolution, framed to effectually deprive the speaker of the House of his vast power.

With the reading of the resolution no announcement was needed to acquaint the floor that a greater and more important legislative battle was on, than any of the days immediately preceding, had brought forth. The great issue of "Cannonism" as applied to the House rules was joined. There probably could be no sidestepping. Republicans must go on record pro or con and take the consequences before their constituencies. And there was no side stepping except that of a nature that divided the house into factions.

Plans for Action.

It was by now the middle of the afternoon, and the best generals on both sides began to plan for renewed action. The speaker's forces had been surprised again, and were on the defensive. The parliamentary sharps began to send for documents, while Mr. Norris, a member of very energetic manner, contended that the resolution was privileged under the constitution in the same way that the day before, and also earlier in the day, the speaker had claimed the census resolution was privileged.

He based this on the language of the constitution of the United States, which says that the House or Representatives "may" make such rules for its conduct as it sees fit.

The possible mandatory effect of the word "may" as thus used became an interesting feature of debate. Champ Clark, the minority leader, and Mr. Madison of Kansas, an insurgent, both able lawyers, declared many courts had held that as used in this connection "may" had the force of "shall," and was consequently mandatory.

See Crisis Ahead.

Republicans occupied the seats opposite. They were in unhappy mood, facing the stern realization that a crisis for their party and their speaker was at hand. The insurgents were sprinkled in among the Republicans, but some found themselves too uncomfortable in their surroundings that they took seats on the Democratic side or bruised themselves in parleys with Democratic members.

The insurgents and Democrats believed that this language used by the speaker in submitting the question was a trick to induce the House to reverse itself in the precedent it established Thursday. The Cannon form was defeated and in amended form, offered by Representative Underwood of Alabama:

"Is the resolution in order now?" was carried.

Rebuke for Cannon.

Speaker Cannon had received his third rebuke at the hands of the House in as many days. The fight for this technicality consumed three hours or more. As it progressed word flew around the Capitol that the Cannon organization was engaged in what might prove a final struggle. Senators rapidly straggled over from their end of the Capitol. Tourists, of whom there are now many in the city, and other spectators flocked into the galleries.

The discussion during those three hours was largely technical, dealing with parliamentary phases of the situation. Although understood by but few, every onlooker remained in rapt attention, even during the prosaic rollcalls. They seemed to understand that the House was making history which would have telling effect upon the party and the country.

Cannon's Demeanor.

The most interesting figure in this remarkable forum, of course, was the speaker himself. He occupied the chair, and, in fact, consumed much of the time in parliamentary rulings which he gave with an air of resignation. His demeanor, however, did not otherwise betray perturbation. He acted like a man who proposed to stand by his guns. He wore the usual carnation in his lapel.

Alert to every movement on the floor, the speaker kept in close touch with his lieutenants, who were busy lining up the forces and trying to prevent desertions in the face of discouraging reverses.

When the census resolution was finally taken up it required only about five minutes. The House was fighting for a principle, and its members were stirred as they have not been stirred in many years.

Value of "May" and "Shall" Enter Into the Debate.

Representative Dalzell of Pennsylvania, one of the members of Mr. Cannon's rules committee, had instantly raised a point of order against the Norris resolution.

"It is not privileged under the constitution," he declared.

The relative values of "may" and "shall" were projected into the debate by the ablest of House orators. Representative Norris took the floor declaring that the Dalzell point of order did not hold against his resolution.

For hours thereafter Speaker Cannon sat Sphinx-like in his chair, refusing to rule on the point of order, and the debate continued without the resolution itself really being before the House. The machine leaders hoped against hope that something would occur to save them, that the Democrats or insurgents would tire and leave, that some of their own absentees, who had been delayed uptown and who were out of town, would appear.

Three Republicans who were in Philadelphia had been commanded to return.

Mr. Greene of Massachusetts, making a speech in Baltimore, was sent for.

The insurgents and their Democratic allies were not idle. They held their men remarkably well. Representative Garner of Massachusetts, scheduled to leave for Massachusetts to deliver an address, remained for the scene, and lined up with the rules opponents.

Partisanship Lost Sight of.

The wheel horses of the House, Republicans and Democrats, took turns in speaking, and everything was done that argument could do to bolster up a cause. Mr. Olmstead of Pennsylvania, a candidate for speaker, calmly and suavely supported the Dalzell point of order.

Mr. Poindexter of Washington, a far western insurgent, who has a heavy penerating voice, and looks like Captain Hobson, made a ringing speech, attacking the Cannon regime and appealing for its overthrow. Sereno Payne, the Republican floor leader, midway the afternoon debate, took the floor for party exhortation such as has seldom, in the past, failed to bring recalcitrants back upon the reservation. It seemed that his old influence was gone. It was a new House that looked on and listened.

Payne Appeals in Behalf of President

Mr. Payne used the name of President Taft. He ponderously begged Republicans to remember their duty to the administration, and not to upset the rules by which the party, held responsible by the people, enacted measures into law.

Then came Representative Hamilton Fish, millionaire Republican from New York and scion of a famous family, to champion the reform cause in a vigorous speech which threw the House into a frenzy of excitement. He attacked the present rules and did not neglect to be specific.

He had tried to get a bill providing for a parcels post out of the committee on postoffices by means of a rule from the committee on rules, and had been given no satisfaction. He had repeatedly asked for a hearing and as often been ignored. His letters to Mr. Dalzell of the rules committee had been received with silent contempt.

Was Not Even Allowed "the Favor of a Reply."

He had not even been allowed the favor of a reply. His colleague, Otto Godfrey Foelker of New York, had found it impossible to get a report from the ways and means committee on a bill to reduce the tariff on meats. He wanted to abolish the system by which meritorious bills could be stifled in committee.

These specific allegations, giving facts and names, produced great enthusiasm. Mr. Fish's fighting blood was up. He dared any one to contradict him, and when Messrs. Dalzell and Smith of Iowa did contradict some of his statements, he proved his assertions so conclusively that the House—all but the glum regulars—burst into cheers.

Mr. Fish sharply criticized Leader Payne for bringing the name of the President into the issue. He believed in keeping the executive and legislative branches separate.

Worker for Mr. Cannon Appeals to Party Pride.

J. Sloat Fassett of New York spoke for the Cannon organization, and made a decided impression upon the wavering ones. It was an appeal to party pride. He called the insurgents "mercerized Republicans" and "assistant Democrats," declared that the Democrats hoped by the passage of the pending resolution to gain control of the House.

He declared that the success or the failure of the Taft administration depending upon the House voting down the resolution which would deprive the party responsible for legislation of the power to enact it. He paid a great tribute to ex-President Roosevelt, quoted a letter written by the then President in 1906, complimenting the House on legislation accomplished and used the magic name to help his cause. Other addresses followed.

At 7:30 p. m. Speaker Cannon, still the hardy old fighter at bay, with his back to the wall, had not ruled on the point of order. He was sparring for time, for the miracle that was to save him. Messrs. Nelson of Wisconsin, Madison of Kansas, Lindberg of Minnesota, insurgents; Gardner of Michigan and Parker of New Jersey, regular, spoke passionately.

The regular Republicans just before 8 p. m. began to filibuster. Mr. Roberts of Massachusetts made a point of no quorum, and Mr. Crumpacker of Indiana demanded the yeas and nays on the call of the House. The Democrats and insurgents voted it down.

Finally Representative Tawney of Minnesota, chairman of appropriations, and one of Cannon's trusted lieutenants, moved to take a recess until 11 o'clock tomorrow morning. It meant that the Republican whips had completed the count of noses and found themselves in a minority.

The motion to recess was voted down, 142 to 147. It was a small majority, but the insurgents were still in control.

Members Settle All-Night Session.

Members settled down to what then promised to be an all-night contest. The House at times was in an uproar. The debate proceeded with unabated vigor before packed galleries and a membership which crowded the floor. No one knew when the speaker might decided to rule, and therefore few dinnerless members dared depart for any length of time.

There were many short, sharp raids upon the restaurant, but members knew that once the speaker ruled the test would be precipitated in a fateful rollcall. For if he held the point of order well made by Mr. Dalzell, the would certainly be an appeal from his ruling. But if the speaker overruled the point, that would bring the resolution itself up for discussion and vote when the forces for and against must be on hand.

Combatants Entered Upon the New Struggle.

Again, should he decide to submit the question to the House, as he adroitly did on one occasion, Wednesday, there would still be need of every member being within earshot of the reading clerk. Under these stressful circumstances the combatants entered upon a new period of the struggle.

As the evening passed an unparalleled scene was enacted. Speaker Cannon stood at the marble desk of the House over which he has for so long presided. Indictment after indictment was read against him by Representative Cooper of Wisconsin, tall and grizzled, who with accusing finger emphasized his disapproval of the rules and of the man who enforced them.

COPYRIGHT, WALDON FAWCETT

FROM STEREOGRAPH COPYRIGHT UNDERWOOD & UNDERWOOD

Speaker Cannon later answered the indictment, like one accused standing at the bar of justice. He made a plea of "not guilty," whereupon witnesses were brought forward by the relentless Wisconsin insurgent. They faced the speaker and amid thunders of applause told how he had used his power to crush them because they would not do his will.

Cannon Faces His Accusers.

Mr. Olmsted of Pennsylvania was in the chair. At the side of the rostrum, a slight, gentle looking figure stood. The gray hair was scanty upon his delicately shaped head. His beard, closely cropped, was of the same shade. His clothes were the quiet day dress of the American business man.

It was Joseph G. Cannon, the central figure in the great drama. He faced the House and from his elevated position could look above the heads of the congressmen who crowded into the well in front of the speaker's desk.

Mr. Cooper held the floor. It was 10 o'clock. The Wisconsin member began the dramatic story of how Mr. Cannon reduced to the ranks, deprived of their chairmanships, the men who had offended him by independence and unwillingness to follow him and his machine. He named them as he related their experiences with the speaker.

There was Mr. Fowler of New Jersey, for years chairman of the committee on banking and currency. He fell under the Cannon displeasure, his chairmanship was taken away from him and he was shorn of his standing in the House. There were Messrs. Norris of Nebraska and Murdock of Kansas. Then Mr. Cooper told how he himself had been removed from the chairmanship of insular affairs because he would not bow to Mr. Cannon.

Then came the dramatic moment which might have been anticipated, so natural did it seem when it did come.

Keifer Recognized.

The speaker's frown gave way to a genial smile. He kissed the tips of his fingers toward his opponents, then bowed to them politely and recognized Mr. Keifer of Ohio, who spoke at length in support of the speaker.

Mr. Keifer proceeded at great length, despite much disorded and many interruptions, and was still speaking at midnight. At that time it was rumored that incoming trains had brought four more regular votes, and that nother attempt would be made to take a recess.

At 12:15 Mr. Keifer concluded, and the Democrats at once resumed their demand for ruling on the point of order.

"If the speaking hasn't given you information enough to rule by this time, Mr. Speaker," said Minority Leader Clark, "you certainly have acquired a vast deal of other information."

Mr. Clark went on to accuse the speaker of being responsible for the long filibuster.

"It is the best illustration of the charge which the speaker denied, of being a czar," said Mr. Clark. "He knew how he intended to rule on this point of order the minute it was raised."

He moved the speaker be required to rule. A yell from the insurgents and Democrats greeted the motion.

Mr. Mann of Illinois opposed the motion. He contended that if it were permitted to present an amendment at any time, it would be an unprecedented weapon for filibustering.

"One hundred men of the minority, each with an amendment of rules, could interrupt the business of this House forever," he declared.

Representative Mann (Rep. Ill.) said he was inclined to believe the time was not far distant when the Democrats would control the House. At 1 o'clock Mr. Mann was still speaking.

Representative Dwight, the Republican whip, at the same time announced that 17 Republicans absentees who were unpaired with Democrats were on the way to Washington.

"They are coming from New York, Philadelphia and more distant points," he said. "Some will arrive before midnight. Others not until tomorrow." With the additional votes he hopes to stem the tide.

As the hours passed the Democrats began to complain about the lack of results from the efforts of Sergeant-at-Arms Casson, who was supposed to be drumming up members. He was called to the bar of the House and answered in defense that he was doing the best he could.

"The clock is about to strike 4," said Mr. Clayton (Dem. Ala.), in beginning a few remarks.

"The clock doesn't strike," corrected a member.

"That's right," admitted Mr. Clayton, "the clock is like the speaker, it doesn't strike. It's dumb."

A whirl of amusement was caused by Representative Hollingsworth (Rep., O.), who came in at 4 p. m. angrier than a man caught out in the rain. Some one had pounded at the door of his room in a hotel and yelled that he had a warrant for his arrest.

"This thing will probably last until the patience of the House is exhausted," said Representative Norris (Rep., Neb.), the originator of all the trouble. "Then, when that patience is exhausted, you may look for anarchy. It will not come for some time, however, I should say, for everybody concerned realizes the consequences. Supposing the speaker refuses to rule and persists in his refusal for a day or two or for several days and the members become convinced that he will never rule. Then the only thing to do will be to use force. He must be deposed, and that of course would mean anarchy. A new speaker would have to be put into chair to execute the will of the members, and if Mr. Cannon were to refuse to give up his gavel, you can imagine as well as I what a scene would ensue."

"This won't keep up forever," remarked Representative Gardner (Rep., Mass.) "In theory the speaker could maintain the deadlock by refusing to rule on the point of order until the fourth of next March, when his term expires, but practically I believe it to be an impossibility."

Speaker Cannon gave up the gavel to J. Hampton Moore (Rep., Va.) at 8:45 a. m. and immediately a number of sleepy members sauntered up to the rostrum to extract some fun from the new "speaker."

Next Day.

At 9 o'clock this morning the war of the allied insurgents and Democrats against the Cannon organization in the House was still on.

The House had been in continuous session for 19 hours, with no prospect of a cessation of hostilities.

Twenty specially sworn deputies are scouring the city for members in order to make a quorum. During the night repeated attempts on the part of the regulars to force an adjournment or recess had been blocked by the combined opposition.

The question before the House is the point of order against the Norris amendment to the rules, which was made at 4 o'clock Thursday afternoon and which the speaker thus far has declined to pass upon, the regulars being without a sufficient number of votes to defeat an appeal from his decision.

Speaker Cannon and his band of regulars are making a heroic stand to retain their control of the rules committee, which means their grip on the House. In one ballot after another of the long session, the Cannon standards have been struck down by the allied insurgent Republicans and Democrats.

But one resource remains to save the regulars from complete rout, and that lies in the power of the speaker to block proceedings. He has closed the throttle and it is now a test of endurance.

Night Scenes.

At intervals they wrangled, engaged in mock proceedings and pestered Mr. Dalzell, who presided while Mr. Cannon was taking a nap in his office. On the fringes of the active crowd were members asleep in their seats. The gallery presented a scene such as the rising sun discovers in Madison Square Garden during a six day bicycle race.

The cloakrooms of both parties were converted into dormitories. On the Republican side the lights had been extinguished to promote sleep. Members slumbered on the divans, big leather chairs, on mahogany tables and even on the floors.

At 6 a. m. determined steps were taken to arrest congressmen who stayed away from the all-night session to enjoy the comfort of their homes.

The titanic struggle over the speakership of the house of representatives, which reached its climax late yesterday in the destruction of the speaker's power in the committee on rules, yet leaving Cannon the speakership itself, may have marked not so much the ending of a three days' battle as the beginning of a great political war.

Cannon Claims Victory.

The recognition by all factions of this possibility was the principal feature today in the political situation in Washington.

Hardly anybody here thinks the condition of affairs after the momentous battle represents a satisfactory conclusion. The speaker and his friends appear to interpret the refusal of the house to depose him as justifying them in claiming to have wrested victory from defeat, indorsement from repudiation. Not a few of the insurgents who voted for Cannon's retention are wondering today if they made a political blunder; whether their anti-Cannon constituents will not indeed hold the retention of Cannon in the speakership to have nullified the vote to eliminate him from the rules committee.

Here is "Uncle Joe" Cannon's speech, in part of defiance, delivered from the Speaker's chair as a matter of personal privilege, immediately after he had announced the vote by which the Norris resolution, robbing him of control of the House, was adopted:

Gentlemen of the House of Representatives: Actions, not words, determine the conduct and the sincerity of men in the affairs of life. This is a Government by the people acting through the representatives of a majority of the people.

From time to time heretofore the majority has become the minority, as in the present case, and from time to time hereafter the majority will become the minority. The country believes that the Republican party has a majority of forty-four in the House of Representatives at this time, yet such is not the case.

Declines to Resign.

There are two courses open for the Speaker to pursue. One is to resign and permit the new combination of Democrats and insurgents to choose a Speaker in harmony with its aims and purposes. The other is for that combination to declare a vacancy in the office of Speaker and proceed to the election of a new Speaker. After consideration at this stage of the session of the House with much important legislation pending involving the pledges of the Republican platform and the crystallization into law, believing that his resignation might consume weeks of time in the reorganization of the House, the Speaker being in harmony with Republican policies and desirous of carrying them out, declines by his own motion to precipitate a contest upon the House in the election of a new Speaker, a contest that might greatly endanger the final passage of all legislation necessary to redeem Republican pledges and fulfill Republican promises.

Has No Apologies.

This is one reason why the Speaker does not resign at once, and another reason is this:

In the judgment of the present Speaker a resignation is in and of itself a confession of weakness or mistake or an apology for past actions. The Speaker is not conscious of having done any political wrong. The same rules are in force in the House that have been in force for two decades. The Speaker has construed the rules as he found them and as they have been construed by previous Speakers from Thomas B. Reed's incumbency down to the present time.

Do Your Duty, He Says.

There has been much talk by the present minority and the insurgents of the "czarism" of the Speaker, culminating in the action taken today. The real truth is that there is no cohesive Republican majority in the House of Representatives. Therefore the real majority ought to have the courage of its convictions and logically meet the situation that confronts it.

The Speaker has always said that under the Constitution it is a question of the highest privilege for an actual majority of the House at any time to choose a new Speaker and again notifies the House that the Speaker will at this moment or at any other time while he remains Speaker, entertain in conformity with the highest constitutional privilege a motion by any member to vacate the office of the Speakership and choose a new Speaker and, under existing conditions would welcome such action on the part of the actual majority of the House, so that power and responsibility may rest with the Democratic and insurgent members who, by the last vote, evidently constitute a majority of this House. The chair is now ready to entertain such a motion.

POLICE DOGS USES TO HUNT CRIMINALS

Are Taught to Consider Only a Uniform as a Friend—Can Track Down a Thief Quickly.

A report from Consul-General H. W. Diederich states that for some time the Antwerp police have been experimenting with dogs as assistants to the night-watch service in the isolated sections of the Antwerp docks, with the following results:

The experiments have proved negative, and at one time it was even proposed to give up the kennels altogether. The city police have seven dogs, known as the Belgian shepherd dog, which are trained to look upon men in uniform as their only friends, suspecting all others, and more particularly a man lying down. At night the seven dogs, all muzzled, are given to seven policemen, who conduct them by a strap, only letting them loose when wishing to pursue an evildoer, discovered red-handed. It is owing to the docks and basins being in thickly populated sections of the city and to the further fact that work on the vessels goes on throughout the night that the dogs have thus to be restrained in their movements and their usefulness thus reduced to a minimum. Furthermore, one policeman has to be detached from the night service for every dog, whereas were it possible to allow the animals to run free, one officer would be sufficient to patrol with two or even three dogs.

The result of the experiment has been that police dogs no matter how well trained, are of no practical use in thickly populated quarters, but their real value in such service has been shown in rural districts, where a night watchman, all alone and unaided, frequently has to patrol a territory covering miles of sparsely settled country. Such is the case at Ghent, where the same breed of dogs is used by the rural night watchmen to great advantage. There the animals are unmuzzled and unrestrained. The experience in training shows that, while dogs may be taught to be suspicious of every person not in uniform or of a man lying down or in a crouching position, it is impossible to make him distinguish between an honest man and a vagabond.

The dogs used may be purchased at prices ranging from $5 to $10, and their keep amounts to $1.35 per month. The Belgian shepherd dog is chosen for this service for his keen scent, for the faculty with which he is trained, and for the faithfulness to his master, which makes him practically a "one-friend dog" and an uncompromising foe to every other human being.

HALEIWA RACE.

BIG EVENT WILL BE RUN TOMORROW

MANY ENTRIES FOR ALL THE RACES

Seventeen Starters in Marathon—Thirty-Eight Cyclists Will Face Starter—Excursion Train Will Leave at Nine o'Clock.

Tomorrow morning at 7 o'clock the first bicycle race will start from the O. R. & L. Honolulu depot, and will finish at Haleiwa later on. The second batch of cyclists will also get away about the same time, and then at 7:30 the great long-distance running race to Waialua will be gotten under way.

The distance to Haleiwa is about thirty miles—not making any short cuts—and it is hardly correct to call it a Marathon. However, last year the title was given at a time when it was thought that the distance by road was close to twenty-six miles. But, no matter what the name of the race is, the fact remains that the event is Honolulu's annual affair, and that the greatest interest is taken in the Haleiwa "Marathon."

Seventeen runners will face the starter tomorrow morning, and they are the pick of the long-distance men of these Islands. Last year there were far more starters, but many fell by the wayside. This year all of the peds show promise of battling it out to the finish, and although Antone Kaoo is looked upon as a certain winner, there should be a great race all the way.

For the senior bicycle race, seventeen riders have also entered, and the race promises to be a fine one. Most of the best cyclists in the Territory have put down their names, and some very fast times are sure to be put up over the course.

There are more entries for the junior bicycle event than for the other two. Twenty-one boys will face the starter, and it will be interesting to see how the juniors compare with the seniors over the long journey.

The special train will leave the depot at 9 o'clock, and a big crowd of excursionists is expected to make the trip down to Haleiwa. The cost of the return ticket is $1.75, and that is very reasonable for a fine day's outing.

The ladies of Waialua have everything in readiness for the pot lunch, and the spread promises to go down to posterity as the best ever given on Oahu. Then Manager Clifford Kimball of Haleiwa Hotel has prepared to accommodate several hundred guests at lunch. A charge of $1 per head will be made for a regular sit-down lunch, and all the best things will be provided. Besides the luncheon there will also be a lunch counter in the billiard room, and sandwiches, baked beans, fruit, coffee or milk will be supplied at moderate cost.

As far as can be said at present, there is no doubt of the race coming off. The rain that has fallen in the city has not hurt the out-of-town roads any, and the reports from down the country are encouraging. Many autos have been engaged to follow the races, and motor cycles will be there by the score. Senator Chillingworth will take the press under his wing, and the scribes are sure of having a good time with Charlie in the machine.

The entries for all three races are as follows:

MARATHON.

Frank Enos, 1; Geo. Kaaea, 2; L. Rosa, 3; Nigel Jackson, 4; A. V. Ornellas, 5; David Martin, 6; M. Platta, 7; V. Gomes, 8; A. Martin, 9; Antone Kaoo, 10; T. K. Wahihako, 11; Dal Fahy, 12; Wilson Feagler, 13; Conny Hayes, 14; Joe Forrest, 15; Theo. Cabral, 16; H. M. Ayres, 17.

SENIOR BICYCLE.

DOTS AND DASHES.

The entertainments that are planned for the purpose of raising money for the fitting out of the yacht Hawaii are being well worked up, and there is no doubt that a large amount will be obtained from the shows.

The Asiatic baseball team got away on the Claudine last evening, and the boys certainly looked happy as the steamer pulled out. Whether they felt quite as cheerful crossing the channel is not known.

The Morning Stars of Wailuku have been practising hard for the series of games with the Honolulu team, and there should be a great struggle before the matter is decided.

The Princess Rink management is going to present a cup for a roller polo tournament, and it is to be hoped that the players get busy and start up soon.

The Country Club is going to do some strenuous stunts in the near future and a "Booster" day is planned to take place soon.

Every man has theories about raising a family—before he marries.

MUCH DOING.

PLENTY BASEBALL FOR TWO DAYS

TWO GAMES TODAY AND SAME TOMORROW

All Kinds of Sports on Tap for Saturday and Sunday — Rain May Spoil Many Events.

Sporting events for today and tomorrow are as thick as bees in a hive, and what with baseball, tug-of-war, wrestling, boxing, running and bicycle races, yachting, skating, etc., etc., things are all to the lovely. There is one fly in the ointment, however, and that is the rain that will persist in falling all the time. It may happen that everything will have to be abandoned at the last moment, but it is the earnest wish of everybody that nothing of the sort occurs.

This afternoon at the league grounds, the military series of ball games will start up, and although the Fort Shafters are reported to have dropped out of the games, their place will be taken by a nine from the Artillery. The gunners have some good ball players in their ranks, and it is possible that they will surprise the rest of the service teams before the end comes.

The N. G. H. team will go up against the Marines this afternoon, and as the new bunch of Barry's Beauts are far from invincible, a good game should eventuate. The Guards will have Bill Hampton in the box, and if the oldtime twirler is in good form the half-wits will wonder what they are up against.

If the Shafters change their minds—and everybody hopes so—they will have to slay the Fifth Cavalry nine, and as the Schofield men are in the pink of condition, a line on their chances of winning out in the series can be obtained.

On Sunday the baseball games scheduled to take place are the most interesting heard of for a long time. The Japanese Athletics and the Diamond Heads will hitch up, and it will be their second meeting. Eddie Fernandez is back from Maui, and he will resume his old position at first. Leslie will pitch, and Thomas catch, for the Jewels, and the team will be the same as that which played in the first game.

The second game, and the one that a lot of people are thinking of, is that between Barry's Beauts and the New Orleans team. That game is going to be the real thing in the way of excitement, and there is no telling in advance how it is going to end.

The warship nine will have their regular pitcher in the box, and that will make all the difference in the world to them. Williams will pitch for the Beauts, and that heady player Soares will catch. All the fans of the city will doubtless attend at the league grounds tomorrow, and a couple of stirring games are sure going to be seen.

FINE SPORT PROGRAM AT SKATING RINK

Two Boxing Bouts and Good Wrestling Match — Hackenschmidt-Gotch Film to Be Shown.

Tonight at the Princess Rink the much-talked-of wrestling match between Sailor Roberts and Dettmers will take place, and it goes without saying that a big crowd will be on hand to see the struggle. Both the huskies have trained hard for the match, and although Dettmers is said to be a wonderful man on the mat, there are plenty of followers of the game who pin their faith to Roberts.

The match will be for the best two out of three falls, and will be a catch-as-catch-can affair. Wrestling is a fine sport when properly conducted, and as the strangle hold has been barred for tonight's contest, the match should be devoid of any brutality.

Some idea of the way in which the world's champions wrestle will be obtained from the film of the Hackenschmidt-Gotch match, which will be shown at the rink tonight. The film is about half a mile long and is said to be a remarkably fine one.

Then two boxing bouts are to be pulled off, and the gentle pugs will exchange swats to the huge delight of the followers of the game. Sarconi and Schuman will start the ball rolling, and a willing bout it should be. The bugler is clever with the mitts and has a way of boring in and taking a chance that appeals to the crowd.

The second contest will be between Nelson and Miller, and another lively fight should eventuate. Nelson can fight some, but he has yet to go up against a first-class man. He has always done well in the contests he has had, and he is a square fighter right through.

The program at the rink is an attractive one, and the lovers of boxing and wrestling should have an enjoyable time tonight.

WHAT'S THIS?

MRS. SARA E. SCOTT

A well-known woman of Camden, N. J., U. S. A., writes an interesting letter praising Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey for relieving her husband and herself of serious stomach troubles.

"Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey has done me and my husband a great deal of good. At times when I could not eat or retain anything on my stomach a tablespoonful of Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey would give me strength and relieve me of that tired nervous feeling.

"My husband had stomach trouble and indigestion from childhood. It became so bad he had to quit work. He began taking Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey, a tablespoonful before meals and at bed time. He was soon able to go to work and eat a hearty meal.

Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey is palatable and agreeable to the most sensitive stomach. I certainly am a friend of yours for the benefits derived from your medicine and heartily recommend it to all."—Mrs. Sara E. Scott, 502 N. 5th Street, Camden, N. J., U. S. A.

THE KNOCKOUT.

MEDICAL EXPERT TELLS OF BLOWS

EVERYTHING IS CLEARLY EXPLAINED

Head Blows Are Not Dangerous—Punches to the Point and Solar Plexus Do the Trick Nine Times Out of Ten.

Just at present, while the world of fistiana is agog over the coming contest for the heavyweight championship of the world between Jeffries and Jack Johnson, the word "knockout" finds a place in nearly all pugilistic discussions. But few of those who use the word, and fewer of those who deliver the "knockout," know what physical phenomena cause the recipient of the punch to lose consciousness. The following article by Dr. Walter Peet explains exactly the cause and effect of the "knockout."

By Walter Peet, M. D.

The modern knockout blows.
To the chin.
To the stomach.
Under the ear.
To the heart.
To the kidney.

One of the peculiarities of the human mind is the ever-recurring question, "Why?" In the child, with its unconscious naivete, this interrogation is made frankly, with no shame at the revelation of ignorance, but with maturity comes the concealment of lack of knowledge which often leaves us in the dark as to almost obvious facts.

Indeed, it is the man who is constantly after the "why" that wins out in any pursuit.

Perhaps some of us have wondered why a Hercules can be struck a blow apparently not exceedingly sever, in a certain spot, which is so vulnerable that he will be seemingly lifeless when under the effect of what we call in our expressive parlance "a knock-out blow."

Years ago the only idea of the prize fighter was to wear his antagonist down. As Byron says:

"Twas blow for blow, disputing inch by inch,
For one would not retreat, nor t'other flinch."

Also, by beating on the head and hitting in the eye or on the nose he sought to win. Indeed, it was considered a great point to the good to be the first to draw blood, while as a matter of fact these blows in the great majority of cases do very little toward incapacitating a fighter who has plenty of courage and pluck.

Head Blows Not Dangerous.

Blows on the upper part of the head are not dangerous to a strong, husky man, where he is wide awake, alert, on the defensive and has a good backward spring. In many cases the scalp has often been cut open, with no further harm. This is because nature has provided the fragile brain with a wonderful protection in the make-up of the bones covering it. They consist of two tables, an outer and an inner. The outer one, as Gray, the anatomist says, "is thick and tough", to withstand injury, while interposed between the two is a network of bracing also formed of bone. And this has been imitated by man himself in many of his mechanical devices. The natural "give" backward of the head also saves a man who has been hit on the upper half of the face.

Today the leading fighters in their respective classes know the vulnerable points as well as any surgeon and know how to land the blows upon these points, even if they do not know the anatomical reasons for the disabilities that they cause and the process through which they are effected.

As we have said, they have studied the blows and by observation and, above all, by the experience of others, handed down from one fight to another, they know what points to try for the hardest.

Knockout Blows.

What are these points?

The knockout blows depended upon by the modern pugilist are: Those on the chin, to the stomach, under the ear, the heart, the kidney and sometimes the liver.

The first two are, par excellence, the most effective.

Taking the first blow, the sudden force applied to the chin is transmitted upward and backward through the lower jaw to its sockets, at the base of the skull, directly over which rests the delicate brain. The brain thus jarred suffers concussion.

Concussion of the brain has been given probably more study by Prof. W. W. Keen than by any other surgeon.

His researches, boiled down, show that concussion of the brain is in the simplest cases a mere jarring of it without serious permanent harm, and is readily recovered from.

The symptoms of the slighter form of this concussion are: momentary loss of consciousness, or giddiness, pale face, feeble pulse, mental confusion, sweating and vomiting. The signs of the more severe form are prolonged unconsciousness, feeble pulse, shallow breathing, cold surface and muscular relaxation. The man can be roused with difficulty, but responds angrily, and immediately relapses into a somnolent condition.

He lies curled up on his side, with eyes tightly closed, and he resents any effort at changing his posture. The pupils of the eyes are contracted.

It might be well to give here the first aid treatment recommended as the result of the latest studies. Primarily, rest and quietude must be insisted upon in all cases. Under no circumstances give alcohol (and by the way a drink of whiskey is the first thing a man thinks of in case of an injured person), for if there is hemorrnage into the brain tissue the alcohol will make it bleed the more.

How to Revive Victim.

Give a few drops of aromatic spirits of ammonia in water, surround the patient with hot water bottles, put a mustard plaster over the heart, and give hot coffee, using meanwhile cold applications to the head.

The injuries from a blow under the ear are almost identical, but to a lesser degree severe with those cited above.

Now we come to the second cardinal point in knocks and blows, that to the stomach, which affects the oft written of, but heretofore unexplained "solar plexus blow." "Plexus" means a network. The solar plexus consists of a great network of nerves which control the blood supply of everything in the abdominal cavity, and this means it all, inasmuch as the blood vessels of the abdomen can contain the whole amount of blood in the body.

When the proper punch flattens the stomach back this network of nerves is crushed against the bones and paralyzed. Thus the nerve supply of the tremendously large blood vessels is incapacitated, these blood vessels expand and all of the blood of the rest of the body rushes into these vessels of the abdomen, literally starving the heart and brain of blood and the man falls unconscious. Taking the blood from either the heart or the brain would "put a man out," but in this case it is doubly done.

Nine people out of ten think that the stomach is much lower than it really is.

Putting it roughly, this organ is slightly below the flexible lower portion of the sternum, or breast bone, which any person can feel for himself, and it is in the angle formed by the divergence of the forward ends of the ribs from each other. A blow if planted too high or too far to one side or the other of the median line, is checked by the breast bone or the ribs. It has to be placed to a nicety to get through these barriers of nature and reach the solar plexus.

Over the heart we have similarly a cardiac (heart) plexus of nerves governing blood vessel, and to a lesser degree has the same effect as a blow to the solar plexus, but the direct jar to the heart and to the nerves governing its muscular action is very damaging.

It must be remembered, however, that the heart is protected by the ribs.

Likewise we have the renal (kidney) plexus, which also governs in a still less area the blood supply.

This sport has come down to us from olden days.

It has endured throughout the years which have lapsed since the blood of our forefathers tingled over the news of a friendly bout, and now it has brought us to a time when challenges are ringing from coast to coast, when old friends meet again to discuss the near time day when two men shall meet, as Goldsmith said:

"Unaw'd by power and Unappall'd by fear."

Gaso'ine Gossip Gleaned at Garages

At the Associated Garage, Manager Seymour Hall is still looking pleased whenever the Hudson Twenty is mentioned. The "little beauty," as the car is sometimes called, did very good work on the 500 miles no-stop-engine run, and the consequence is that many sales have been made in the Territory.

The Jones electric auto horn is being introduced by the Associated Garage, and it is an instrument that will certainly do the trick as far as making people aware of the fact that an auto is approaching. The horn is attached to the steering wheel and it easily reached; it should catch on in Honolulu in great shape.

The Associated people are also handling the Switchell air gauge, which measures the amount of air in the tire, and as it is estimated that ninety per cent. of tire trouble is due to lack of inflation, most of the auto people of Honolulu are taking to the air gauge.

The Schuman Garage expects a number of new machines on the next boat from the Coast, and the prospects of getting sufficient cars to fill the orders already on hand appear to be a little brighter. The Schuman people handle a large number of machines in the course of the year, and all of the cars are sold to arrive. The supply can never keep up with the demand, and E. M. F., Locomobiles, Flanders, Villes and other makes are being sold all the time.

The Flanders is a cheap car that is highly thought of. It sells at a very low figure, and yet is as complete and well finihed as much more expensive machines.

The Locomobile machine is going strong in Honolulu, and the car is such a reliable one and runs so smoothly that it is considered to be one of the best in the Islands. Many prominent people have gone in for the Locomobile, and the car always gives satisfaction.

Manager Bodge of the von Hamm-Young Garage reports many sales during the week, but most of them as to arrive. The supply from the factories can not keep up with the local demand.

E. A. Mott-Smith has purchased a Cadillac demi-tonneau for use officially. The Cadillac is a great favorite with the heads of the various departments, and nearly everyone has one of them.

The Buick car is also a favorite, and a shipment of these machines is expected to arrive in the near future. Most of the cars have been sold to arrive, and the demand for them is still large. Half a dozen Overlands are also on the way, and the way these cars are going off surprises everybody.

A. A. Young is leaving for the Coast on the Manchuria, and he will take along his Stevens-Duryea with him. Mr. Young intends touring California in his own car and will be away for some time.

Henry May & Co. have purchased a Rapid auto truck from the von Hamm-Young Garage, and it will be used in their delivery service. John Scott, manager of the Hilo Sugar Co., has purchased a Cadillac, and Manager Wilcox of Koloa plantation has gone in for a Pope-Hartford car. On Hawaii, the Overland and a Cadillac have been sold by the Volcano Stables Co., which firm acts as agent for the two makes of machines.

Alvan Macauley has resigned as general manager of the Burroughs Adding Machine Company to become general manager of the Packard Motor Car Company of Detroit, succeeding S. D. Waldon, who has been elected vice-president of the Packard company. This addition to the administrative staff of the Packard company is the natural result of the steady and remarkable growth of that company, and the increased need of assistance for President H. B. Joy and Mr. Waldon in the conduct of the company's business.

The selection of Mr. Macauley to occupy this position is particularly fitting, owing to the fact that he has been instrumental in building up a business which is almost parallel to that of the Packard company in its growth during the last several years.

Mr. Macauley has been general manager of the Burroughs Adding Machine Company for eight and one-half years, and was one of the men associated with Joseph Boyer, directly responsible for bringing the Burroughs plant to Detroit. Under his management the Burroughs business multiplied six times in volume.

Mr. Macauley first obtained prominence in the commercial world as a patent attorney, practising in Washington. He gave up that practise to become associated with the National Cash Register Company, at Dayton, Ohio, which position he occupied for seven years.

The fortunate addition of Mr. Macauley strengthens the Packard company's administrative forces without in any way changing the exceptionally efficient organization which has been built up under the direction of President Joy, with the assistance of Mr. Waldon.

Consequently, Mr. Waldon's election to the vice-presidency of the company is an equally pleasing feature of the new arrangement in that the affairs of the company, which remaining under the same management, are benefited by the experience and ability of a man whose previous success as a business captain assures his success in his new role.

Cut your consumption of meat down to one steak a week. You have no idea how much more heartily you will enjoy it.—Washington Herald.

It was certainly a good messenger who brought the news to your house that Ayer's Sarsaparilla makes the blood "rich and red." This means so much to those who are thin, pale, feeble, weak, and nervous. After Ayer's Sarsaparilla has cured you, carry the glad message to a friend or neighbor.

Perhaps you suffer from the effects of a warm climate. Prolonged warm weather seriously impairs the strength of many people. The digestion is slow, and the liver becomes sluggish. Impurities in the blood accumulate and cause that feeling of downheartedness and depression.

is of the greatest use in such cases. Its purifying, strengthening, and up-building properties will be of inestimable value to you.

As now made, Ayer's Sarsaparilla contains no alcohol.

Woman Tells How She Won Home In a Popularity Voting Contest

Conducted Her Own Campaign

The people of Hawaii are interested in the outcome of the voting contest now being conducted by the Bulletin to select five women to tour California and Yosemite Park this summer. For this reason a story is printed below that tells how a St. Louis woman conceived and conducted a campaign that won a fine home. The story contains an inspiring sermon for the workers in the Bulletin contest for it shows what any woman, who is now entered in the Bulletin contest, can do, if she will direct her efforts as industriously and wisely.

By Stella Beatrice Pilkington.

The beautiful home that has come to me through the generosity of The Times and through the liberality of my friends who aided me will be my home. I am going to live in the house as a compliment to those without whose aid I might never have had a real home of my very own.

In our little family circle we have talked the matter all over. That was before I was by any means sure the prize which I coveted was to be mine. We discussed the house that was given Admiral Dewey when he returned triumphant from Manila, and how it struck his friends when he disposed of the home given to him by the American people.

I feel I owe it to the people who helped me so willingly to live in what I shall always consider their gift to me. If I did otherwise it would give rise for doubt as to the gratitude I feel.

And if any women was ever grateful to her friends for the encouragement, I am that woman. Without their aid and co-operation I could have done nothing, and I am glad of this opportunity to express my heartfelt thanks to them.

Never Has Seen Prize House.

I state unqualified that I am going to occupy the place as my future home. And yet, odd as it may seem, I have a picture of it, as published in The Times, and have read descriptions of it. Now that I know the house is my very own, I assuredly am going down and look at it very shortly and prepare to take possession of it as soon as the weather will permit our removal.

The contest had been on for possibly 10 days, perhaps longer, before the idea of my being a contestant dawned on me. Ever since the Times began its career I have been a daily reader of its columns, and it was one evening when I was on my way home from business that I chanced to read the plan as proposed.

Why not try for the capital prize myself? The idea of trying for any of the lesser prizes never entered my mind for a minute. It was the home that appealed to me. It was the home I wanted, and it is the home I now own. After I started I never wavered in my determination. Through storm and sunshine, early and late, I worked. During the early part of the contest the weather was very warm, and the exertion was trying. Frequently I was footsore and weary, and more than once I fell asleep in my chair at home after I had returned from work.

During the closing weeks of the contest the weather was excessively cold, the coldest I ever had experienced for any protracted period in this city. The raging storms and the biting winds only incited me to greater efforts. For I realized that my friends had responded most generously to my appeals, and it appeared that I would surely be successful. And now that it is all over, and I realize the great work I have accomplished I am more than satisfied, because of the splendid reward that has come to me.

When I decided to enter the contest I did not wait for some one to nominate me. I read the plan all over on may way home that night, and I began planning my campaign. Timidity nor false modesty had no place in my campaign. I wanted to be nominated. I nominated myself. I clipped out the coupon at home that night, filled it in the way I thought was right, and went down to The Times Building and received my first 1000 votes.

I planned to call on my friends and acquaintances for the help I knew I must have to win. Then, if there be such a thing as "the four hundred" among business men, I determined to get their help. My acquaintance among the best business men of St. Louis, gained in the eight years I have been a business woman and an insurance broker with the Charles L. Crane Agency Company stood me in good stead.

Visits Contest Manager.

I made a list of all such friends. I determined to call on each one. But first I called on the contest managers and had a talk with them. I learned all of the arrangements, just as they were published in The Times. I was so afraid that I might have misinterpreted some of the rules. But the rules were all plain, and I saw that all that was necessary to be the successful one was to work faithfully and persistently with the object ever in view.

I will never forget the first gentleman I called on and asked to give me a subscription for The Times. This was Mr. Charles H. Huttig, president of the Third National Bank. Mr. Huttig encouraged me greatly. Not merely because he gave me a liberal subscription, but because of the kind and cheering words he uttered. Then I went to see some of the others of my self-created "four hundred."

Practically all I got was subscriptions and encouragement. And the more than 14,000,000 votes that I received tells more eloquently than any words of mine how successful I was. Never at any place did I meet with a rebuff. Not only did I get personal encouragement, but I heard good words at every hand for the paper I was selling.

Early in the contest I learned that it was easier to have other people do the work for me, in a measure, than to attempt to do it all myself. That is, when I visited some of the larger establishments where a great many employes were working, I saw the one in authority and got him interested in my cause.

How She Conducted Campaign.

I would leave him my subscription book with blank receipts, signed by myself, and then he would return me the book when the work of canvassing the establishment was finished, and he would turn the book back to me with the money and the orders for the paper. In this way I obtained results that I could not have obtained in any other way.

I found out early in the canvass that The Times was popular with the employers, and they were eager for their employes to read it. I know in a great many instances where large employers made presents of subscriptions to those in their employ, and of course all of this was to my profit.

My husband tried to dissuade me from entering the contest but eventually admitted the wisdom of my doing so. He was an invalid and could do nothing to help me, but for that reason, more than any other, I determined to get that fine home. And now today that I have done so I want to thank all who helped me.

A Start an Aid.

Friends by one or two subscription coupons can place many of the candidates in a position that will invigorate the good wishes of other friends who are slower to act. A few thousand votes placed now will be much more appreciated by the contestant than a few weeks later. If your friend seems unable to get started sufficiently to bring support from a host of other friends of whom you know, why not act at once?

Special Notice.

Subscribers sending in subscriptions to the Bulletin must always mention the names of the contestants they wish to vote for, as all ballots are filled out in full before leaving office. You can hold back the ballots as long as you wish.

Every subscription payment made on or since March 7 entitles the payer to votes. Present receipts and votes will be issued. You vote for two candidates—a trip and a chaperone contestant. An equal number of votes, as given in the standing vote schedule, are issued for each contestant.

Tri-weekly counts are being made on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday. The results of these counts are published on Monday, Wednesday and Friday. Ballots intended for these counts should be in the Bulletin office by 4 o'clock of the day the count is made.

How Votes Are Issued.

Each copy of the Bulletin will contain a coupon, which, when properly filled out, will entitle the holder to votes of the number specified. This number will vary from day to day. No advance announcement of the number of votes will be given. Votes will also be issued on paid subscriptions to the Evening and Weekly Bulletin in proportion to the length of time such subscriptions are paid in accordance with the schedule appearing below.

Nominations Not Closed.

There seems to be an impression that nominations are closed forevermore, so far as this contest is concerned. The nominations are not closed, and will not be until the end of the contest. You could, if you wish, nominate a candidate on the last day of the contest.

DARRACH RECITALS.

Shakespeare's classical farce, "The Comedy of Errors," will be the vehicle with which Marshall Darrach will open his supplementary course of recitals at the Alexander Young Hotel on Thursday next. In compliance with the request of a number of his patrons, he will add at the conclusion of the comedy three lyrics of his own composition—"A Canoe Song," "Honey Sweet" and "Nellie's Funny Way."

On Monday, April 11, he will make his last appearance in Honolulu in Shakespeare's great tragedy of ambition, "Macbeth."

In the rendition of these two plays, as great a contrast is promised as was evidenced in the course given last week. From the twists and double tangles of "The Comedy of Errors" and the rollicking wit and gaiety of the two Dromios, to the sublimity of the major scenes of the great Scotch tragedy, the scope is wide enough to tax the powers of even so great an artist as Marshall Darrach, but that he will be equal to the task seems likely, if one may judge him by his past performances here.

On April 12 Mr. Darrach will go to Kauai as the guest of Mrs. Isenberg to give two recitals—"Julius Caesar" and "The Tempest"—returning in time to sail on the Siberia on April 18 for a tour of the Orient.

A DAINTY TOILET ARTICLE.

Every lady who desires to keep up her attractive appearance, while at the Theater, attending Receptions, when shopping, while traveling and on all occasions should carry in her purse a booklet of Gourand's Oriental Beauty Leaves. This is a dainty little booklet of exquisitely perfumed powdered leaves which are easily removed and applied to the skin. It is invaluable when the face becomes moist and flushed and is far superior to a powder puff, as it does not spill and soil the clothes.

It removes dirt, soot and grease from the face, imparting a cool, delicate bloom to the complexion. Sent anywhere on receipt of Five Cents in stamps or coin.

Society

BY FAR the most important event of the week, socially, was the wedding of Miss Irmgard Schaefer to Robert Elgin, which took place on Easter Monday at St. Andrew's Cathedral. These nuptials were performed in the evening by Bishop Henry Bond Restarick, the impressive marriage service of the Episcopal church being used to make this charming couple man and wife. Promptly at half after eight, a mixed choir of strong male voices and sweet and sympathetic women's voices was heard in the distance above the peal of the organ. This full, surpliced choir entered from the rear of the church, and came slowly down the center aisle, followed by the Bishop. On reaching their places Lohengrin's wedding march was played; the four ushers, Mr. Edward Watson, Mr. Robert Stackable Major Samuel Wadhams, U. S. A., and Mr. Robert Bond, came down the aisle followed by the two stunning bridesmaids,—Miss R. Ruth Young and Miss Paty of this city. Miss Young wore an imported French gown of crepe chiffon over yellow satin. The dress was made entirely by hand and heavily embroidered and trimmed with quantities of real lace. Miss Paty was clad in a maize chiffon over satin, trimmed in rose point lace. Maline in the new turban effect was worn in the hair; they carried shower bouquets of yellow roses. Mrs. Wadhams, wife of Major Wadhams, U. S. A., acted as matron of honor. This young matron was effectively gowned also in maize chiffon over yellow satin, made in the new stole effect. A spray bouquet of roses completed the costume. Following the matron of honor came the bride leaning on the arm of her father. The bride looked regal in her wedding robe of white hand embroidered crepe meteor. This gown was made tunic effect with an underdress of real lace. A bridal bouquet of bride's roses was carried. The wedding veil was caught back with real orange blossoms. This young girl is an island girl, and is not only a great social favorite but has endeared herself to the community by her many works of philanthrophy and charitable undertakings. Miss Schafer was the eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Schafer, the Italian consul. She is very gifted, possessing a beautiful contralto voice of rare quality and will be greatly missed in the choir of St. Andrew's. The groom and his best man, Mr. William Williamson, met the bridal party at the chancel rail, where the marriage was solemnized in a floral setting of Easter lilies, white roses and marguerites combined with delicate ferns and greenery. In the vicinity of the altar rare palms had been placed, some of them over fifteen feet in height. This background of green enhanced the chaste decoration of Easter lilies which were massed around the altar, intermingled with rare maidenhair fern. Overhead, baskets of white orchids and rare ferns were suspended making a beautiful setting for the bridal party, and producing a seemingly woodland bower of white and green. The chancel rail was banked with white marguerites, fringed with maidenhair fern, choice baskets of white roses were placed on the pulpit, and the reading desk, bow knots and streamers, interspersed with smilax, connected these baskets, producing a much desired effect, and novelty of decoration. After the happy couple signed their names in the church register, the wedding party left the church to the joyous strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march, and motored to Rosebank, the beautiful home of the Schaefers in Nuuanu Valley. Mr. and Mrs. Elgin, assisted by Italian Consul Schaefer and Mrs. Schaefer, received the large company of guests, assembled to offer their congratulations to the bride and bridegroom. The mother of the bride was gowned in a superb frock of black-beaded chiffon over rose pink satin, with diamond ornaments. The home of the Schaefers was almost too beautiful on this occasion to describe. It is considered one of the handsomest and most artistic homes in Honolulu, unadorned but with its adornment of lilies, palms, potted plants and smilax one could well imagine they had been transported to fairyland. The young couple received the good wishes of their many friends in the makai bow window of the drawingroom. The side of this large enclosure was hidden by palm leaves and lilies, while overhead was formed an arch of lilies and orchids. Tall cut glass vases containing these long-stemmed lilies were effectively placed around the room. The inside room and library were decorated in American Beauty roses and Australian maidenhair. During the evening a Hawaiian orchestra played behind a screen of white roses and orchids. The bride cut the wedding cake, which contained a ring, thimble and a penny. Later in the evening the bride threw her bridal bouquet, which was caught by one of the young debutantes of Honolulu. This not only makes a pretty souvenir for the young lady, but according to the old legend, she will be married within the year. Mr. and Mrs. Elgin left for their new home Tuesday on the Mauna Kea, amidst a shower of rice and flowers. This popular young couple have the aloha of the community, but the departure of Mrs. Elgin has made a void in Honolulu that will be hard to fill.

Among those present at the Schaefer wedding were:

From Paris.

Mrs. Heinrich Renjes nee Coney, arrived on the Korea, accompanied by her daughter, and will visit her mother, Mrs. Coney, and a number of friends, who are delighted to welcome the charming Mrs. Renjes to her old home. Many plans are made to entertain her, and her lovely daughter in the spirit and manner to which she was accustomed in the days that are gone.

Mrs. Renjes' home is in Germany. Before coming to the United States, some time was spent in traveling, and naturally a stop in Paris was in order, where the ladies indulged in spending a part of their time in the purchase of beautiful gowns, hats, and other adornments so dear to the feminine heart. It is needless to say that they are the admiration of all who have seen the costumes, which bear witness that they are of Parisian creation.

This young and attractive young matron met the officer who was commanding the United States Marines at Mare Island, and willingly renounced a fortune to become the bride of this gallant officer. Both Mrs. Cook and Colonel Karmany are well known in Honolulu social circles.

Irwin, she will leave almost immediately for another visit in the southern part of the state with Miss Julia Langhorne and the Misses Newhall. The congenial group of girls will enjoy an outing at the Newhall ranch, but will not remain for an extended stay, since they are to pose in the tableaux vivantes to be given at the St. Francis early in April.—S. The news that Major Sanford H. Wadhams, who has been on duty at Fort Shafter for the past two years, has been ordered to Fort Slocum, New York, will cause regret to the many friends and admirers of the Major and his lovely wife, who have been such an acquisition to social life in Honolulu.

Lord Kitchener failed to materialize on Wednesday, when the Maruna arrived at the wharf, and the disappointment was keen, when the British Consul R. G. S. Forster was on the landing to officially welcome this hero of Indian and South Africa. The change in the itinerary the general, was the cause of overthrowing many plans for his entertainment by his country men in Honolulu, while the steamer was in port.

Mr. and Mrs. McMurry of Chicago, departed on the Siberia March twenty-sixth after a delightful sojourn at the Moana Hotel. This charming couple made a number of friends while here, and became very popular, and were the recipients of many delightful dinners given in their honor, which was fully reciprocated by them.

Beer In the Home

Your home will be healthier when you make free use of a good beer.

The sturdiest peoples of the earth drink beer---drink it from childhood to age.

The early history of our country proves the benefit of drinking beer, for the men who guided the young nation through the trials and perils of war and internal dissensions were men who not only drank beer but personally interested themselves in the brewing. Knowing the value of beer as a food for mind and body they encouraged its use by those about them.

The proper drinking of beer---not the abuse of it---is good for the weak and the well.

Be sure to order for your home.

Lewis' To Travel.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Lewis are contemplating a visit to Australia in the near future, and it is quite probable that they will sail in May. Mr. Lewis has severed his connection with mercantile life, in which he was engaged for many years, making a success and now that his business is closed, he expects to avail himself of the opportunity for absolute rest from business cares, and with his attractive wife, and young son, travel over parts of the world which he has not been able to visit upon former trips aboard. Mr. and Mrs. Lewis' friends here are legion, and their absence in the social world will be a great loss.

Burdettes Depart.

Doctor and Mrs. Robert Burdette, were departing passengers on the Korea, March 28th, for the Orient, after spending several months in Honolulu, where they were most graciously welcomed and entertained, and where they in turn delighted the people with oratory and the happy manner in which they responded to the oft repeated demands for this treat. Their departure was much regretted and it is the universal wish that these charming people may return to their home fully restored to health.

Going Away.

Pursuant to an order from the Navy Department, Sergeant Langhorne has been detached from duty at the Honolulu station, and with his wife will leave shortly for Washington, for assignment to a new station. Surgeon and Mrs. Langhorne have endeared themselves during their two years' residence here, to a large circle of friends, who welcomed them to all social functions, and much regret is expressed over their early departure.

Mrs. J. F. C. Hagens' Tea.

Mrs. J. F. C. Hagens entertained Wednesday at the Country Club in honor of Mrs. Carl Pluger and the Misses Pluger. The hours were from 3:30 to 5:30. The Country Club, which is ideal for entertaining, never presented a more attractive appearance in its gala dress of poinsettias and carnations. Mrs. Hagens and her guests of honor received in the large living room. A Hawaiian Quintet Club was screened by gigantic palms and rendered beautiful Hawaiian music during the afternoon. Mrs. Hagens looked stunning in white lace with large picture hat. Mrs. Pluger was clad in a grey foulard with a picture hat, surmounted by a bird of paradise. The Misses Pluger looked dainty and girlish in white, with shower hats. Refreshments were served at small tables, which were adorned with pale pink carnations. Among the guests noticed were: Mesdames Dowsett, Tenney, W. Frear, P. Frear, V. Makee, Ramond, A. Macfarlane, Berger, F. Macfarlane, McIntyre, McInerny, Dougherty, Hornberger, Rhodes, Richardson, McStocker, Dunning, Magoon, Miss Magoon, Mrs. Saunders, Mrs. J. Morton Riggs, A. J. Campbell, Herbert, M. Phillips, Meirer, and others.

About three hundred invitations have been issued.

Mrs. Mannie Phillips' Luncheon.

Violets ornamented the table of the beautifully appointed luncheon that Mrs. Mannie Phillips gave in honor of her sister, Mrs. Myer and Miss Coffee, the niece of Mrs. Gartenberg of this city. Covers were laid for ten. At each place were found exquisitely hand-painted cards ornamented with violets. After luncheon the guests played bridge. Mrs. Phillips' guests, beside the two guests of honor, were: Mrs. Frank Richardson, Mrs. Gartenberg, Mrs. Lansing, Mrs. Grossman, Mrs. McClellan and Mrs. McStocker.

Mrs. Arthur Berg's Luncheon.

Thursday afternoon, Mrs. Arthur Berg entertained at luncheon in honor of Mrs. Sullivan, who is the house guest of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Young at their Waikiki home. The table presented a most attractive appearance in its adornment of white marguerites and maidenhair fern. The place cards were decorated with marguerites. Those present were Mrs. Berg, Mrs. Archibald Young, Mrs. Sullivan, Miss Mae Damon, Mrs. Charles Wilder, Mrs. von Hamm, Miss Young and Miss Josephone Soper.

Mrs. Day Returns.

Mrs. Frank R. Day returned on the Korea, Monday, and is at present the guest of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Gilman. The return of this talented and popular lady has given her friends in Honolulu—who are numberless, the greatest pleasure, as her absence left a void, which only her presence could fill. The fact that she is arraning for a cottage at Waikiki, gives additional pleasure and assures her friends that her stay here may be prolonged indefinitely.

Mrs. Samuel Wilder's Luncheon.

Mrs. Samuel Wilder entertained at luncheon Wednesday in honor of Mrs. Francis M. Swanzy at her home in Nuuanu Valley. Violets were used effectively as a decoration, covers were laid for fourteen and the place cards were extremely artistic, and were tied with violet satin ribbon. Rees, Mrs. Charles Wight, Mrs. George Potter, Mrs. George Rodiek, Mrs. Herman Focke, Mrs. Arthur Brown, Mrs. E. Faxon Bishop, Mrs. George Davies, Mrs. Samuel Dunning, Mrs. Charles Cooper and Mrs. J. S. Walker.

Mr. and Mrs. Peeples of Seattle Washington, and their lovely little daughter Beatrice, sailed for their home port on March thirtieth, after a few months' sojourn in Honolulu, and were guests of the Moana Hotel. Mr Peeples had heard of the fine roads of Honolulu is so justly proud, and had his Pearce Arrow touring car shipped here, and spent a large portion of his time in the enjoyment of automobiling. Mr. and Mrs. Peeples were reluctant to leave Honolulu, of which they grew so fond and another season may find them here. The influx and exodus of the visitors to Honolulu seems to be holding its own—making it possible for each arriving steamer, with its compliment of tourists, to be accommodated by the departure of the next steamer, with no conjestion in hotel, or steamer to fear. It is a well known fact, that the hotels of this city are ample, and able to fill the needs of all new comers, and the leading hotels are making provision for future need, as the new annex to the Moana Hotel is commodious and even in its unfinished state, attractive. There will be no fear of crowding the visitor.

Walter Dillingham's arrival from Honolulu yesterday was noted with interest by society here, and with its cordial greetings to the popular young clubman were mingled congratulations on his confirmation of the report of his engagement to Miss Louise Gaylord of Chicago. This interesting fact was coupled with the announcement that he is now en route to Italy, where the wedding will take place on May 2. Miss Gaylord is the daughter of Mrs. Charles Adams of Kenilworth, Ill. She and Mr. Dillingham met some months ago at Honolulu in the course of her trip around the world, which terminates at Villa Pietra, the home of her aunt, Mrs. Arthur Acton, in Florence, where the culmination of the romance will be perfected. Mr. Dillingham is an alumnus of Harvard, and much of his time has been spent since his graduation in his Honolulu home. —S. F. Chronicle.

The most fashionable audiences of the season gathered on Tuesday night, and again on Thursday night at the Alexander Young Hotel to hear the Shakespeare Reciter, Marshall Darrach of New York, in two recitals of Shakespare's plays. On Tuesday evening he offered for his program the poetical comedy "A Midsummer Night's Dream," and on Tuesday the immortal tragedy, "Hamlet." So enthusiastic was his reception in these widely diverse plays that a supplementary course has been demanded.

Arrangements are complete for the presentation of "The Comedy of Errors" and selections from his own writings on Thursday, and "Macbeth" on Monday in the same hall.

Honors are falling thick and fast upon our former President Theodore Roosevelt. The German Emperor William, is preparing to entertain him as a royal guest—giving him all the privileges of such. He will be the Emperor's guest for three days, and in that time Roosevelt will take precedence in all entertainments and be a greater personage than any of the Princes who may be present at the court., and while it is something unprecedented in the world's history, it is evident that the powers that be recognize the leaders of our great country, and delight in doing them honor.

Mrs. Clifford Kimball filled the heart of her young son with joy by giving him a birthday party on Easter Monday at the residence of his grand-parents, Mr. and Mrs. Tom King. About fifty little folk responded to the invitation and a merry afternoon was spent on the beautiful lawn hunting for the colored eggs which rewarded the happy children as they kept up their search until the last egg was found.

Mr. and Mrs. Brainard Smith and their little daughter, Dorothy, left on the Siberia, March twenty-sixth, for an extended visit East, which will include a trip up the beautiful St. Lawrence river, and all the beautiful places enroute. Mr. Smith is going for a complete rest, and relaxation from business. The many friends of Mr. and Mrs. Smith wish them a delightful trip and returning health.

Preparations for the entertainment of His Imperial Highness Prince Tsai-T'Ao, brother of the Prince Regent of China, are in progress, and he will receive the honor due him from his subjects in Honolulu as he passes through en route to San Francisco, about April sixteenth. The Prince's motive for visiting the United States is to become conversant with the American military system. He will be accompanied by a large retinue of attaches and servants.

Reverend Bliss of St. Andrew's Cathedral, sailed Wednesday, March 30th, on the Marama, for Vancouver, for a much needed vacation, and will remain for several months, visiting cities in the Northwest.

Mr. Frank Unger, a prominent Californian, was an arrival on the Korea, Monday, and will be the guest of Colonel Sam Parker, and other Honolulu friends, remaining a month or six weeks.

The Maitai has outlived her usefulness notwithstanding the new name given her, and the "Weary Mary," as she has been facetiously called, will take a final rest, and to the traveling public a finer and better steamer will be given, which has been a long felt want, especially as the travel to the Northwest is growing in favor, and is a convenience for tourists who hail from the "Sound Cities"—for the winter visitors from Seattle, Tacoma and other places have been increasing and their mode of transit should be given consideration.

Ordinance No. 18.

AN ORDINANCE ESTABLISHING FIRE LIMITS FOR THE CITY AND COUNTY OF HONOLULU, AND REGULATING THE ERECTION AND ALTERATION OF BUILDINGS AND OTHER STRUCTURES WITHIN SUCH LIMITS.

BE IT ORDAINED BY THE PEOPLE OF THE CITY AND COUNTY OF HONOLULU:

Section 1. The Board of Supervisors of the City and County of Honolulu shall appoint a suitable person as Building Inspector of the City and County of Honolulu, whose salary shall be fixed by said Board. Such Building Inspector shall have all of the powers and shall perform all of the duties hereinafter provided, and shall have such other powers and perform such other duties as may hereafter be designated by the Board of Supervisors.

Section 2. That part of the City and County of Honolulu which is bounded and described as follows, to wit: Beginning at a point in the makai line of Ala Moana Road 100 feet distant southeasterly at right angles to the extension of the southeast line of Richards street and running thence: northeasterly parallel with and 100 feet distant from the southeast line of Richards street to the mauka line of Beretania avenue; thence at right angles to the mauka line of Beretania avenue 100 feet; thence northwesterly parallel with and 100 feet distant from the mauka line of Beretania avenue to the north line of River street; thence at right angles to the north line of River street 100 feet; thence westerly parallel with and 100 feet distant from the north line of River street to a point on the harbor front; thence along the harbor front to the place of beginning, and including all the land now or hereafter to be reclaimed therein, shall be known as the fire limits of the City and County of Honolulu.

Section 3. Every building or other structure hereafter built within the fire limits of the City and County of Honolulu as above set out shall have the external walls thereof constructed of brick, stone, concrete, or other approved fire proof material. The interior of such buildings or structures shall be ceiled with fire proof material or lathed and plastered; provided, however, that overhead ceilings may be made of tongued and grooved Northwest lumber. The external walls of any such building or structure shall not be covered with corrugated iron roofing sheet iron or tin. All buildings and structures hereafter erected within said fire limits shall be subject to the inspection and approval, as to location, plans, architecture, materials and construction from design to finish, of said Building Inspector and the Chief Engineer of the Fire Department of the City and County of Honolulu, and no person shall erect any building or structure within said fire limits without permission in writing from said Building Inspector and Chief Engineer of the Fire Department. It shall be the duty of said Building Inspector and said Chief Engineer of the Fire Department to inspect all buildings and structures hereafter built within said fire limits, and to see that the permits granted by them are complied with according to the provisions of this Ordinance.

Section 4. No wooden building or structure heretofore erected within said fire limits shall be altered, repaired or changed without permission in writing, signed by said Building Inspector and said Chief Engineer of the Fire Department, which permit shall only be granted upon an application in writing accompanied by particulars sufficient to indicate the nature and extent of the alterations, repairs and changes contemplated, and no such permission shall be granted when such alteration, repair or change amounts to a renewal of one-third or more of the original structure. Such permission shall become null and void unless the work for which it is issued is begun within ten days and completed within ninety days after the date of said permission.

Section 5. All openings in party side or rear walls of any buildings or other structures within said fire limits must be protected by iron or tin-covered shutters, to be approved by said Building Inspector and Chief Engineer of the Fire Department; and all party, side and rear walls of any building or structure, fifteen feet or more in height, shall be built up and extend at least twenty-four inches above every point where the roof meets the wall, and such wall shall be not less than twelve inches in thickness. Detached buildings, having a frontage on all sides, and constructed with the exterior entirely of fire proof materials, need have no wall above the roof line, but the walls shall extend up behind the cornice to the planking of the roof.

Section 6. Any person violating any of the provisions of this Ordinance shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be punished by a fine of not more than Five Hundred Dollars ($500.00), or by imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months, or by both such fine and imprisonment.

Section 7. This Ordinance shall take effect fifteen days from and after the date of its approval.

The Riverman

surface area of the river is increasing, thus tending to separate the logs. On the other hand, falling water, tending to crowd the drive closer together, is especially prolific of trouble. Therefore, on flood water the watchers scattered along the stretches of the river had little to do—save strand Heinzman's logs for him.

Up to a certain point this was all very well. Orde took pains not to countenance it officially and caused word to be passed about that, while he did not expect his men to help drive Heinzman's logs, they must not go out of their way to strand them.

"If things get too bad, he'll have spies down here to collect evidence on us," said Orde, "and he'll jug some of us for interference with his property. We don't own the river."

Inside of two weeks Orde had the great satisfaction of learning that Heinzman was working—and working hard—a crew of fifty men.

"A pretty fair crew, even if he was taking out his whole drive," commented Orde.

The gods of luck seemed to be with the new enterprise. The water held out to carry the last stick of timber over the shallowest rapids. Weather conditions were phenomenal—and perfect. All up and down the river the work went with vim and dash.

After this happy fashion the drive went until at last it entered the broad, deep and navigable stretches of the river from Redding to the lake. Here, barring the accident of an extraordinary flood, the troubles were over. On the broad, placid bosom of the stream the logs would float. As Orde sat in his buckboard, ready to go into town for a first glimpse of Carroll in more than two months, he gazed with an immense satisfaction over the broad river moving brown and glacierlike, as though the logs that covered it were viscid and composed all its substance. The enterprise was practically assured of success.

For awhile now Orde was to have a breathing spell. A large number of men were here laid off. The remainder, under the direction of Jim Denning, would require little or no actual supervision. Until the jam should have reached the distributing booms above Monrovia the affair was very simple. Before he left, however, he called Denning to him.

"Jim," said he, "I'll be down to see you through the sluiceways at Redding, of course. But now that you have a good, still stretch of river I want you to include in our drive all the Heinzman logs from above you possibly can. If you can fix it, let their drive drift down into ours."

"Then we'll have to drive their logs for them," objected Denning.

"Sure," rejoined Orde, "but it's easy driving, and if that crew of his hasn't much to do perhaps he'll lay most of them off here at Redding."

Denning looked at his principal for a moment, then a slow grin overspread his face. Without comment he turned back to camp, and Orde took up his reins.

* * * * * * *

"Oh, I'm so glad to get you back!" cried Carroll over and over again as she clung to him. "I don't live while you're away. And every drop of rain that patters on the roof chills my heart, because I think of it as chilling you. Dear heart, don't leave me again."

She shook her head at him slowly, a mysterious smile on her lips. Without explaining her thought she slipped from his knee and glided across to the tall golden harp, which had been brought from Monrovia. The light and diaphanous silk of her loose peignoir floated about her, defining the maturing grace of her figure. Abruptly she struck a great crashing chord.

Then, with an abandon of ecstasy, she plunged into one of those wild and sea blown, saga-like rhapsodies of the

"Oh, it's you, you, you!" she cried.

Hungarians, full of the wind in rigging, the storm in the pines, of shrieking, vast forces hurtling unchained through a resounding and infinite space.

"What is that?" gasped Orde.

She ran to him.

"Oh, it's you, you, you!" she cried.

He held her closely. "Do you think it is good to get quite so nervous, sweetheart?" he asked gently then. "Remember"—

"Oh, I do! I do!" she broke in earnestly. "Every moment of my waking and sleeping hours I remember him. Always I keep his little soul before me as a light on a shrine. But tonight—oh, tonight, I could laugh and shout aloud like the people in the Bible, with clapping of hands!" She snuggled herself close to Orde with a little murmur of happiness. "I think of all the beautiful things," she whispered, "and of the noble things and of the great things. He is going to be sturdy, like his father—a wonderful boy, a boy all of fire"—

"Like his mother," said Orde.

She smiled up at him. "I want him just like you, dear," she pleaded.

Chapter 25

THREE days later the jam of the drive reached the dam at Redding. After the rear had dropped down river from Redding Carroll and Orde returned to their deserted little box of a house at Monrovia.

Orde breathed deep of a new satisfaction in walking again the streets of this little sandy, sawdust paved, shantyfied town, with its yellow hills and its wide blue river and its glimpse of the lake far in the offing.

"Hanged if I know what's struck me," he mused. "Never experienced any remarkable joy before in getting back to this sort of truck."

Then, with a warm glow at the heart, the realization was brought to him. This was home, and over yonder under the shadow of the heaven pointing spire a slip of a girl was waiting for him.

The rest of the week Orde was absent up the river, superintending in a general way the latter progress of the drive.

At the booms everything was in readiness to receive the jam. The long swim arm slanting across the river channel was attached to its winch, which would operate it. When shut it would close the main channel and shunt into the booms the logs floating in the river. There, penned at last by the piles driven in a row and held together at the top by bolted timbers, they would lie quiet. Men armed with pike poles would then take up the work of distribution according to the brands stamped on the ends. Each brand had its own separate "sorting pens," the lower end leading again into the open river. From these each owner's property was rafted and towed to his private booms at his mill below.

Orde spent the day before the jam appeared in constructing what he called a "boomerang."

"Secret invention just yet," he explained to Newmark. "I'm going to hold up the drive in the main river until we have things bunched; then I'm going to throw a big crew down here by the swing. Heinzman anticipates, of course, that I'll run the entire drive into the booms and do all my sorting there. Naturally if I turn his logs loose into the river as fast as I run across them he will be able to pick them up one at a time, for he'll only get them occasionally. If I keep them until everything else is sorted only Heinzman's logs will remain, and as we have no right to hold logs we'll have to turn them loose through the lower sorting booms, where he can be ready to raft them. In that way he gets them all right without paying us a cent. See?"

"Yes, I see," said Newmark.

"Well," said Orde, with a laugh, "here is where I fool him. I'm going to rush the drive into the booms all at once, but I'm going to sort out Heinzman's logs at these openings near the entrance and turn them into the main channel."

"What good will that do?" asked Newmark skeptically. "He gets them sorted just the same, doesn't he?"

"The current's fairly strong," Orde pointed out, "and the river's almighty wide. When you spring seven or eight million feet on a man all at once and unexpected and he with no crew to handle them, he's going to keep almighty busy. And if he don't stop them this side his mill he'll have to raft and tow them back, and if he doesn't stop 'em this side the lake he may as well kiss them all goodby."

The boomerang worked like a charm. Orde, in personal charge, watched that through the different openings in his boomerang the "H" logs were shunted into the river. Shortly the channel was full of logs floating merrily away.

"I've got to go down and see how the Dutchman is making it," announced Orde.

He drove to Heinzman's mill. There he found evidences of the wildest excitement. Boats plied in all directions. A tug darted back and forth. Constantly the number of floating logs augmented, however. Many had already gone by.

"If you think you're busy now," said Orde to himself, with a chuckle, "just wait until you begin to get logs. What's he doing with that tug?" thought he. "Oh, ho! He's stringing booms across the river to hold the whole outfit."

He laughed aloud and drove frantically back to the booms.

"He's shut down his mill," shouted Orde, "and he's got all that gang of highbankers out and every old rum blossom in Monrovia, and I bet if you say 'logs' to him he'd chase his tail in circles. I'm going to take Marsh and the Sprite and go to town. Old Heinzman," he added as an afterthought, "is stringing booms across the river—obstructing navigation."

"Marsh," he called, "got up steam?"

There appeared a short, square man, eyes blue as the sky.

"Up in two minutes," he answered. "Harvey, fire her up!"

Captain Marsh guided his energetic charge among the logs floating in the stream with the marvelous second instinct of the expert tugboat man. Orde noted with satisfaction that many of the logs had found lodgment among the reeds and in the bayous and inlets. One at a time, and painfully, these would have to be salvaged.

Shortly Orde, standing by the wheel in the pilothouse, could see down the stretches of the river a crowd of men working, antlike.

"They've got em stopped," commented Orde. "Look at that gang working from boats!"

"What do you want me to do?" asked Captain Marsh.

"This is a navigable river, isn't it?" replied Orde. "Run through!"

The tug headed straight for the slender line of booms stretching quite across the river.

Orde looked at his watch.

"We'll be late for the mail unless we hurry," said he.

Marsh rang the engine room bell. The water churned white behind.

"Vat you do? Stop!" cried Heinzman from a boat.

"You're obstructing navigation!" yelled Orde. "I've got to go to town to buy a postage stamp."

The prow of the tug, accurately aimed by Marsh, hit square in the junction of two of the booms. There ensued a moment of strain; then the links snapped, and the Sprite plunged joyously through the opening. The booms, swept aside by the current, floated to either shore. The river was open.

"Slow down, Marsh," said Orde. "Let's see the show."

Up river all the small boats gathered in a line, connected one to the other by a rope. The tug passed over to them the cable attached to the boom. Evidently the combined efforts of the rowboats were counted on to hold the half boom across the current while the tug brought out the other half. When the tug dropped the cable Orde laughed.

"Nobody but a Dutchman would have thought of that!" he cried. "Now for the fun!"

Immediately the weight fell on the small boats they were dragged irresistibly backward. Marsh lowered his telescope, the tears of laughter streaming down his face.

"They'll have to have two tugs before they can close the break that way," commented Orde.

"Sure thing," replied Captain Marsh.

But at that moment a black smoke rolled up over the marshes, and shortly around the bend from above came the Lucy Belle.

The Lucy Belle was the main excuse for calling the river navigable. In appearance she was two storied, with twin smokestacks, an iron Indian on her top and a "splutter behind" paddle wheel.

"There comes his help," said Orde.

Sure enough, the Lucy Belle stopped. After a short conference she steamed clumsily over to get hold of one end of the booms. The tug took the other. In time and by dint of much plashing, some collisions and several attempts the ends of the booms were united.

By this time, however, nearly all the logs had escaped. The tug, towing a string of rowboats, set out in pursuit. The Lucy Belle turned in toward the tug.

"She's going to speak us," marveled Orde.

"Tug ahoy!" bellowed a red faced individual from the upper deck. He was dressed in blue and brass buttons and was liberally festooned with gold braid and embroidered anchors.

"Hello there, commodore! What is it?" replied Marsh.

"They want a tug up there at Heinzman's. Can you go?"

"Sure!" cried Marsh, choking.

The Lucy Belle sheered off magnificently.

"What do you think of that?" Marsh asked Orde.

"Head upstream again."

Heinzman saw the Sprite coming and rowed out frantically, splashing at every stroke and yelling with every breath.

"Don't you go through there! Vait a minute! Stop, I tell you!"

"Hold up!" said Orde to Marsh.

Heinzman rowed alongside.

"Vat you do?" he demanded.

"I forgot the money to buy my stamp with," said Orde sweetly. "I'm going back to get it."

"Not through my booms!"

"Mr. Heinzman," said Orde severely, "you are obstructing a navigable stream. I am doing business, and I cannot be interfered with."

"But my logs!"

"Vat you do?" he demanded.

"I have nothing to do with your logs. You are driving your own logs," Orde reminded him.

Heinzman vituperated.

"Go ahead, Marsh!" said Orde.

For a second time the chains were snapped. The severed ends of the booms swung back toward either shore. Between them floated a rowboat. In the rowboat gesticulated a pudgy man. The river was well sprinkled with logs. Evidently the sorting was going on well.

"May as well go back to the works," said Orde. "He won't string them together again today, not if he waits for that tug he sent Simpson for."

Orde detailed to an appreciative audience the happenings below.

"Why, he hain't sorted out more'n a million feet of his logs," cried Rollway Charlie. "He hain't seen no logs yet."

They turned with new enthusiasm to the work of shunting "H" logs into the channel.

A stableman picked his way out over the booms with a message for Orde.

"Mr. Heinzman's ashore and wants to see you," said he.

Orde found the mill man pacing restlessly up and down before a steaming pair of horses. Newmark, perched on a stump, was surveying him sardonically.

"Here you both are!" burst out Heinzman. "I must not lose my logs! Vat is your probosition?"

Newmark broke in quickly.

"I've told Mr. Heinzman," said he, "that we would sort and deliver the rest of his logs for $2 a thousand."

"That will be about it," agreed Orde.

"But," exploded Heinzman, "that is as much as you agreet to drive and deliffer my whole cut!"

"Precisely," said Newmark.

"Put I haf all the eggspence of driving the logs myself. Why should I pay you for doing what I haf alretty paid to haf done?"

Orde chuckled.

"Heinzman," said he, "we aren't forced to bother with your logs, and you're lucky to get out so easy. If I turn your whole drive into the river you'll lose more than half of it outright, and it'll cost you a heap to salvage the rest. And, what's more, I'll turn 'em in before you can get hold of a pile driver. I'll sort night and day," he bluffed, "and by tomorrow morning you won't have a stick of timber above my booms." He laughed again. "You want to get down to business almighty sudden."

When finally Heinzman had driven sadly away and the whole drive, "H" logs included, was pouring into the main boom Orde stretched his arms over his head in a luxury of satisfaction.

"That just about settles that campaign," he said to Newmark.

"Oh, no, it doesn't!" replied the latter decidedly.

"Why?" asked Orde, surprised. "You don't imagine he'll do anything more?"

"No, but I will," said Newmark.

* * * * * *

Early in the fall the baby was born. It proved to be a boy. Orde, nervous as a cat after the ordeal of doing nothing, tiptoed into the darkened room. He found his wife weak and pale, her dark hair framing her face, a new look of rapt inner contemplation rendering even more mysterious her always fathomless eyes. She held her lips to him. He kissed them.

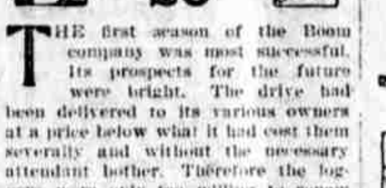
Grandma Orde brought the newcomer in for Orde's inspection. He looked gravely down on the puckered, discolored bit of humanity with a faint uneasiness.

"Is—do you think—that is"— He hesitated. "Does the doctor say he's going to be all right?"

"All right!" cried Grandma Orde indignantly. "I'd like to know if he isn't all right now! What in the world do you expect of a newborn baby?"

But Carroll was laughing softly to herself on the bed. She held out her arms for the baby and cuddled it close to her breast.

"He's a little darling," she crooned, "and he's going to grow up big and strong, just like his daddy." She put her cheek against the sleeping babe's and looked up sidewise at the two standing above her. "But I know how you feel," she said to her husband. "When they first showed him to me I thought he looked like a peanut a thousand years old."



Chapter 26

THE first season of the Boom company was most successful. Its prospects for the future were bright. The drive had been delivered to its various owners at a price below what it had cost them severally and without the necessary attendant bother. Therefore the loggers were only too willing to renew their contracts for another year. This did not satisfy Newmark, however.

"What we want," he told Orde, "is a charter giving us exclusive rights on the river and authorizing us to ask toll. I'm going to try and get one out of the legislature."

He departed for Lansing as soon as the assembly opened and almost immediately became lost in one of those fierce struggles of politics not less bitter because concealed. Heinzman was already on the ground. Newmark had the shadow of right on his side, for he applied for the charter on the basis of the river improvements already put in by his firm. Heinzman wanted the improvements already existing condemned and sold as a public utility to the highest bidder. He offered further guarantees as to future improvements. In addition were other and more potent arguments proffered behind closed doors. Many cases resolved themselves into a hard question of cash. Others demanded all honesty. Jobs, fat contracts, [illegible] favors, influence were all figured in freely, bribes as absolute as though stamped with the dollar mark. Newspapers all over the state were pressed into service. Among these delicate and complicated cross currents Newmark moved silent, cold, [illegible]. He seemed to understand them, to play with them, to manipulate them as elements of the game.

"What we want is a charter."

The fight [illegible] through most of the first half of the session. At the last, however, [illegible] the board. The company [illegible] charter.

"It's cost [illegible]," Orde said when the charter had become a law. "The [illegible] said so. It will take us a long time to get out of debt. This river driving won't pay quite so big as we thought it would," he concluded, with a rueful little laugh.

"Newmark & Orde means [illegible] to these fellows now."

"It will pay plenty well enough," replied Newmark decidedly, "and it gives us a vantage point to work from. You don't suppose we are going to quit at river driving, do you? We want to look around for some timber of our own. There's where the big money is. And perhaps we can buy a schooner or two and go into the carrying trade. Newmark & Orde means something to these fellows now."

Chapter 27

IN the course of the next eight years Newmark & Orde floated high on that flood of apparent prosperity that attends a business well conceived and passably well managed. The Boom and Driving company made money, of course, for with the margin of 50 per cent or thereabouts necessitated by the temporary value of the improvements good years could hardly fail to bring good returns. This, it will be remembered, was a stock company. With the profits from that business the two men embarked on a separate copartnership.

Orde lived at ease in a new house of some size, surrounded by grounds. He kept two servants. A blooded team of horses drew the successor to the original buckboard. Newmark owned a sail yacht of five or six tons, in which, quite solitary, he took his only pleasure. Both were considered men of substance and property, as indeed they were.

Immediately after the granting of the charter to drive the river the partners had offered them an opportunity of acquiring about 30,000,000 feet of timber remaining from Morrison & Daly's original holdings. Orde finally completed the purchase on long time notes. Below the booms they erected a mill. The following winter Orde spent in the woods. By spring he had banked about 6,000,000 feet.

CASTORIA

for Infants and Children.

Physicians Prescribe Castoria.

CASTORIA has met with pronounced favor on the part of physicians, pharmaceutical societies and medical authorities. It is used by physicians with results most gratifying. The extended use of Castoria is unquestionably the result of three facts: 1st, The indisputable evidence that it is harmless; 2nd, That it not only allays stomach pains and quiets the nerves, but assimilates the food; 3rd, It is an agreeable and perfect substitute for castor oil. It is absolutely safe. It does not contain any opium, morphine or other narcotic and does not stupefy. It is unlike Soothing Syrups, Bateman's Drops, Godfrey's Cordial, etc. This is a good deal for a medical journal to say. Our duty, however, is to expose danger and record the means of advancing health. The day for poisoning innocent children through greed or ignorance ought to end. To our knowledge, Castoria is a remedy which produces composure and health by regulating the system—not by stupefying it—and our readers are entitled to the information.—Hall's Journal of Health.

"Your Castoria stands first in its class. In my ... years of practice I can say I never have found anything that so filled the place."
WILLIAM BELKNOP, M. D., Cleveland, Ohio.

"I have used your Castoria in the case of my own baby and find it pleasant to take, and have obtained excellent results from its use."
S. A. BUCHANAN, M. D., Philadelphia, Pa.

"I take pleasure in recommending your Castoria, having recommended its use in many instances, and consider it the best laxative that could be used, especially for children."
NATHANIEL K. KING, M. D., St. Louis, Mo.

"I find your Castoria to be a standard family remedy. It is the best thing for infants and children I have ever known and I recommend it."
K. E. ESKILDSON, M. D., Omaha, Neb.

"Having during the past six years prescribed your Castoria for infantile stomach disorders, I most heartily commend its use. The formula contains nothing deleterious to the most delicate of children."

IN BUSINESS CIRCLES

Tight money and a generally inactive market have been the distinguishing feature of the last seven days in business. Most everyone is expecting higher prices, but few appear to have the courage of their convictions.

One of the big transactions of the week was the sale of one hundred and fifty thousand dollars of the Honokaa bond issue, this being the finishing up of the six hundred thousand-dollar issue of six per cents authorized some time ago for the general plantation improvements.

Tight Money.

Tight money is a curiosity, but it has been very real during the last seven days. There are several explanations for it, the principal and most reasonable one being that it is the direct result of the large amounts of local money that have been sent to the mainland to assist enterprises there.

Various estimates are made of the amount of money that has been sent out of the Islands within the last few weeks for investment in California. A conservative figure is that the total will reach a million and a half of dollars. This has made a severe drain on local reserves, and whereas a few weeks ago banks were seeking loans, they are now only accommodating their customers, and some are even urging their customers to be conservative in their demands.

Foreign bonds have taken the largest quantity of money from the local market, one block of nearly four hundred thousand dollars being reported as placed in a power-development scheme covering the Western States. The same amount of money placed in local bonds would have brought a better return and the security would certainly be as good, if not better.

Aside from these large investments, many of the smaller investors have taken their fly at speculative ventures of the Pacific Coast. These vary from land propositions to gold mines and oil, but they all take money away from the local field and retard the progress of the Territory and of the city.

Some people claim that the shortage of funds is due to the returns from the sugar not coming in, and the plantations carrying large overdrafts. Very few of the plantations are without a credit balance, and the surplus of last year is quite sufficient to carry them over without producing any shortage of money if there were no other combination of events to bear the money market.

By many it is considered next to a disgrace that the spring following the most prosperous year Honolulu has ever known should be marked by the pinch of tight money. It demonstrates a lack of loyalty in the support of local securities that is not pleasant to contemplate, especially for those having high ideals for the progress of the Islands. As one man put it, if sugar should go to six cents everyone in Honolulu would sell out at the present rate of raw sugar quotations for fear Punchbowl might break out and they would lose the money they have hoarded. The effect of good times on some people in Honolulu is extraordinary.

Sugar Price.

As for the price of sugar, the crowd is awaiting a new quotation in centrifugals. Everyone seems satisfied that the price must and will go higher. Nearly every day has brought steadily-advancing prices for European beets, until on Friday the quotation reached the highest point of the season—14s. 9d., or a parity of 5.15c.

Centrifugals meanwhile remain at 4.36. This is a price high enough to assure a wonderful prosperity for all the plantations of the Islands, but the buyers must have something higher before they will be seriously stirred.

As a matter of fact, the price for centrifugals should go higher, according to all the rules of former years and the general trend of sugar production in the fields furnishing the world's great supplies.

All the experts have lowered their estimates on the Cuban crop, and no one is now willing to predict that the crop will go beyond 1,700,000, whereas the first of the year there was talk of its reaching 2,000,000 tons.

From Europe come continued reports of a nature to assure high prices, and what is more important, the conditions are such as to forecast continued good prices for next year. It is learned from authoritative sources that the beet seed is of very poor quality, and this will limit the next year's crop, regardless of the anxiety of farmers to plant larger areas in order to take advantage of higher prices. Furthermore, the high prices of all cereals will operate to prevent any marked change to beets.

A recent letter from the East states that not long ago a very prominent broker in Wall Street made a wager that August beets will be selling next August at 16s. 3d. This means a figure that will put centrifugals above five cents, unless something very unexpected happens to change the situation.

Stocks Dull.

Stocks, considering the future for sugar, have been rather dull for the whole week, although several very good-sized transactions have been recorded. Several thousand shares of Hilo Railway common stock have sold at 13.50, and one hundred shares of Mutual Telephone have sold at 12.50, showing a tendency of money to seek other investments than sugar stocks. Hawaiian Pineapple has sold in fair-sized blocks in a generally falling market.

One hundred and ten shares of Hawaiian Commercial sold at 42, but the majority of the transactions in this stock have been about an eighth lower. Hutchinson has advanced to 19.25. Oahu has sold for 37.875, but is now generally held at 38. Ewa's latest sale on Friday was at 34.50. Waialua has taken its usual advance after having sagged on the sale of a few shares, and appears to be approaching 13% again, and when it gets started up will probably go higher. Honokaa holds strong at 22.25. McBryde sold on Friday at 6.875, the annual report not showing that the change in agency has had much effect for the present in the way of large development of water. Reports from the plantation, however, are that the recent rains have brought up the water in the reservoirs and higher water sources at a time when the water is needed to supply the growing cane and keep down pumping expenses. Olaa stock has not been in demand, although the reports from that plantation are the most promising as to the probable outturn of the crop this year.

Honokaa Bonds.

Honokaa bonds sold this week are commented on as one of the attractions for investors. The bonds are six per cents, and sold at 103, which is equivalent to five and one half per cent. for the investor. By way of comparison with other bonds on the market quickly picked up when offered, it is noted that Waialua 5s, selling at 101, net the investor 4.8 per cent., and Oahu 5s, selling at 102, net the investor 4.6 per cent. It can be seen from this that Olaa 6s, selling at 95, will net the investor a handsome profit.

Immigrants.

Russian immigrants have occupied a very prominent position in the public eye for the full week. On Monday they were released from quarantine, and since that time they have been spending a good share of their waking moments in conferences with the Territorial officials and Mr. Pereistrous, who arrived by the Siberia.

About thirty of the immigrants went to Waialua plantation, where they are very comfortably housed. Nearly all the remainder refuse to go to work, and the prospect is that they will all have to be returned to Siberia. Perelstreus appears to have given up in disgust, and the Territorial Secretary and the Governor have indulged in a talking match that has been very earnest if useless. The Russian agitators appear to have the call on the confidence of the immigrants, who are being most woefully deceived.

The Hawaiian Sugar Planters' Association was finally brought into the matter, and through its secretary sent a letter to the Governor, offering the Russians marked consideration if they went to work on the plantations, among other things promising to give them the necessities of life at cost. After hearing all these promises and listening to the diplomatic phrases of the Territorial Secretary and the admonition of the Governor, the immigrants turned to the agitators for advice, and the wind-up of it was that they all voted to refuse work.

It is now a question of how long the Territorial authorities propose to feed the immigrants, as they will sooner or later have to be returned to Siberia by reason of their being a public charge.

Pavements.

Bitulithic pavement for Fort street is having a somewhat difficult time of it. The Mayor refused to sign the contract voted by the supervisors to be made with J. A. Gilman and his associates, and an injunction has been brought to prevent the contract being negotiated, on the ground that it is illegal for the city to do work totaling a cost of more than five hundred dollars without putting the work out to bids. The supervisors met the situation by passing an ordinance to have the experimental area paved with the bitulithic, and it is claimed they have enough votes to override the Mayor's veto. So it seems that the pavement will be tested sooner or later.

Federal Court.

The Federal Court has been handling matters during the week that attracted wide interest. The trial of Carl On Tai for buying clothes of the soldiers, although ending in an acquittal for On Tai, will have a good effect in preventing any further traffic in the supplies furnished by the United States Government.

The report of the Federal Grand Jury was rendered this week and one of its principal recommendations is for the erection of a place for the sale of beer and light wines near the Schofield Barracks and under control of the officers, to prevent the illicit traffic in liquors that has been going on. If this recommendation is carried out, it will be re-establishing the principle of the old-time army canteen, although the liquor can not be sold on the military reservation.

Land Laws.

The week's mail brought from Washington the amendments to the Organic Act and the land laws proposed by the House Committee on Territories. It appears that the committee has recommended an amendment under which the Commissioner of Public Lands is forced to open lands on the application of twenty-five citizens, but it provides that he may give them the lands they ask for or he may not. This provision reads like a straddle and appears to promise a great deal of trouble, if nothing more. The House is disposed to be more liberal in the matter of salaries than the Senate. This Organic Act bill, together with the prohibition plebiscite resolution, is on the House calendar and may be brought up and passed any day. The Organic Act bill will have to go to conference. The joint resolution for the election on prohibition will doubtless pass as introduced.

Transportation.

The Oceanic steamship Sierra, newly fitted and specially equipped for the Honolulu-San Francisco run, came into the harbor late Friday evening, somewhat delayed on her initial run by the machinery. She brought seventy passengers and promises to be a very popular boat for the local service. The cablegrams announce that the Alameda has been sold to one of the steamship companies operating in the Alaska trade, so if Honolulu grows to require two Oceanic boats, the second one will be one of the Sierra's sister ships overhauled and equipped for oil fuel.

Good faith was the text of the legal arguments heard by Judge Murasky yesterday in connection with the suit whereby Rudolph Spreckels and Claus A. Spreckels, executors of the will of Claus Spreckels, deceased, are seeking to throw the light of a legal investigation upon the relations subsisting between John D. Spreckels and the Oceanic Steamship Company, says the Chronicle of March 24. Thus far the suit has been one long succession of tangles, orders for the taking of depositions having been obtained by both sides, and both sides having resisted all efforts to reduce their own testimony to black and white prior to the formal trial of the cause.

Matt I. Sullivan, representing the Rudolph and Claus A. Spreckels side of the controversy, thought that there was no excuse whereby the opposition could evade giving depositions. He said that there had been no showing made by Attorneys J. J. Dunne and W. I. Brobeck, attorneys for John D. Spreckels et al.; that the original motion for the taking of depositions had been made in bad faith.

Brobeck responded by reading many long and eloquent passages from ancient and modern books of law, wherein the moral basis of jurisprudence was described. He said that the common law, being deficient in certain elements and harsh in its general action, had been supplemented by equity, which in so far as was possible in a positive human code, was the pure embodiment of the moral law. He thought that his opponents had not been up to the level of equity.

There followed arguments upon a great number of other motions which were before the court, all having reference to the taking of depositions, but some referring to the depositions of the defendants, some to the depositions of the plaintiff, and others to the depositions of mere witnesses.

Judge Murasky ruled that no motions emanating from mere witnesses could be entertained, as they were not parties to the action. He then took the motions under submission.

HOME CURE FOR ECZEMA

It really seems strange that so many people suffer year in and year out with eczema, when it is now no longer a secret that oil of wintergreen mixed with thymol, glycerine, etc., makes a wash that is bound to cure.

Old, obstinate cases, it is true, cannot be cured in a few days, but there is absolutely no sufferer from eczema who ever used this simple wash and did not find immediately that wonderfully soothing, calm, cool sensation that comes when the itch is taken away. Instantly upon applying a few drops of the wash the remedy takes effect, the itch is allayed. There is no need of experiment—the patient knows at once.

Instead of trying to compound the oil of wintergreen, thymol, glycerine, etc., in the right proportions ourselves we are using a prescription which is universally found the most effective. It is known as the D. D. D. Prescription. Our long experience with this remedy has given us great confidence in its merits. Honolulu Drug Co., Fort street.
