GRAND JURY'S REPORT ON RUSSIANS

United States Inquisitors Find That They Were Not Deceived.

IMMIGRANTS QUESTIONED

Charges of Misrepresentation Fade Away Under Official Investigation.

The United States grand jury has made a thorough investigation into the charges of bad treatment and misrepresentation, so clamorously told by the Russians not long since, and as a result of that investigation will report to the attorney-general of the United States at Washington that there is absolutely no foundation for the Russian yarns.

The report will state that it is possible the agents of the board of immigration may have painted conditions in Hawaii in somewhat more rosy tints than the facts entirely warrant, but there is no evidence of any deliberate attempt at misrepresentation. Neither is there any evidence, the report will say, of any violation of the contract labor laws; no contracts, so far as the grand jurors have been able to ascertain, were entered into before the Russian sailed for Hawaii.

It appears that when the loud-mouthed Russians who so vociferously proclaimed their grievances in the Governor's office, on the capital grounds, on the streets and elsewhere, found themselves before the cold-blooded federal inquisitors, their certitude of ill-treatment suddenly vanished and they did not even try to tell the sad, sad tale they had so often told to others. There must be something in the atmosphere of the federal court and of the grand jury room that takes the assurance out of the natural prevaricator and makes him more inclined to tell the truth than he is naturally. It may be that Breckons is able to hypnotize even a Russian agitator into forgetting himself long enough to deal with facts instead of fancied grievances and manufactured tales of abuse.

A subcommittee of three members of the grand jury was appointed to investigate the Russian matter, and these three grand jurors had a large number of the Russians before them. And these Russians did not claim that the men were promised $45 a month wages and the women $30 to $35. Neither did they say anything about any promises made them by the recruiting agents that the Russian women would be able to earn $3.50 a day picking coffee. There was nothing about an acre of land with a house on it, which said men and house should belong to the Russian after he had worked for the plantation three years. Neither was there anything testified to about any $500 cash to be paid Mr. Russian in case he should prefer to take the cash and let the credit—and the house—go. The Russians forgot all about having been promised free fuel for warming their houses—warming their houses in Hawaii, forsooth—and that fine house with a kitchen in it degenerated into a forgotten myth when they stood before the inquisitors and told the sad story of their lives.

And so the report of the grand jury will go forward to Washington will be to the effect that all the ructions raised by the immigrants after their arrival at Honolulu was without justification in fact and that they really have no good grounds for complaint. Perhaps a mild suggestion may be made that Jack Atkinson was a little too enthusiastic and that the Manchurian news brought a little too vividly to his imagination the dear remembered rainy breezes of Hawaii—but that will be about all.

Incidentally, United States District Attorney Breckons will himself make a report to the attorney-general—in effect about the same as that to be made by the grand jury.

The reports will be made in accordance with instructions received from the department of justice by Mr. Breckons. The department of justice having taken the matter up on account of the fact that a Russian newspaper in New York brought to the attention of the department of commerce and labor the charges of bad treatment made the Honolulu Russians as reported in full at the time by The Advertiser.

YACHT HAWAII AFTER THE CUP

The Islands' Entry in the Big Race Sails for San Pedro.

MAKES VERY FINE START

Alohaed by Big Crowd, She Starts for Coast in a Spanking Breeze.

Amid roasting hurrahs from a host of citizens mingled with strains of Auld Lang Syne and Aloha Oe from the Hawaiian band, which swelled every heart with patriotic pride, the yacht Hawaii, the island challenger for the trans-Pacific cup race, cast adrift from the Oceanic wharf at a quarter past two o'clock yesterday afternoon, darted across the inner harbor, made a complete circle almost within her own length and slipped out through the channel on her way to San Pedro at a rate that should make her the champion for speed.

The crowds on the dock stood in admiration as she sped on her way and before they recovered from the parting emotions Hawaii's bird of the ocean had nearly faded away in the distance. As she squared away to the leeward to strike her course to the Coast, she loomed up resplendent, an imposing representation of maritime skill—Her Majesty—Hawaii—Queen of the Seas. If she has such a wind on her return as bore her away yesterday she ought to easily outstrip any yacht in the race. Going out of the harbor the Hawaii had a stiff breeze blowing almost astern, and inside of twenty minutes from the time she left the dock she was far out to sea, and had hit her course for the Coast.

Captain Charles Wilder and his crew were all aboard the yacht before two o'clock. All seemed in good cheer and confident of victory this time, despite previous misfortunes, against which every precaution has been taken in preparing for this race. Captain Wilder has devoted much of his time during the past two years to the study of navigation, and Tom King, who is making the trip for the first time this year, has made voyages to the Coast and between the islands to learn the ways of the sea and has received instructions.

MORE AID FOR SMALL FARMERS

Another Territorial Commission Almost Ready to Report.

TO REGULATE LANDINGS

Commissioners of Three Islands Meet Here to Draft Report to Governor.

The territorial wharves and landings commission, consisting of D. E. Metzger of Hawaii, Hugh Howell of Maui and J. H. Moragne of Kauai, has been holding meetings in Honolulu since last Sunday, and the three members left on yesterday's steamers for home. Metzger taking the Mauna Kea for Hilo, Howell the Claudine for Maui and Moragne the Mikahala for Kauai. The commissioners have practically agreed upon a report which they will submit to Governor Frear within a month.

The commission, which was appointed as a result of an accusation being brought during the last legislative session that a policy of discrimination and overcharge was pursued at many of the private wharf landings in the Territory, has visited all landings on all the islands. It has gathered complete information regarding the wharf rates charged, the system of management, etc., and has photographed each landing. Its report will be an exhaustive one, dealing with the matter of whether the private landings give equal chance to all comers in the matter of rates and accommodations. During the legislative session it was claimed that some of the landings didn't give the "small farmer" an equal chance with others interested in the wharves, and considerable discussion was had about the troubles of the small farm man. The result was the passage of the joint resolution under which the Metzger commission has been working.

The commission was directed to "thoroughly investigate and examine into the matter of private wharves and landings throughout the Territory, and charges made for the use thereof, and consider ways and means of regulating such charges, and the feasibility and cost of the acquisition of such wharves and landings by the Territory." Upon the findings of the commission will be based laws to be submitted to the next legislature, with a view to equalizing conditions at all the private-owned landings in the Territory. Some are owned by plantations, some are private concerns. The commission's report will submit a basis for practically bringing them under public control, it is stated, if not public ownership.

JOY AND BOOZE WERE BOTH UNCONFINED

Booze flowed free and fast yesterday at the opening of the fishmarket just made of the old one on the makai Waikiki corner of King and Kalia streets. Two barrels of beer were supplied by some Japanese who have a stall rented in the lower end of the place and a willing multitude absorbed it as fast as it was dispensed.

By three o'clock the boozefest was well under way and by five nearly everybody present was in a decidedly jovial mood, with more coming from every corner of the compass as fast as the news traveled.

Japanese, Hawaiians, Chinese, Russians, Porto Ricans and Portuguese were all on hand and as the fish sellers were dispensing dago red equally with beer, and as nearly everybody mixed it up, there was a delightful exuberance manifested a few hours later. Berger's band was present and enlivened the proceedings.

The Japanese used their hands for scoops and with a big pull of beer he fore each of them, several were dipping it out as fast as it could be dispensed. A few Chinese fishermen further up were wildly trying to sell their stock and hurling imprecations on their wiser neighbors. The place promises to be a rowdy one.

WILL KUHIO BE IN THE FIGHT?

Report That the Delegate Is Not Going to Be Here for Campaign.

IS IN POOR HEALTH NOW

Going to Health Resort as Soon as Relieved of Duties in Congress.

Is Delegate Kuhio coming back to take part in the plebiscite campaign? It was reported yesterday that news had been received from Kuhio by cable, to the effect that he did not intend to come here to take part in the campaign, being unable to do so on account of ill health. The report could not be verified.

The leaders of the prohibition side of the canvass are confident that Kuhio will be here, if it is possible for him to come, in time to take part in the campaign. Kuhio, as a matter of fact, has been backing the campaign in many ways, and has taken a very strong attitude in support of the temperance side. His present condition of health, however, is a cause of some anxiety, and it may be that he will not be able to come here and take part in the campaign, according to reports received.

LAWYERS MEET AT THE BANQUET BOARD

Bar Association at Annual Dinner Hear Notable Addresses and Have Notable Guests.

Inspired by the presence of fourteen judges and ex-judges, and with the Honorable William H. Beatty, chief justice of the supreme court of California as their special guest of honor, the members of the Hawaiian Bar Association held a notable annual banquet at the Alexander Young Hotel last evening, the attendance being large, the speeches eloquent and timely and the menu the best that the hotel affords.

One of the features of the evening was the eloquent address in defense of the members of the bar against the aspersions of Theodore Roosevelt, the defender being John Cathcart, city attorney, who delivered an address that may well take a place as one of the best ever delivered as an after-dinner oration in the Territory. In addition, there were a number of splendid remarks, the guests of honor, Chief Justice Beatty, rendering a warm tribute to the hospitality of Hawaii, to the beauty of the country and the natural advantages of the islands.

Frank E. Thompson, vice president of the association, acted as master of ceremonies and toastmaster in the absence of President Kinney, seated on his right being Chief Justice Beatty and on his left the Governor of the Territory, Justice De Bolt, Second Federal Judge Robertson, Judge Cooper, Justice Perry, Judge Whitney and Judge Robinson occupied other seats at the head of the great oval table, the other guests of the evening being: Lytle A. Diekey, W. R. Castle, C. H. Diekey, C. F. Clemens, John W. Cathcart, E. A. Magoon, C. F. Peterson, W. T. Rawlins, Judge Wilder, R. W. Breckons, Judge Stanley, C. H. Olson, W. B. HAWAII TURNS OTHER CHEEK

San Francisco Hits Honolulu, Honolulu Helps Frisco.

SHIPPING MEN CONTROL

No chance to Get San Francisco Aid to Relieve Hawaii's Transportation Congestion.

Honolulu is prepared to back up San Francisco in the strenuous strife developing on the Mainland, regarding the choice of a city in which to hold a great exposition in celebration of the opening of the Panama Canal. Already Delegate Kalaniana'ole has been cabled to by President F. L. Waldron, of the merchants' association, to the following effect:

"San Francisco's interest in world's fair is likewise interest of Hawaii. You will have solid backing from home in this direction."

At the meeting of the directors of the merchants' association this afternoon, steps will probably be taken to give further force to this endorsement of San Francisco's efforts to hold the great exposition. "It is certainly to the interest of Hawaii to have the exposition held in the west," said Mr. Waldron yesterday. "The result of bringing so many Americans to the Pacific would be of vast benefit to us, both by reason of the fact that many would continue westward and visit us, and because of what they would need, savely earn in San Francisco regarding Pacific commerce, and Hawaii's importance as an outpost."

UNITED SOUTH AFRICA IS BORN

Legislative Union of the Once Divided States Under the British Flag.

A ROYAL PROCLAMATION

Cape Colony, Orange Free State, Natal and Transvaal Are Now All One.

PRETORIA, South Africa, May 31.—The British province of United South Africa was born today, when a royal proclamation was promulgated announcing the legislative union of the territory of Cape Colony, the Orange Free State territory, Natal and the Transvaal.

The proclamation which places these lands under a common legislative assembly was read today in the same hall in which eight years ago today, the Boer leaders signed the treaty of peace, according to the terms of the British conquerors of the Transvaal.

The royal proclamation means the organization of a South African division of the British empire like Australia, Canada and other divisions. The united states of South Africa, organized today will form a new great division of the empire. General Botha, who was a leading commander in the Boer war against Great Britain, will be the first premier of the new United South Africa.

The establishment of this south African union under the British flag carries out the plan of the late Cecil Rhodes, who devoted his life to bringing the various rival South African states under the British flag, as a part of the British Empire.

INSTRUMENTS OF SCIENCE ON WAY

Valuable Addition to Equipment of Kaimuki Observatory Will Soon Arrive.

Thirteen hundred dollars' worth of new instruments for the Kaimuki Observatory are at present on their way to Honolulu, according to a statement of President Gilmore of the College of Hawaii at a meeting of the Waiālae, Kaimuki and Palolo Improvement Club last night.

These instruments are being supplied by the federal government and consist of sidereal clock, chronometer and others for the taking of time. Professor Gilmore also stated that he expected the unofficial support of the United States Weather Bureau here and was making arrangements to place a time ball on the roof of the Young Hotel.

This ball will be connected by wire with the Kaimuki Observatory and will drop at the touch of a button as the sun reaches the meridian. This would permit the navigators in the harbor to set their instruments accurately and would be extremely useful.

Professor Gilmore also stated that he expected to be able to dismount the present telescope shortly and replace it with one much larger, using the old one in the surveying department of the college.

President Gilmore rendered a statement of the money expended on the observatory thus far, he having been previously made a trustee to handle the funds. At the present time the observatory has cost its builders $1475.07, which is covered by subscription to the extent of $1440. As there are still improvements to be made that will come to about $120, there is an actual deficit of $161, which, it is hoped, will be shortly raised among those who have found the observatory to be all that was claimed for it when it was started—a benefit and an advertisement to Hawaii.

That it has been popular was shown by Professor Gilmore, who estimated the number of visitors at two thousand. The improvement club's meeting last night was a regular one, the routine business being disposed of. A vote of thanks was offered to the rapid transit for installing the switches that made the recently innovated 10-minute service a possibility.

The club also voted to ask the rapid transit company to extend the 10-minute service to seven-thirty in the evening instead of seven as it is at present, and also to give the district a 10-minute service Sunday afternoon, the old system being in force on that day.

MR. SPEIGHT SPEAKS AT NORMAL SCHOOL

Frank Speight, the famous Dickens reader, was enthusiastically received at the Normal School yesterday. In his natural easy manner he gave a selection from "Pickwick Papers" which won the applause of all—teachers and pupils. With this as an introduction he gave briefly his method of reading. This he grouped under three heads—how to read, what to read, and how to remember. He advised that books be owned—as all the classics are printed in cheap editions—and that the passages which appealed to the individual be marked for future reference; that time should not be wasted on trashy reading; and that imagination, and visualizing the scene be the means used for remembering. With the beautiful surroundings of these islands Mr. Speight thinks that we have unusual opportunities for exercising the imagination. Mr. Speight will remain in Honolulu for a month and will twice give us the chance to meet the characters of Charles Dickens.

THE FINEST AUTOMOBILE RIDE IN THE WORLD

By O. L. Halsey.

The title is true. There is just fourteen miles of it, but those fourteen miles yield more interest and more indelible impressions than any other fourteen miles of road extant. This is the St. Gothard Pass, in the Alps.

It forms a part of the most direct route between Como and Lake Lucerne. It crosses the mountain range whose name it bears and whose highest peak, the famous Galenstock, rises nearly thirteen thousand feet. The pass itself reaches an altitude of ten thousand feet, being anywhere from one to four thousand feet higher than the more recently constructed railroad pass and tunnel underneath.

Such geographical specifications seem likely to insure the pass of St. Gothard to be a famous and well patronized automobile highway. The patronage is true. The average automobilist, whether home-span European or imported American, avoids the pass of St. Gothard. It is a road for the daring, and its charms are worth the venture.

We were touring Europe in our Packard "Thirty" when we came to the pass. Its grandeur and its difficulties were recounted to us. We decided in favor of the grandeur, and learned that touring Europe in an automobile is one thing of which a ride through St. Gothard Pass is not a part, but another and bigger thing.

At the entrance is Airolo, a typical cluster of chalets, plus hospice and railroad station. We reached there late in the afternoon and learned that automobiles may venture on St. Gothard Pass only in the evening and early morning. To be exact, they are allowed on the pass between 5 and 7 p. m., and 6 and 8 a. m. The better part of the permitted two hours is required to make the journey.

We went that evening. With a strange apprehension that was almost timidity we looked up from beautiful Airolo into the snow-capped mountain peaks that hid all but the first few turns of the wonderful pass. Then we started from summer into winter; from a temperature of 82 degrees to a temperature of 10 degrees; from pleasant, comfortable touring in difficult, uncertain and dangerous mountain setting; from a prettily set village into stern heights where mere pretentious would be an insult to the view's magnificent proportions.

When this pass was built for the moving of armies, no other purpose was taken into consideration. Seldom is it wide enough to allow the safe passage of two vehicles. In many places, one vehicle has a narrow and precarious footing on the mountainside. For miles it is possible to look over the side of the car, down perpendicular rock walls, to snake-like terraces of melted snow a thousand or two thousand feet below. There is no wall on the outer edge of the pass, the greatest precaution for safety being a slight curb, 5 or 6 inches high. Sometimes the road slants downwardly towards the outside.

The prompt ascent after passing the guard house necessitates learning a new kind of automobile driving. The steep grade is a succession of sharp, narrow turns. Some of these angles were so acute that it was impossible to turn them without stopping and backing the car. As we progressed, we learned to negotiate these turns somewhat more easily, by swinging just at the right point and just inside of a corner where the pass ended and a vertical precipice began. All the time it was steady, hard climbing on second speed. The motor settled down to an unquivering gait, and there was no break in the even progress except an occasional acceleration at the acute turns where it was necessary to increase speed in order to make them without shifting gears.

We were awed by the dangerous character of the road; by the natural respect which the mountains themselves commanded; and by the occasional glimpse of the alpine peaks Swiss have not thrust over a stone wall or a pile of rocks. In St. Gothard Pass you are always between two cliffs. You must not stop in the pass more than your allotted two hours and you must not exceed your speed to get out of it in that time. However, you are not under any restrictions. The road is dangerous enough when you are the only traveler on it. It is no place for meeting other automobiles. "Joy riders" should not come here.

The man behind the hayrack never speaks and you do not answer. Sign language is sufficient. We, in the climbing car, did not even talk to one another. There are some places where conversation is profanation. This is one of them.

The echoing blast of an Alpine horn put us in a quiver. It meant the approach of a skidding stage coach descending with wheels locked. We took no chances in passing vehicles on that road. Fortunately, there is little other traffic than the mail coaches, a few local carts traveling short distances and, in the lower altitudes, herds of sheep.

Once we shot down a sharp and unexpected decline to find ourselves headed for a small black hole in the face of an immense expanse of rock. There was just room to steer the car into it clear of the walls. Daylight was snatched out in the infinite blackness. We were scared, but we did not light the lamps. For what seemed a day, and probably was a quarter of an hour, we drove through this winding tunnel, guided only by the reverberation of the trilling motor against the rock.

When at last we left the streak of night, we found the winding shelf illuminated by the mellow lights of evening. Again we climbed, climbed and climbed up the mountain wall. It was cold and we huddled together in the car.

We ran through snow, blown in icy sheets against our faces. Looking upward, the pass was faintly and more mainly marked at each successive turn it took along the mountain. It seemed an unending journey to the peak above, and when that goal was reached, we saw again the zigzag pathway to the next.

The wonderful background of lurid fires where the sun sank behind the glistening snow caps; the devious road disappearing in the subdued colors of clouded twilight; the great solitude—all of it was awesome, fascinating, overwhelming.

Tensely silent, we rode to the highest point. There the strain was broken by the marvelous beauty of the panorama spread out at our feet. We stopped and clambered out of the car for a last look over the valleys and peaks, snow drifts and glaciers, rivers and villages, passes and tunnels of this Alpine region as pictured from the turrets of Galenstock.

For an hour we had not spoken. We were chilled to the bone. There had been no sound except the endless purring of the motor. Our faraway glance upon the scene was a lingering one. The winding four-mile descent to Andermatt was begun reluctantly. Once on the way, however, we slid and scrambled down that shelf as fast as we could without going over its side. That was the hardest job of steering I ever have done. It was a case of 100 per cent accuracy, because there was no allowance at any place along the twisting road for the mistake of an inch.

Afterward, we continued our tour through Europe, (some 6000 miles altogether) but that, to me, is always another story. Whenever I think of those fourteen miles on St. Gothard Pass, I immediately forget all of the other automobilizing which I have done in deep appreciation of the wonder of this finest of all automobile rides there are in the whole wide world.

A BROKEN-DOWN SYSTEM.

Chalmers Motor Company, Detroit, Michigan.

Our pathfinder car the Chalmers "30" has behaved admirably and I have nothing but praise for the way it has negotiated every conceivable difficulty that could possibly be asked of any car to surmount. We have covered nearly 3000 miles in thirteen States, over all kinds of roads, across mountains, lowlands, prairies—and through all kinds of bad weather. For one whole week we didn't see the sun, while the car fought with mud hub deep. But the Chalmers "30" proved more than equal to every test.

Horses to Run.

Louis Warren will ship his entries, Warming and Indigo, from the Honolulu plantation to Maui on Friday. Indigo's sister will not be in the running this year, having been recently sold. Warming is expected to come to defeat in this year's meet. He was a seven money favorite with Benonica last year in the Fourth of July races at Hilo when Ferreira, who was riding the foaled Benonica, causing the mate to turn a somersault, and Wobber, then a thirty to one shot, galloped home an easy winner. Jockey Droleto, who was riding Benonica, sustained a broken leg in the mixup. Wobber will not, however, get such odds this year. Benonica has great faith in this horse and is entering him to prove his claim that he outclassed Major Collier, the best Hawaiian bred.

Warming is a bay horse by Previous out of Lydia H., and has run with success on many unimproved tracks. He refused $20,000 for Warming as a yearling. He was so well thought of at that time that he was entered at $100,000 in the New York Futurity. Warming was the cream of two seasons. Warming was a consistent winner until he made his debut in the race at the Hilo meet last July when he broke down in the mixup with Benonica.

Richard's pacing horse Denney may will probably be shipped from Honolulu on Friday's boat for Maui and will be well known trainer, Alex. Harris, reports to send over another piece by same boat.

Japanese turfmen at Lahaina may enter two horses, one of which is the well known runner Adian, and the other a half-brother to Major Collier. The race was raised on the Parker ranch at Hilo.

Sam Parker is thinking of entering a consistent gelding, Fred, by Take, out of Harper's gelding, to participate in the Fourth of July meet at Hilo.

The Maui Racing Association committee adding another $100 to the purse for the Hawaiian bred trotting and pacing event, making the purse $250.

Sight-seeing autos leave Promotion committee rooms 10 a. m. and 3:30 p. m. daily. Trips $1.00.

COOKES WIN; LADIES PLAY TENNIS TODAY

Only Five Entries for Women
Championship Honors on Courts.

With A. L. Castle, the lone star of the men's singles, and Richard and Clarence Cooke as the Hawaiian champions of the men's doubles, the ladies will take a hand today in the struggle for honors on the Beretania tennis courts. The two Cookes defeated Nowell and Steere in the finals Monday, taking three straight sets by a score of 6-0, 6-4, 6-4. The Cookes won out by steady, cautious playing against their more spectacular and erratic opponents. The champions went at it to win and they did not allow themselves to be flustered by the furious drives of their opponents.

For the ladies' singles there have been only five entries. They are Miss Sewell, Mrs. Coulter, Miss Burnham, Miss Richards and Miss Sheffield. The matches will open today with Mrs. Coulter against Miss Sewell and the winner of the best three out of five this afternoon will play Miss Burnham tomorrow afternoon. Miss Richards and Miss Sheffield will play on Thursday and the finals will be reached Friday.

ST. LOUIS AND CENTRAL GRAMMAR SCHOOLS WIN

St. Louis continued its unbroken string of victories at baseball at the Boys' Field yesterday afternoon, winning from Royal by a score of seven to six. The Royals started off with a rush, with five runs in the first inning. St. Louis forged ahead in the fifth, however, and was never headed afterward. Following are the lineup and score:

St. Louis—Kuroda, 2b; Kane, rf; Pacheco, ss; Watson, 2b; Julian, 1b; Nye, lf; Leal, cf; Dunn, p; Brano, c. Royal—Kealoha, 2b; Umaneka, rf; Kanakua, ss; Quoda, 2b; Kahn, 1b; Rosa, c; Jacobson, p; Keawe, cf; Lu, 2b; H., lf.

Central Grammar won a hard fought game from Kaahumani at the Makiki grounds, the final score being thirteen to twelve. The game was a slugging match from start to finish with Central Grammar doing the heaviest batting. Kaahumani made a game rally in the ninth, tying the score after two men were out when they had begun the ninth. The final four runs behind Central Grammar came back with the necessary run in the last half, however, and won out.

The lineup and score were:
Kaahumani—Pabau, ss; Ping Kong, 2b; Wang Pui, cf; Miki, lf and p; Dench, 3b; Quintal, cf and rf; Kim Mut, lf and lf; Kahalewa, rf; Len Shin, lf; Sakinichi, p and cf.

The game which will probably decide the championship will be the Panahou-St. Louis game on the Panahou grounds Friday afternoon. If St. Louis wins, it will be impossible for any other team even to tie for first place. If Panahou wins, there may be a double tie for the championship, in which case an extra game or series will have to be played after the regular season ends on June 10.

NEW HIS DAD.

A teacher in a Birmingham school was endeavoring to explain the term "hooking," as applied to the railway system. "Now," he was saying, "can any of you tell me the name of the office in which railway tickets are sold?" "The booking office," replied one of the boys. "Right," responded the teacher. At this time, his eye fell on a small boy at the end of the class who was evidently paying very little attention to what he said. "Did little boy that, Spry?" he demanded. "Well, sir?" asked that little, innocently. "As I thought, you were not listening. We will suppose your father had decided to have a day's holiday and visit the seaside. What would he have to do before he could take his seat in the train?" Without a moment's thought, the youngster electrified his teacher by replying: "Pawn his tools!"

BIG FIGHT WITH NO LIQUOR OR GAMBLING

But Promoters of Jeffries-Johnson
Battle Estimate That Four Million Dollars Will Be Spent.

"Call the Jeffries-Johnson fight a temperance battle when you get tired of referring to it as the greatest heavy-weight contest ever arranged and you will score a knockout," declared "Jack" Gleason, one of the promoters of the most sensational financial dabble ever connected with fistieuffs, in a New York hotel the other day. "There will be no liquor sold at or near the ring on July 4. 'Tex' Rickard is as strongly opposed to it as I am.

"Should the negro astound the loyal supporters of 'Jeff' by making a winning stand against the big Californian, there is no telling what might happen if Westerners, pined with intoxicants, turned upon the men who will cheer Johnson. From present indications there will be more than 35,000 spectators, each with a decided opinion regarding the merits of the fighters."

Tripping gingerly to a telephone in his room and giving orders to men representing him in completing arrangements with transcontinental railroads, Gleason suddenly turned his talk over to some of the guests expected at the ringside just before he left this city for the West.

Yes, Lord Rosebery will be in charge of a delegation of English sportsmen. Hugh McIntosh will guide the Australian contingent. Yes, there is a company in Peking that is promoting an excursion to the battle ground. Some men, more than one hundred, are coming from Honolulu. So many excursions are planned in this country that I can not name them."

Mr. Gleason tossed the receiver on the hook, scarcely pausing to take aim. Then, as he piled papers and clippings into a bulky parcel, he continued his part of the interview.

Gambling to Be Barred.

"If the temperance end of the arrangements does not appeal to the general public you could truthfully say that there will be no gambling in the arena. Of course, no one can check men who make wagers, but there will be no open games of chance permitted. Tickets will not be sold to men known to have a hankering to 'start something.' Everything connected with the fight arrangements will be attended to with military precision. With thousands of visitors to California it will not be possible to keep all the 'crooks' out, but we have arranged for an almost unlimited squad of policemen and detectives.

"In addition, there will be sleuths from New York, Chicago and many other cities to watch men they know who in many instances might be strangers to Californians. William Pinkerton will attend. I met him in Chicago and he promised to be in San Francisco several days before the fight. This will not be pleasant news for the army of 'strong arm' men."

"As the Herald recently told the receipts of the fight may easily exceed $600,000. But there are other figures which I believe will stagger even the financiers who have climbed to the dizzy heights. Making a conservative estimate of the visitors from the middle West and I place the number at twenty thousand. Two hundred dollars is a low estimate of the money each will spend, but it is a fair average. This will put $4,000,000 in circulation.

"The arrangements for the battle, receipts, expenditures, the purse itself and the future money earnings of the winner will break all records. The fight will do more to establish boxing as a clean sport than any number of minor affairs could. When opponents of the sport, many of the strongest of whom never saw a championship fight, realize that millions are involved; that some of the world's most representative men will attend, there is sure to be a break in the old wall of prejudice.

Promoters Seek Fame.

"It would be a wild boast if I declared that I did not want to make money. Naturally I expect to be remunerated for months of hard work, but as one of the promoters I have an ambition which I hope to satisfy.

"I have pride. When this fight of worldwide interest is over I want to have it referred to as the best managed affair ever conducted. Mr. Rickard feels the same way as I do about it," concluded Mr. Gleason, as he gathered his baggage preparatory to his departure for the Coast.

With Gleason hopping from one part of the hotel to the other in his haste, some of the followers of sport who had gathered to see the promoter off were soon in the heat of discussion of the various blows. A veteran referee insisted that talk about Jeffries being a left-handed fighter was misleading. "He had a fearful kick in either hand, and he used the hand that was most convenient for him in delivering a knockout. If Jeffries is able to show more than half of his old fighting ability, Johnson will not last."

But the negro had a champion in the debate. "Say, do you realize that Johnson's right upper cut will fall Jeffries in a 'doff'?" interposed a little fellow from a corner of the room. "What good will it do Johnson ever lick with that terrible upper cut?" asked an old timer who had been a willing listener. Johnson's staunchest supporter cleared his throat and became an informer. "I am going to let you in on something," he began. "Johnson has never shown all that he can do. Because he is a negro it has often been necessary for him to fight 'under wraps' or not get a bout. Of course he has 'pulled' of ten, but, barring a decision against him by Hart, which has an inside story, on one has defeated him in recent years. Johnson has so much faith in himself and is so proud that he will be at his best for Jeffries."

"Do you think Johnson can hurt Jeffries?" was asked.

"Jeff" Must Land Early.

"Well, Jeff may weather it for a few rounds, but if he does not land solidly on Johnson early in the fight he will be so tired after the twelfth round that the negro will pick him into submission," said the supporter of the negro.

Experts in the party insisted that neither "Jim" Corbett nor Johnson invented or perfected the right hand upper cut as now used. In behalf of each claim have been made to the effect that a new punch was discovered or introduced. A British authority has reproduced an account of a fight in 1784 between Caleb Baldwin, the "Pride of Westminster," and Samuel Elias, "Dutch Sam." Baldwin is credited with using the upper cut and details of the battle include this statement: "Baldwin's upward blow told dreadfully on Caleb's face."

Turning to the pugilistic question of the day, one of the party called. "Gleason, why not give us your idea of it? Is Johnson a better fighter than many of us think? Can he beat Jeff?"

"Must I answer that right now?"

"No."

"Well, I will tell you late in the afternoon of July 4," chirped Gleason, as he called a taxiab.

Jeffries weighs about 230 pounds. He is not attempting to take off weight, but if he should reduce any and still keep in good condition he will be satisfied. He thinks if he can retain his present weight and be in perfect condition he will have a great advantage over his opponent. It is expected that during his course of training he will lose from ten to twenty pounds and when he enters the ring he will tip the beam at the 210 notch.

SHOULD BE QUIET.

"Senator, how is the baby at your house?"

"Taking too active a part in the family affairs for a new member."

"It seems to me that I have seen you before." "You have, my lord. I used to give your daughter singing lessons." "Twenty years!"—Cassell's Magazine.

THE QUESTION OF PROHIBITION.

Opinions naturally differ among individuals concerning the expediency of prohibition and it would be possible to quote hundreds of able men both for and against the enactment of such a law. When, however, a majority of voters in a State continue to favor the prohibition cause, the favor growing as the legislation continues through a number of years to demonstrate its usefulness, there should be weight attached to the collective idea of those majorities. Most of the people are not going to persist in deciding to do the wrong thing for any lengthy period.

The voters of Maine favor prohibition because prohibition has helped their State. The voters of Kansas favor prohibition because the results of prohibition, while falling short of the ideal, have continued to help Kansas. The voters of Mississippi retain a prohibition law on their statute book, because they see the good it accomplishes. The voters of North Dakota have repeatedly instructed their representatives to keep the State in the prohibition column because the law has decreased crime, decreased poverty and increased prosperity in the community.

Hawaii may or may not decide to come abreast of the movement that is gaining every day in strength and popular favor. If the voters here should decide to try what has been effective elsewhere in doing away with much of the misery of the world, a proper trial will so demonstrate the value of prohibition that there will never be any going back. If the voters decide not to try the experiment at this time, they will some time, because that is the trend of America today and Hawaii does not always lag behind. Prohibitionists believe that the sooner prohibition comes the better; the opposition hopes to put it off as long as possible. That it will come eventually is inevitable.

Hawaiians, who are being led to believe that behind the prohibition movement is some blow aimed at their nationality, should not allow themselves to be deluded into an idea that prohibition is any local question. Prohibition is as much a force in America today as the sentiment that developed against the slave trade, which grew until the force of it swept that disgrace out of America. In the long run, prohibitionists will win. That is what keeps them in the field. It is the certainty of ultimate victory. There is no defeat to be reckoned with. There may be a momentary repulse, but the advance goes on.

Back of the fight the prohibitionists are making is no selfish interest. Prohibitionists have nothing to offer the people that is for sale and for which they can exchange the money now going across the bars of the Territory. Health, comparative happiness, more freedom from disease, less inclination toward crime, fewer divorces and longer lives are among the things prohibitionists offer and they have no money price. The opposition, straining every nerve to hold in check the advancing army of prohibition, is fighting for its life, and fighting a losing battle. What they desire to retain is the right heretofore conferred upon them to coin a nation's life's blood into gain for themselves. That their trade is an evil one they themselves are quite willing to admit, but they justify themselves for engaging in it by the old plea that evil will ever be evil and one might as well guide it along the lines of one's interests as to let it go unguided.

The voters of Hawaiian blood should remember one thing in connection with this movement as it has developed at this time, and that is that on July 26, for the first time in history, the people of Hawaiian blood will have the opportunity of saying whether or not they want the sale of drink to continue in these Islands. For a hundred years they, through their rulers, attempted time and time again to stop it, and every such attempt was met by the organized, armed forces of white men who had liquor to sell. Heretofore the Hawaiians have had the saloon forced upon them. If, on July 26, they vote to continue their submission to the liquor dealers, the responsibility for the misery that liquor will continue to bring to the Hawaiians and that it will continue to bring to the whites will be shifted to their own shoulders.

If the Hawaiian voters remember the words of Kamehameha I, of Kamehameha III, of Kamehameha IV, and others of the ali, they will throw off the liquor yoke; if they listen to the advice of those white men whose interest in this question is one bred of a desire to make money at any cost, they are allowing themselves to be blinded by specious appeals of anti-haole and anti-missionary flavor and will be throwing the advice of their former kings back into their dead faces.

HOW ABOUT KAUAI?

Two-thirds of a column is devoted by the Bulletin to mere discussion of the question:

Has or has not the Island of Kauai been better off since she abolished the retail liquor traffic?

But there is no answer to the question,—unless the following be an answer: In the esteem of some citizens of Kauai, that county has been better off; in the esteem of others, it has not been better off.

What is the answer, "in the esteem" of the Bulletin, which is free to discuss the issue in any other way but by answering this question? The question remains, Is Kauai better off under her system of near-prohibition, or is she not?

The Bulletin feels free to say that Maine is badly off and to tell of other far-off communities being injured by Prohibition. But its answer as to Kauai, which is close at hand, and regarding which first-hand knowledge is easily obtainable, is indefinite. However it makes one important admission:

The situation on the Island of Kauai may be accepted by all as a demonstration of the general satisfaction of the citizens of that county with the present law for the control of the liquor traffic.

Here is the liquor organ itself saying that the citizens of Kauai have "general satisfaction" with the present law for the control of the liquor traffic, after that law has been used for two years to prohibit the retail liquor business. It is the Bulletin, arguing for the liquor dealers, that says this.

BRITAIN'S NEW EXPANSION.

The news from South Africa of the birth of a new British state, described as "United South Africa," tells of a momentous advance of Anglo-Saxon civilization. The territory of the newly united states is large enough to be an empire of itself. It is a most striking example of the great genius of the British people for empire-building that they should at this date be found organizing such a union of self-governing, but British, South African states. It is not ten years since a very bitter war was waged to establish the supremacy of the British flag in this very region. Today the states which were enemies of England then are found under the British flag, with a premier who was ten years ago a general in the war against Britain. There was no effort after the war to subdue the Transvaal, or her neighbors. The declaration of peace was followed almost immediately by plans of the victors in the war to establish home rule among the vanquished. This was done apparently with such good effect that therein is now being developed in South Africa another great loyal division of the British empire, comparable to Australia and Canada. All this is carrying out the dreams of Cecil Rhodes much sooner than he probably hoped that they could be realized. He could hardly have hoped, at the time of his death, that his dream of a South Africa under the British flag would come true so soon.

Has there ever been in the history of the world before, a war which was practically a war of conquest, followed so soon by a friendly union of victors and vanquished? How strong an addition to the resources upon which Downing street can call, will South Africa united make?

Panama sent two and a half million bunches of bananas to the United States so far during the present fiscal year, valued at $604,781. Hawaii can supply that many for the mainland trade just as soon as someone systematizes the business and provides the fruit steamers.

For a long time it has been supposed that brewery shops made poor cattle feed, but just look at the way the Calf is fattening up.

The Bulletin, with a degree of wit which only flashes occasionally, refers to the Advertiser as "the Mother of Blind Pigs." If that paper would rub the gold dust from its eyes it would see that the cause it advocates is the Mother of Most Misery.

The Star, having discovered that the British steamer Venus, after engaging openly on the side of President Madrid of Nicaragua, is classed by an exchange as a Nicaraguan warship, feels that its own ignorance has been confirmed. It is consequently happy.

Nail up the brewery and shut up the wholesale importers, and the blind pigs and the speak-easies will take care of themselves.

The Loneliest Ocean Ever

By Robert J. Burdette, in Los Angeles Times.

Pacific Ocean, April, 1910.
When you look at a commercial map of the Pacific Ocean with the converging, crossing, intersecting, diverging, coinciding and tangent lines of the various and numerous steamship companies blue-lined over it until it resembles the mining claims about Cripple Creek, and then think of all the uncharted lines of tramp freighters and sailing ships that traverse the billowy highways of this vast waterway, you are apt to be disturbed by a fear that you might fall overboard, in which case you would surely break your head by falling on the deck of a passing ship. Do not worry. If you should fall overboard at any hour and in any longitude, you will get wet, all right. And while you are swallowing enormous quantities of unbottled Pacific Ocean water, guaranteed under the pure food law, and for which you have no use whatever, and which you will not be able to retain after the boat for which you are somewhat impatiently waiting reaches you, you would like to get the man who drew that map of a thousand roadways, by the hair.

The seventh day out of Honolulu, and three lonely days to come, and we have not sighted a sail. We are beginning to sympathize with Enoch Arden. How the women stand three days without a sale is a mystery to the men. But they seem to be as happy as they always are. It is a part of their self-sacrificing lives to suffer and smile. As for the men—well, there is a barber shop on the ship, so we do not miss the morning paper. And there is a smoking room with all the appointments thereunto appertaining, so we have the latest things in politics. What we do not know we invent, which is very much what we do ashore in similar discussions.

It is not at all necessary that people should be entertained at sea. The Pacific Ocean is not a plaything. It is too big, too majestic, too much like eternity in the infinity of its reach, clear out to the rim of the universe, to be used as a nursery kindergarten for a lot of grown-up men and women. It should not be expected to lift a sail on the horizon for the pastime of a man who thinks he has seen the ocean because he looked at it once as the ship steamed out of the Golden Gate. If there is nothing to look at but the sea, the average globe-trotter can largely broaden his knowledge by studying it a few hours every morning and having a review in the afternoon. Sailor men who have followed the sea all their lives tell me they are yet finding the big blue page and learning new lessons day by day.

It is good medicine to have nothing but the sea just to look at, sometimes. Not comment on it at all. Not say to the helpless passenger whose chair grim fate has anchored next your own: "Isn't it grand?" Nor to inform him that "one never tires of looking at the sea." Nor to begin to recite "Roll on, thou deep and dark blue ocean, roll," and stick eternally on the second roll. But just to look, and keep your mouth shut.

But there are some men—and even a few women—who can not sit down in the next chair without saying something to you. They have to. You can see the devil of "talk" working on the helpless victim of its chattering possession. He looks at you, at first furtively, then boldly. He sees your rap gaze fixed on some picture of beauty, some dream of home, some vision of a far-away land, some dream palace of the fancy which your thoughts have builded in the tenderness of meditation, and which the sound of a voice will topple into ruin. He sees how happy you are without his presence—how oblivious, indeed, you are to anything or anybody this side of your airy castle, and he feels within himself the convulsive spirit of the destroyer. He says, with a proud accent of malignity:

"Nice morning, isn't it?"
He has thrown his brick. Your mirror is broken, shattered into a thousand fragments. You can never again reconstruct that dream palace. That particular mood will never again draw you, all unresisting, into the silken meshes of its rainbow den.

And the lieutenant "hopes he hasn't disturbed your reverie." The liar. He knows he has, and he did it on purpose.
And yet we should not be too harsh in our censure. For sometimes the victim of goethetic loquacity is sorrowfully aware of his malady, but can find no cure. It is a sort of insanity, like the drunk madness, or kleptomania, or insomnia, or book-hurrying, or looking through new houses before the tenant gets in, or drumming the devil's tattoo with the fingers. He can no more sit near another human being without saying something than a dog can visit a cat shop without barking. Or, possibly, whelping.

Now, a long voyage on a lonely sea is a good medicine for this malady. For in a few days that sort of a man—I do not say woman, for reasons that are good and sufficient to myself—will talk himself out. And if you have sufficient strength of purpose to refrain from helping him out by even the most commonplace and banal suggestions, he will soon become able to sit with a closed book in his lap and look at the sea for an hour without breaking the sacred silence. And by a judicious continuance of the treatment you may soon bring the patient into that normal condition of sanity that will enable him to hear a remark of your own concerning, say, the "grandeur" of the ocean, without listening or replying save by a slow, pitying glance in the general direction of the linguacious disturbance. The recovery may then be considered complete.

The effect of a long sea voyage upon this mania may be observed in the increasing quiet on shipboard, day by day. As people become better acquainted with the Pacific Ocean, which is so much older than the land on which we live, as they gaze upon its "innumerable dimples," and its many-millioned dimples, they gradually lose interest in people, especially upon those of such recent origin that they are of the present generation. Then we know that everybody is happy.

Is it a nuisance, then, and one uncalculated for, to participate in the customary recreations and sports of the ocean voyage? Not by a sail full of wind. For these things are indicative of the beautiful spirit of altruism that prevails among the passengers on a long voyage. Each for all the rest is the rule. The men who take active part in the sports do not do this for their own amusement, nor do the musical people sing and play to enjoy their own work. Frequently they are making the voyage to get away from these very things. But somehow on shipboard every one is willing to contribute liberally out of his ten or five talents, or the entire wealth of his one talent, which is sometimes better than all the rest for the enjoyment of the recreation of the rest of the community. It is a very selfish man who refuses to thus contribute. And I do love to see grown-up people, in the very abandonment of joyous sea life, toss their dignity of authority and learning and business prosperity and social station overboard and romp with the children—lovers of them and part of them. That isn't pastime.

That is happiness. That is the frolicking of colts in a pasture field that provokes the staid old work horses and the racing thoroughbreds whose triumphs on the track are of yesterday, to join with them in imitations of the way "we used to do it." A little bit stiff in the joints, maybe. The old "high school" steps grow a bit angular. The military prancing is not quite so proud as when the lances sounded forty years ago. But it isn't such bad romping, after all, for gray-haired boys and girls with quiet smiles. For old Father Time is very fond of children and dearly loves his boys and girls. And, as he is several million years old himself, the little matter of a difference of seventy years or so in the ages of his children only makes him laugh when you call his attention to the fact that some of them are too old to play childish games.

For it isn't Time's fault if they have grown so old they can't play. That's because they haven't lived right. I have known boys in the primary school in kilts and pinnafors, who were much older than their own jolly grandfathers that the old boys called the kids "Mister," when they addressed the youngsters in company.

"I am absolutely certain," said John G. Woolley yesterday, "that Delegate Kuhio intends to come back here and take part in the campaign. I became very well acquainted with him in Washington, and was convinced of his complete honesty and sincerity, in the attitude he took on the liquor question. I feel absolutely confident that if he can possibly do so, he will come here and take his part in the discussion. Delegate Kalamanaole is thoroughly earnest in his opinions regarding this question, and he will campaign for his views as far as he is able to do so."

While there is some doubt as to whether Kuhio will be able to come here and take the stump in the plebiscite campaign, there is no doubt whatever as to his attitude. He is in favor of the prohibition side of the issue. In fact Kuhio is a radical on this question, and wanted the Republican party to make it a party issue.

The plans of the delegate will not be definitely known until congress adjourns. It is understood that after adjournment, he will go to a health resort, and that he expects to come here in time to take part in the plebiscite campaign. Kuhio's health is a matter of considerable anxiety to his friends.

WARNED HIM.

The other night, according to the story, Finley Peter Dunne wanted a taxicab at the club. He told John, who superintends the outside of the Brook, of his needs. The cab came. John thrust his head through the doors to notify Mr. Dunne. Mr. Dunne came to the door, getting into a broad-tail overcoat. "This way, cabbie," said John in his most magnificent way, turning to address the chauffeur. John's foot slipped and he spalled himself down the steps on his ear. "An. John, John," said Mr. Dunne, shaking his head sorrowfully, "you must be more careful of your reputation. John. You might not be come down stairs that way. People will take you for one of the members."

CANDID.

A summer visitor who was trying a horse, the property of a New Hampshire farmer, with a view of buying him, noticed that after driving a few miles the animal pulled very hard, requiring a firm hand and constant watching. "Do you think this is just the horse for a lady to drive?" he inquired respectfully.

"Well," answered the owner, with an air of great candor, "I must say I shouldn't really want to be the husband of the woman who could drive that horse."—Boston Register.

George A. Davis was the first speaker, responding to the toast: "The President of the United States." Judge Davis included all the Presidents in his address, paying especial tribute to the memories of Washington and Lincoln.

"The Governor of Hawaii" was responded to by the Hon. W. O. Smith, described by the toastmaster as the "Warwick of many administrations." Mr. Smith was in especially good form. Chief Justice Beatty responded to the toast "Our Guests," taking occasion of the opportunity to thank the people of Hawaii for the hospitality they had shown him and promising that he would become a volunteer booster for Hawaii. He referred to the density of ignorance existing on the mainland regarding the Islands, confessing that even he had learned things during his short visit never known by him before.

Justice De Bolt, responding for "The Territorial Bar," reviewed the history of the Hawaiian judiciary from the time of Kamehameha I, his address being of historical importance interest, showing how the present day system followed closely after the lines laid down by the first great Hawaiian ruler. The paper of the evening was read by Judge Whitely, dealing with the work of the local juvenile court and reviewing the history of the juvenile court movement in England and America.

Governor Frear made a short address, stating that although he had been out of active practice for seventeen years he still felt at ease when in the company of lawyers. He referred to the fact that a legal training gave a man a broad mind, capable of seeing the merits of more than one side of a question, for which reason he liked to discuss matters with lawyers and have them on the various boards and in the various positions to be filled by him.

The address of the evening was made by Mr. Cathcart, who took as his text the remark made by Theodore Roosevelt at the Sorbonne when he said that that country was in a sorry plight that had for its leaders only "clerks, politicians and lawyers." The speaker stated that he knew not what the former President meant by "clerks." As for "politicians," he, Roosevelt, was among the greatest of that class and could offer his own defense, but as for "lawyers," the aspersions that they were not to be included among the leaders of a people was unfounded. The speaker reviewed briefly, but eloquently, the part that lawyers had had in making the United States, their share being greater than had been that of the men who defended the United States by force of arms.

He concluded by a pointed reference to that greatest of all the Presidents, Abraham Lincoln, who had been "a clerk, a politician and a lawyer," and who had finally given up his life for the Union he had preserved.

Mr. Cathcart's speech was the final one on the program, the diners adjourning after drinking a toast to D. L. Withington, the newly elected president of the association, who is at present abroad.

The menu was:
Baked Oysters, Yaquina
Canape Holstein

Sweetbreads Braise, Marigny

"I defy any one to name a field of endeavor in which men do not receive more consideration than women!" exclaimed the orator at a suffragette meeting. "The chorus," murmured some irresponsible person.—Lippincott's Magazine.

FAIRCHILD HAS NO FREE HAND

Postponement of Sale of Kapaa
Leases Will Not Have Any Ultimate Effect.

The postponement of the sale of the Kapaa lease will not change the situation in any respect so far as the ultimate result is concerned, neither will it give Fairchild a "free hand" without regard for the terms of the solemn agreement that formed a large part of the discussion of the conference that lasted at the Capitol for a period of several weeks.

Governor Frear stated yesterday afternoon that the only change in the original plans will be that the sale of the leases will have to be submitted first to the public land commission and then, if the commission approves of it, advertised for sixty days. It is true enough that Fairchild is the only one who is liable to bid, but this will not enable him to take the leases at his own figure, even if he were inclined to do so, for an upset price will be fixed, and this upset price will probably be the same as the sale price already agreed upon by Fairchild and the administration.

The public lands commission, to which the sale of the leases must first be submitted, has not yet been appointed by the Governor but he says he will appoint it before he leaves for the mainland June 8. As the sale of the leases must be advertised for sixty days, the Governor will probably be back in Honolulu before it takes place.

Collector Drake Has More Than Doubled Collections of Revenue Office.

If the resignation of Collector of Internal Revenue Walter F. Drake is accepted—it has not yet been accepted—the government will lose the services of an officer who during his term in office has more than doubled the total collections for this district, raising them from $43,000 for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1906, to approximately $95,000 for this year which ends June 30 next. This latter figure does not include the corporation taxes, which will amount to about $125,000 more.

The receipts for this year, exclusive of corporation taxes, will total about $500,000 more than those for last year. Mr. Drake and his deputies have been very active in looking after the work of the office, and while it is probable that the total returns would naturally have shown a considerable increase, it is largely due to the work of the collector and his force that the total increase is as great as it is.

Around the Police Station

A hurry call for the fire department was sent in yesterday afternoon from the corner of Fort and School, and the fire boys, after a careful search found the last remains of a fire on the roof of Postmaster Pratt's house. A spark from the stove had set fire to a few shingles, the fire being discovered by Pratt in time and extinguished before the department arrived.

New Officer.

Special Officer Ah Mow, attached to the detective department, resigned yesterday, ill health making it impossible for him to keep up with the strenuous life of McDuffie's boys. His place was filled by the appointment of Ahnui, formerly a hackdriver in the city. Ahnui speaks and writes Chinese, Hawaiian and English and will be a valuable addition to the staff. McDuffie's boys, between them, now speak English, Hawaiian, Chinese, Japanese, Korean, German, Spanish and Portuguese.

Profitable Gamblers.

Police court receipts yesterday from gamblers alone amounted to $122. Chief McBride proving all his cases against eighteen persons with the exception of one. Two received suspended sentences. The five natives of the crew of the Libelike caught gambling Sunday were sentenced to pay $8 and costs apiece, with the exception of a discharged one. Five Japanese from the same vessel, who were also caught Sunday but in another place, paid $9 and costs. A third group of six, three of whom were women, were fined $7, with the exception of S. A. Crawford, who paid $10 upon request of Judge Andrade.

Police Notes.

Mmanuel Pinto, Charles Santos, John Costa and John Carey were yesterday arrested on warrant charged with assault and battery, being released to appear on their own recognizance. A Chinaman was the complainant.

Mrs. Kankini Smith swore out a warrant yesterday for the arrest of Sam Kamea, charging him with profanity. She was quite fearful over the terms that had been applied to her by the complainant in question.

OBJECTED TO SECOND WIFE

Chinese Woman Leaves Husband
Because She Was Only
Number Two.

Because Leong Feat's wife, Mary Ho Leong, came into court and testified herself that she had not been taken away from the home of her husband by her parents and that she was not restrained by them of her liberty, the writ of habeas corpus sued out by Leong Feat for the recovery of his lost bride was dismissed yesterday by Judge Robinson.

Leong Feat in his petition claimed that the girl's mother had come to his house and taken her away during his absence and would not let her return to him. This was denied by both the mother and father of the bride, and their allegations were substantiated when the girl took the stand and stated that she left her husband's house of her own accord because he had told her that he had another wife in China. This phase of the matter may become the subject of an investigation by United States District Attorney Breckens and the federal grand jury.

NEW MAUSOLEUM NEARLY READY

Receptacle for Bodies of Royal Dead to Be Consecrated Before Long.

The new mausoleum for the bodies of deceased royalty is expected to be near enough completion in a short time for the bodies to be removed from the old mausoleum and placed in it. Superintendent of Public Works Campbell yesterday received notice that the marble for the interior finishing, which has been long awaited, has arrived, and he at once notified Queen Liliuokalani, with whom he is acting in the building of the royal tomb, to that effect, and requested her to make arrangements for the consecration of the mausoleum and the transfer to it of the bodies now reposing in the old sepulcher.

All the concrete work of the structure was completed several months ago and the contractor has been waiting for the arrival of the marble.

YOU WILL NOT

be deceived. That there are cheats and frauds in plenty everybody knows; but it is seldom or never that any large business house is guilty of them, no matter what line of trade it follows. There can be no permanent success of any kind based on dishonesty or deception. There never was, and never will be. The men who try that are simply fools and soon come to grief, as they deserve. Now many persons are, nevertheless, afraid to buy certain advertised articles lest they be humbugged and deluded; especially are they slow to place confidence in published statements of the merits of medicines. The effective modern remedy known as WAMPOL'S PREPARATION is as safe and genuine an article to purchase as flour, silk or cotton goods from the mills of manufacturers with a world-wide reputation. We could not afford to exaggerate its qualities or misrepresent it in the least; and it is not necessary. It is palatable as honey and contains all the curative properties of pure Cod Liver Oil, extracted by us from fresh cod livers, combined with the Compound Syrup of Hypophosphites and the Extracts of Mah and Wild Cherry; and how valuable such a blending of these important medicinal agents must be to explain to everybody. It is beyond price in Delicacy, Long Troubles and Blood Impurities. Science can furnish nothing better—perhaps nothing so good. Dr. W. H. D. Palf, of Canada, says: "I have used it in my practice and with pleasure in recommending it as a valuable tonic and restorative." It is a remedy that can afford to appeal to its record and represents the science and knowledge of bright and aggressive medical investigation—truly bottle convinced." At chemists.

WASHINGTON'S SWORD
CAUSE OF LITIGATION

Descendants of Aide-de-Camp Lewis Sue to Recover Portion of Funds Derived From Its Sale.

BALTIMORE, Md., May 14.—Gen. George Washington's famous sword which he presented his aide-de-camp, Major George W. Lewis, after the termination of the Revolutionary War, and which recently was purchased by J. Pierpont Morgan of New York and presented to the Mount Vernon Association, owners of the home of the father of his country, where it now hangs, was made the subject of litigation started today in the Baltimore courts.

Mr. Traylor S. Lewis of this city, a nephew of General Washington's aide-de-camp, Mrs. Grace Lee Martin, Mr. Lewis' niece, and her husband, Capt. Amos H. Martin, Fourteenth Infantry, United States Army, are the plaintiffs in the bill of complaint, which was filed through a Baltimore attorney.

The sword was sold by Miss Virginia Taylor Lewis, administratrix of the estate of Capt. Henry Howell Lewis of the United States and Confederate navies and Henry Howell Lewis, his grandson.

The plaintiffs allege that they are entitled to a share of the proceeds and ask that the court order an accounting of the estate of Capt. Henry Howell Lewis for the sale of the sword. It is set forth that Miss Lewis deposited the proceeds with the Mercantile Trust and Deposit Company of this city. The company, it is stated, is to purchase stocks and bonds and she is to enjoy the interest that will accrue. At her death the property is to go to Henry Howell Lewis, the younger, thus shutting off the other relatives from getting any part of the money received from the sword.

The sword was worn by Washington when he resigned the commission at Annapolis.

Cavalry Equipment Board.

The first work of the cavalry equipment board, which convened recently at Rock Island arsenal, will be the consideration of a mass of suggestions regarding changes in the equipment of man and mount in the cavalry branch of the service. These suggestions, which have been forwarded to the board through the Army ordnance, are the accumulation of several years. One of the first subjects of discussion in the change of cavalry equipment will, in all probability, be the design of the saddle, of which there has been much criticism by officers of the mounted service.

The personnel of the board has been slightly changed from that provided for in the original order. Col. E. J. McQuinn, First Cavalry, having been designated as presiding officer in place of Col. Alexander Rodgers, Sixth Cavalry, relieved at his own request.

Study of Battlefields.

A party of officers attached to the Army War College of Washington barracks is engaged in the annual study of the battlefields of Virginia. The party is under command of Maj. Eben Swift of the Ninth Cavalry and is making the entire outward trip on horseback. Leaving here last Monday, the officers yesterday looked over the battlefields of Fredericksburg. Tomorrow a visit will be made to the battlefields of Chancellorsville and Salem.

The battlefield of the Wilderness will be visited next Wednesday and the battlefield of North Anna next Sunday. During the following week visits will be made to the battlefields of Cold Harbor, Gaines Mills, Mechanicsville, Savage Station, Seven Pines, White Oak Swamp and Malvern Hill. Richmond will be reached the 25th instant and the party will return to Washington the next day by rail.—Washington Star, May 10.

Marine Trial Board.

A board of officers convened at the marine barracks, Washington, D. C., last week for the purpose of conducting the examination of certain officers of the Marine Corps for promotion. The board, which consists of Col. William P. Butler, Marine Corps; Surgeon L. W. Spradling and Passed Assistant Surgeon Harry Shaw, U. S. N.; Captains Louis M. Gable and William H. Clark of the Marine Corps; First Lieutenants E. B. Miller, Harrison T. Swann and Gerald M. Kneader, will take the tests for the position of captain and First Lieutenant. Reginald Ludlow and See and Lieut. Robert E. Adams will take the test for first lieutenant.

YACHT HAWAII
AFTER THE CUP

from masters of vessels on which he has sailed purposely to fit himself for this race. All the rest of the crew are old time yachtsmen. One of them, William Tarnstrom, was second in charge of the Gwendolyn II, when she won the 1908 race, beating the Lurline by her handicap. The other members of the crew are: Charles Lewis, Jack O'Brien, Robert Hendrix, W. H. Strand, Gunn Wilder, Joe Ellis, Harry Brock, Sammie Nelson, and Hamilton the cook.

After posing for their pictures on the deck of the ship, the gallant crew set out to sail. The two main masts were set up and the ship was hoisted up. As these were being hoisted the Lurline, the first of the race, came along and threw a tow-line to the racing craft which was caught, but the tug drifted too far astern and the yacht men had to let go. At this Captain Wilder decided to go it alone. The forward line was cast off and the bow of the yacht swung around to port. She at once caught the breeze and cut right across toward the Ewa end of the harbor. She had not gone more than a hundred yards when the man at the tiller brought her about on the starboard tack and the yacht veered clear around, first facing the shore, then the Gwendolyn which she had just left, and then, pointing her nose to the channel, she went off like a rocket.

The Hawaii behaved admirably in these harbor maneuvers with a strong wind blowing, and she showed perfect response to the mariner's will. Commodore Jaeger of the Hawaii Yacht Club went out as escort with a party in the launch Kilauea, running ahead of the yacht for about two miles and then veered around and returned. Those who accompanied Jaeger were C. Dunkhase, Harry Wilder, Senator Harvey, Archie Robertson and Henry Royal of the McBee Stock Company.

In answer to a question as to how the Hawaii compares with the Gwendolyn II, which won the last race in 1908, William Tarnstrom, who sailed in the Gwendolyn then and goes in the Hawaii this year, said to an Advertiser reporter just before the Hawaii left the dock that the Hawaii was superior to the former winner in every way. The Gwendolyn is only a seventeen-ton boat while the Hawaii weighs thirty-four tons. The little yacht could cover more distance with a light breeze, he said, while with any kind of a wind the Hawaii would run right away from her. The Gwendolyn, however, being only forty-eight feet over all against the Hawaii's seventy, the latter will have to give the smaller boat eighteen hours' handicap or thirty minutes per excess foot.

If the Lurline enters the race she will have to give the Hawaii a handicap of six hours as she is twelve feet longer than the island representative. The Lurline was the first boat in at the finish of the race in 1908, but she lost the race to the Gwendolyn II, on the twenty-four-hour handicap she was obliged to allow the little yacht. With plenty of wind for the race, which starts on the ninth of July the Hawaii ought to find no difficulty in overcoming the eighteen hours handicap to the Gwendolyn, and having six hours advantage over the Lurline. The crew yesterday seemed to have no misgivings as to the outcome of the 1910 trans-Pacific race. All the other yachts entered so far for the race are about in the Gwendolyn's class. They are: The Winsome, Sweetheart, Siwash, Gwendolyn II, La Vajiera and the Hawaii. The Hawaii expects to reach San Pedro by the twentieth of June and this will give her eighteen days to trim for the race.

LETTING THE CAT OUT.

"Say, grandpa, make a noise like a frog," coaxed little Tommy.

"What for, my son?"

"Why, papa says that when you croak we'll get five thousand dollars."

—Success.

Higgins—How were the aeroplane races yesterday? Wiggins—Good, only for the fact that the track was too heavy for making records. Higgins—What do you mean? Wiggins—They were pulled off over Pittsburg, you know.—Pack.

NEW SWISS STAMP A WORK OF ART

LONDON—A very considerable revenue is derived in Switzerland from the sale of postage stamps, millions of which are annually forwarded all over the world to the crowds of tourists who patronize Switzerland every year.

Not satisfied with the somewhat primitive method of merely writing in blue ink on the letter or postal packet the amount of the surcharge, as is done in the majority of countries, the Swiss government has used separate stamps since the last thirty years. The new stamp about to be issued is to replace the plain squares of paper now employed mainly because the stamps are considered to be inartistic. The new stamp to be issued next month will contain the federal coat-of-arms surrounded by a wreath of cyclamens, and in the distance will be represented a range of snow-capped mountains. It is announced that collectors wishing to purchase these stamps to add to their collections may do so at any post office in the country, where, at the cost of the purchase, they will be placed in the orthodox manner.

RUSSIAN BLACK BREAD.

The Englishman in Russia writes thus to the New York Press:

Many foolish stories have recently been circulated about black bread, with supposed inferiority to white or golden bread. I state, for the information of those who may be interested in the matter, that in great growing Russia black bread is not exclusively by at least 90 per cent of the population, not on account of its cheapness, but because of its wholesome and nourishing qualities. I have over 40 years' experience in this matter and hundreds of opportunities of judging the quality and character of breads in every quarter of the empire. I can say with truth that, in the fact that the white bread of Russia is as good as, if not better than, any that may be found in any other part of the world, I decided to make black bread, and I know no purer black bread, and I know no more wholesome morsel than a crisp loaf of this same black bread with a little butter on it. Those who have never tasted Russian black bread, and who are to be some dreadful complaint, ought to give it a trial. They will never again be prone to say that it is not good for food.

These scientific sharp claims that "black bread produces optimism," "black bread does, I know. Just now all the doctors are saying that it is better than any other food in the season."—Metropolitan Post.

DICKENS CHARACTERS SHOWN AT ART LEAGUE

Dickens' best characters were given life before a select audience in the Kiloheana Art League rooms last night, when Frank Speight, the English interpreter of that author, gave readings from Pickwick.

Mr. Speight has a command of his subject that comes from an enthusiasm in it naturally generated by a life's study. It must have been no surprise to him when he discovered that he was fitted to portray Dickens' immortal characters for he has a Dickensian cast of features, a Dickensian character himself and a pure accent.

His rendition of chapters from Pickwick last night was delightful, and he kept his audience continually amused. His Pickwick was unmistakable and his Sam Weller Jr. was perfection. His description of the hunting scene, where Mr. Winkle so thoroughly alarms Mr. Pickwick by manhandling his gun, was particularly good.

Thursday night he will give David Copperfield and next Tuesday the Christmas Carol, also at the Kiloheana rooms.

WHAT THE PRESS AGENTS SAY

The Empire Theater.

Edward Rose made the hit of the show at the Empire on Monday night and he was obliged to respond to the applause several times after the curtain had been lowered. Mr. Rose has made a mark here and his singing has captivated the audiences at the Empire. This will be his last week. Miss MacNeil is singing her way into the hearts of the people and the audiences at the Empire regret that this is to be her last week. Next week there will be some new attractions. The collection of motion pictures for tonight includes "On the Wrong Scant," "He Tried on Handcuffs," "The Mislaid Baby," and the "Pay Car."

The Park Theater.

The audience at this comfortable theater will have an opportunity to visit Switzerland and climb the Jungfrau tonight. This is a grand picture and it is the cheapest way to visit the country of magnificent scenery. The libretto will have a new act as will Miss Rhodes and Uncle Wallner is to give another of his popular parodies on the late songs. Wallner has the audience at the Park every night and he is going to hold the people.

FINE SHOW GIVEN BY MAGICIAN NICOLA

The initial appearance last night of Nicola, the magician, and his splendid company, at the Hawaiian Opera-house, was before a crowded house, which sat through three hours of interesting and fascinating wonder performances, breathlessly awaiting each denouement and climax.

Nicola is one of the most interesting of his class who has visited here. He does things which even the great Herman probably never thought of.

After a long series of dainty tricks and cabinet performances, Nicola showed that he is entitled to the title of a "Handcuff King," for he slipped off with ease handcuffs and leg shackles brought to the theater from Oahu Prison by Turnkey Billy Woods and Police Officer Keolohapua, both of whom fastened their instruments to Nicola's wrists and ankles. In five minutes all the instruments were off and entirely unlocked. The handcuffs and shackles were put on in the full view of the audience and were taken off in a cabinet. One pair, called by Nicola an old English set, were locked by Billy Woods afterwards and Nicola opened these in view of the audience. "Just you get into Oahu Prison once," said Billy, "and you'll not get out of our handcuffs."

This feature of the entertainment was one of the most tense of all and won tremendous applause, as did also another test in which Nicola was securely lashed to a chair by a heavy rope, from which he freed himself in five minutes of strange contortions.

Nicola's show is clean and interesting, for adults as well as for young people. It is one of the best shows of the kind ever put on here.

SHERIFF'S DAUGHTER DIES UNEXPECTEDLY

Little Mary Jarrett, the eight months old daughter of Sheriff Jarrett, died yesterday morning unexpectedly after a short illness of a week or so. The little girl was born September 27. Sheriff Jarrett was notified suddenly yesterday while he was in his office that she was dying and at once rushed home. The baby died immediately afterwards. The sheriff's sympathetic officers and men raised a purse of $50 for a floral tribute.

The funeral will take place this afternoon from the home, 30 South Vineyard street, and will be private. The baby was an only child.

AMERICA'S FIRST INTERNATIONAL MEET

The first international airship meet to be held in America is scheduled for the last week in October of this year at Hempstead Plains, L. I., just outside New York city limits. The race for the international trophy and the $5000 prize that goes with it will be the chief event, but grouped around it will be all sorts of competitions for testing the possibilities of the different types of heavier-than-air machines. In the six days' program will be included long and short distance trials, altitude and endurance tests, passenger-carrying and probably cross-country flights. The most skilful aviators of Europe are expected and a lively contest is anticipated for the world's championships in various events.

Naturally the Wrights are looked to by Americans to maintain their supremacy in the air. It is stated that they will build several racing machines for the occasion and will either compete themselves or send trained men to operate their flyers. Several other cities were eager to secure the meet and large sums were offered for prizes and expenses, but the board of governors of the Aero Club of America decided on New York after careful consideration. The location of future competitions will not make so much difference, but in fixing upon New York for the initial one the committee's choice will meet with popular approval, as it will permit of a vast attendance of spectators with less travel than would be possible elsewhere. Los Angeles, knowing by experience what an attraction even a smaller gathering of aviators was, made a strenuous effort to get the international, and ambitious Seattle also put in a bid for it, but was too far away to be at all favorably considered.

New ideas will in all probability be tried out by numerous inventors during the coming summer, and it would not be in the least surprising if greatly improved models and motors should come to the front in the fall. There is reason for confidence on our part that Americans will lead the flock of flyers.

PICKWICK.

Pickwick immortal! Land is the laughter With which men greet those All over the world. No England above, Solace of the world's eyes, Welcome, thus ever, With fondest salute, Whole nations ring forth Their hearty galleys And children sighing Will take up the strain, Blessing the master That sets them and Sun That sets them and Sun Rippling with laughter Around a sea world.
