The Sign of Fact and Fancy.
(Canon City Mercury.)

The young lady who wore the costume of Pocahontas at the firemen's masquerade last Thursday evening, and in pink hosiery and kid slippers took the prize as the most realistically costumed lady was ever introduced with. To those who are not familiar with the early days of this country the Indian maiden appears beautiful in her wild simplicity, wearing the fringed garments of her tribe, as she stands outlined against the glorious sky dressed in a corset of eagles' feathers and a red health coat trimmed with bead work. Shall we then, with ruthless hand, shatter this beautiful picture which was represented so faithfully by the young lady the other evening! Shall we portray the real Indian maiden, as we have seen her in all her unpoetic nature, clothed in a pair of soldier trousers, a horse blanket, with a neck-lace of the false teeth of the paleface, and her coarse, unkempt hair hanging over her smoky features and clinging to her warty, bony neck? No, no. Far be it from us to destroy the lovely vision of copper-colored grace and beauty, which the soft dune of the effects east has erected in the rose-hued chambers of fancy. Let her dwell there as the plump-limbed princess of a brave people. Let her adorn the dormer window of his memory, proud, beautiful, grand, gaudy, and peculiar, as she was arrayed at last Thursday's masquerade. We will spare this ideal Indian maiden with a back comb and gold garters. Let her live in the memory of those who saw her the other evening, just as she was then, while the true Indian maiden eats the frizzled locust of the plains and wears the plug hat of progress.

A Cannibal Christmas.
(The Judge.)

What a merry, merry Christmas some of our missionaries on the coast of Africa must have had.
A Texas Cattle Queen.
(Kansas City Times.)
There is a cattle queen named Rogers near Corpus Christi, Tex., who owns 40,000 cattle, and is worth $1,000,000. She is the financial agent of the ranch, keeps the pocketbook and oversees the stock, while she sends her second husband to the Texas legislature.

OUR LATE NEWS.

We publish elsewhere the latest items from the Coast. It will be seen that there is really nothing now in the summary, but it confirms previous advices, to the effect that Russia is evidently bent upon war and will leave England no alternative but to fight. The evacuation of Soudan by the British is a step preliminary to trying conclusions with Russia.

The revolt in Kasagar has assumed serious proportions, and the Mohammedan leader has invoked Russian assistance. This is doubtless a diversion by Russia to compel China to give way on the Manchuria frontier question.

India is making great preparations for war. Russia demands diplomatic representation at Cabul.

American news is devoid of interest, beyond an improvement in the health of General Grant.

We omit our editorial articles to make room for the foreign news.

ARRIVAL OF THE RIO DE JANEIRO.

The Pacific Mail Company's steamship Rio de Janeiro signalled for a pilot off the harbor about 1:30 a. m. to-day, but was compelled to stem away again owing to the non-appearance of that official. There are some 300 Chinese immigrants on board for this port. The Rio brings dates to the 21st inclusive from San Francisco. Owing to the needless delay in communicating with the ship, we are unable to print the news in the body of this morning paper, but it will appear as early as possible in a second edition.

LATEST NEWS.

One Day's Later Dispatches by the Discovery.

The arrival of the barkentine Discovery from San Francisco last evening, has placed us in possession of Coast newspapers of the 16th instant, from which we compile the following summary:

Russia Rejects England's Afghan Boundary Proposal.

LONDON, May 15th.—The Standard believes that Russia definitely declines to sanction the proposals regarding the Afghan frontier, just submitted for approval by England.

The Standard, in an editorial, says: "To speak plainly, the draft of the Anglo-Russian agreement, which was sent to St. Petersburg approval and found to be wholly unsatisfactory to the Russian Ministers, though not rejected, has been so thoroughly both in detail that practically it has it over."

"Yet an agreement. There is something far more serious than a hitch in negotiations. We are back in February, a situation being only altered to our disadvantage."

Ministerial Explanation.
In the House of Lords Earl Granville stated that Russia's reply to the proposition concerning the Afghan agreement has been awaited for some days. A portion of the papers relating to the frontier question would be circulated to-morrow, but as the negotiations are incomplete, the papers would be broken off at the Peshawar incident. In regard to the report that Russia had given an intimation of a demand to have an acknowledged Russian representative at Cabul, Gladstone said he knew nothing.

How the Negotiation Stands.
The Pall Mall Gazette this afternoon says: "It is untrue that Russia has either accepted or rejected the English proposal regarding the Afghan frontier arrangement."

The Globe states that England demanded a definite pledge from Russia to respect the new Russo-Afghan frontier under any circumstances, and to renew the assurance that Afghanistan was outside the Russian sphere. Russia refused to accede to this request of England and retaliated by demanding further concessions.

Puppets of Russia.
St. Petersburg, May 15th.—The Official Messenger to-day publishes a report from General Komaroff to the effect that the Saraks are opposed to the new frontier line proposed by England, claiming that it is an infringement upon their rights, and gives the best land in the disputed territory to the Afghans. A council of Ministers was held, and after thoroughly discussing the subject it was decided to support the claims of the Saraks. Further negotiations between England and Russia will now be necessary, so that the claims of the Saraks may be considered before the Anglo-Russian agreement can be approved by Russia.

Getting Out of the Soudan.
SUAKIN, May 15th.—The Grenadiers and Scots Guard will embark to-morrow for England. General Graham and Colonel McNeil and Freeman will follow with the Australian contingent. A battalion of British infantry with a battery and company of sappers and a corps of native infantry will remain here as a permanent garrison under the command of Colonel Hutchinson.

The Tennis Champion.
LONDON, May 15th.—In the national court tennis championship, between Thomas Pettit of New York champion of the United States, and George Lansbert, champion of England, Pettit scored the last four sets and won the championship, by a score of 7 to 40. Both played superbly.

Ten Men Drowned.
LONDON, May 15th.—The British steamer Numidia arrived at Cannes to-day. She had been in collision off Durleston head with the steamer Messina. Ten of the latter's crew were drowned.

The Egyptian Convention.
BERLIN, May 15th.—The Egyptian convention cannot be ratified by the Reichstag until autumn. Austria will follow the same course.

The Dublin Archbishop.
ROME, May 15th.—The report that Monsignor Moran, Archbishop of Sydney, had been appointed to the Dublin Archbishopric, is untrue. It is stated that Errington has taken a new list of names for the approval of England, whose reply is hourly expected.

Foreign Securities.
LONDON, May 15th.—3 p. m.—Consols opened at 98 1/16. At 1 o'clock they are quoted at 98 1/2, at which figure they are now quoted. 3:30 p. m.—Consols, 98 1/2. 4 p. m.—Consols, 99 7/16.

The Revised Old Testament Published.
LONDON, May 15th.—Copies of the revised version of the Old Testament were given to the newspapers at midnight last night, after fourteen years of labor. All the papers this morning contain copious extracts from the work. The Archbishop of Canterbury received the first copy of the work. The five thousand people employed in binding and packing the books were closely watched to prevent any breach of trust on their part. The Dean of Canterbury, who was a member of the Revising Committee, prepared a paper on the revised version, which appeared in the London Times. It gave a detailed account of the work of revision, with special reference to the American part of it.

Minister Phelps in England.
SOUTHAMPTON, May 15th.—His Excellency Minister Phelps was received at Southampton by an influential committee, and welcomed on landing by the Mayor and municipal authorities of the town. Several speeches were made. Minister Phelps in reply said: "Nothing could have introduced me more pleasantly to your beautiful country. I have enjoyed the sight of it for the past two days, while passing along the southern coast. I never had the pleasure of seeing it before. I assure you, I come to England hoping and trusting most sincerely that I may be instrumental in promoting and continuing in a very small way those cordial, kindly and generous relations so long existing, and which, I hope, will always exist between you and your kinsmen in the great West."

Mr. Lowell was unable to be present, as the Queen had commanded him to dine with her at Windsor Castle. After the reception Mr. Phelps and his wife visited the principal places of interest in town. They declined the offer of a special train, and proceeded to London in the evening on the regular express train.

Irish Crimes Act.
LONDON, May 15th.—The Irish Crimes Act was introduced in the Lords to-day by Lord Cairlington. In the House of Commons Mr. Gladstone stated that the policy of the Government was with regard to Ireland. After explaining what the Coercion Act would contain, he said: "Were the conditions more favorable the Government would be most anxious to deal with the question of self-government in Ireland and deal with the land purchase in Ireland. Both were measures towards which the Government felt they had unfulfilled obligations. It was with great regret the Government announced their inability to take the house to deal with those measures during the present session."

Riel's Adherents Surrendering by Wholesale.
ST. PAUL, May 15th.—Dispatches from Clark's Crossing, May 11th, say: A half-breed courier arrived from Prince Albert during the night. He reports everything quiet there. He also reports that half-breeds are arriving at Middleton's camp and surrendering in large numbers. All say they were forced into the rebellion. Charles Nolin is blamed by all as the instigator of the half-breeds, and Monkan as the instigator among the Indians. Forty bodies of rebels have been found on the field, fifteen those of Indians.

Batoche, May 15th.—Father Moulin, the parish priest, was asked to-day as to the losses of the rebels in the fight at Batoche. He gave them as 81 killed and 173 "wounded." His statement may be relied upon as accurate.

Ottawa, May 15th.—In the Commons to-day the Minister of Militia read a report of the battle of Batoche, received from General Middleton, who thus closes: "I cannot, of course, be certain; but I am inclined to think the complete smash of the rebels has pretty well broken the back of the rebellion."

American Items.
An Austin (Texas) special states that a mob attacked the prison guards and released a band of forty convicts employed at work on Clay's farm, in Brazos county. Five children were burned to death at Owatonna, Minnesota, on the 15th.

General Grant slept well and the swelling in his jaw was reduced, according to a New York dispatch of the 15th.

Zachary Montgomery, a California lawyer, who has been distinguished of late years only by his violent opposition to the common school system, as opposed to religious teaching, has been appointed Assistant Attorney-General for the Interior Department.

There was a terrific thunderstorm at Red Bluff, California, on the 15th.

Miss Fanny Davenport, the actress, arrived in San Francisco on the 14th.

Description of Exhibits at Kaumakapili Church Fair,

Under the Auspices of Their Majesties the King and Queen, to Open at 3 o'clock p. m. to-day.

The fair in aid of the building fund of the Kaumakapili Church, that comes off to-day in the main auditorium of that fine edifice on Beretania street, presents many novel and interesting features. It is essentially Hawaiian, and almost all the articles displayed are of Hawaiian manufacture. His Majesty the King, with whom originated the idea of this fair, conceived the happy thought of having on exhibition and for sale as many of the implements, tools and articles used in olden times by the Hawaiians in fishing, war, play, and in all the domestic concerns of their lives, as could be gathered together on this occasion.

To this end the Committee of Arrangements solicited donations of all articles of interest as exemplifying ancient Hawaiian life and customs. The responses made have been generous, and there will be shown to-day at the church many very interesting articles.

THE APPEARANCE OF THE ROOM.
As one enters is quite artistic and pleasing. Those who had it in charge to decorate the large hall have done so in good taste. One of the principal objects that attracts the attention of the visitor upon entering the room is a life-size bust of His Majesty, modeled in cement by Mr. John Bowler, and presented by him to the fair management. The bust is colored in imitation of life and is a really good piece of artistic work. It stands on a platform, and on each side is displayed, in front, one of the ancient umbrellas of royalty, the paloulu, or sacred staff, surmounted by a ball, being the same as are borne by the hereditary supporters in the Hawaiian coat of arms. Behind these at each corner of the platform is a handsome kahlili.

On the wall behind the platform are arranged three of the huge shells of the tradachine, in each of which is placed one of the old fish gods.

These names are Kanemakua, Kuula and Kahoe. Above and below these are mallets used in making kapa, or bark cloth, arranged as star trophies. The floor of the room is occupied by tables on which are arranged a large number of articles, most of which are new to the larger number of visitors. There are models of huts made of the long grass called pili. Others are made of the tough, slender leaves of the lauhala (pandanus odoratissimus), and others of the banana. The edges of these little huts are trimmed with a thatch made from the pulu fern (Cibotium Chamissoi).

Near these are a large number of mallets, of various designs, with which the bark is used in making the kapa, or native cloth, are pounded after being macerated. Then come slips of bamboo cut into patterns with which the cloth is imprinted in various designs. Models are also shown of the heavy smooth logs on which the kapa is pounded, and the flat boards on which the bark is laid to enable the workman to scrape off the green outer bark. The scrapers themselves, made of the tough bone of the turtle's back and of plates of pearl shell, are exhibited, and the bark of different kinds used in the manufacture of cloth, fish lines and nets, and cordage in different stages of preparation, are near at hand.

THE COLLECTION OF IMPLEMENTS USED IN FISHING.
Is very complete and interesting. There is the poho, a heavy club-shaped piece of black wood, which, being smeared with the juice of the cocoanut, is let down into the water to attract the fish, which are then caught in a net.

A quantity of smooth sticks are to be seen, the use of which it would puzzle one to determine. They are shaped like the Australian boomerang, being bent at a right angle at about their center. Upon inquiry a native gives us a practical illustration of the use to which the sticks are put: he scratches his back with one of them! The one he uses is made of sandalwood, and the fragrant odor enhances the pleasure derived from the use of the stick.

STONE IMPLEMENTS, ETC.
A large number of stone axes are on exhibition. They are of all sizes, from those ten inches in length to the delicate tools hardly more than an inch long. These relics of the "stone age" on these islands are generally nicely finished, and make very nice paper weights, etc. So do the stones called nalu maika, which were used in the games of the people. They are round flat discs about two and a half inches in diameter, and the game in which they were used consisted in seeing who could roll one the farthest along some smooth plain. They are made of all kinds of lava and are very interesting as specimens of the different lavas, as well as relics of the olden times.

THE POT FOUNDERS.
On exhibition are curious. Those used by the men in pounding the food prepared from the Aurum excruciatum, which is quite tough and adhesive, are pear-shaped, and will weigh about seven pounds each. Considerable muscular force is needed to wield one of these tools for an hour or two at a time, and so this work was rarely done by women. They were expected to prepare the food made from the bread-fruit and sweet potato. The pounders they used in doing so are much lighter than those used by the men, and are made with a flatiron-like handle. In using them the boiled vegetable was not so much pounded as kneaded, as a baker would knead dough.

PECULIAR, OR STONE LAMPS.
Are also in the collection. They are of simple shape, being merely a block of lava hollowed out to receive the cocoanut oil that was formerly used by the natives for illuminating purposes. The means of obtaining fire practiced by the natives in former years is shown. There are bundles of "fire sticks" on exhibition. These sticks are made by choosing a bit of dead wood of the variety of hyacinth called "hao," which is rubbed in a shallow groove with a pointed stick until a small pile of fine wood-dust is heaped up at one end of the groove. Then, by continuing the rubbing process, care being taken that the sweat induced by the intense muscular exertion did not pour into the powder, about the time that the operator had worked himself into a fever, if everything went right and he did not faint from over-exertion, the powder would begin to smoke. That was the critical moment of the whole operation. The fire-maker must then increase his exertions and rub with added vigor, then suddenly pause and coax with the last puff of wind he has left, the smoking powder into flame. It may be said in this connection that since the whalermen brought the first bunch of matches from Boston to the Islands the fire sticks have gone out of use.

ANCIENT HAWAIIAN CANDLES.
With the fire sticks are shown the old style of candles of native manufacture. They are made of the nuts of the "candle-nut" tree. These are roasted for a time and then the meat is extracted and strung on the midrib of a palm pinnule. Ten or fifteen of the kernels will make a candle about a foot in length. The kernel at the end of the candle being lighted, the others burn as the flame reaches them, the whole lasting about an hour. The nuts give a smoky, oily light, and are also eaten as a relish, they having a pleasant oily taste and piquant flavor.

HAWAIIAN TOYS, BOTTLES, ETC.
There are a number of the toys called palasi, braided from flexible withes, and finished with a loop on the end. Hanging from the middle of the stick is a small ball of kapa, and the object of the players is to see how often in a given number of times they can catch the ball in the loop. Another toy is a spinning top made of small gourds. The machine is arranged so that the center gourd, being held in the hand, the other two, by means of a string, are made to rotate rapidly. Then, too, there are the miniature buzz-saws that every boy from abroad has made with a round piece of tin and a double cord. The only difference between the English and the Hawaiian form of the toy is that the Hawaiian uses a bit of wood or shell for a saw. The common gourd is seen in a great variety of shapes, and is used for a variety of purposes. There are flat plates made from the bottoms of large ones; pretty drinking vessels from round, smooth specimens, and some curious bottle-shaped containers, so tightly corked up that no moisture can get inside. These are used by fishermen and others at sea. Some of the gourds are marked in fanciful designs, and many of them are used as calabashes. There are many other fine calabashes made of kapa, kou, and other handsome woods. There are also a large number of dishes, cups, plates and other containers made of cocoanuts, and beautifully polished. The carving on some of them is very pretty and original.

FISH-HOOKS, TRAPS, NETS, ETC.
Among the fishing implements are hooks made from bits of wire sharpened and fastened in pairs to a shell of the corvise species, and weighted on the back with a stone cut into shape for the purpose. Different kinds of fish traps are also shown, from models of the large ones used in catching big fish, to the little pear-shaped ones used by women in taking shrimps and other small fry. Nets of various sizes, and made from different kinds of native fibres, are also exhibited. Fish lines, snares and other means used for capturing fish are shown in profusion.

KAPA, OR NATIVE BARK CLOTH.
Is shown made up into bedspreads, petticoats (about a foot long) and as wrappers. Many of the specimens are dyed in pretty colors and queer designs.

THE MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS.
Of the ancient Hawaiians are represented by nose flutes and bow-stringed instruments, and the music produced on them is simple and plaintive. There are also some drums made by stretching fish skins over gourds, and also rattles used in dancing, made by putting a number of pebbles into a gourd. These last are ornamented with tufts of feathers.

FOOT AND HEAD WEAR.
A variety of sandals are shown. Some are made from the leaves of the lau-hala, and others from the tough leaf stalks of the banana. A small pair or two, for children's use, are made from wauki fibre, hard twisted, and made up like a flat mat. There are a great many hats, both for men and women. They are made of the stalks of the squash, from the flower stalk of the sugar cane, and from palm fibre and various grasses. The work on them is very good and neat, some of those made for women and children being especially handsome. Some pretty fans are exhibited, much taste and skill being shown in their manufacture.

The models of canoes shown are pretty, and make fine souvenirs of the Islands.

PERSONAL ORNAMENTS, ETC.
At one of the tables is to be found a large number of bracelets, or wristlets, made of shells polished kukui nuts, seeds of the willow tree and the kua tree, bright yellow shells and other pretty trifles. Attached to the necklaces are ornaments made of ivory, called palaua, which were at one time highly prized by the Hawaiians. Specimens of hat braid, of the bark of trees in different stages of preparation, and many other articles illustrating Hawaiian every-day life are to be found in this unique and pleasant fair.

THE ROOM IS HANDSOMELY DECORATED.
With the flags of all nations, and the equally brilliant and varied colors displayed in the costumes worn by the native visitors. The fair remains open to-day and to-morrow, and affords every one an opportunity to see and procure many pretty and interesting articles of Hawaiian make.

Their Majesties the King and Queen will be present during the day. Her Majesty presiding at one of the tables. Their Royal Highnesses the Princess Lilikalanani and Likelike will also have tables. His Majesty's Chamberlain, Col. C. H. Judd, has general charge of the arrangement.

The fair will open at 3 o'clock this afternoon, and refreshments can be procured in the large room on the ground floor of the church building.

By notice in our By Authority column it will be seen that Mr. H. W. Schmidt, who, during the absence of Mr. J. C. Glade, has acted as Consul for Sweden and Norway, has now received the appointment to that office from King Oscar.

The business men generally of Honolulu have agreed to close their places of business next Saturday at noon, in order that their employees may attend the memorial services to take place that day, and also the baseball match to come off at 4 o'clock p. m.

The concert by the Montague-Turner Company last evening was up to the standard established by the performers on previous occasions. There was a good audience present, and the singing and playing was quite satisfactory. Mrs. J. H. Paty, in the duet "How Dear to Me the Hour," sang very sweetly, and in the song "The Bunch of Violets," she was heartily applauded. The scene from "Lucretia Borgia" was well sung by Miss Montague and Mr. Turner.

CART-LOADS OF MAIL.

LETTERS RECEIVED BY SENATORS
AND REPRESENTATIVES.Legislators at Washington Overwhelmed by Communications Sent Through the Postoffice—Popular Congressmen and Their Correspondents.

[Washington Cor. Chicago News.]

It requires the services of eleven persons to handle the mail of the different representatives and senators at the capital. There are four deliveries a day of what is known as the congressional mail—one, the morning delivery, before breakfast, two at the capital during the hours the wise solons are in session, and another in the evening. The first and last deliveries are at the private residence of the members. Twelve wagon loads of letters and papers comprise the average of the house mail for each day. That of the senate of course is much smaller. In addition to the regular clerks, drivers, and messengers each chamber employs a limited number of boys who are known as riding pages. They are furnished ponies and are used to deliver letters and documents at the different departments and elsewhere throughout the city. Each receives a salary of $800 per annum. There are three of these youngsters on the house side. The senate is more extravagant. With scarcely one-fifth as many members as the house it is possible to get along with less than four riding pages. That body has twice the number of employees relatively that the house has and the pay is invariably better.

Speaker Carlisle gets the heaviest mail of any man in public life. Next to him, among the representatives, come Randall, with Belford of Colorado third, Belmont of New York fourth, and Judge Kelley of Pennsylvania fifth. Randall's and Kelley's mails, like that of Col. Morrison, are mostly communications from business men and others asking for information on matters of tariff, finances, and kindred subjects.

Mr. Belford's heavy mail is explained by reason of his being the only representative of a young and rapidly growing commonwealth. Colorado has probably more veterans of the late war within her borders than any state of her size in the union. As most of these people are interested in pensions, either to the extent of asking information as to the best means of procuring one or inquiring as to delays in their settlement, it will be seen that his correspondence must be necessarily large. Mr. Belford is pleased to be the object of this voluminous correspondence and boasts of it among his fellow-members with as much evident pride as if each particular envelope contained a certificate of good character.

Of the Illinois members, Col. Morrison receives the largest mail. As chairman of the ways and means committee he frequently receives as many as sixty letters a day last session.

Gen. Logan receives an heaviest mail of any member of the senate. After his nomination last summer it increased so rapidly that the services of his secretary and Mrs. Logan were entirely inadequate to the task of keeping up the arrears. On such occasions it was no uncommon practice for the vice president, Logan's representative, to assist him with this work. Old tables, chairs, and even hat-boxes, would be utilized as desks, and often half a dozen supernumeraries would be found laboring until midnight.

It is Gen. Logan's invariable rule to answer every letter sent to him. His mail comes principally from soldiers, and is not confined by any means to his constituents in Illinois. Not infrequently veterans write to him from the middle and New England states. The bulk of letters from soldiers of the late war residing in the extreme southern states is addressed to Gen. Logan. Mrs. Logan overlooks the general's mail. Long familiarity as his amanuensis enables her to tell directly which letters she can attend to herself without troubling her husband to read. She is better known to the clerks in the pension office than the general, and of late years she has attended to nearly all of his correspondence. Many of these letters are insufficiently stamped. The deficit is paid by the senator. This item of expense alone is said to amount to $25 per annum.

Plumb, of Kansas, follows Logan as the recipient of the next largest mail, with Allison, of Iowa, and Voorhees, of Indiana, not far behind.

As a rule the Republicans receive much larger mails than the Democrats. The difference in Voorhees' case is explained by his personal popularity. Popular men in congress are deluged with letters in the same degree as they, in private life, receive more attention than those who are more exclusive. Voorhees is easily approached, and is a half-fellow-well-met among the homespun farmers of the Hoosier state. Next to Voorhees, Jones, of Florida, receives the largest mail from the Democratic side. Like Belford, he is proud of it. Jones was born in Ireland, and worked his way to his present prominence from a shoe-maker's bench. His correspondence comes from every section of the country, in which respect it is similar to Gen. Logan's, though not so diffuse. The Democrats are already paying the penalty of having achieved a great national victory. Since the election the mail of members of congress of that party has doubled—in some cases tripled.

How to Expose Thermometers.

[Chicago Times.]

One of the first conditions to be regarded is that of securing a good height above the ground, on which a considerable diversity of opinion prevails. Much depends upon the immediate conditions of the locality. When this point is decided upon, a uniform and satisfactory shelter or screen should be provided for the instrument. The height and the screen should be so adjusted that the thermometer shall be free from ground-fog, and that access of air to it should be perfect. The shelter should shield it from all reflected heat, from all radiation from surrounding objects, as well as from moisture. Many different forms of shelter have been contrived in different countries.

Three Grades of Milk.

[Boston Herald.]

Sardou hired a house in the country to pass the last summer, and went in search of a farmer who had a milk cow. Having found one, he said: "My good man, my servant will come every morning to buy a pint of milk. 'All right,' it is 8 sous." "But I want pure milk—very pure." "In that case it is 10 sous." "You will milk in the presence of my servant." "Then it is 15 sous."
